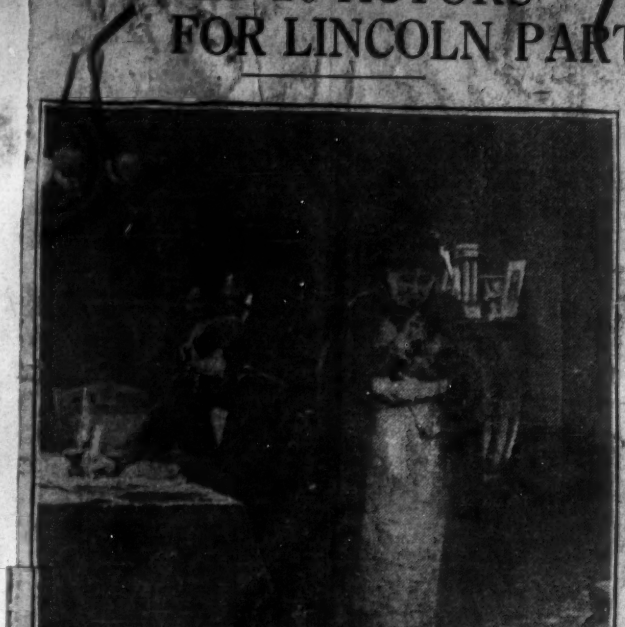
BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD 1702
APRIL 11, 1915

COACHED 20 ACTORS FOR LINCOLN PART



Abraham Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation."

Joseph Henabery, the actor who portrays President Lincoln in D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," was selected from 20 players who were coached and prepared before the choice was made. Mr. Lincoln's appearance and mannerisms were carefully counterfeited, even to the detail of his reaching back for his shawl a few minutes before Wilkes Booth attacked him. The first scene showing the war President is of Lincoln signing the call for 75,000 volunteers. Around him are his cabinet heads and private secretaries. After the deed was done and the attending company departed, he buried his face in his hands as if in prayer. Another view of Lincoln's character is his granting a pardon. The gorgeously uniformed diplomatic representatives are being received by the President. They depart and he turns to a plain middle-aged woman dressed in sombre black who had been awaiting a hearing. She tries to kneel to him, but he gently raises her up and talks to her, reads her petition and signs the paper granting to her the life of her son.

After the Appomattox surrender the leader of Congress calls with a proposal to deal harshly with the South for its rebellion. "I shall treat them as if they had never been away!" is Lincoln's gentle answer. The tragedy in Ford's Theatre, when southern hopes of clemency were blasted, is reproduced to the minutest detail. Mr. Henabery, the portrayer of Lincoln, has been widely commended for the sincerity, dignity and pathos of the impersonation.

TRAVELER & EV
Boston, Mass.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 1 1 191

Tremont Theatre

David W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," was publicly presented for the first time in Boston yesterday afternoon and evening. The Tremont Theatre engagement promises to be unusually successful. "The Birth of a Nation," by picture, orchestral music and song, tells the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a range of history and characters. From the prime cause of civil war; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the rebellious states; the big battles and private tragedies of the conflict; the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the President; the harsh radical policy to the prostrate South; the uprising of the clans, and the overthrow of the carpet bag regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator. The romantic interest is based on the friendships between the Stonemans of Pennsylvania and the Camerons of South Carolina, two families involved in the epochal struggle. The notable indoor scenes, like Ford's Theatre on the night of Lincoln's death, are exact facsimiles of the originals. Of nearly equal importance to the films is the music that interprets it. The latter consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged by Joseph Carl Briel after Mr. Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. It is played by an orchestra of 40 pieces. Vocal music is also provided, the stirring old tunes of long ago dominating fancy and feeling as the historic incidents unfold. Henry Walthall carries superbly the chief heroic role, whilst among the women the work of Misses Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish and Miriam Cooper stands. Joseph Henabery's President Lincoln, Donald Crisp's Gen. Grant and Howard Gay's Gen. Lee are among the vivid historical portraitures. "The Birth of a Nation" will be presented twice each weekday, matinee and night.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 1 1 1915

Twenty-five thousand yards of material were used to make the costumes for the actresses who posed in "The Birth of a Nation." More than 400 different kinds of dresses and gowns were made, including the robes of the clansman, for which masculine habiliments 12,000 yards of white goods were required. Twenty dressmakers worked eight hours a day for four months to fit them in these ghostly costumes.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
Apr. 11, 1915

CENSORSHIP

SAFEGUARDING the morals of one's fellowmen has always been a more popular occupation than safeguarding his material welfare—perhaps because it costs less. Through all the ages there have been men, including the Pilgrim Fathers and Anthony Comstock, who have been much exercised for fear that ptomaines would be included in the intellectual food offered the public. There has been a long gap from Moses to Dr. Wiley and Prof. Allyn when no one cared particularly whether food and drink were as carefully guarded. In fact there seems to have been general indifference whether the other fellow had food and drink, pure or otherwise.

* * *

Just now the producers of motion pictures are feeling the weight of the censor's hand. The censor is of all sorts and conditions of men. Officially he is on the National Board of Censorship; unofficially he is any man who is not much interested in seeing motion pictures but who is very much interested in what other persons see. All this great body of censors finds material for worry just now in the pictures that show the South in the process of reconstruction. D. W. Griffith, who is well and favorably known for his work in the motion picture world, made a production called "The Birth of a Nation"—one of the most ambitious of productions in an ambitious field. The picture is passed by the national board with a high compliment and proceeds to pack audiences into a theater at prices much higher than usual picture prices. The picture shows Northern white men in the roles of "carpet-baggers," fattening their fortunes on the resources of a war-stricken section. In one or two instances it shows Negroes committing crimes against individuals. The champions of the Negroes interviewed the mayor of New York and pointed out to him that it was his duty to stop a picture that libels a whole race. The mayor succeeded in having the incidents complained of eliminated and "The Birth of a Nation" is still being shown. Now [illegible] comes forward to protest that the entire white race is libeled by showing white men as "carpet-baggers." It is quite probable that no one ever harbored the thought that the entire white race is dishonest because the screen showed that a few had been. It is possible also that Negroes and their champions might agree that in Reconstruction days [illegible] problem was a real one and that [illegible] Negroes had been guilty [illegible] although a [illegible]

Enthusiasts of all sorts think that they have found in the procession of figures on the screen a panacea for all the ills of the world and so the propaganda of all the anti societies has been made to flicker on the screens of a thousand cities. Much of this propaganda has failed of its purpose. Much good undoubtedly has been done in teaching persons to avoid tuberculosis and to avoid spreading the disease if they have it; pictures of trade conditions have helped the Consumers' League in its good fight but it is doubtful if the timely showing of pictures have saved many prospective victims of the White Slave Traffic or the Drug Traffic. Possibly it is true that in using this new royal road to education it is necessary for the teacher to know more than those he would teach and that his motives must be higher than sensationalism.

A. L. S. WOOD.

KLINE (Mass.) CHRO
APRIL 10, 1915

Tremont Theatre.

Exactly fifty years after th events of the close of the Civil which it treats, D. W. Griffith's sp "The Birth of a Nation," is to sented at Tremont Theatre, Saturday matinee, April 10. The of the great picture occupied eight and enlisted the services of 18,000 Three thousand horses were used cavalry scenes. Richard Harding the eminent war correspondent, s in this play, for the first time history, war is presented as it act

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 11, 1915

BOSTON WILL SEE 'BIRTH OF NATION'

The powerful photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," which has just come to the Tremont Theatre and which deals with the vexed reconstruction period in the South, was announced by Mayor Curley yesterday as being passed by the city and police censors of Boston.

A few eliminations which the Mayor requested will be made by the management. The city and police censors saw a "guest view" of the photo-play Friday night and reported it as not "obscene or immoral or tending to injure the morals of the community."

The Mayor also attended the Friday night view. Yesterday he asked the management to eliminate particularly the prefatory statement thrown upon the screen: "The bringing of the African to America in the seventeenth century planted the seed of disunion." The Mayor [illegible] this as unfair to the colored [illegible]

Other eliminations, on [illegible] request, will include pa[illegible] suit of a white girl, [illegible] of the face [illegible] actor.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
APR 1 1 1915

The attentions of His Honor the Mayor have been focused upon "The Birth of a Nation" during the past week. The colored brother has protested much, but the descendants of the old Boston Abolitionists have protested more against showing a black man in an undignified situation. We have some wonderful people in Boston. It's not so many years ago that I heard one of them protest against teaching the history of the Civil War in our schools, on the ground that it might annoy the Southern States to have the story of what happened to them passed along the generations.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH PRODUCER OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

...ass.) AM...ICAN ... HERALD ... ORD

...USICIAN IN THE ...IRTH OF NATION'

...id W. Griffith, Who Produced ... All Is a Bundle of Elec... ...rical Energy.

That bundle of electrical energy, David W. Griffith, was in town most of the week, starting off his great spectacular production at the Tremont Theatre.

Griffith is the most talked about, and probably the most sought-after, man in America. He learned how to plan things in the making of the 18,000 scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" or he would be lost. He gallops through the myriad-and-one business details of a theatric success without turning a hair or developing the slightest case of nervous... When the turmoil and the din dies, and the hours wax small, his refreshment is the dance or a friendly chat with a round table of chums.

It was said on the first night in New York that only the son of a soldier could have conceived and executed "The Birth of a Nation." As a Kentucky lad, the son of Brigadier-General J. W. Griffith, he drank in the Civil War narratives greedily. As he grew up came the poet's vision of the entire struggle and of reconstruction days. In the ... of manhood awoke the genius ... ke it a reality.

... planning the Battle of Pet... Griffith drilled the regiments ...fully as Kitchener in England ...lellan on the Potomac. Like ... had national guardsmen to ...th. They knew the manual ...s, but had to acquire the grand ...s of picture evolutions. After ...drill was completed, the director ...his thousands of militiamen on a ...th's country side campaign. Each ...dron was commanded by a sub... ...ctor.

Pioneers preceded the soldiers to ...ig the long miles of trenches, to ...hrew up embankments and repro... ...ce the physical landmarks of the ...attle. Among the noted Petersburg ...ndmarks was a high tower. Griffith ...ade it serve a double purpose by ...ing it as field headquarters. From ...fty eminence he commanded the ... range of mountain and valley. ...t at hand was a modern tele... ...e switchboard. From it field... ...ran to his various sub-generals. ...these wires were in conduits ...ground; they had to be, or the ...of ... would have produced the ...es a little wield-telephones in ...tinues to th...

...ly equipped as a ...ricar a Von Kluck, Griffith ...mies are ... and telephoned all ...arter ones a... In the artillery ...reatment, cannon were used which ...and-hone... al shells. All were of ...wonderful ...ars. When the infantry ...Hour, they used the antique ...to-load muskets with the old... ...honed bayonets. As the men ...ge, it is to be seen that their ...orms are far from spick and ...n. Many of them are coatless and hatless; the clothing of others is tattered; the flags, even, have the look of battle-scarred ribbons. For the first time the grime, dirt, sordidness, as well as the glory of war, is accurately presented.

Plainly, war...

STRIKING SCENES FROM THE GREAT FILM PRODUCTION "...IRTH OF A NATION"

SCENE SHOWING CONFEDERATES CHARGING THE INTRENCHMENTS AT THE BATTLE OF PETERSBURG

LILLIAN GISH, WHO TAKES THE PART OF "ELSIE" in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

© BY ROSNITZ.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH, PRODUCER OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE TREMONT THEATRE.

...is not a day's outing for a small and straggling crew of pictures takers. It is hard, gruelling continuous work. Regiments, brigades—not companies—are employed. There's everything from the far-flung panorama of the general battle to the handgrips of personal combat. Many hundreds of separate and distinct scenes are

...erican Oct 5, 1915

...AYOR'S CENSOR ...O INSPECT FILM

...r Curley, following a hearing ... on request of the National ...ation for the Advancement of ...Colored People, declared he ... not interfere with the initial ...tion of the film show, "The ...of a Nation."

...shall allow the play to proceed ...the municipal censor and a rep... ...tative of the police commis... ...er may pass upon its merits," ... the Mayor.

...any in the crowd of more than ... hundred people, mostly colored, ... as the name of President Wil... was mentioned. The incident oc... ...ed as John E. Cusick, counsel ...the theatre where the film is to ...shown, told of its having been ...and approved by the President ...his Cabinet at the White House. ...Among those who appeared in ...of the petition were: Moorfield ... president of the association; ...Alexander Mann, rector of Trin... ...urch; Joseph P. Loud, a Bos... ...architect; Dr. Francis Rowley, ...Rev. M. W. Thornton of the ...Rights League; B. R. Wilson, ...and Trotter.

...Wilson, counsel for the as... ...n, declared the play tends to ...hatred for the colored people. ...Cusick, counsel for the theatre, ...d that the play is based only upon ...al fact, and that there is no ... made to ridicule the colored ... He said the National Board of ... had endorsed the play, and ...here are as many white villains ...play as there are black.

...Willia... ...on the grou... ...Amer... ...public clearing on the film en... ...rth of a Nation," which is booked ...here beginni... Saturday.

...surrender... ...boys th... ...hand... ...to the prejudices ...the reuniting of the clans, and ...pictures of the carpetbag regime. ...factors and events pass

1915

Movies in Boston.

By E. F. Harkins

Certain changes intended to moderate the realistic and controversial side of "The Birth of a Nation" films having been made at the suggestion of the municipal censors, certified by the request of Mr. Curley himself, the mayor now announces that he has given the production his formal approval.

With the exception of a statement flashed upon the screen at the beginning of the performance, in which it was said that "The bringing of the African to America in the 17th century planted the first seed of disunion," the features objected to and eliminated appeared in the second act. On the whole, they might fairly be regarded, racial feelings aside, as offenses against good taste, so that their elimination will unquestionably improve the performance in the eyes of the temperate and discriminating theatre-goer. This was suggested in The Journal's review of the Friday night performance.

No reference to any changes is made in yesterday's bulletin from the Tremont, but it appears that "enthusiastic crowds of patrons at the opening public performances, Saturday matinee and night, confirmed the splendid favorable verdict of the press on 'The Birth of a Nation' that followed the private representation on Friday evening."

Battle Scene Masterpieces

The battle scenes pictured in the first act mark the supreme achievement of motion photography up to date. The skirmishes and hand-to-hand conflicts are intensely vivid, for they are not only well planned but well acted. You can actually see death in some faces as the men fall in close combat. There is also a thrilling spectacle in one of the running fights in the place called Piedmont, where one of the raiders tumbles from the balcony of a house after the State troops open fire. But the most thrilling sights of all, and the most remarkable of all the wonders worked by D. W. Griffith, the director of the production, and by G. W. Bitzer, the photographer, are the battles conducted on a big scale in vast stretches of field and valley. The impression made upon the spectator is that of witnessing the military movements from some height overlooking the battle ground. The war pictures brought over from Europe recently are generally tame in comparison with these mimic engagements cast upon the screen at the Tremont.

Equally thrilling is the burning of Atlanta—a spectacle far more realistic than the conflagration portrayed two years ago in one of the famous Italian productions.

That Tragic Night in Ford's

Apropos of the scene depicting the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, it is worth recalling that William J. Ferguson, one of the actors who took part in the performance of "Our American Cousin" that night, is still facing the footlights, or at least he was earlier in the season. He came to Boston last September, as a matter of fact, and appeared with Fannie Ward at the Tremont—the very theatre where a slice of "Our American Cousin" is being filmed—in a very Frenchy farce called "Madame President." Five other members of the company that appeared before Lincoln on that historic night are also living, but not acting.

Ford's Theatre is now used as a sort of storehouse, but it has been condemned and it may be razed any day.

out his Vitascope, which was so named because of its life-size figures, and it was a Vitascope program that Mr. Keith presented to the astonished gaze of Bostonians at his beautiful new theatre on May 19, 1894. Here is a copy of the first "movies" program to be shown in this city:

"'The Picture of a Kiss,' being a perfect reproduction of that long-drawn-out and evidently agreeable osculation indulged in by John C. Rice and May Irwin in John J. McNally's farce comedy, 'The Widow Jones,' including Rice's famous wink, admittedly one of the funniest episodes contained in any play.

"Lole Fuller's Butterfly Dance.

"Herald Square (N. Y.) on a Busy Day.

"Finale of 'A Milk-White Flag.'

"Lole Fuller's Serpentine Dance.

"Grand Fountain, Central Park, N. Y."

Moving pictures have been a feature of the Keith bill ever since that memorable day, but it has remained for Griffith and the Mutual Film Company to magnify the film-play into an entertainment commanding prices unthought of 20 years ago.

Queen of Oriental Dancers

Headliners, not pictures, are now the chief attractions on the Keith bills. The real headliner this week is Princess Rajah, the oriental dancer, who went on the stage in this city when she was a little girl. Her folks still live near Boston, indeed, and she has a sister who has taken up dancing and may be a stage princess some day; but this is all immaterial compared with the fact that Rajah herself has outdistanced all the other exponents of the oriental dance and has established herself strongly among the favorites of the vaudeville stage. The Keith managers, who certainly know an expert and favorite when they see one, herald the Princess as "The World's Greatest Oriental Dancer." Her big numbers now are the "Cleopatra Dance," in which the Egyptian queen recalls the allurements that distinguished Salome, and the "Arabian Chair Dance," which is a veritable whirl of strength and skill.

Sothern is coming out of retirement to join the stars of the "movies," but Julia Marlowe seems to be interned domestically beyond the lure of the footlights. The Sotherns have been living in Baltimore since last

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 12, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Mr Griffith and His Associates Are Delighted With Boston's Verdict Regarding the Wonderful Picture Drama.

Enthusiastic crowds of patrons at the opening public performance at the Tremont Theatre Saturday matinee and night confirmed the favorable verdict on "The Birth of a Nation" at the private representation Friday evening. The combination of great historical pictures, elaborate symphony music and incidental effects is novel to Boston, constituting a new art in the history of the theatre.

Mr. Griffith selects the high points of the Civil War and reconstruction times for his picturization, but within the framework of the great events is a series of delightful love romances.

Pres Harry E. Aitken of the Mutual Film and a large party of friends returned to New York on their special car yesterday, after coming here for the opening. Mr Aitken declares that Boston's reception of the epic making picture was fully as remarkable as the receptions accorded to it in New York or Los Angeles.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 12 1915

The Holy Grail Next?

The success of "The Birth of a Nation," his epic of American history, has incidentally given rise to a flood of suggestions to David W. Griffith concerning his next picture. In one of these—the suggestion of filming the Holy Grail story—Mr. Griffith has taken deep interest. One of his purposes in visiting Boston is to see, for the first time, the famous paintings in the Public Library, of which he will make careful study.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 12 1915

CALLS FILM AN OUTRAGE

Mayor Curley Tells Negro Delegation That He Would Stop "The Birth of a Nation" If He Had the Power

"I regard the film, 'The Birth of a Nation,' an outrage on the negro race, and if I had the power I would prevent its production in this city."

These were the words of Mayor Curley to a delegation of twenty-five negro men and women who called on him today in another attempt to have the film being given at the Tremont Theatre stopped. The speakers declared with emphasis that the film was immoral and would have the worst sort of effect on the community. Rev. A. W. Fuller of the Calvary Baptist Church went so far as to declare that if the production were allowed the negroes would be obliged to arm themselves because of the race hatred that would be engendered. He hoped that he would be the first negro to be shot if it became necessary for him to protect himself or others.

Rev. M. A. N. Shaw said that, despite the revisions that the mayor had ordered, the film was the most serious agency for evil that had ever been devised for a theatre in Boston. The entire negro population of the city is aroused over it and is calling upon the mayor to find some means to prevent it. William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, said that the first hour of the production could not be objected to, but that the two remaining hours were full of obnoxious scenes. Statements were made by W. Munroe Trotter that colored people were being denied tickets at the box office and, therefore, the color line was being drawn.

The mayor read the reports of the two municipal censors sent to the special production Friday night by the police commissioner and himself, the reports agreeing that there was no warrant in law for stopping the production. The mayor then referred to the law, which gives double authority over theatrical exhibitions, stating that it was evidently framed in the interest of the theatres and that in the present instance he had no power to order the film discontinued here. He promised to confer with the police commissioner to see what could be done.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 12 1915

Mayor Can Not Stop Film Play

Calls New Conference On "The Birth of a Nation"

A delegation of more than 30 colored persons, headed by W. Monroe Trotter, appeared before Mayor Curley this noon to demand elimination of many scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," the much discussed photoplay of the Civil War period, and if possible the entire revoking of the play.

In reply Mayor Curley stated that if he had the power he would close the play, but he stated that the law did not permit him.

The negroes present and their friends denied that the worst features of the play were at all historical, and they charged that the very destiny of the colored race in America was at stake.

Mr. Trotter claimed that the Tremont Theatre, in regard to ticket distribution, was drawing the color line. He alleged that several of the colored persons present applied at the window for tickets to the performance Saturday, but that they were denied. Shortly after, he claimed, plenty of tickets were available for white persons who applied. Rev. M. W. Thornton, pastor of the Charles St. African M. E. Church, stated that as he left the theatre Friday night he heard one member of the audience say: "All of the damned niggers ought to be dead or out of the country."

Mr. Thornton said, "There are many features of the play which are revolting to the feeling and respectability of our people. The assassination of Lincoln, the scene where the mulatto lieutenant-governor attempts forcibly to marry a white woman, the scene where the worst type of negro pursues the real heroine of the play so that, to save herself, she jumps over a cliff to certain death, are an insult to our race, and are immoral in many respects.

"The heroine of the play is first presented as a most lovable little child. In this manner she gains the sympathy and admiration of the audience, so that, when her death occurs, the audience is at a fever heat.

"The very destiny of the colored race in this country is at stake, and we should like to see it revoked all together if possible."

W. D. Brigham, representing a society of white citizens interested in the colored race, said that in his opinion there were many scenes in the play which were positively immoral and that it was, therefore, within the authority of the Mayor to close the performances.

The Mayor stated finally that, in his opinion, it was not within his power to follow the suggestions offered that the play be stopped. He said, however: "I believe the play is an outrage on the colored people of the country."

Finally the Mayor agreed to have a further conference with Police Commr. O'Meara in order to review the findings of the Police Commissioner's censor.

Further the Mayor agreed to call the managers and producers of the play into conference late today to ascertain whether there was any way in which most of the more objectionable scenes might be eliminated.

Another representative of the colored race stated that in his opinion the influence of the play was sufficiently demoralizing to sow the seeds of a dangerous race war, in which the white would shoot down the negroes.

When Manager Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre was questioned this afternoon he denied emphatically that the color line had been drawn in any instance at the theatre.

In both the reports of Censor Casey of the Mayor's office and the representative of Police Commr. O'Meara, it was stated that there was nothing obscene, objectionable, or immoral in the entire performance, and that the presentation came within the law in every respect. Censor Casey was present at this morning's conference and reiterated the ideas contained in his report.

Transcript Apr 8, 1915

HISSED WILSON'S NAME

Negroes Gathered Before Curley to Protest Production of "Birth of a Nation" Show Feeling

When President Wilson's name was mentioned by Lawyer John F. Cusick at a hearing given by Mayor Curley yesterday to negroes and others who protest against the production of the moving-picture film, "The Birth of a Nation," hisses were heard. It had been stated that the President and his Cabinet had seen the film in the White House and were much pleased with it.

The mayor, after the hearing had proceeded for three hours, declared that he had no power to stop the film unless it tends to injure the morals of the community or is immoral or obscene. It was said that the film would engender race hatred. The producers agreed to give a private exhibition tomorrow for the municipal censor, John M. Casey, and a representative of the police commissioner, and to carry out any recommendation the officials may make.

Leading the opposition was Butler R. Wilson, and others in opposition were Miss Mary White Ovington, Rev. Francis E. Lawley, D. D., Rev. Alexander Mann, D. D., Rev. M. W. Thornton and Moorfield Storey.

TRAVELER & EV
Boston, Mass.
BOSTON (Mass.) APR
APR 5

GRIFFITH RE TO HALLO

David W. Griffith, [prod] Birth of a Nation," now [open] Theatre, said today the statements made in [Hallowell's letter to Mayor] Police Commissioner [O'Mea]

"At the outset [I] Mr. Hallowell for an departure of manners. He private performance of he says, by invitation a proceeds to adjust, and back of his loyal and [A]merican citizens been better for the called up purchased his misconcep public perfor[mance] EXANDER for the suppr[ession]

"Mr. John [Schoeffel] and manager of the has requested me [to] if all whether he make reim[burse] losses involved in he re[fused] doors.

"Mr. Schoeffel [has] will mor[e] The[re] has a valid[ity] to his horns the only means of [de]sign s[up]s by presen[ting] mis[rep]entertainment. [Even] o[f] "[Birth] of a Nation" film [I] found it free from [the] obscenity—a private [view] which (I am glad to [say] authorities agree with [me].

"'After forty years' [experience] theatrical producer and [manager] am disgusted with the [action] Mr. Hallowell and his [attempt] ing to interfere with pro[perly] The theatrical business [is in] a deplorable condition [and] the [Tremont] first time in many years [was] obliged to close the Tremont [Theatre] as early as March.

"'But for "The Birth [of a Nation]" which was the only [attraction] available, 12% of my help—[the] ton citizens—would be out [of] employment now.

"'I purposely kept out of the controversy till the properly [constituted] authorities had decided I was [justified] in presenting this play. [Now] the authorities have decided [that] am within my legal rights [and] quick to take any action [against] the same.'"

EVENING TRA
Boston, Mas[s]
APR 1[2]

NEWS OF THE THEATR[E]

The Voice of the Censor

CARESSING his self-importance [like] manifesto full of the solemn [pro]ties dear to Mr. Curley's type [of] the mayor, as potentate of the play[-]has approved the filmed spectacle, "[The] Birth of a Nation," now on view [at] Tremont Theatre. Those august [pre]ages, "the official censor of the [play] Boston and the censor represent[ing] Police Commissioner of the City of [Bos]have this day submitted their report [and] attended the production"; "I [have] and I further requested," and so [on] so onward in comic contrast to the [pre]speech with which the censors [have] beguile the tedium of intermission [and] sometimes accompany the progress [of] play that they are viewing. Alas, [poor] the mayor's pretentious way of saying [that] he saw the pictures; wished [for] changes made in them and that the [man]ager complied. One of these changes, particular cuts away an episode in [which] a member of the House of Represent[atives] in South Carolina during the Reconstruction days takes off his shoes in the [middle] of a session and is required by [force] resolution of his fellow members to [put] them on again. Presumably this [ludicrous] comic incident involved the same disrespect to constituted authorities as did the representation of a mayor in "Wallingford" as a fatuous, garrulous and generally silly person. As Mr. Fitzgerald was quick to intervene then, so now is Mr. Curley zealous for respect on the stage to rulers. The other day the mayor told some club or other that none of his duties was so irksome as the censorship of the stage. Yet to judge by his public outgivings about it, he wallows delightedly in it.

Post Apr 12, 1915

It would seem that the wonders [of] photography would never cease, they [have] trated by "The Birth of a Nat[ion]" at this place mont Theatre. No photopl[ay] legitimate dramas have be[en] much discussion as has [Thomas] Jolowew's Chu[rch] ever the outcome it [will] that cannot be me[asured] and cents. I ur[ge all] Another. tion of the [editor] of The Travel[er] continue "The [Birth] of a Nation" and that [such] inflammatory pla[ys] attr[act] and aim has been reache[d] peacefully, i. e., race hatred.

& EVE. HERALD
Mass.
APR 12 1915

Film 'rage' Curley

(Continued from Page 1.)

shall he said, had been refused the mule whites who preceded and statives were able to get them.

er m opinion, the play is an outrage the colored people of the country," any hundmayor to the delegation at the l as n of the conference. "I saw was r, and saw nothing obscene or d al, and, therefore, there is no vio- he of the law in it. It is apparent how aw, as now drawn, protects and Weal interests, and, as far as I is at is no way of getting around w k, however, the whites have t to object to the play than ea, because it was a white man d Lincoln and a whiteman who p the Negroes. It is obvious play is a continued attack on yor said he had made further nre ndations to the management to e. W the face of the Negro "Qua" n, de d said the management had natreed any of the recommenda- usick s by the mayor. Others in the At tion who spoke were Butler Wil- al e Rev. H. A. N. Shaw, the Hev. m ller and W. D. Brigham. The de said is white.

had end.

ere are as n. play as there

Plot of

Says Alabaman

attack on the photoplay, a Nation," which is be- Boston, Joseph C. Man- a, Republican political fore the Congress- arks today that it was a creating, cunningly distorted" and sh wor southern conditions and Ho ition in the North is a to al campaign by "scheming emocrats in the South and "minority control" and "Democratic oligarchy." rged that the picture is very American patriot and ligent northern citizen, and arefully pre-arranged mis- to "lead the North ding the political, social ditions in southern states.

uction of the picture is an how that President Wilson support of the American picture shows the black s very black; it does not ildren of blacks that are Besmirching the black race portunity and presenting r Cl lorat light, it covers up the o evils to which he submitted tio of white slave owners, who t one-fifth of the voting olo tion of the South and who not s which is conducting the tion

Willi on the gro

ublic clearing on the film ena... th of a Nation," which is booked ... here beginni... esterday.

STAGING CIVIL WA...

rom POST
ddress: Boston, Mass.
APR 11 1915

Long and Careful Preparation Preceded Under the Com...TION.

Southern soldiers just before leaping from the rear of the embankment to attack the Federals. A vivid scene in the battle of Petersburg. In this film reproduction miles of trenches were dug and heaped up in front with bags, wood and stone. (Upper picture.)
Capturing the trenches. The verve and elan of the charge which carried Colonel Ben Cameron right up to the Federal main works, where he fell wounded into the arms of Captain Phil Stoneman, an old school chum, fighting on the Unionists' side. (Lower picture.)

"Movie" battles are more like Gettysburg or Petersburg than like Winchester or Five Forks.

It takes days—maybe weeks—to prepare the conflict. Casual encounter is impossible.

The battlefield grows and develops into a work of art, and the seeming impetuous charges of the troops require not less strategy on the part of the "movie" commander than characterized Meade or Grant or Lee.

ture, he picked out a region of mountain and valley roughly resembling midland Virginia. The salient features were then reproduced under the direction of landscape engineers.

These included miles upon miles of trenches and embankments, smoothed ground for the plain over which the cavalry charged, positions for mortars and masked batteries and a great tower which, history records, dominated the Petersburg works. The battle was to be fought out in the open country far from the railroads, trolleys and jitney busses.

Imagine, then, Grimth's army setting out one fine morning on the march as Grant's men marched to attack Lee. The thousands of fighters—about 18,000 people were used in filming "The Birth of a Nation"—were costumed, accoutered in the uniforms of the carpetbag regime in Georgia. A replica of the diers were these movie warriors, but companies and regiments of National Guardsmen under their own officers.

There followed a long artillery train, with the old-fashioned cannon and mortars of 1864. There were signal corps, ambulance corps, horse, foot, bridge builders, sappers and pioneers.

In the rear rode the slow-moving baggage train. At night tents were pitched, wells dug, meals prepared and eaten and sentinal duty kept as during an actual military campaign. At last the weary march was ended and the army arrived at its prepared "location."

There the Grays lined up for and the Blues lined up for Grant. It was 6 o'clock in the morning each day was on the job. The ranking officers commanders was as follows: Griffith; 2, 15 sub-directors tains ordering the men of their respective companies.

Just outside the range of the camera's eye were the members of the signal corps, ready with flags for wigwagging. Near the cannon, the danger point, waited the surgeon, four assistant surgeons and the orderlies of the ambulance corps. Lastly, Mr. Grimth himself, with West Point experts and Civil war "vets" surrounding him as aides, occupied the top of the high tower referred to.

"Camera" Is Magic Word

Each of the 15 sub-directors scattered over a field was inconspicuous as a private. This ... could not ...

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 13, 1915

ADVERTISER
TRAVELER & EV
Boston, Mass.
APR
3 1915

TILE FOR MOVIES

loving Picture Director to Insure Thrilling Effect on Film showing Lincoln's assassination at Ford's Theatre, Washington, on April 14, 1865. For the purposes of this less-than-5-minute scene an entire theatre interior was built, reproducing in every detail the interior of the historic Ford's Theatre. (Upper picture.)

derate infantry firing at the Unionists across the valley in the battle of Petersburg. An army of several thousand national guardsmen were levied by Director D. W. Griffith for this mimic battle. The campaign was conducted with all the strict discipline of actual warfare. (Lower picture.)

refore, to present him as a hter in the ranks.

magic word of filmdom that ffith's Petersburg battle a tury after the event. In the ture, that order would be d by the chief director. But ce, for the field is so vast ne phone voice would not er Griffith lays aside nd steps to the portable hboard which he, like luck, has had installed ower.

ld in conduits to avoid phones, ectors says

The word is instantly picked up by the field director. The "high private" presses his captain's arm, the latter shouts "Fire!" or "Charge!" to his men, and the whole body of the army is in action.

They know they must work quick. There are no lagrards and no falterers. Often a bugler or a cornet is in the ranks playing the old war tunes, or there is the rattle-a-tat of the gun.

Shells from the old fashioned cannon burst around, the musketry reports sound like sharp hail, and amid a din that rapidly grows to an inferno, the Confederate grays or Federal blues advance with shouts and cheers.

Look! the gallant lads have crossed an open space where a third of their number has been shot down. The survivors press manfully on. Most of them are mowed down by the heavy guns or by the deadly accuracy of sharp-shooters.

But half a dozen men of the rebel attackers reach the front of the main Federal works.

At last there is but one left, the little Colonel, Ben Cameron, who falls, then rises and waves the Stars and Bars, mounts the crest of the Federal position, stops to give water from his canteen to a stricken foe, and then falls unconscious into the arms of the opposing leader, Captain Phil Stoneham, U. S. A.

The thrilling scene is not what it seems, as Art is never Nature. It is a mosaic of several hundred scenes of 4 to 10 seconds each, so cunningly blended in one another that appears to be continuous action. two solid weeks to make the minutes of the picture action.

Some of t hits were rehe and re-rehearsed to 25 times three-quarte of the da position work. The fighting job came along about 3 or 4 o'clock.

In the big panoramic battle scenes Mr. Griffith had other tasks, chiefly those of the technician. After his soldiers were done for the day, he and Bitzer tried night photography. They succeeded for the first time in reproducing battle scenes at night, the technical process being a secret of the directors.

The cannon mouths and the horses' hoofs are the bad spots of motion picture battles. Could these be eliminated, no ambulance corps would be necessary.

But fools will insist on getting in the way of shells, and unfortunates will sometimes be stampeded by runaway cavalry. Luckily, in the second battle of Petersburg, there were no serious casualties, although a

ROM TRAVE READERS

lished: Londo

Rector of Tri
The Traveler:
a line of h and disc toplay, "Th ppeared in day? The e article go er:
the beauty of it tends to revive wounds and to inc
s of unthinking white acks."
the play on Saturday
wor of Boston has elimi nes against which strongly re urged at the hearing per-n of the Negroes wr from the play as a ue and unjust," and at a most loyal and e of American citize this play be called up ll further misconce
ALEXANDER
April 11.

A Protest.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

I have seen "The Birth of a Nis in its expurgated form. The re the pruning is about as satisfact an attempt to make the devil mo sentable by shortening his horn docking his tail. The malign sp the play remains—in its cruel mis sentation of the Negroes, even o construction times, and in its glor tion of the murderous and trait Ku Klux Klan.

HORACE BUMSTE
Brookline, April 11.

A Word of Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

I write to express my gratitude your very excellent criticism of the n tion picture play, "The Birth of a N tion," now appearing at the Trem Theatre. Yours was the only revie a Boston critic which evinced any sideration for the human side of the ture of the injustice inflicted on a r Yours was the only review that pressed any concern for the after-effe of such cruel representation.

The other critics seemed loath to lea the narrow field of pure dramatic "cr icism." I don't know if they were c come by the wo beauty of the pictu the immense amou advertising purpo in the film. Perhaps they were ated by ont-and-out race prejudic

FORRESTER B. WASHINGT
Tufts, '09.

Protests "Birth of a Nation."

To the Editor of The Traveler:

"The Birth of a Nation" is an famous misrepresentation of the reco struction period. It is a libel on bot the white men of the North and Negro of the South. From an historic point of view, it has not even truth recommend it. The people of Bost with their glorious past, can ill affo to have this production thrust u them.

MRS. SAMUEL E. COURTNE
98 West Springfield str
Boston, April 11.

Another Protest.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

I saw the play entitled "The Bi of the Nation" Saturday afternoo the Tremont Theatre. After being i ent at the public hearing given b mayor and hearing the many things concerning the play and th things against, and reading statements concerning the helpf naturally desired to see for mys

In my judgment this play is a sla the face for the North. It argues tha the North was wrong in espousing th cause of the slave, and the days of re construction are so shown to prove t North was wrong.

Then further this play is a perversion of true history. Dark as were the days of reconstruction, they were never as dark as this play describes them. It pictures the colored man of those days as being low, depraved and bestial. This is untrue. Many still living who saw those days will testify that the play is a gross misrepresentation of the colored people. If this is history then the imagination of the historian is so vivid that truth is sacrificed upon the altar of imagination. If true history were related, would the unbiased historian overlook the thousands of black women and girls whose honor and virtue were stole to satisfy the passions of the truly ba and depraved whites.

This play breeds hatred. It is a pity that the talents of those conceiving th play should be used to heap ridic and defamation upon the heads o helpless and harmless people, who burdens are already far too heavy an unjust. May the Christ, whom they be seech in the closing scenes of this pla correct and forgive.

WALTER D. McCLANE,
Minister of St. Bartholomew's Chu
Cambridge, April 11.

Still Another.

To the Editor of The Trave

"The Birth of a Nation" ous and inflammatory pla ager's aim has been reache cessfully, i. e., race hatred.

ass.) POST
APRIL 12, 1915

FFITH EFENDS WAR PLAY

ies to Criticisms de by J. Mott Hallowell

W. Griffith, producer of "The f a Nation" at the Tremont said yesterday in reply to the ts made in J. Mott Hallowell's o Mayor Curley and Police ssioner O'Meara; the outset permit me to thank allowell for an original depar- manners. He attended the performance of the play, as he invitation, whereupon he pro- thrust a stiletto into the back st. Would it not have been Mr. Hallowell to have pur- his seat for one of the public rmances before asking for the ession of my play?

R. SCHOEFFEL PROTESTS

ohn B. Schoeffel, proprietor and nager of the Tremont Theatre, has uested me to ask Mr. Hallowell ether he or his supporters will make mbursement for the losses involved the closing of the doors. Mr. Schoef- says: 'The Tremont Theatre has a duation of $800,000; the only means of eeting our expenses is by presenting rtful dramatic entertainment. I saw e Birth of a Nation' film a week ago found it free from immorality and cenity—a private judgment in which, m glad to say, the city authorities ree with me. After 40 years' experi- ce as a theatrical producer and man- er, I am disgusted with the attitude Mr. Hallowell and his people in try- g to interfere with property rights. he theatrical business has been in a plorable condition, and for the first me in many years we were obliged close the Tremont Theatre as early a March. But for 'The Birth of a Na- n,' which was the only good attrac- available, 127 of my help—good on citizens—would be out of em- ment now. I purposely kept out this controversy till the properly stituted authorities had decided I justified in presenting this play. that the authorities have decided t am within my legal rights, I be quick to take action to preserve same.'

Mayor Approved Play

"Mr. Hallowell has taken pains to present his explanation or interpreta- ion of the principal incidents in the play in face of the fact that Mayor Curley himself viewed the private per- formance Friday night. Has it occurred to Mr. Hallowell that the officers of the were quite capable of making their interpretations and explanations?

's a long way from the bases to We would not question Mr. Hal- judgment on the tactics of the d diamond, but certainly do ques- knowledge of the grand tactics drama.

etter-writer says that 'a lie can by omission as well as by what With this premise we thor- gree, and point to his own which is replete with omis- facts essential to the under- of Southern history. We ad- areful reading of the works of Wilson, Fleming, Rhodes and orians of note. Apparently he ee at all the tragedy of the hite people in the six years he Civil war. Of this the erred to can inform him. But he jumps to the conclusion that the play will injure the negro of today, citing the remark of one alleged spectator out of 100,000 patrons in New York to prove his 'point.' He also dwells much on the predecessor of 'The Birth of a Nation,' called 'The Clansman.' We take up the challenge involved in the coupling of these two works, and here point out to Mr. Hallowell that there were fewer killings of negroes throughout the South during the years of 'The Clansman's' presentation than in the years preceding. In all this talk of 'violence' attributed to a play, is not Mr. Hallowell constructing a mare's nest of his own imagination and preju- dices?

Many Clergymen Praised

"As to his slighting reference to letters of encomium from a few clergy,' I beg to say that they were selected from the endorsements of hundreds of ministers and educators. We used the names of those who bore a national reputation. Mr. Hallowell's remark that 'we executed a minister here three years ago' is singularly unfor- tunate in this connection. Does he compare by implication the time-hon- ored names of the Rev. Drs. John Tal- bot Smith, Charles H. Parkhurst and Thomas B. Gregory, endorsers of this play, with the ministerial degenerate that was executed three years ago? If he does not make comparison, why the reference?

"I deny the assertion that 'The Birth of a Nation' slanders a race, and I am supported in this de- nial by more eminent authority than that of J. Mott Hallowell. There are a number of people nowadays rush- ing into the public prints with a scanty stock of historical knowledge and an irrepressible desire to set the world right. Before making 'The Birth of a Nation,' I spent years in studying the historical framework of the story. Dur- ing the eight months of production I was guided by veterans of the actual events. The same course of historical investigation is open to Mr. Hallowell and to those who think as he does.

"I am a professional producer of pic- tures. Let Mr. Hallowell or his col- leagues prepare a historical scenario of equal dramatic value to my present one of 'The Birth of a Nation,' and I will produce it with the same unflag- ging energy, devotion to artistic fea- tures and historical detail, and on the same elaborate scale of expense as has characterized the labor of making the present picture."

Post. Apr 12, 1915.

Tremont Theatre

David W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," was publicly presented for the first time in Boston yesterday afternoon and evening. The Tremont Theatre en- gagement promises to be the most successful in the history of that play- house. "The Birth of a Nation," by picture, orchestral music and song, tells the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of inter- necine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters— slavery, the prime cause of the Civil war; Lincoln's call for troops to sub- due the rebellious States; the big bat- tles and private tragedies of the con- flict; the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the President; the harsh radical policy to the prostrate South; the uprising of the clans, and the overthrow of the carpet-bag regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest is based on the friendships between the Stonemans of Pennsylvania and the Camerons of South Carolina, two families involved in the struggle. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where nature painted the backgrounds and army men directed the mimic campaigns. The notable indoor scenes, like Ford's theatre on the night of Lincoln's death, are exact facsimiles of the originals. Altogether, it is the first time in art-production that his- tory in the large has been presented in living pictures. Of nearly equal im- portance to the films is the music that interprets it. The latter consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged by Joseph Carl Briel, after Griffith's sug- gestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. It is played by an orchestra of 40 pieces. Vocal music is also provided, the stirring old tunes of long ago dominating fancy and feel- ing as the historic incidents unfold. Henry Walthall carries superbly the chief heroic role, while among the women the work of Misses Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish and Miriam Cooper stands. Joseph Henabery's President Lincoln, Donald Crisp's General Grant and Howard Gaye's General Lee are among the vivid historical portraitures.

MAYOR O.K.'S REVISED "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Eliminations Should Improve the Sensational Film at the Tremont Theatre—Nineteen Years of "Movies" in Boston.

By E. F. Harkins

Certain changes intended to moderate the racial and controversial side of "The Birth of a Nation" films having been made at the suggestion of the municipal censors, fortified by the request of Mr. Curley himself, the mayor now an- nounces that he has given the produc- tion his formal approval.

With the exception of a statement flashed upon the screen at the begin- ning of the performance, in which it was said that "The bringing of the African to America in the 17th century planted the first seed of disunion," the features objected to and eliminated ap- peared in the second act. On the whole, they might fairly be regarded, racial feelings aside, as offenses against good taste, so that their elimination will unquestionably improve the performance in the eyes of the temperate and dis- criminating theatre-goer. This was sug- gested in The Journal's review of the Friday night performance.

No reference to any changes is made in yesterday's bulletin from the Tre- mont, but it appears that "enthusiastic crowds of patrons at the opening public performances, Saturday matinee and night, confirmed the splendid fa- vorable verdict of the press on 'The Birth of a Nation' that followed the private representation on Friday even- ing."

Battle Scene Masterpieces

The battle scenes pictured in the first act mark the supreme achievement of motion photography up to date. The skirmishes and hand-to-hand conflicts are intensely vivid, for they are not only well planned but well acted. You can actually see death in some faces as the men fall in close combat. There is also a thrilling spectacle in one of the running fights in the place called Pied- mont, where one of the raiders tumbles from the balcony of a house after the State troops open fire. But the most thrilling sights of all, and the most remarkable of all the wonders wrought by D. W. Griffith, the director of the production, and by G. W. Bitzer, the photographer, are the battles conducted on a big scale in vast stretches of field and valley. The impression made upon the spectator is that of witnessing the military movements from some height overlooking the battle ground. The war pictures brought over from Europe re- cently are generally tame in comparison with these mimic engagements cast upon the screen at the Tremont.

Equally thrilling is the burning of Atlanta—a spectacle far more realistic than the conflagration portrayed two years ago in one of the famous Italian productions.

That Tragic Night in Ford's

Apropos of the scene depicting the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, it is worth recalling that William J. Ferguson, one of the actors who took part in the performance of "Our American Cousin" that night, is still facing the footlights, or at least he was earlier in the season. He came to Boston last September, as a matter of fact, and appeared with Fannie Ward at the Tremont—the very theatre where a slice of "Our American Cousin" is being filmed—in a very Frenchy farce called "Madame President." Five other members of the company that appeared before Lincoln on that historic night are also living, but not acting.

Ford's Theatre is now used as a sort of storehouse, but it has been con- demned and it may be razed any day.

BE
Boston, Mass.
APR 19 1915

COLORED PEOPLE TO STORM STATE HOUSE

ill Appeal to Gov Walsh This Morning to Suppress "The Birth of a Natio[n]"

Mass Meeting So Decides,

Mayor Jeered in Faneuil Hall.

Hisses Also Greet Wilson's Name.

Frank B. Sanborn One of Chief Speakers.

Many outbursts of vociferous cheer- ing punctuated the speeches in de- nunciation of the picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," made by men of various Nations yesterday afternoon in Faneuil Hall, at the mass meeting to protest against the continued pro- duction of that play in this city.

Fully 1000 men and women, a large majority colored, crowded the hall. An overflow of 500 or more gathered in the square outside and for nearly three hours heard speeches from speakers that had already spoken in the hall. The enthusiasm outside was fully as high as within. Both gatherings, while apparently in- tensely in earnest, were extremely good natured, never losing an oppor- tunity for a good laugh.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

FROM TRAVELER READERS

Protests "Birth of a Nation."

To the Editor of The Traveler:

I was present at the performance of "The Birth of a Nation" on Saturday afternoon. It impressed me as a studied attempt to glorify the "Ku-Klux-Klan" and its lawless methods, without a ray of sympathy for its victims and without the least effort to do them justice. By a clever and bewildering appeal to the heroic emotions, it tends to justify "lynch law." It cannot fail to do great harm, especially to our young people, thus to distort and confuse their sense of what is right and just. The play is untrue to history. In my judgment, it is certain to stir contempt for and to deepen prejudice against the colored people.

There is too much race prejudice already without such pictures to inflame it. I sincerely hope they will be withdrawn.

Rev. CHRISTOPHER R. ELIOT.
2 West Cedar street, Boston, April 12.

A Protest.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

That the regretful and deeply regretted mistakes of the reconstruction era should be thrust upon our minds, and all that period of hatred which good Americans are trying to forget, revived by the vivid and one-sided portrayal with which this photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," is "entertaining" the public, thus inflaming old sectional feelings, and representing the Negro, who clung to the system of slavery, as the only Negro who deserved honor and respect, is the most depressing situation I have ever known. I have never in my life been so heartsick as I have been since witnessing the second act of this play. The first act is splendid, but its effect is completely nullified by the unfairness, exaggeration and frightfully melodramatic repulsiveness of the second.

HENRY FRANCIS SMITH,
Minister, The Congregational church,
West Medford, April 12.

Another Protest.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

Who doubts the power of moving picture shows to "depict history" fairly and in a "form of speech as clean and pure as the words of the drama"?

"The Birth of a Nation" fails in both these respects. It is unfair in omitting reference to the southern demand for extension of slavery into the territories. It is unclean and impure in portraying in disgusting detail the lowest human passions. The inference from such an exhibition is that such creatures are typical Negroes. Intelligent Southerners know better; honest-minded citizens of Boston know better. Artists who can prepare such films should turn their skill to better uses and give us truth, decency and justice.

ELIZABETH C. PUTNAM.
194 Marlboro street, April 12.

"Rewrite Second Act."

To the Editor of The Traveler:

The right and kindly thing for the proprietors of the "Birth of a Nation" to do is to destroy or completely rewrite the whole of the second act. As now written it does a grievous wrong to 10,000,000 of our fellow-citizens and is thereby a menace to our whole community. As honorable men, I trust that they will do the right and kindly thing.

GEORGE G. BRADFORD.
[illegible] street.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APR 13 1915

TREMONT THEATRE

David W. Griffith is so pleased with the enthusiastic reception given by the large audiences at the Tremont Theatre to "The Birth of a Nation" that he intends to make a Boston picture as his next film. The subject will be based on the Holy Grail paintings in the Public Library, subject to the approval of the trustees and the granting of the rights by the Edwin A. Abbey estate. Mr. Griffith has dispatched a letter to Charles Scribner, Mrs. Abbey's brother-in-law, who manages her affairs, opening negotiations. It is the director's preference to return to some poetic theme, such as he had in his other film, "Judith of Bethulia," founded on Thomas [illegible] Aldrich's poem.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 14, 1915

MANY VETERANS TO SEE "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Many veterans of the historic scenes of the close of the civil war will attend "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre this afternoon and evening. Spectators will see the Lincoln tragedy 50 years—almost to the moment—after it occurred. In the play Ford's Theatre in replica sets forth the position of Mr. Lincoln and family in the presidential box, the audience, the actors performing "Our American Cousin." Nicolay and Hay have been closely followed. The actor representing President Lincoln in the reproduction is Joseph Henabery, whose portrayal has been highly praised for its [illegible] and nobility.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 13, 1915

PUBLIC LETTER BOX

MYTHS OF RECONSTRUCTION."

To the Editor of The Herald:

Joining in Mr. Storey's remonstrance in this morning's Herald against the presentation in Boston of Thomas Dixon's perverted travesty of the colored race, as exhibited in the picture play called "The Birth of a Nation," I have not seen it, but as described by those who have, it is nothing less than vile. Let me add to Mr. Storey's remonstrance another of at least equal force which may reach some who are deaf to the appeal for justice to an oppressed race. The play, like the book, "The Clansman," on which it is founded, is a gross perversion of a period of our history about which the people have been persistently lied to for a generation. Even the most eminent historians suppress the truth about it, in the interest, I suppose, of national harmony. I mean the reconstruction period; the leading purpose of the book, and presumably of the play, being to instil the belief that the reconstruction acts of Congress were not only foolish but wicked, as inspired by malice or revenge or a determination to perpetuate the power of the Republican party by humiliating the white people of the South.

There is not, and never was, a shadow of truth in this pretence. On the contrary, the southern whites brought upon themselves the misfortunes of the reconstruction era as unmistakably as they brought upon themselves the calamities of the war on which reconstruction followed. No sooner were they reinvested with political power than they made their first use of it to nullify emancipation and restore the Negro to virtual slavery. The proofs of this are in the statute books of the southern states, they are familiar to all who have even tried to learn the truth, and they are innumerable. This it was, and this alone, that compelled Congress, in order to secure to the Negro even his personal liberty, to interfere with President Johnson's reconstructed state governments; and all the grievances of reconstruction followed upon this single circumstance, for which the white South was as directly responsible as it was for the rebellion.

But if reconstruction was a crime, is there no sense of justice in the American people to restrain them from wreaking its consequences upon the helpless Negro who was, at most, only the innocent cause of it?

A. E. PILLSBURY.
Washington, April 6.

A PROTESTING VOICE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As a regular reader of your publication and who appreciates highly both the matter and manner of it, I hesitate to offer a criticism, but under the circumstances I feel that I must. In last Saturday's issue an article appeared giving unqualified approval to the photo-play known as "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented in Tremont Theatre. I am fain to believe that your reporter saw only the first act, for I cannot conceive how any good American, regretting the mistakes of the reconstruction period as we all do, could sit through the second act of that performance without being, to put it mildly, greatly troubled. Much of it is melodramatic in the extreme, which is in itself a severe arraignment. Much of it is untrue in historic perspective. The evils of carpet-bagging politics, the baser side of the Negro character and the happier side of slavery, are depicted with a one-sidedness and an appeal to sectional and race prejudice which are unmistakable. Witness the tremendous applause which greeted every appearance of the K. K. K. and the repulsive prominence given to those two lustful Negroes and that ambitious Negress, to say nothing of that impossible leader of the house.

I have never in my life been so depressed and heart-sick as I have since witnessing that second act. The first act is splendid. Words fail to express my wonder and admiration. But its effect is completely nullified by the unfairness, exaggeration and frightfully melodramatic repulsiveness of the second part. If Boston will tolerate this sort of educational "entertainment," God help us!

HENRY FRANCIS SMITH.
West Medford, April 12.

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 13, 1915

Tremont Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation" pictures hold the absorbed attention of large audiences at the Tremont Theatre. There are two performances daily.

David W. Griffith is so pleased with the reception here of "The Birth of a Nation" that he intends to make a Boston picture as his next great film. The subject will be based on the Holy Grail paintings in the Public Library, subject to the approval of the trustees and the granting of the rights by the Edwin A. Abbey estate.

It is unlikely that a great historical picture such as the "Birth of a Nation," with its epic treatment of Civil War events, can be duplicated in the near future, so it is the director's preference to return to some poetic theme such as he had in his other famous film, "Judith of Bethulia," founded on Thomas Bailey Aldrich's poem.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

SPECTACULAR FILMS TREMONT'S BIG CARD

"The Birth of a Nation" films are proving as sensational an attraction in Boston as they proved in New York and in the West, where they came from originally. The Tremont Theatre, where they are being shown every afternoon and evening, is the scene of unusual enthusiasm, for the pictures are remarkably realistic illustrations of the historical times revolving around the Civil War. The South is revealed strikingly in peace and in war.

A love story winds its way in and out of the 12,000 feet of film displayed during the long entertainment, but what makes the big spectacle produced by D. W. Griffith so extraordinarily strong are the battle scenes, which were superbly staged, and the adventures of the celebrated Ku Klux Klan.

American — Boston Mass.
Apr. 13, 1915

TREMONT THEATRE—Griffith's big picture, "The Birth of a Nation," has amazed the critics who said Boston wouldn't pay theatre prices for a motion picture and is packing the Tremont at every performance.

ADVERTISER
Boston, Mass.
APR 1

UNABLE TO STOP FILM

Mayor Announces at New Conf on "The Birth of a Nation

A delegation of more than 30 persons, headed by W. Monroe T appeared before Mayor Curley ye to demand elimination of many sc "The Birth of a Nation," the mu cussed photoplay of the Civil War and if possible the entire revoking play.

In reply Mayor Curley stated tha had the power he would close the but he stated that the law did not him.

The negroes present and their frie nied that the worst features of th were at all historical, and they c that the very destiny of the colore in America was at stake.

Mr. Trotter claimed that the T Theatre, in regard to ticket distri was drawing the color line. He that several of the colored persons applied at the window for tickets performance Saturday, but that the denied. Shortly after, he claimed, of tickets were available for whit sons who applied. Rev. M. W. Tho pastor of the Charles St. African Church, stated that as he left the Friday night he heard one member audience say: "All of the damned ought to be dead or out of the coun

W. D. Brigham, representing a soc white citizens interested in the race, said that in his opinion there many scenes in the play which were tively immoral and that it was, the within the authority of the Mayor t the performances.

The Mayor stated finally that, opinion, it was not within his power low the suggestions offered that th be stopped. He said, however: lieve the play is an outrage on the c people of the country."

Finally the Mayor agreed to have ther conference with Police C O'Meara in order to review the fi of the Police Commissioner's censo

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

MAYOR CALLS FILM 'OUTRAGE'

So Declares to Delegation That Protests Production of "Birth of a Nation."

Mayor Curley declared emphatically yesterday, as the result of persistent questioning by W. Munroe Trotter and several other Negroes who visited him at City Hall, that the "Birth of a Nation" is "an outrage upon the colored people of the country."

"That is all we want, Mr. Mayor," answered Trotter. "We realize that under the present law you cannot stop the play. But throughout the country the word is being spread that you favor its production. We are pleased to see that you do not."

Then the mayor added: "The white men, I believe, have more right to object to the play than the Negroes, for the picture depicts a white man assassinating President Lincoln and a white man stirring up the Negroes to revolt. It is obvious, though, that the whole thing is a continued attack upon Negroes. But there is nothing immoral or obscene in it, and consequently nothing contrary to law."

The mayor agreed to ask the police commissioner to confer with him again on the reports of their censors with a view to finding whether there is any way in which features of the play objectionable to Negroes can be eliminated.

"As far as I can see now," the mayor admitted, "there is no remedy to prevent any production which calumniates and traduces any element of the population but a statutory enactment vesting authority directly in the mayor to prohibit any such production.

Having secured the mayor's disapproval of the production, those protesting against the photo-play charged Negroes have been refused the righ buy tickets for the "Birth of a Nati

"The color line has been drawn," clared Trotter, "at the box office o Tremont Theatre. Negroes standin line for tickets have been ref tickets, while white people in fron them and behind them got the ti with no trouble. A Negro woman is very white and does not show color secured three tickets at the atre on Saturday, while a Negro preceding her was refused."

The mayor refused, however, to any steps to investigate these cha declaring they were not within province of his office.

That the film already has create feeling toward the colored people in ton was indicated by the remarks o Rev. M. A. Thornton, who told mayor he was glad to get out o Tremont Theatre Saturday at the of the photo-play, as remarks he h while witnessing it caused him to for his life.

Others in the delegation who were Butler Wilson, the Rev. M. A Shaw, the Rev. A. W. Puller and W Brigham.

John Cusick, attorney for the ducers of the play, notified the m later in the day that no further re mendations by the mayor for chang the film will be compiled with.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

Rev. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park St. Church, has written to the Mayor endorsing the latter's policy in regard to the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Conrad believes that the Mayor has taken the courageous and proper stand in regard to the production.

AMERICAN
Boston, M
APR

Tremont Theatre.

David W. Griffith is so plea the enthusiastic reception g the large audiences at the Theatre to "The Birth of a that he intends to make a Bos ture as his next great film. ject will be based on the Ho paintings in the public libra ject to the approval of the and the granting of the right Edwin A. Abbey estate.

Horace G. Wadlin, the thought well of the plan when to yesterday, but as the right production are controlled by win A. Abbey, the artist's wi Curtis and Cameron, Mr. Grif dispatched a letter to Charle ner, the New York publisher Mrs. Abbey's brother-in-law managers her affairs, openin tiations for the motion pi tions.

It is very unlikely that a g torical picture such as the "B Nation," with its epic treat Civil War events, can be dupl even approached in the nea It is the director's preferenc turn to some poetic theme su had in his other great film, " Bethulia," founded on Th Aldrich's poem.

(ass.) POST
APRIL

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

MYTHS OF RECONSTRUCTION."

To the Editor of The Herald:

Joining in Mr. Storey's remonstrance in this morning's Herald against the presentation in Boston of Thomas Dixon's perverted travesty of the colored race, as exhibited in the picture play called "The Birth of a Nation." I have not seen it, but as described by those who have, it is nothing less than vile. Let me add to Mr. Storey's reasons another of at least equal force which may reach some who are deaf to the appeal for justice to an oppressed race. The play, like the book, "The Clansman," on which it is founded, is a gross perversion of a period of our history about which the people have been persistently lied to for a generation. Even the most eminent historians suppress the truth about it, in the interest, I suppose, of national harmony. I mean the reconstruction period; the leading purpose of the book, and presumably of the play, being to instil the belief that the reconstruction acts of Congress were not only foolish but wicked, as inspired by malice or revenge or a determination to perpetuate the power of the Republican party by humiliating the white people of the South.

There is not, and never was, a shadow of truth in this pretence. On the contrary, the southern whites brought upon themselves the misfortunes of the reconstruction era as unmistakably as they brought upon themselves the calamities of the war on which reconstruction followed. No sooner were they reinvested with political power than they made their first use of it to nullify emancipation and restore the Negro to virtual slavery. The proofs of this are in the statute books of the southern states, they are familiar to all who have even tried to learn the truth, and they are innumerable. This it was, and this alone, that compelled Congress, in order to secure to the Negro even his personal liberty, to interfere with President Johnson's reconstructed state governments; and all the grievances of reconstruction followed upon this single circumstance, for which the white South was as directly responsible as it was for the rebellion.

But if reconstruction was a crime, is there no sense of justice in the American people to restrain them from wreaking its consequences upon the helpless Negro who was, at most, only the innocent cause of it?

A. E. PILLSBURY.

Washington, April 6.

A PROTESTING VOICE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As a regular reader of your publication and who appreciates highly both the matter and manner of it, I hesitate to offer a criticism, but under the circumstances I feel that I must. In last Saturday's issue an article appeared giving unqualified approval to the photo-play known as "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented in Tremont Theatre. I am fain to believe that your reporter saw only the first act, for I cannot conceive how any good American, regretting the mistakes of the reconstruction period as we all do, could sit through the second act of that performance without being, to put it mildly, greatly troubled. Much of it is melodramatic in the extreme, which is in itself a severe arraignment. Much of it is untrue in historic perspective. The evils of carpet-bagging politics, the baser side of the Negro character and the happier side of slavery, are depicted with a one-sidedness and an appeal to sectional and race prejudice which are unmistakable. Witness the tremendous applause which greeted every appearance of the K. K. K. and the repulsive prominence given to those two lustful Negroes and that ambitious Negress, to say nothing of that impossible leader of the house.

I have never in my life been so depressed and heart-sick as I have since witnessing that second act. The first act is splendid. Words fail to express my wonder and admiration. But its effect is completely nullified by the unfairness, exaggeration and frightfully melodramatic repulsiveness of the second part. If Boston will tolerate this sort of educational "entertainment," God help us!

HENRY FRANCIS SMITH.

West Medford, April 12.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 13, 1915

CONFERS ON CUTS IN PHOTO PLAY FILMS

Mayor Assured as to the "Birth of a Nation."

Colored Citizens Voice Objections to Some of the Pictures.

Mayor Curley said last night that he had a conference with the manager of the "Birth of Nation" films at the Tremont Theatre in the afternoon and was informed that the reason the parts were not cut out of the Saturday evening performance was that it was too much of a job to be done in the time available. The portion objected to was eliminated by working all day Sunday, the Mayor was told.

The Mayor pointed out that he can do nothing further under existing laws. As to the refusal to sell tickets to colored applicants, the Mayor said the management told him tickets were sold to colored applicants. It is a case for the courts, the Mayor explained.

About 30 leading colored citizens voiced their objections to "The Birth of a Nation" before Mayor Curley yesterday forenoon, the latter promising to request Commissioner O'Meara to review again the finding of the police censor and also that the Commissioner confer with him with a view to having other objectionable features eliminated, besides the question of a possible breach of the peace. The Mayor said he believed the play on the whole is an insult to colored citizens and that had he the power he would stop the play at once.

Among the speakers were W. Munroe Trotter, Rev Aaron W. Fuller, Rev M. W. Thornton, William D. Brigham, a white resident of Dorchester, and Emery Morris. Three men and three women present, all colored, said they were refused tickets at the box office, and one woman who was colored but so fair as to pass for a white woman said she bought tickets soon after a couple of colored men were refused.

Rev Dr Charles Fleischer observed after a second visit to the play last night: "At least, may I congratulate Mr Griffith upon a wonderful achievement—whether measured pictorially, dramatically and histrionically. It is soul-stirring and mind-moving and must fairly force Americans to face the negro problem and to work toward its wise and just solution.

"My suggestion to the management is that they incorporate in the play the vital facts of the negro's real progress since emancipation. The suppression of 'The Birth of a Nation,' as I view it, is undemocratic and un-American, and would shut our eyes to one aspect of the relations between the white and dark races. Suppressive action merely gives a notoriety to the spectacle which evidently it neither seeks nor needs, but which would inevitably increase its appeal.

"I would like to urge strongly upon the producers that they present a series of pictures, in connection with their play, which shall tell the story of the progress of the negro from the date of the birth of our Nation in 1865 up to date. The play thus enlarged appeals to me as a far-reaching opportunity to serve not only the cause of the negro, but likewise the Nation as a whole."

Dr Fleischer's suggestion was submitted to David W. Griffith last evening, and the latter was so interested that he has taken the idea under advisement, with a view to making the additions suggested.

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

NO POWER TO FORBID RACE PLAY

Not Obscene, but an Outrage, Declares Mayor Curley

After declaring to a delegation of colored citizens that in his personal opinion the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," constituted an "outrage on the colored citizens of the United States," Mayor Curley yesterday declared that under the law he was powerless to supress the film. The Mayor made this statement in the executive chamber, where were gathered a score of remonstrants under the leadership of W. Munro Trotter.

William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Association, and several other prominent white citizens accompanied the protesting delegation.

PLAY NOT OBSCENE

Regarding the measures that might be taken in the future, the Mayor said: "Under the existing law there is no method by which it is possible to legally prohibit any production appearing that is not, in the opinion of the Mayor and police commissioner, obscene, immoral or tending to injure the morals of the community.

"The reports received from both the municipal censor and the censor representing the police commissioner state that this production is neither obscene, immoral nor tending to injure the morals of the community.

"In my opinion, the only method by which it is possible to prevent a production which calumniates and traduces any element of the population would be through a statute enactment vesting authority directly in the Mayor to prohibit any such production. Until such time, however, there is no alternative other than that which has been taken."

The Mayor frankly told the remonstrants that in his opinion the law governing such performances was "undoubtedly framed at the behest of theatrical promoters for the safeguarding of their investments."

No Further "Toning Down"

The charge was made by several of those present that features which the Tremont Theatre management promised last Friday would be eliminated, were still being shown in the film.

The Mayor promised to take up the matter again with the theatre management. He learned from Attorney Cusick, representing Producer Griffiths, that it had not been possible to make the eliminations agreed on until Sunday. Features referred to had been removed, the attorney stated.

The Mayor stated that Attorney Cusick had notified him that Producer Griffiths was en route for California, and thus he could not take up with him the question of further toning down films.

The Mayor stated that the attorney promised to take up with the theatre management the question of further changes. But at the same time the attorney expressed the belief that his clients would be unwilling to eliminate further features, especially as the police and municipal censors had officially agreed there was no violation of the law in the photoplay.

During the hearing which the Mayor gave to Mr. Trotter and the delegation of remonstrants in the afternoon, the claim was made that the color line was being drawn in regard to the sale of tickets at the playhouse.

Mr. Trotter pointed out several men and women who, he said, had been refused tickets, while white persons who accompanied them for that express purpose were furnished tickets in desirable locations. These white persons turned over their tickets to the colored citizens, he said.

The Mayor replied that such a matter was one for the courts to thresh out. Mr. Trotter declared that legal action would undoubtedly be taken in the matter of color discrimination.

Last night after his talk with Attorney Cusick, the Mayor stated that the theatre management claimed a block of 50 seats had been sold to colored patrons Saturday without any question being raised.

The Rev. M. A. Thornton, one of those present with Mr. Trotter, told the Mayor that he attended the theatre Saturday, and was glad to escape without bodily injury. He feared for his safety because of remarks made in the audience during the progress of the photo play, Mr. Thornton said.

Others who spoke were the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, the Rev. A. W. Puller and Butler Wilson.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 13, 1915

PICTURES AND MUSIC

Tremont—The Birth of a Nation

A FILMED spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and the Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheoses of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 13, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" pictures hold the absorbed attention of large audiences at the Tremont Theatre. There are two performances daily.

Mr. David W. Griffith is so pleased with the reception here of "The Birth of a Nation" that he intends to make a Boston picture in facsimile as his next great film. The subject will be based on the Holy Grail paintings in the Public Library, subject to the approval of the trustees and the granting of the rights by the Edwin A. Abbey estate. Horace G. Wadlin, the librarian, thought well of the plan when spoken to yesterday, but as the rights of reproduction are controlled by Mrs. Edwin A. Abbey, the artist's widow, and Curtis & Cameron, Mr. Griffith has despatched a letter to Charles Scribner, the New York publisher, who is Mrs. Abbey's brother-in-law, and who manages her affairs, opening negotiations for the motion reproduction. It is very unlikely that a great historical picture such as "The Birth of a Nation," with its epic treatment of Civil war events, can be duplicated or even approached in the near future.

POST
ess: Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

Tremont Theatre

David W. Griffith is so pleased with the enthusiastic reception given by the large audiences at the Tremont Theatre to "The Birth of a Nation" that he intends to make a Boston picture as his next great film. The subject will be based on "The Holy Grail" paintings in the Public Library, subject to the approval of the trustees, and the granting of the rights by the Edwin A. Abbey estate. Horace G. Wadlin, the librarian, thought well of the plan when spoken to yesterday, but as the rights of reproduction are controlled by Mrs. Edwin A. Abbey, the artist's widow, and Curtis & Cameron, Mr. Griffith has despatched a letter to Charles Scribner, the New York publisher, who is Mrs. Abbey's brother-in-law, and who manages her affairs, opening negotiations for the motion reproduction. It is very unlikely that a great historical picture such as "The Birth of a Nation," with its epic treatment of Civil war events, can be duplicated or even approached in the near future.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

Racial Hatreds

To the Editor of The Record:—

Is it fair to contrast the conduct of the higher class of one race with that of the lowest type of another?

This is what is done in the second part of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation."

At the Saturday matinee, the conduct of the audience was sufficient proof to me that this public exhibition of the film is not wise.

Repeatedly the house was in a tumult when from all parts loud hisses rose above the vigorous hand claps.

Racial antagonism was evident, and the pictures made fuel for the fires of hatred. Should we place any unnecessary barriers in the path of the colored race, whose progress toward equality before the law has been and still is "a weary way and slow?"

Very truly, M. E. Young.

Mrs. Frank L. Young.)

ADVERTISER
s: Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

Racial Hatreds

To the Editor of The Advertiser:—

Is it fair to contrast the conduct of the higher class of one race with that of the lowest type of another?

This is what is done in the second part of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation."

At the Saturday matinee, the conduct of the audience was sufficient proof to me that this public exhibition of the film is not wise.

Repeatedly the house was in a tumult when from all parts loud hisses rose above the vigorous hand claps.

Racial antagonism was evident, and the pictures made fuel for the fires of hatred. Should we place any unnecessary barriers in the path of the colored race, whose progress toward equality before the law has been and still is "a weary way and slow?"

Very truly, M. E. Young.

Frank L. Young.)

BE Boston

Ga. Ste.
Worcester Mass
Apl 13, 1915

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

"Birth of a Nation"—Tremont

David W. Griffith is so pleased with the enthusiastic reception given by the large audiences at the Tremont Theatre to "The Birth of a Nation" that he intends to make a Boston picture as his next film. The subject will be based on the Holy Grail paintings in the Public Library, subject to the approval of the trustees, and the granting of the rights by the Edwin A. Abbey estate. Mr. Griffith has despatched a letter to Charles Scribner, the New York publisher, who is Mrs. Abbey's brother-in-law, and who manages her affairs, opening negotiations for the motion reproduction. It is very unlikely that a great historical picture such as "The Birth of a Nation," which is booked for ... here beginning Saturday, ... can be duplicated or even approached in the near future.

HEART INTEREST IN PLAY AT ROYAL

The part of "The Outcast" in the Mutual Master Picture of the same name being shown today at the Royal Theatre for the last time, is an appealing bit of human characterization that tightens the heart strings. Miss Marsh whose characterization of "Little Sister" in D. W. Griffith's wonderful achievement "The Birth of a Nation" has been acclaimed as one of the greatest screen classics, presents a human document that will remain in the memory of those who see the picture for a long time.

Tomorrow "The Devil," in five acts, is the Mutual Master Picture with Bessie Barriscale and Edward Connelly as principals. Some remarkable trick photography is seen and the view of ... final scenes is a truly ...

Suppress "The Birth of ...

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 13 1915

JOURNAL MAIL BAG

Says "Birth of Nation" Conveys Distorted Ideas

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

As an American citizen, whom, it happens, God made with white skin, and who witnessed the initial performance of "The Birth of a Nation," I should like to make a few remarks concerning the production through the medium of your valuable paper.

I believe this picture inculcates race prejudice, and increases such as already exists in minds of weak caliber.

"The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to convey distorted ideas to those who are more swayed by emotion than by reason. When I speak of such persons I wish to give an example of their strange mental vagaries.

In a certain Boston theatre a motion picture was presented some time ago which showed views of Thaw and Jerome. The former was applauded vociferously; the latter was hissed. It is to those who applaud murderous maniacs and hiss men who sustain law that "The Birth of a Nation" is dangerous.

The picture through the insidious misrepresentation of historical cause and effect hinders the mental growth of those unthinking persons who have never outgrown the folly of race prejudice. Such an unfortunate was the lady who sat next to me. Through respect for womanhood and for age I, with a large number of others, hissed a scene in which an elderly negro woman was depicted falling on the ground with a colored man pummeling him and being pummeled by him. The lady I have mentioned cast upon me a glance of scorn, and said in loud tones to the damsel who was with her the following witheringly sarcastic words: "Some few niggers here, I suppose."

The whole tone of "The Birth of a Nation" is false and prejudiced. The Southerners who suffered from the negroes after the Civil War are painted as martyrs and heroes. Nothing is presented to show the horrible crimes of human slavery which was directly and entirely responsible for the conditions of Reconstruction times in the South.

The raids of Aryan kidnapers upon the coasts of Africa are not shown. Their seizure of the inhabitants and their brutal treatment of them are not shown. One does not see the shackled unfortunates herded like brute beasts into the holds of slave ships, taken from their native shores to hives of unrewarded toil. One does not see the miseries of the journey across the sea, or the flinging to the sharks of those unhappy ones who became ill. The slave market, the whipping post, the barbarous indignities and cruelties to which the wretched slaves had constantly to submit—these are all absent. The foul deeds of the educated, civilized, Christian whites are nowhere to be seen.

The negro had been treated by the white man as if he were a beast. Torn from his native land, he was deprived of his freedom, given no education and permitted to enjoy none of the refining influences of civilization. Only its toils and tribulations were his portion.

The South sowed the wind and reaped the whirlwind. It kidnaped, enslaved human beings, and denied them everything which might have uplifted them. When the inevitable reckoning came, the South suffered—through its own hugh misdeed. When the negro received the freedom which was his by right of manhood he was ignorant, he was degraded, he caused great trouble in the land. Whose was the fault?

Boston, April 12, 1915. G. M.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) TELEGRAM
APRIL 13, 1915

Negroes Are Right.

The colored people of this country are right in protesting against the presentation in the theaters and moving picture houses of this country of the "The Birth of Nation." While it may be true that Mayor Curley of Boston cannot stop the presentation of the film because it does not transgress the rules regarding morality and obscenity, it does represent the colored people in a vile and brutal manner, in a manner that cannot fail to stir up feelings of loathing and hatred against them.

Any element of our population may be calumniated and traduced in moving picture films, in plays or in books and yet there is no law to prevent it so long as the calumniation and traducing is done in a wholesale way and does not select any particular individuals.

The race or the element viciously attacked in such plays or books has no redress in law but some races and elements take the law into their own hands and the calumniators and traducers know that. For that reason no plays or books reflecting upon the white race at the south have any circulation in the south. The man or the company that would present "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for instance in the south would be in danger of being lynched.

The colored people of this country have faults as even their best friends admits. But their way upward out of the depths is not made easy by dwelling upon their faults and magnifying their bad points as the play in question does. Their pathway is not made easier and they are not encouraged to cast off their bad elements.

In this mighty country even such an humble race as the negro should be protected in some way from calumniation in books and plays. There should be some law defending them from base attacks on the part of calumniators who select the worst points about them, emphasize those points and then expect the negroes to become good citizens.

Boston Transcript
324 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
(Entered at the Post Office, Boston, Mass., as Second Class Mail Matter)
MONDAY, APRIL 12, 1915

The Voice of the Censor

CARESSING his self-importance in a manifesto full of the solemn pomposities dear to Mr. Curley's type of mind, the mayor, as potentate of the playhouses, has approved the filmed spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now on view at the Tremont Theatre. Those august personages, "the official censor of the city of Boston and the censor representing the Police Commissioner of the City of Boston have this day submitted their report"; "I attended the production"; "I requested and I further requested," and so forth and so onward in comic contrast to the sort of speech with which the censors aforesaid beguile the tedium of intermissions and sometimes accompany the progress of a play that they are viewing. All this is the mayor's pretentious way of saying that he saw the pictures; wished certain changes made in them and that the manager complied. One of these changes in particular cuts away an episode in which a member of the House of Representatives in South Carolina during the Reconstruction days takes off his shoes in the midst of a session and is required by formal resolution of his fellow members to put them on again. Presumably this serio-comic incident involved the same disrespect to constituted authorities as did the representation of a mayor in "Wallingford" as a fatuous, garrulous and generally silly person. As Mr. Fitzgerald was quick to intervene then, so now is Mr. Curley zealous for respect on the stage to rulers. The other day the mayor told some club or other that none of his duties was so irksome as the censorship of the stage. Yet to judge by his public outgivings about he wallows delightedly in it.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 14, 1915

The lectures at the Public Library on contemporary American drama, under the auspices of the Drama League, will be resumed Friday afternoon, when F. C. Hersey will speak on "Some Aspects of American Drama."

Today is the 50th anniversary of the fatal attack on Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, a scene vividly pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," the historical photo-spectacle now running at the Tremont. It is expected that many veterans of the Civil war will attend today's performances and see the realistic production of the tragedy for themselves.

Nicolay and Hay Followed

"Every detail in this scene," says the announcement, "is stated to be historically exact. Nicolay and Hay were carefully followed and much original research work was done as to the costumes and the positions occupied by the principals. The tragedy took place, according to the best accounts, at 10.13 o'clock. The actor representing President Lincoln in the reproduction is Joseph Henabery." The actor not only is made up to present a striking likeness of Lincoln, but his performance conveys an unmistakable impression of Lincoln's characteristic demeanor. This is also set forth affectingly in the pardon scene interpolated in the film play.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

MANY VETERANS TO SEE "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Many veterans of the historic scenes at the close of the civil war will attend "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre this afternoon and evening. Spectators will see the Lincoln tragedy 50 years—almost to the moment—after it occurred. In the play the Theatre in replica sets forth the position of Mr. Lincoln and family in the Negro residential box, the audience, the performing "Our American Cousin," Nicolay and Hay have been carefully followed. The actor representing President Lincoln in the reproduction is Joseph Henabery, whose portrayal has been highly praised for its dignity, sincerity and nobility.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

The lectures at the Public Library on contemporary American drama, under the auspices of the Drama League, will be resumed Friday afternoon, when F. C. Hersey will speak on "Some Aspects of American Drama."

Today is the 50th anniversary of the fatal attack on Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, a scene vividly pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," the historical photo-spectacle now running at the Tremont. It is expected that many veterans of the Civil war will attend today's performances and see the realistic production of the tragedy for themselves.

Wendell Phillips Memorial Association ... arranged a mass meeting in Faneuil ... Sunday afternoon at 3 to protest ... With almst and to try to show the historical ... gree, sity of the photoplay "The Birth of a ... which tion." Frank B. Sanborn will preside ... Joseph C. Manning will be one of the ... facta akers.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

"Scoring" a Big Picture

A complete symphonic orchestral score, especially written for and synchronized to the pictures, is the decided novelty of a film play at the Tremont Theatre, called "The Birth of a Nation." The music was of the auche Birth of a Nation." The music was that this plified and thematically varied by the not wise. oser, Joseph Carl Briel, from old-time Repeatedlyern melodies, many of them hitherto when from lorded. The novelty consisted in giv- the vigorous ach character a theme, as in grand Racial antag and in timing the strains accurately pictures made characters' appearances.

Should we phimmensity of this labor is due to n the path ct that each character of note has rogress towards of entrances and exits, and there been and less than 500 scenes in the "pic- rank d opera seems simple and easy.

work was finally accomplished, how- oy Mr. Briel and a large staff of as- ts, and the artistic benefits of this onization are so striking that David iffith, "The Birth of a Nation" pro- has estimated the musical values cent of the aggregate worth of inment.

Flickerings From Film-Land

LILLIAN GISH
As Elsie Stoneman in "The Birth of a Nation"

A considerable number of veterans of the historic scenes at the close of the Civil War will attend "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre this afternoon or evening. Through the new stage art of David W. Griffith, spectators will see the great Lincoln tragedy 50 years—almost to the moment—after it occurred.

In the play Ford's Theatre in replica sets forth the position of Mr. Lincoln and family in the Presidential box, the distinguished audience, the actors performing "Our American Cousin" on the Ford's stage, the President bowing and smiling to the great assemblage, his drawing the shaw around his shoulders, the carelessness of the secret service officer in leaving his post, the entry of Wilkes Booth and the shooting, the manner of escape, and the horror and consternation produced by the terrible event which involved awful consequences to the prostrate South.

Every detail in this scene is stated to be historically exact. Nicolay and Hay were carefully followed, and much original research work was done as to the costumes and the positions occupied by the principals. The tragedy took place, according to the best accounts, at 10:13 o'clock, April 14, 1865.

The actor representing President Lincoln in the reproduction is Joseph Henabery. His portrayal has been highly praised for the dignity, sincerity and nobility of the characterization.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 14, 1915

CANE GIVEN TO SANBORN

Friends Present Concord Sage with Stick Made from Old Court House Railing

Fifty friends of Frank B. Sanborn of Concord met yesterday at the rooms of the Twentieth Century Club and presented him with a gold-headed cane which was made from wood taken from the old Court House, recently demolished. William D. Brigham, who made the presentation, said that "the hand which will grasp this cane is the same one which has grasped the hand of Phillips and Garrison and Sumner and ndrew and old John Brown."

Announcement was made that a mass meeting will be held in Faneuil Hall next Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association to protest against the further presentation of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Sanborn will preside and one of the speakers will be Joseph C. Manning of Alabama. Resolutions were adopted to the effect that the mayor and the police commissioner should prevent further presentation of the play.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

To the ... is it ... higher ... lowest ... This ... of the ... At t ... film play at the Tremont Theatre, called ... of the auche Birth of a Nation." The music was ... that this plified and thematically varied by the ... not wise. ... oser, Joseph Carl Briel, from old-time ... Repeatedlyern melodies, many of them hitherto ... when from lorded. The novelty consisted in giv- ... the vigorous ach character a theme, as in grand ... Racial antag and in timing the strains accurately ... pictures made characters' appearances.

Should we phimmensity of this labor is due to ... n the path ct that each character of note has ... rogress towards of entrances and exits, and there ... been and less than 500 scenes in the "pic- ... rank d opera seems simple and easy.

... work was finally accomplished, how- ... oy Mr. Briel and a large staff of as- ... ts, and the artistic benefits of this ... onization are so striking that David ... iffith, "The Birth of a Nation" pro- ... has estimated the musical values ... cent of the aggregate worth of ... inment.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 14, 1915

The lectures at the Public Library on contemporary American drama, under the auspices of the Drama League, will be resumed Friday afternoon, when F. C. Hersey will speak on "Some Aspects of American Drama."

Today is the 50th anniversary of the fatal attack on Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, a scene vividly pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," the historical photo-spectacle now running at the Tremont. It is expected that many veterans of the Civil war will attend today's performances and see the realistic production of the tragedy for themselves.

Nicolay and Hay Followed

"Every detail in this scene," says the announcement, "is stated to be historically exact. Nicolay and Hay were carefully followed and much original research work was done as to the costumes and the positions occupied by the principals. The tragedy took place, according to the best accounts, at 10.13 o'clock. The actor representing President Lincoln in the reproduction is Joseph Henabery." The actor not only is made up to present a striking likeness of Lincoln, but his performance conveys an unmistakable impression of Lincoln's characteristic demeanor. This is also set forth affectingly in the pardon scene interpolated in the film play.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

MANY VETERANS TO SEE "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Many veterans of the historic scenes at the close of the civil war will attend "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre this afternoon and evening. Spectators will see the Lincoln tragedy 50 years—almost to the moment—after it occurred. In the play the Theatre in replica sets forth the position of Mr. Lincoln and family in the Negro residential box, the audience, the performing "Our American Cousin," Nicolay and Hay have been carefully followed. The actor representing President Lincoln in the reproduction is Joseph Henabery, whose portrayal has been highly praised for its dignity, sincerity and nobility.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

The lectures at the Public Library on contemporary American drama, under the auspices of the Drama League, will be resumed Friday afternoon, when F. C. Hersey will speak on "Some Aspects of American Drama."

Today is the 50th anniversary of the fatal attack on Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, a scene vividly pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," the historical photo-spectacle now running at the Tremont. It is expected that many veterans of the Civil war will attend today's performances and see the realistic production of the tragedy for themselves.

Wendell Phillips Memorial Association ... arranged a mass meeting in Faneuil ... Sunday afternoon at 3 to protest ... With almst and to try to show the historical ... gree, sity of the photoplay "The Birth of a ... which tion." Frank B. Sanborn will preside ... Joseph C. Manning will be one of the ... facta akers.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 14 1915

"Scoring" a Big Picture

A complete symphonic orchestral score, especially written for and synchronized to the pictures, is the decided novelty of a film play at the Tremont Theatre, called "The Birth of a Nation." The music was of the auche Birth of a Nation." The music was that this plified and thematically varied by the not wise. ... oser, Joseph Carl Briel, from old-time ... Repeatedlyern melodies, many of them hitherto ... when from lorded. The novelty consisted in giv- ... the vigorous ach character a theme, as in grand ... Racial antag and in timing the strains accurately ... pictures made characters' appearances.

Should we phimmensity of this labor is due to ... n the path ct that each character of note has ... rogress towards of entrances and exits, and there ... been and less than 500 scenes in the "pic- ... rank d opera seems simple and easy.

... work was finally accomplished, how- ... oy Mr. Briel and a large staff of as- ... ts, and the artistic benefits of this ... onization are so striking that David ... iffith, "The Birth of a Nation" pro- ... has estimated the musical values ... cent of the aggregate worth of ... inment.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 14, 1915

CANE GIVEN TO SANBORN

Friends Present Concord Sage with Stick Made from Old Court House Railing

Fifty friends of Frank B. Sanborn of Concord met yesterday at the rooms of the Twentieth Century Club and presented him with a gold-headed cane which was made from wood taken from the old Court House, recently demolished. William D. Brigham, who made the presentation, said that "the hand which will grasp this cane is the same one which has grasped the hand of Phillips and Garrison and Sumner and ndrew and old John Brown."

Announcement was made that a mass meeting will be held in Faneuil Hall next Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association to protest against the further presentation of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Sanborn will preside and one of the speakers will be Joseph C. Manning of Alabama. Resolutions were adopted to the effect that the mayor and the police commissioner should prevent further presentation of the play.

Suppress

... characterization that ... heart strings. Miss Marsh ... terization of "Little Sis- ... W. Griffith's wonderful ... "The Birth of a Nation" ... proclaimed as ... great- ... screen classics, presents a human ... document that will remain in the mem- ... ory of those who see the picture for a ... long time.

Tomorrow "The Devil," in five acts, is the Mutual Master Picture with Bessie Barriscale and Edward Connelly as principals. Some remarkable trick photography is seen and the view of ... scenes is a truly

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 14, 1915

PUBLIC LETTER BOX

A FRESH ESTIMATE OF THE PLAY

To the Editor of The Herald:

I withheld my presence at the hearing by Mayor Curley to which I was invited by the protestants, because I felt I could best serve the cause of the Negro—whose welfare is so close to my heart—which I have well proven, I hope, by my past actions—through seeing the play first and then giving an impartial judgment. Therefore I attended the opening performance, and went again last night. It seems to me that Mayor Curley, by declining to suppress the production, has helped Boston toward a more virile endurance of even unpleasant truth when masterfully presented and "with malice toward none." My net feeling now is: Let the viewpoint of the southern people toward the reconstruction events be fully and freely set forth, but let that be supplemented by the presentation of the real advancement that the Negro race has achieved since that time.

My suggestion to the management is that they incorporate in the play the vital facts of the Negro's real progress since Emancipation. Tuskegee, Hampton and other schools are monuments to their invention, courage and efficiency. The names of Booker Washington, Dunbar and DuBois are worthy to adorn the literary and artistic annals of any race. Right here in Boston the colored people have made marvellous advancement and have exhibited so far a wise self-control and a temperance in the advocacy of their own cause. They may be trusted, I think, not to be carried away by an agitation that misses the real point of the controversy. Such an agitation defeats itself.

The suppression of "The Birth of a Nation," as I view it, is undemocratic and un-American, and would shut our eyes to one aspect of [illegible] relations between the white and dark races. Suppressive action merely gives a notoriety to the spectacle which evidently it neither seeks nor needs, but which would inevitably increase its appeal.

As it [illegible]evidently [illegible]far from the purpose of the play to stir up any feeling against the Negro, but [illegible]r to present his [illegible] picture of a [illegible]r unknown [illegible] of American [illegible]tory during [illegible] the Negro was given powers [illegible] he had not then been prepared to use. I would like to urge strongly upon the producers that they present a series of pictures, in connection with their play, which shall tell the story of the progress of the Negro from the date of the birth of our nation in 1865 up to date.

The play thus enlarged to carry the story to the present [illegible] to do full historical justice to the situation appears to [illegible] a far-reaching opportunity to serve not only the cause of the Negro, but likewise the nation as a whole. All the world will see it, and all the world will be enlightened.

CHARLES FLEISCHER.

Boston, April 13.

THE DRAMATIC CRITIC'S VIEWPOINT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Mr. Henry Francis Smith's letter, "A Protesting Voice," is somewhat hysterical. It is not customary for reporters to leave a theatre after the first act on the night of a first production. In reviewing "The Birth of a Nation" I considered it as an entertainment, not as a subject for polemical discussion.

Like certain sentimentalists Mr. Smith is unconsciously acting as press agent for the production. Unlike many of the protesting letters, his is, however, not based on mere hearsay. If the Negro is to be thus coddled why were there no loyal Russian voices raised for justice and the suppression of "The Yellow Ticket" with its travesty on Russian mentality and governmental methods?

No one who lived through the reconstruction period in the southern states will deny their horrors. The younger Negroes, mad with power, and often against the will of older and wiser members of their race, wreaked vengeance and heaped indignities alike upon former cruel tyrants and kindly employers. Many of the most deplorable incidents were not contrived by the Negroes themselves but were directly instigated by northern agitators whose arrogant democracy, irritated by the southern gentility, sought to make capital out of a trusting people by whom any newcomer from the North was looked upon as a deliverer. These men wilfully kept alive race hatred and fanned the flame of resentment which burned bitterly in the breasts of those so lately [illegible] the abominable institution of slavery.

Some of these incidents are shown for dramatic purposes in the second act of "The Birth of a Nation." The episode of Gus was introduced simply that the plot might proceed, and the exploits of the Ku Klux add to the spectacular interest of the production.

To many theatregoers the joys of melodrama are as a closed book. Others are less refined in their tastes. They are at least tolerant. I doubt the applause at the deeds of the Ku Klux which so disturbed Mr. Smith was prompted not so much by malignant race prejudice as by childish joy in the fact that the villian who in this play happened to be a Negro, was being punished and one of the heroines rescued. It is also barely possible that the audience with a feeling for the spectacular were delighted at the sight of the white-clad riders on their spirited horses dashing through the night on heroic errands.

KATHARINE WRIGHT.

Boston, April 13.

AN INCIDENT OF 1865.

To the Editor of The Herald:

"Boston's Part in Lincoln's Death," in yesterday's Herald, must have proved exceedingly interesting especially to those of us living at the time of the events narrated. Doubtless there are others like myself who noticed the omission of one of the incidental happenings that had an important bearing on the case and served to evoke profound pity and commiseration for one on whose family name such a blight had fallen and removes any doubt as to his loyalty to the Union.

Immediately on closing the Boston Theatre there was placed just within the entrance on Washington street a bulletin board on which was posted in large type the following quotation from "Macbeth," act 1, scene 7:

> Besides, this Duncan
> Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
> So clear in his great office, that his virtues
> Will plead like angels trumpet-tongu'd against
> The deep damnation of his taking off;
> And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
> Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd
> Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
> Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye
> That tears shall drown the wind.

Below this was the name, "Edwin Booth." Thus he, who knew the great master so well, in the first moments of his anguish instinctively turned for words to express his thoughts and emotion.

D. S. WALKER.

Boston, April 12.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF BOOTH.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Reading the interesting article in The Sunday Herald relating to J. Wilkes Booth, it reminds me of a conversation I had with the well-known author and poet, Mr. T. B. Aldrich, some years before he died. I was recounting to him my personal experience in Washington at the time of the assassination, when he said to me that after that occurred he, an old friend of Mr. Edwin Booth, finding him in such a mental and distressed condition, remained with him at his house, particularly nights, for quite a long time in order to give him all the assistance he could. Late upon one of these nights there came a heavy banging at the front door. Mr. Booth was for running out and learning the cause of this. Mr. Aldrich anticipated him and, going to the door, found a note in which it was stated that if Mr. Booth was seen upon the street he would be assassinated.

The last time I saw J. Wilkes Booth he was riding over the same road he took after the assassination. The last time I saw Mr. Edwin Booth was at the Players' Club, when he had reached such a mental stage he seemed more like a ghost than himself.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

TAKES ISSUE WITH DR. FLEISCHER

To the Editor of The Herald:

I was very sorry to see Mr. Fleischer's letter in regard to "The Birth of a Nation," and I note especially his statement that it aims "only to present a historic picture of a rather unknown period of American history during which the Negro was given powers which he had not then been prepared to use." Nothing can be more misleading, and it is precisely because this period of American history is, to our shame, so little known that we object to the gross perversion of that history which this play presents.

The theory of the play that the Negro in slavery and devoted to his master was in his place, but that given his freedom and the right to vote, and thereby placed in power, he developed an unbridled passion which led him to pursue the white women of the South, and that the Ku Klux Klan was formed to protect these women from outrage. This is absolutely untrue, and the mere dates disprove it.

Andrew Johnson took office in April, 1865, and before Congress met in the following December he had appointed a provisional Governor in each state, and provided for the election and organization of state government in which Negroes were uniformly denied the right of suffrage and the right to hold office. This was white reconstruction and the governments were in the hands of those lately engaged in rebellion. The Legislatures thus created passed statutes "which reduced the freedmen to a condition of peonage, punished their breaches of contract as crimes, denied them the power to acquire real estate or carry arms," and in various other ways reduced them substantially to the condition of slaves. An association of "regulators" had already been formed in Georgia, of whom it was said in the New York Herald:

"It is needless to say that their attention is largely directed to maintaining quiet and submission among the blacks. The shooting or stringing up of some obstreperous 'nigger' by the regulators is so common an occurrence as to excite little remark."

All over the South conditions were substantially the same, as was abundantly shown by a report made by Carl Schurz, who was sent down by President Johnson to examine and report. This was the state of the South which confronted Congress when, on Dec. 4, 1865, it met for the first time after Mr. Lincoln's assassination. White reconstruction had been tried and had failed disastrously. The Ku Klux Klan was organized in 1866, and of it the Encyclopedia American says:

"Formed originally for purposes of amusement only, it soon developed into an association of 'regulators,' and became notorious for the lawless deeds of violence performed in its name. The proceedings of the Ku Klux in the southern states were a feature of the determined struggle to withhold from the emancipated slaves the right of voting. The outrages and murders which convulsed the country in 1868-69 ended in calling out of troops and the formal disbandment of the society in March of the latter year."

The first act which assured the Negroes the right to vote by setting aside the existing state governments and providing that no seceded state should be readmitted to the Union unless its constitution gave the suffrage to white and black alike was not passed till about Feb. 15, 1867. It was not till after May, 1868, that acts were passed admitting the southern states, and the last of these, Virginia, Mississippi and Texas, were not admitted till 1870. Only after these acts were passed and after the fundamental conditions which they imposed were complied with did the governments of the southern states come under the control of the colored voters. The Ku Klux Klan had really run its course before the colored voters exercised any substantial power.

This simple chronological statement could be much amplified, but it is sufficient to show how absolutely false is the view of history presented by this play. It is an effort to mislead the people of this country who are ignorant of these facts to excite a strong feeling against the colored people, already suffering everywhere from race prejudice, and to strengthen the hands of those who would deny them their equal rights as citizens. If it is immoral to bear false witness against one's neighbor, to excite hate, to say those things which directly lead to disorder, assault, and perhaps homicide; unless, in a word, the only immorality is sexual immorality, this play tends to corrupt public morals and should be suppressed, as it certainly would be if, instead of libelling the weakest among our fellow-citizens, it were in like manner to attack a body of great political strength.

MOORFIELD STOREY.

Boston, April 14.

MR. PEABODY PROTESTS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

My attention just called to advertisement in your issue Sunday, in which an entirely unauthorized use is made of my name. My appreciation of the ability of Mr. Griffith in developing such use of films only added to my profound regret that he should do injustice to true southern character by the use of scenes that cannot but demoralize all who see them. I think the play as I saw it was unfair to the Negro and to the white equally and a travesty of sound peace principles because of its false appeals to a superficial sympathy. Please kindly give due prominence to this correction.

GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY.

New York, April 14.

It is fair to say that the advertisement referred to read as follows:

"George Foster Peabody, banker and philanthropist, gave one a new idea of [illegible]ssibilities of the film. I want Mr. [illegible]reat coming peace [illegible]ss at Wash[illegible]

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

FROM TRAVELER READERS

Commending The Traveler.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

We women of Boston desire to express our admiration for the admirable stand taken by The Traveler against Thomas Dixon's vile slander of the colored race, "The Birth of a Nation" is next door to treason.

THE NEIGHBORHOOD CLUB.
S. Bella Holly, Secretary.
126 Crawford street, Roxbury, April 14.

A Protest Entered.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

Wendel Phillips said of a certain argument that if the major premise had a contagious disease the conclusion would not catch it.

This reminds one faintly of the distance between history and Thomas Dixon's prejudices. But, then, there are the exigencies of melodrama and of the box-office, and the second part of "The Birth of a Nation" is a paying melodrama with the Negro as the villain. To be sure, the best public opinion in the South has condemned Dixon as viciously and offensively unfair and ruled his "Clansman" off the stage as riot-producing. Will Boston back him up?

One word more, since this is a historical war drama dealing with facts. Where is the Negro who raised the crops and protected his master's wife and daughters while his master was on the firing line? Yes, and fighting, in the words of Alexander Stevens, to make slavery the "corner-stone" of a new republic.

But the composition of a picture depends on what is left out. And "dramatic purpose" and "spectacular effect," it seems, required the sacrifice of the Negro and the idealizing of the Ku Klux Klan. What a pity to lose the thrill of a real burning at the stake, as a somewhat later development of Anglo-Saxon criminal jurisprudence.

Having witnessed the show, I desire to enter my protest.

PITT DILLINGHAM.
178 Commonwealth avenue, April 13.

From a Well Known Poet.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

"The Birth of a Nation" is pernicious both morally and artistically. The whole purpose of the pictures is so meretricious in both racial and sectional elements that antipathies are aroused among the spectators. There is no doubt of the effort to make the Negro contemptible; that he should be made responsible for the inhumanity of his neighbors is stretching the point a little too far. An author like Mr. Dixon and the producer, Mr. Griffith, ought to realise that if the Negro was as bad as they paint him in these films he was what the South made him; he was the shadow of her own substance; and pride of race, if there were any in the white South, ought to suppress this exposition of their own shame.

In any work that pretends to art it is the motive that is vital and if it tends to be harmful should be suppressed. Hate is the very source of this production. Here it is a hate that reacts upon the hater. It is not only the hate of the South against the Negro, but against the North. It is shown in the figure of Sumner. The whole episode which leads up to the young girl's leap "through the opal gates of death" is ridiculous—ridiculous because at its worst it only symbolizes the law of compensation. There would be no toleration of a similar episode upon the stage in either film or drama reproduced from occurrences among whites in almost any American city. The reading of vice commission reports would furnish an ample storehouse for material. One is bound to condemn a production of this kind for the good of the entire community.

WILLIAM STANLEY BRAITHWATE.
Boston, April 12.

Recalling the 54th Massachusetts.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

The very sane criticism of the Birth of a Nation" presented to your readers has, I am sure, inspired them with the pleasant realization that your paper is not seeking the path of least resistance. It is very unfortunate that dramatic critics of other papers were so myopic that they could not "see" their way to criticise unfavorably a play which ought to be relegated to the dust of oblivion, and the exhibition of which hardly reflects creditably on cultured and talented Boston. If there was a time in the history of the world when there should be little friction among the races such a time is now, in view of the terrible conflict abroad, for in these times of uncertainty no one knows what will happen. America may wake up some morning and find herself precipitately thrown into war and at that time will need all the "colored help" she can get.

URIAH N. MURRAY, M. D.
April 12.

BOS[illegible]NG TRANSCRIPT
[illegible]ston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

For the pront of the Women's Peace Party and the unemployed in Boston in equal division, two of Browning's poems—"Balaustion's Adventure", and "Aristophanes's Apology"—will be sent on the stage of the Plymouth Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, April 20. They have been put together in dramatic form under the title "Balaustion's Euripides," by Miss Helen A. Clarke, and the new version may be read in the current number of the magazine, "Poet-Lore." The parts in the play will be acted by practised amateurs and "lecturers and readers of note." The play will be decorated with "Persic" and Greek dances by young women and clothed in six settings and costumes by Livingston Platt, as yet the ablest and most imaginative practitioner in America of the new stagecraft.

POST
ss: Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

"THE NIGGER" BARRED BY EVERETT MAYOR

The photo-play, "The Nigger," which has scenes similar to "The Birth of a Nation," was refused permission to be produced in Everett by Mayor James Chambers yesterday. The Mayor was waited upon by a group of colored citizens at the instance of the National Equal Rights League, led by Mr. Arthur Wordest, who protested on the ground the play engendered race prejudice. Previously the Mayor had had the title eliminated. After hearing the remonstrants and seeing the show posters the Mayor forbade the production.

GLOBE
: Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

Will Hold Protest Meeting.

A mass meeting of white and colored citizens, especially the latter, to protest against the permitted production of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," will be held under the auspices of Boston branch of the National Equal Rights League this evening in St Paul's Baptist Church, Tremont and Camden sts, South End. Among the announced speakers are John F. McDonald, Rev W. W. Thornton, Sherwin L. Cook, Rev A. W. Fuller, C. G. Morgan, E. T. Morris and B. W. Swain.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 15, 1915

FILM PROTEST BEFORE WALSH

Governor and Commissioner O'Meara Confer on "The Birth of a Nation"

Police Commissioner O'Meara conferred with Governor Walsh for an hour yesterday afternoon as to his legal powers in controlling or preventing the production of "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Tremont Theatre. The governor is understood to have said that there was no law by which the production of the film could be stopped if the features objected to were not indecent.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

Will Improve Big Picture

From New York yesterday David W. Griffith wired his general manager, J. J. McCarthy, at the Tremont Theatre, that he had started the preparation of new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation," now playing that theatre. The new footage will show the progress of the negro race since the Civil War. Astonishing facts and figures will be disclosed concerning negro advancement.

The suggestion made by Dr. Charles Fleischer, that this work would add to the historical value of "The Birth of a Nation," appealed to Mr. Griffith strongly, and before leaving Boston for New York Tuesday night he decided to carry it out.

GLOBE
: Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

CONFER ON FILM PLAY.

Police Commissioner and Gov Walsh Discuss "The Birth of a Nation" at State House.

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara conferred with Gov Walsh at the State House yesterday as to his legal powers in controlling or preventing the production of "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Tremont Theatre.

The film is declared objectionable to the colored race, representatives of which have made their protest to Mayor Curley, who with Commissioner O'Meara has joint supervision of amusements in Boston.

Gov Walsh is said to have stated that if the features objected to are not indecent, there is no law by which the production of the film can be stopped.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) EVE. UNION
APRIL 15, 1915

EGG NEGRO SCENES IN A FILM PLAY

Police Quell Disturbers at "Birth of a Nation" in New York.

NEW YORK, April 15—A mixed crowd of white men and Negroes who had obtained seats in the front row of the gallery started a demonstration against the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theater at 10.30 o'clock last night.

Policemen, ushers and private detectives who had been stationed at convenient intervals in anticipation of a demonstration swarmed down upon the noise makers and seized two of the leaders. As they did so two eggs splattered over the screen, blotting out portions of a picture showing a white Southern girl in the act of leaping off a cliff to escape from a Negro pursuer.

A white man, who gave the name of Howard Schaeffle, was hurried from the theater after private detectives had asserted it was he who threw the eggs. He cried out, "Rotten, rotten" as the detectives pushed him down the stairs toward the street. He was taken to the West Thirty-Seventh Street station on a charge of disorderly conduct.

A Negro who walked with a slight limp followed the white man out with the help of detectives. He protested loudly that "that play's a libel on a race. It's got to be stopped." The other Negroes and white men, who seemed to have come in a group, became frightened at the quick interference by the police and private detectives.

"Let's get out of here," one shouted. "I think we'll be in for trouble if we stay." Seven Negroes did as he suggested.

As the theater was in semi-darkness and the eggs that struck the screen made no noise, only a few of those in the audience became aware of the extent of the disturbance. They heard the outcries in the gallery, but showed no disposition to leave their seats.

A Negro arose some minutes after the main party had left.

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination," he shouted, "it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American Negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't like this play." The Negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen and that he was the head of a colored news agency, was ushered to the street.

At the West Thirty-Seventh Street Station, Schaeffle was searched and a paper bag containing three eggs was found in his overcoat pocket.

"I was taking the eggs home for breakfast," he said, "and I stopped in to see this play. I am a Southerner and a libertarian, and I believe in the education and the uplifting of the Negro. It made my blood boil to see the play and I threw the eggs at the screen. The play will have to be removed from the boards."

Schaeffle said he was born in Maryland. A Negro lawyer, escorted by a delegation of Negroes who had not been in the theater, appeared at the station to take charge of Schaeffle's case.

The next scene after the one to which the Negroes objected so violently showed Northern carpetbaggers beating Negro slaves who were loyal to their Southern white friends and were trying to protect the Southern whites from being pillaged by the carpetbaggers.

The management of the theater pointed out this scene as a refutation of the charge that the play was meant to libel the Negroes, or show them in an especially bad light. The management insisted that most of the applause during the progress of the play was for scenes showing Negroes performing heroic acts.

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 15, 1915

PHOTO PLAY PROTESTED

Protest against the permitted production of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," will be made tonight at a mass meeting to be held under the auspices of Boston branch of the National Equal Rights League in St. Paul's Baptist church, Tremont and Camden streets, South End. The management of the production has announced that new films are in preparation which will show the great advance made by the negro since the civil war. These will be added to the play as it is given at the Tremont theater.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 15, 1915

WILL ADD NEW FILM TO "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Will Show Progress of the Negro Since Civil War.

From New York, yesterday, David W. Griffith wired his general manager at the Tremont Theatre that he had started the preparation of a new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation." It will show the progress of the negro race since the civil war. The suggestion made by Dr. Charles Fleischer appealed to Mr. Griffith strongly, and before leaving Boston for New York, Tuesday night, he decided to carry it out. Meantime the management is unable to cope with the demand for seats and has been obliged to put the advance sale four weeks ahead—that is to say, tickets are now on sale for the third week in May.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

[illegible]W YORK—Howard Schaeffer, who [illegible]es he comes from Boston, took a [illegible]M at "The Birth of a Nation" film [illegible]g Liberty Theatre last night. How[illegible]astered the screen and the or[illegible]a with a few dozen eggs. He [illegible]e eggs here—and they were not

GLOBE
: Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

PROGRESS OF NEGRO RACE.

Pictures Showing Advancement Since War Will Be Added to "The Birth of a Nation."

From New York yesterday David W. Griffith wired his general manager, J. J. McCarthy, that he had started the preparation of a new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Tremont Theatre. The new film will show the progress of the negro race since the Civil War. Astonishing facts and figures will be disclosed concerning negro advancement.

The suggestion made by Dr Charles Fleischer that this work would add to the historical value of "The Birth of a Nation," appealed to Mr Griffith strongly, and before leaving Boston for New York Tuesday night he decided to carry it out. Meantime the Tremont Theatre management is unable to cope with the demand for seats at the play and has been obliged to put on the advance sale four weeks ahead, that is to say, tickets are now on sale for the third week in May.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' WORRIES WALSH

Following comp'aints from many sources Gov. Walsh has conferred with Police Commissioner O'Meara as to whether the commissioner could stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Tremont Theatre.

Commissioner O'Meara assured the Governor that he is powerless to prevent the photo-play from being shown.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

WILL ADD NEW FILM TO "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Will Show Progress of the Negro Since Civil War.

From New York, yesterday, David W. Griffith wired his general manager at the Tremont Theatre that he had started the preparatiton of a new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation." It will show the progress of the Negro race since the civil war. The suggestion made by Dr. Charles Fleischer appealed to Mr. Griffith strongly, and before leaving Boston for New York, Tuesday night, he decided to carry it out. Meantime the management is unable to cope with the demand for seats and has been obliged to put the advance sale four weeks ahead—that is to say, tickets are now on sale for the third week in May.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 15, 1915

WALSH ACTS ON PHOTO-PLAY

Confers With O'Meara on "Birth of a Nation"

Governor Walsh yesterday took a hand in the official investigation of the production "The Birth of a Nation" which is now being put on at the Tremont Theatre.

The Governor, as the result of many complaints that have been filed at his office, requested Police Commissioner O'Meara to meet him in conference at the State House yesterday afternoon.

The conference lasted for over an hour during which the production and the offence it has given many people was discussed from its various angles. Commissioner O'Meara was asked by the Governor if there was any legal way in which the commissioner might act to prohibit the production. The commissioner replied that there is not.

While the Governor has not any power to act in the matter, it is known that he is deeply concerned over the production.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION' TO HAVE NEW FILM

From New York, yesterday, David W. Griffith wired his general manager at the Tremont Theatre that he had started the preparatiton of a new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation." It will show the progress of the Negro race since the civil war. The suggestion made by Dr. Charles Fleischer appealed to Mr. Griffith strongly, and before leaving Boston for New York, Tuesday night, he decided to carry it out. Meantime the management is unable to cope with the demand for seats and has been obliged to put the advance sale four weeks ahead—that is to say, tickets are now on sale for the third week in May.

[illegible]oy [illegible] and a [illegible]ts, and the artistic benefit [illegible]onization are so striking tha [illegible]iffith, "The Birth of a Nation [illegible]has estimated the musical [illegible]cent of the aggregate wor [illegible]inment.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
: Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

From the front row of the gallery at the Liberty Theatre in New York last evening, a little party of colored and white men "manifested" against a picture in the filmed spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," that they found objectionable the picture that represents the pursuit of a white woman by a negro. They flung two eggs that broke noiselessly upon the screen, and attempted a few sentences of audible protest. Police[illegible] them and the audi[illegible]es of the theatre occourrence.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 15, 1915

TO PROTEST PHOTO-PLAY

A mass meeting to protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," now being produced at the Tremont Theatre, will be held at the People's Baptist Church, Camden street, tonight, under the auspices of the National Independent Equal Rights League.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APR 15 1915

WALSH AND O'MEARA TALK OVER PROTESTED FILM

Governor Walsh and Police Commissioner O'Meara were in [illegible] the State House yesterday afternoon, discussing the complaints which have been made concerning the alleged showing of the "Birth of a Nation" picture now being shown in Boston. At the conclusion of the conference the governor said they had simply discussed the power given to the State and city officials under the law, but had decided upon no course to be [illegible]ed by either of them.

Commissioner O'Meara declined to

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
: Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

A new film, to illustrate the progress of negroes since the Civil War, is to be added to the pictured spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont in deference to various suggestions to the management.

[illegible]nography is seen be[illegible] final scenes is a [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 15, 1915

Objects to Photo-Play

"Birth of a Nation" Denounced as Unfair to the Colored Race

To the Editor of the Post.

Sir—Although I have been a reader of the Boston Post for a number of years I have never heretofore troubled you with any of my views on matters of interest to the general public. I trust, therefore, that you will find space in your valuable paper for the following few observations.

I was one of a very large audience who witnessed the opening production at the Tremont Theatre of the photo-play, the "Birth of a Nation." In the first place the name is a misnomer. The "Birth of Our Nation" did not occur at the commencement or termination of the Civil war nor later. To produce a true historical representation of the "Birth of Our Nation," one must go back to such scenes as the Stamp Tax, the Boston Tea Party, the Boston Massacre, and the Revolutionary period. An appropriate name for the production would be "A Justification of the Wrongs and Outrages Committed by Southern Whites During the Period of Reconstruction."

In the second place, the production appears to me an attempt to degrade and bring into contempt the colored people in the United States. To visualize before a public audience such scenes as the attempted ravishing by the renegade Gus of Flora, the pet sister, the attempt by Lieutenant-Governor Lynch to force Elsie, the carpet-bagging politician's daughter to marry him, and the rendering of the verdict of ejectment by a colored judge and a colored jury of a white man with the consequences following that judgment, can bring no beneficial results to the general community. They arouse feelings of bitterness and aversion, which a great many white people, whether Northerners or Southerners, still bear against the colored race; while on the other hand they give just cause to the anger and resentment such scenes bring to the latter, at the evident insult, indignity and degration heaped upon them.

To the bigoted, narrow-minded white, the most degenerate, ignorant and brutal white man is preferable to the most enlightened and refined colored gentleman; and so the Ku-Klux-Klan (that advanced from intimidation "to brutality and murder, and practiced their cruelty over the whites who happened to disagree with them" and whose "outrages became so frequent and powerful that Congress was at length called to enact the "force act" and the "stringent and effective measures" necessary to bring about their disbandment), are regarded as Knights of the Round Table, and applauded in their outrageous and unlawful lynchings. And in this connection it may be well to bear in mind that even among the knights of old there were included some who were [illegible] of spotless honor, as is evidenced by the attack of the Knight Templar [illegible] the virgin Rebecca. (Scott's "Ivanhoe".)

The author of the "Birth of a Nation" claims that he has the same right to produce in motion pictures what a writer may publish in book form. But the right of any person to do [illegible] is subordinate to the right of the general community that its peace may not be disturbed. And that it is an entirely different matter to represent such scenes in visualized form, on a public stage, from their reproduction in book form seems to me is not to be disputed. In the latter case the reader sees merely the cold, dead historical (if it is historical?) record. In the former case spectator is brought to a highly excitable frame of mind, his passions and feelings spring forth and have full play, and he is carried away by the beastly scenes pictured before him; the illusionary living reproduction highly colored and painted as it is, and rushing swiftly to its climax, gripe his excited imagination and produces in him a feeling that these scenes are present facts, that these outrages take place nowadays, that the entire colored race are ravishers of virgins, and they fan into a living flame the [illegible] embers of bigotry, passion and [illegible]

[illegible] moving picture such scenes [illegible] to a feeling of shame and indignation; they ought to be removed [illegible] be prohibited being shown [illegible] public stage.

Sincerely yours,
ISIDORE H. FOX.
[illegible]ington street.
April 14, 1915.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

Plan to Protest Against Film Play

A mass meeting will be held tonight at the St. Paul Baptist Church, Camden and Tremont streets, to protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." Among the speakers will be John F. McDonald, the Rev. M. W. Thornton, Sherwin L. Cook, the Rev. A. W. Fuller, C. G. Morgan, E. T. Morris and the Rev. H. W. Swan.

[illegible] protest [illegible]
[illegible] a Nation
The members [illegible]
the play as a [illegible] hatred. They would [illegible] the play could be [illegible]
[illegible] the decision [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible]

Boston Journal Apr 16-1915

SAYS WHITES ARE ALL HYPOCRITES

Cambridge Negro Willing to Give Life for African Race.

Coincident with the 50th anniversary of the death of Abraham Lincoln 500 colored men and women last night filled the People's Baptist Church, South End, at a meeting protesting the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," and paid tribute to the memory of William Lloyd Garrison, the abolitionist, whose efforts in behalf of freedom for the negro race were second only to those of Lincoln; denounced those men and women of the white race, who, they declared, are showing themselves willing to oppress the negro by permitting "The Birth of a Nation" to be shown.

Dr. Alice Woodby McCane, a colored physician of this city, told of trying to get a ticket for the play, which was refused.

"The whole thing, my friends, is based on falsehood," she declared. "They make our people out to be senseless monkeys in that picture. They hire professional applauders to greet enthusiastically those parts which are most injurious to us. They seem to think we do not suffer mentally because of our persecutions."

George B. Blackwell, a colored business man of Cambridge, said that the negro is the only true American left in this country, and that the white people of America are no more than hypocrites.

"But I won't bite my tongue for any of those persons who have and do live on us either in heaven or hell," he shouted. "Friends, we will fight them. We can do it, for were it not for the negro soldiers in the Northern army the North would have been beaten. We will conquer the whites. I am going to give my life up for this cause, for my race is dearer to me than my own life."

Gazette, Northampton
Apr 15, 1915

BOSTON FRIEND OF NEGRO IN TROUBLE IN NEW YORK

New York, April 15.—A whistle shrilled last night in the Liberty theatre, where the much discussed moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the fiddlers stood their ground manfully it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Boston detectives in the house yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the West Thirty-seventh street station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. One egg made life more unpleasant for him. It was found in his pocket, unbroken.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, 20 years old, of 123 Washington place; that he had recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the negro race maligned. Several negroes followed him from the theatre and went to the night court with him, vowing to defend him.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 16, 1915

New York, April 16.—A mixed crowd of white men and negroes who had obtained seats in the front row in the gallery started a demonstration against the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theater at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday night.

Policemen, ushers and private detectives who had been stationed at convenient intervals in anticipation of a demonstration swarmed down upon the noise makers and seized two of the leaders. As they did so two eggs splattered over the screen, blotting out portions of a picture showing a white Southern girl in the act of leaping off a cliff to escape from a negro pursuer.

A white man, who gave the name of Howard Schaeffle, was hurried from the theater after private detectives had asserted it was he who threw the eggs. He cried out, "Rotten, rotten" as the detectives pushed him down the stairs toward the street. He was taken to the West 37th Street Station on a charge of disorderly conduct.

A negro who walked with a slight limp followed the white man out with the help of detectives. He protested loudly that "that play's a libel on a race. It's got to be stopped." The other negroes and white men, who seemed to have come in a group, became frightened at the quick interference by the police and private detectives.

"Let's get out of here," one shouted, "I think we'll be in for trouble if we stay." Seven negroes did as he suggested.

As the theater was in semidarkness and the eggs that struck the screen made no noise, only a few of those in the audience became aware of the extent of the disturbance. They heard the outcries in the gallery, but showed no disposition to leave their seats.

A negro arose some minutes after the main party had left.

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination," he shouted, "it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't like this play." The negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen and that he was the head of a colored news agency, was ushered to the street.

At the West 37th Street Station Schaeffle was search and a paper bag containing three eggs was found in his overcoat pocket.

"I was taking the eggs home for breakfast," he said, "and I stopped in to see this play. I am a Southerner and a libertarian, and I believe in the education and the uplifting of the negro. It made my blood boil to see the play and I threw the eggs at the screen. The play will have to be removed from the boards."

Schaeffle said he was born in Maryland. A negro lawyer, escorted by a delegation of negroes who had not been in the theater, appeared at the station to take charge of Schaeffle's case.

The next scene after the one to which the negroes objected so violently showed Northern carpetbaggers beating negro slaves who were loyal to their Southern white friends and were trying to protect the Southern whites from being pillaged by the carpetbaggers.

The management of the theater pointed out this scene as a refutation of the charge that the play was meant to libel the negroes, or show them in an especially bad light. The management insisted that most of the applause during the progress of the play was for scenes showing negroes performing heroic acts.

NEWTON (Mass.) GRAPHIC
APRIL 16, 1915

TREMONT THEATRE—D. W. Griffith's wonderful spectacle of war and peace, "The Birth of a Nation," is playing to capacity audiences twice daily at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. Everybody who can do so should see the spectacle this week. During the fiftieth anniversary of the closing events of the Civil War, the play offers an usually vivid portrayal of those great scenes. The entire period from 1861 to 1865 is covered in the first half of the picture, notable being the battle scenes illustrating the horrors of war and the blessedness of peace. In the second half Mr. Griffith takes up the soul-stirring drama of Reconstruction. He shows the rescue of the stricken South from its Carpet-bagger oppressors by the Scottish Clans of the Carolinas. Here the dramatic power reaches its zenith. Orchestra music by a band of 40 expert players accompanies the spectacle. Extensive mechanical effects are also used in connection with it.

[illegible] against negroes
[illegible] at Wash[illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 16, 1915

NEGROES AGAIN IN PROTEST

Reports Against Photo-Play Given at South End Church

Another vigorous protest against further production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre was recorded at the People's Baptist Church, Tremont and Camden streets, last night. The church was crowded. Remarks were made by negro and white speakers. W. Munroe Trotter presided.

A reference to Mayor Curley was roundly hissed and a mention of President Wilson's "History of the American People" was accorded the same greeting. A protest drafted by Mr. Trotter was adopted unanimously and is to be sent to the mayor. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Howard Shaffle, a Jewish youth arrested in New York Wednesday night for flinging stale eggs at the screen on which were being shown the pictures. Two white men were among the protestants, William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., and Sherwin L. Cook, both grandsons of the famous abolitionist.

Dr. Alice W. McCane said the "malignant errors" in the pictures affected her so that she never wished to look again upon white people. She said she wept for a whole day after seeing the pictures.

Mr. Garrison emphasized the conditions which he thought were generally true, as against "the misrepresentations of the films."

Others who spoke were G. B. Blackwell, Rev. A. W. Fuller, E. T. Morris and W. W. Thornton.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 16, 1915

PHOTO-PLAY PROTESTED AT MEETING

Colored People Score "The Birth of a Nation"

Citizens packed to overflowing the People's Baptist Church, Tremont and Camden streets, last evening, to join in protest against the further production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." Although a protest of the colored people of Boston, many prominent white people joined in their cause.

URGED TO BE MODERATE

It was nearly 9 o'clock before the pastor, the Rev. Aaron W. Fuller, offered prayer and concluded by extending all a hearty welcome and advising them to be moderate in their remarks and criticisms. He then introduced as presiding officer W. Munroe Trotter of the Equal Rights League, under whose auspices the meeting was held.

In the course of his remarks he said it was a strange coincidence that this meeting of protest should be held on the 50th anniversary of the death of Lincoln, the martyred president who brought about the emancipation of their race, and furthermore, the two grandsons of the noted Abolitionist—William Lloyd Garrison—also occupied seats on the platform. Deeply did he regret that the production of the play is permitted by Mayor Curley, whom they had supported at the polls.

At the mention of the Mayor's name it was hissed, but Mr. Trotter advised them not to hiss the name of any man, particularly not that of the Mayor, and he added, "but keep him still on trial. Of him and of all other public officials we will demand that they do their duty. If they refuse, then we will find some way of recording our verdict on their public career."

Sherwin L. Cook, the first white speaker, was introduced as a grandson of Garrison, and he protested because of the subtle influence that the play would exert on the white as against the colored people.

Dr. Alice Woodbury McCane and Mrs. Mary C. Hall, two colored women of advanced years, narrated their experience in witnessing the play and the abhorrent effect it had upon them. "Lynchings are not supposed to be reproduced on the stage, and yet in this play they are," exclaimed Dr. McCane, "and evidently approved by the National Board of Censors."

George B. Blackwell, a colored business man of Cambridge, declared that if the white men were true to themselves and their families they would order such a degrading and immoral production out of Boston, forthwith.

"We are not immigrants, but the genuine stuff," he exclaimed, "and all we ask is a fair chance and a square deal. We helped Grant to whip Lee, and if you want us we can whip the South for you again."

William Lloyd Garrison, Jr., another grandson of the noted abolitionist, paid tribute to the Christian attributes of the colored race, and joined in protest against such a play.

Resolutions scoring the play and requesting Mayor Curley to discontinue the production was passed at the meeting. The resolutions also criticised the stand taken by Dr. Charles Fleischer in praising the Birth of a Nation.

The resolutions declared they would be satisfied if Mayor Curley would call upon the manager of the theatre to discontinue the photoplay as offensive to Boston citizens. If he was not willing to do this they would be convinced he has no desire to aid the colored people of Boston.

VARIETY
New York City
APR 16 1915

"NATION" PASSES IN BOSTON.

Boston, April 14.

"A Birth of a Nation," the Griffith feature film, has been the centre of a bitter storm of dissension in this city through protests originally made by the negro organizations and later picked up and furthered by various white organizations, including the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association.

Mayor Curley at the private performance Friday night requested portions of the film in addition to the New York cuts be made including the scene where a negro member of Legislature removes his shoes and the Legislature, by a unanimous vote against orders him to replace them.

The negroes charge that all through the film they are treated unfairly, including the scenes where a negro renegade chases a young white girl who throws herself off a cliff to save her honor and where an attempt is made to ravish a protesting white girl by means of a trick marriage.

The mayor said the showing of a negro as a degenerate did not prove all negroes degenerates any more than the showing the assassination of Lincoln by Booth meant that every white man was of Booth's calibre.

It was finally discovered that the films were safe from prosecution at the Tremont through the fact that the local law applies only to immorality or obscenity in a theatrical performance and even then it can only be stopped by the joint condemnation of the mayor and police commissioner. Both these dignitaries sent official censors who said the film is "within the law."

VELER & EVE. HERALD
oston, Mass.
APR 16 1915

State Police Bar Sunday Show of 'Birth of a Nation'

Permits Refused After Chief's Visit to Exhibition—Declared It Unfit—Walsh Believed in Sympathy with Action.

Acting Chief George C. Neal of the state police decided today the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," is unfit for exhibition on Sundays in this state and its exhibition on that day is, accordingly, prohibited.

The state police department has control over the display of motion pictures on Sundays. The acting chief sent a letter to the Lynn Lodge of Elks today notifying it that he had refused its petition for a permit to show "The Birth of a Nation" Sunday next.

This prohibition, acting chief said, will apply to any attempted Sunday showing of the film at the Tremont Theatre on Sunday next. The exhibition of this film opened at Tremont Theatre on Monday night of this week. Thus a situation has arisen where the Boston authorities will allow the film to be shown on week days, but the state authorities, as represented by the state police, will not allow it to be shown in Boston on Sundays.

Acting Chief Neal witnessed last night an exhibition of the picture, which depicts certain scenes of the reconstruction period in the South in such a manner as to arouse protest from Negroes and many others.

While he declined to give his opinion of the picture, it is known on reliable authority, that he is strongly opposed to the production of the picture, and that any attempt to show it outside of Boston in this state will bring the producers of the picture into active conflict with the state police, no matter whether it is attempted to show the picture on Sundays or weekdays. There is ground for believing that Gov. Walsh is behind this attitude on the part of the state police.

"I will cross that bridge when I come to it," stated Neal.

"But," he was asked, "does not your refusal to allow the production of this picture in Lynn next Sunday show that you believe it is not fit at least for Sunday entertainment?"

"It is positively and absolutely not fitted for Sunday entertainment," replied Neal. "That has been the only question in connection with the matter brought officially before this department and I have decided it definitely."

The acting chief made it plain that he does not think it incumbent on the part of the state police to interfere with the Boson situation on weekdays.

Lewis Heads Delegation In Protest to Walsh

A delegation of half a dozen colored citizens, headed by William H. Lewis, former assistant U. S. district attorney here, was in conference with Governor Walsh this afternoon, in an endeavor to induce him to use his influence in stopping the presentation of the photo play "Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont theatre.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 16 1915

TO SUNDAY SHOWING OF "BIRTH OF NATION" IN MASSACHUSETTS

Deputy Chief Neal of the Mass. District ce, announced this afternoon that he ld refuse to allow the photoplay, "The h of a Nation," to be produced in any of the State outside of Boston on day. He attended a performance of the last night at the request of the Lodge of Elks, who wanted to the picture at a Sunday meeting. rted to the lodge that he would t the ok to be shown upon der any circumstances, as it improper for a Sabbath en-

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
APR 16 1915

Colored People to Send Protest on Film to Mayor

Protests were voiced by colored and white speakers against the con- W YORK—Howard Schaeffe he comes from Boston, inuanc in its present form of the "The Birth of a Nationime dspectacle, "The Birth of a Na- at "The Birth of a Nation," at a meeting of 300 colored Liberty Theatre last night on," tered the screen and t People's Baptist Church, with a few dozen eggs. He e eggs here—and they were not to Mayor Curley was mention of President tory of the American corded the same greet-rafted by Chairman W. is adopted unanimously sent to the Mayor. Two re among the protest- Lloyd Garrison, Jr., Cook, both grandsons bolitionist.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' WORRIES WAI

Following complaints from sources Gov. Walsh has conferre Police Commissioner O'Meara whether the commissioner could the production of "The Birth of tion," now being shown at the T Theatre.

Commissioner O'Meara assured Governor that he is powerless to vent the photo-play from being s

TRAVELER & EVE. HER
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION' TO HAVE NEW FILM

From New York, yesterday, Griffith wired his general manag the Tremont Theatre that he had si the preparatiton of a new film to "The Birth of a Nation." It show the progress of the Negro since the civil war. The sugges made by Dr. Charles Fielscher appeal to Mr. Griffith strongly, and befo leaving Boston for New York, Tuesda night, he decided to carry it out. Mean- time the management is unable to cope with the demand for seats and has been obliged to put the advance ks ahead—that is to say, on sale for the third wee TREMONT (John B. Schoeffel, mgr.)— of a Nation" doing capacity business se of agitation by colored people against Griffith film.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 16, 1915

MAYOR CURLEY HISSED.

Colored People Also Show Disapprobation of President Wilson's History at Film Protest Meeting.

Protests were voiced by a half dozen colored and white speakers against the continuance in its present form of the filmed spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," at a meeting of 300 colored people last evening in the People's Baptist Church, Camden st.

A reference to Mayor Curley was roundly hissed and a mention of President Wilson's "History of the American People" was accorded the same greeting.

A protest drafted by Chairman W. M. Trotter was adopted unanimously and is to be sent to the Mayor.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Howard Shaeffle, a Jewish youth, arrested in New York Wednesday night for flinging stale eggs at the screen on which were being shown the pictures. Two white men were among the protestants, William Lloyd Garrison Jr and Sherwin L. Cook, both grandsons of the famous abolitionist.

Dr Alice W. McCane said the "malignant errors" in the pictures affected her so that she never wished to look again upon white people. She said she wept for a whole day after seeing the pictures.

"It is a crying shame," said she, "that the managers of this theatre should be permitted to cram down the throats of white people the bundle of lies contained in these pictures."

Mr Cook said he came to voice his protest against "the commercialization of a pack of lies and misrepresentations." Mr Garrison emphasized the conditions which he thought were generally true, as against "the misrepresentations of the films."

Others who spoke were G. B. Blackwell, Rev A. W. Puller, E. T. Morris and W. W. Thornton.

LYNN, MASS. NEWS
APR 16 1915

NEGROES' PROTEST 'BIRTH OF NATION'

Lynn Man to Lead 8000 Who Will Storm the Tremont Theatre.

LYNN (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 16, 1915

NEGROES' PROTEST 'BIRTH OF NATION'

Lynn Man to Lead 8000 Who Will Storm the Tremont Theatre.

BOSTO

HERALD
New York City
APR 17 1915

Can't Show Pictures on Sundays.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE HERALD.]

Boston, Mass., Friday.—After a private exhibition of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," George C. Neal, acting chief of the State police, announced to-day that the picture cannot be shown in Massachusetts on Sundays. Protests against the play had been made to the Governor and to the Mayor of Boston by organizations of negroes. Mayor Curley held that he could not legally interfere, and the pictures will be seen in the Tremont Theatre on week days. The State police have jurisdiction only over performances on Sunday.

DRAMATIC NEWS
New York City
APR 17 1915

The Tremont opened last Saturday with 'Birth of a Nation," which has had several slight cuts made at the suggestion of Mayor Curley, after a spirited protest against any showing of the reels made by the various negro organizations of Boston. The cuts were all trivial and will not hurt the engagement here which looks good at present.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 17, 1915

ADDED FILM DEPICTS PROGRESS OF NEGRO

"The Birth of a Nation" patrons at the Tremont Theatre yesterday gave enthusiastic welcome to the new film incorporated by David W. Griffith, showing the progress of the Negro in this country. The record of advancement completed the story from the time the Negro, as shown in the first part of the picture, was brought in chains from Africa up to the present when he has developed extraordinary resource and skill in the arts, professions, crafts and agriculture.

This record was heartily applauded at both the performances yesterday. The suggestion as to its incorporation in the spectacle was made by several friends of the play, who felt that, while the tale of carpetbagger and Negro excesses during Reconstruction days as pictured by Mr Griffith was true to history, yet in fairness the wonderful advances made by the Negro since should also be presented.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 17, 1915

NO RACE FILM FOR SUNDAYS

Deputy Neal Bars "Birth of a Nation" at Lynn

Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the State police, has placed a ban on the exhibition of the production "The Birth of a Nation" on Sundays, in this Commonwealth.

Deputy Neal, who is at present the acting head of the State police department, which has the supervision of all Sunday performances in this State, says that he is convinced that the production is not a fitting one for Sunday entertainment.

The action of the acting head of the State police was brought to the attention of Governor Walsh. As a result, the Governor had another consultation with Police Commissioner O'Meara yesterday. Just what took place at this conference could not be learned at the State House yesterday, the Governor leaving for New York almost immediately after his interview with police commissioner. At their conference earlier in the week, the police [illegible] stated to the Governor [illegible] did not believe that there was [illegible] way that this production, [illegible] given at the Tremont Theatre should be stopped.

[illegible] management of "The Birth of a Nation" states that it was well aware that a production on Sunday was in performance with the State regulations, at that open request, the [illegible] was offered to the Lynn Mayor James M. Curley viewed the [illegible] board of censors of Boston and at their [illegible] pictures several days ago and at that time eliminated some objectionable parts. The suppression of some [illegible] were eliminated to the production as a whole, object to the production of any part of picture.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 17, 1915

Delegation to Governor Protests Photo-Play

Former United States District Attorney William H. Lewis headed a delegation of colored citizens who called on Governor Walsh yesterday afternoon to protest the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

The members of the delegation scored the play as tending to incite race hatred. They were of the opinion that the play could be barred legally, despite the declarations of the municipal authorities to the contrary.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 17, 1915

FORBIDS "BIRTH OF NATION."

State Police Deputy Chief Tells Lynn Elks That Show Is Not Fitting for Sunday.

Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the State Police has informed the Lynn Lodge of Elks, who had planned to give a Sunday evening production at Lynn of the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," that in his opinion it is not fitting for a Sunday show.

All "movies" exhibited anywhere in the State on Sunday are subject to State Police censorship, and, accordingly, the Lynn Elks applied to the State Police for permission. Deputy Neal wrote to John D. Aspin, chairman of the Lynn Elks' entertainment committee:

"I attended an exhibition of the 'Birth of a Nation,' and I am satisfied that it is not a fitting production for Sunday entertainment, and I, therefore, shall be obliged to disapprove of its exhibition on the Lord's Day in the State of Massachusetts.

"Your object is a good and a very worthy one, but I see no way of helping you out, not at least with this kind of an entertainment."

Henry McMahon, local manager of the "Birth of a Nation," said last evening that the exhibition and services of the orchestra were offered to the Lynn Lodge of Elks some time ago, at the request of the lodge officers, and without knowledge that in this State such exhibitions were forbidden on Sundays.

After learning of the law the proprietors of the show, who were to receive nothing, thought that as the proceeds were to be for a benevolent object the authorities would not object. The offer has been withdrawn on learning the attitude of the State Police, he said.

TO PROTEST FILM PLAY.

Wendell Phillips Memorial Association Will Conduct Mass Meeting Tomorrow in Faneuil Hall.

To protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and to set forth another view of the Reconstruction period, the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, which perpetuates the spirit of Northern abolitionism, will hold a mass meeting of colored and white citizens at 2 p m tomorrow in Faneuil Hall.

Frank B. Sanborn of Concord will preside, and the speakers will include Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature, Rolfe Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, Michael J. Jordan of the United Irish League, Rev Francis H. Rowley of the Humane Society, Dr A. P. Russell Jr and William D. Brigham, secretary of the association.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 17, 1915

LAUDS POST EDITORIAL

Photoplay to Show Race's Advance

To the Editor of the Post:

Sir—I beg to say that I thoroughly agree with the spirit of the leading editorial in today's Post, entitled "The Negro's Advance." We have been working on these facts for some time and are now exhibiting the summary of them toward the close of the second part of "The Birth of a Nation." The good qualities of the negro, exemplified in the best representatives of the race, appear in this pictorial story of the Civil war and reconstruction.

Three out of the five villians of the play are whites. The mistakes of the play's opponents spring from identifying the advanced negro of today with the illiterate ignorant negro of reconstruction times who was the tool of wily adventurers who went South to get rich quick by utilizing the negro vote as a lever to raise their own carpet-bag fortunes.

I venture to think that, now that a record of the negro's advancement since reconstruction is added to the play, its picture of early negro mistakes in this country will not be received so sensitively. There are two sides to every story. We are trying to tell both—within the limitations of our dramatic forum. I am glad to say that our efforts are appreciated by some of the colored people. Among those who have called on me and said they thought "The Birth of a Nation" presentation was historical and would have a good effect are Dr. W. Alexander Cox, the Cambridge dentist, and Philip J. Allston of this city, an expert chemist.

In Los Angeles, Harold Prince of one of the California universities declared publicly that the showing of this historical play would benefit his race.

Let the most severe critics of "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston see it or revisit it if they have already seen it, and I think some at least of them will be convinced that we are not trying to hurt the negro, but to present, like the author of "Waverley," a love-romance founded on history in which incidentally many great historical events are portrayed and in which it is our desire to libel nobody even though it be a Southern story focussed largely from a Southern viewpoint.

Respectfully yours,
HENRY MACMAHON,
Manager "Birth of a Nation" Co.
April 16, 1915.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 17, 1915

NEW FILM ADDED.

Advancement of the Negro Race Is Now Recorded in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" patrons at the Tremont Theatre yesterday welcomed the new film incorporated by orders of David W. Griffith, showing the progress of the negro race in this country. The record of advancement completed the story from the time the negro as shown in the first part of the picture was brought in chains from Africa up to the present, when he has developed extraordinary resource and skill in the arts, professions, crafts and agriculture.

The marvellous record, as flashed on the screen, was heartily applauded at both performances yesterday. It is now a permanent part of the picture. The suggestion as to its incorporation in the spectacle was made by several friends of the play in Boston, notably by Dr Charles Fleischer of the Sunday Commons. These friends felt that while the tale of carpetbagger and negro excesses during Reconstruction as pictured by Mr Griffith was true to history, yet in fairness the wonderful advances made since Reconstruction should also be presented.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 17, 1915

NEW FILM SHOWS NEGRO'S PROGRESS

Today is the second Saturday of "The Birth of a Nation" engagement at the Tremont Theatre. The first Saturday was a success of curiosity, for the play had been so widely discussed that people wanted to know what it was all about. Since a week ago, between 20,000 and 25,000 people have seen this spectacle and have spread the word of its extraordinary power, charm and artistic merit. The management has been obliged to put seats on sale four weeks in advance. Society has made its presence felt, and a long line of automobiles marks the opening and the end of each show.

Director Griffith is now said to be working on his new plan of supplementing the story with a screen record showing the progress of the negro race since reconstruction. This falls naturally into the sequence of historical events, beginning in the play with the introduction of slavery into this country and continuing with the conflicts of the civil war and the troubles between the Southern whites and the carpetbaggers and negroes after the war.

The chief thing is the love stories, for which, after all, the history is the setting or background. The characters of Ben and Elsie, of Phil and Margaret and of little Flora twine around the spectators' hearts and evoke much sympathy. Daily matinees are being given during this engagement.

"The Birth of a Nation" patrons yesterday welcomed the new film, incorporated by order of David W. Griffith, showing the progress of the negro race in this country. Individual examples of negro progress are exhibited in the names of Frederick Douglass, in statesmanship; Booker T. Washington, in education; W. E. B. DuBois, in oratory and philosophy; Henry O. Tanner, in art, and Paul Lawrence Dunbar, in poetry.

This record, as flashed on the screen, was heartily applauded at both performances yesterday. It is now a permanent part of the picture.

EVENING RECORD
ess: Boston, Mass.

APR 17 1915

Tremont Theatre

Today is the second Saturday of "The Birth of a Nation" engagement at the Tremont Theatre. The first Saturday was a success of curiosity, for the play had been so widely discussed that people wanted to know what it was all about. Since a week ago, between 20,000 and 25,000 people have seen this spectacle and have spread the word of its extraordinary power, charm and artistic merit. The management has been obliged to put seats on sale four weeks in advance.

Society has made its presence felt, and a long line of automobiles marks the opening and the end of each show. Director Griffith has now perfected his new plan of supplementing the story with a screen record showing the progress of the negro race since Reconstruction. This falls naturally into the sequence of great historical events, beginning in the play with the introduction of slavery into this country, the conflicts of the Civil War, and the troubles between the Southern whites and the carpetbaggers and negroes after the war.

The chief thing however is the great dramatic "punch" of the love stories, for which after all the history is the setting or background. Daily matinees are given at the Tremont Theatre during this engagement. Patriot's Day Matinee, next Monday.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APR 17 1915

SUNDAY BAN ON "BIRTH OF NATION"

Deputy Neal Forbids Lynn Elks to Produce It on Lord's Day.

Deputy George C. Neal, acting chief of the district police, yesterday put the ban on "The Birth of the Nation" as a Sunday attraction, when he disapproved of the presentation of the pictures at Lynn Sunday night, under the auspices of the local lodge of Elks.

The district police has the power of censorship over moving picture films which may be produced on Sundays.

Deputy Neal saw the pictures in Boston Wednesday night and yesterday expressed his disapproval of them as a Sunday entertainment in the following letter to the Lynn Elks:

"Your application for my approval of an exhibition of the 'Birth of a Nation' as an entertainment to be given at the Olympia Theatre in Lynn on some evening of the Lord's day, for the benefit of the organization you represent was duly considered.

"I attended an exhibition at Tremont Theatre of the 'Birth of a Nation' and am satisfied that it is not a fitting production for Sunday entertainment, and I therefore shall be obliged to disapprove of its exhibition on the Lord's day in the State of Massachusetts.

"Your object is a good and a very worthy one, but I see no way of helping you out, not, at least, with this kind of an entertainment."

In reference to the Lynn episode, "The Birth of a Nation" manager said last night:

"We knew that a film of the Civil War, with its representation of sudden deaths and casualties, could not be presented Sundays in this State, and have made no attempt so to present it. However, the request came from Lynn for our free presentation of 'The Birth of a Nation' for a charitable object, and imagining there would be no objection we accorded to the request. We are glad now to withdraw the proffer, though we regret that our Lynn friends will be unable to profit their benefit funds through our agency."

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass. Apr 17 1915

"Birth of a Nation"—Tremont

Today is the second Saturday of "The Birth of a Nation" engagement at the Tremont Theatre. The first Saturday was a success of curiosity, for the play had been so widely discussed that people wanted to know what it was all about. Since a week ago between 20,000 and 25,000 people have seen this spectacle and have spread the word of its extraordinary power, charm and artistic merit. The management has been obliged to put seats on sale four weeks in advance. Director Griffith is now working on his new plan of supplementing the story with a screen record showing the progress of the Negro race since Reconstruction. This falls naturally into the sequence of great historical events, beginning in the play with the introduction of slavery into this country, the conflicts of the civil war, and the troubles between the southern whites and the carpetbaggers and Negroes after the war. The chief thing, however, is the great dramatic "punch" of the love stories, for which, after all, the history is the setting or background. Daily matinees are given during this engagement. Patriots' day matinee next Monday.

LILIAN GISH, TREMONT

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 17, 1915

PICTURES AND MUSIC

Tremont—The Birth of a Nation

A FILMED spectacle of unusual [illegible]nitude and scope. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new [illegible] motion pictures in America [illegible] a pictorial chronicle [illegible] South during [illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] permitted [illegible] Hood [illegible] [illegible]ersed. [illegible]ence recently [illegible] when he [illegible]pece re[illegible]mittee of negroes [illegible] who called upon President Wilson to [illegible] test against segregation of [illegible] employes at Washington.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass. Apr. 17, 15

METHODISTS IN PROTEST AGAINST 'BIRTH OF NATION'

Resolutions protesting against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in New England were passed today by 80 ministers attending the New England Conference of Methodist Ministers at People's Temple. The resolutions were presented by Rev. W. J. King, pastor of the Fourth Methodist church of Boston. There was much applause when he concluded his talk. He said that he had seen the film at the Boston theatre and that it "engenders race hatred and has a demoralizing effect on white and colored citizens alike and is dangerous to public welfare."

"After seeing the film, a person leaves with prejudice against the negro race," declared Mr. King. "One of the things the film tries to teach is that one of the ruling ambitions of the negro is to marry a white woman. Such is not the fact."

At the conclusion of Mr. King's talk, another minister arose and amended the resolution so that the protest against the film would include all New England instead of Boston and vicinity. Then the resolutions, in amended form, was passed without a dissenting vote.

The resolution as passed and amended was as follows:

"Resolved, that we urgently protest against the exhibition in the moving picture theatres of New England of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.'

"This play is a gross and demoralizing misrepresentation of the colored population of our country, untrue in fact, cruel in spirit, fruitful of race prejudice, demoralizing to whites and blacks alike and dangerous to the public welfare."

Dr. Howard Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon League of America, addressing the conference today, said the United States will have national prohibition within five years and the constitutional amendment will be submitted to the people in one or two years. He declared that by the time "Billy" Sunday begins his campaign in Boston next year there will be a definite issue in Massachusetts between the prohibitionists and the liquor interests.

The Rev. Dr. Wilson, secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Temperance Society, said the Methodist preachers of the country are responsible for the temperance campaign now sweeping over the country. "And they will see it through," he added. Bishop Quayle presided.

Admit New Ministers

One of the chief events of the morning session was the formal admitting of the Rev. Constance M. Pamenato of Amherst and the Rev. Wylie C. Hausam to full connection in the conference, they having completed the course of study and passed the other requirements. They were admitted by Bishop Quayle, who gave them a short sermon of advice, in which among other things he told them not to complain of being poorly paid, stating there were as many over-paid clergymen as under-paid in the Methodist ministry.

He also said to them: "Don't be always in such a hurry that your coat tails are flying and you haven't time to speak to anybody, and don't, on the other hand, be always complaining to your wife how tired you are. Think rather of how tired she is (of you)."

The Rev. W. M. Gage of Chicopee Falls spoke in objection to the present system, whereby the various church committees appoint themselves in full without change in their makeup year after year. He said this prevented the entrance of much needed young blood and progressive ideas. He offered resolutions requiring at least one third of the membership of each committee to be dropped each year, and the vacancies filled by new men. The resolutions were passed after a somewhat lively discussion.

The following ministers were admitted to the conference "on trial" in accordance with the regular procedure before being admitted to full standing: M. A. Clare, Thomas A. Johnson, Henry S. Leitsel, Wallace A. Hayes, Arthur A. Pitman, Raymond Whitney, Horatio S. Putnam, H. Hausen and R. S. Muller.

The Rev. C. F. Rice of Winthrop street, Boston, read the report on "Church Federation." His report was optimistic, but he stated the work was chiefly handicapped by lack of funds.

The Methodist clergymen and their wives who are attending the New England conference thronged the People's Temple again today for the fourth day of the session.

Morning worship began at 8:30, followed by the regular conference session at 9 A. M.

The afternoon today is devoted to the anniversary meetings of the Women's Foreign Missionary and the Woman's Home Missionary societies, the former to begin at 2 P. M., with Miss Laura White as speaker, and Mrs. L. H. Wriston presiding. Miss White is a missionary from Nankin, China. The speaker at the Woman's Home Missionary meeting will be Mrs. May Leonard Woodruff and Mrs. O. H. Durrell and preside.

At 4 P. M. there will be a reception to ministers' wives and daughters, at which the hostesses will be Mrs. L. H. Murlin, Mrs. Charles Parkhurst, Mrs. E. C. E. Dorion, Mrs. H. L. Wriston, Mrs. R. J. Helms, Mrs. A. H. Nazarian, Mrs. C. C.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 17 1915

New Films Added to Birth of a Nation

"The Birth of a Nation" patrons at the Tremont Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening gave enthusiastic welcome to the new film incorporated by orders of David W. Griffith, showing the progress of the negro race in this country. The record of advancement completed the story from the time the negro as shown in the first part of the picture was brought in chains from Africa up to the present when he has developed extraordinary resource and skill in the arts, professions, crafts and agriculture.

It was recounted that the negroes now own 21,000 square miles of land—an area larger than the state of South Carolina where the scenes of the story are laid; they own more than 400,000 homes, and their aggregate wealth is rapidly increasing towards the billion mark. A third of a million are skilled laborers, and 22,449 work in the federal government service.

There are 50,000 negroes in the professions, 30,000 in business on their own account, they own 450 newspapers, 100 insurance companies, 300 drug stores, 20,000 grocery stores and 64 banks. Individual examples of negro greatness are exhibited in the names of Frederick Douglass in statesmanship, Booker T. Washington in education, W. E. B. DuBois in oratory and philosophy, Henry O. Tanner in art and Paul Lawrence Dunbar in poetry.

This marvellous record, as flashed on the screen, was heartily applauded at both the performances yesterday.

TIMES
New York City
APR 18 19

NEGROES MOB PHOTO PLAY.

Boston Police Clear Lobby, and "Birth of a Nation" Proceeds.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 17.—The trouble threatened ever since the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" began its engagement at the Tremont Theater culminated tonight when 500 negroes, headed by W. Munroe Trotter, who made what was called an insulting address to President Wilson at the White House not long ago, arrived in a body and tried to buy tickets. The management declared that the house was sold out and that the people who were getting tickets at the box office had purchased them in advance. Trotter and his friends, among whom were several white men, assumed such an attitude that Manager Schoeffel called in the police, and a squad of 100, headed by Superintendent Crowley in person, hurried to the theater in automobiles.

The lobby was cleared without the use of clubs and the performance proceeded. In the audience were several negroes who had purchased seats in advance.

Six arrests were made—Trotter, the Rev. A. W. Fuller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, John Hines, and two other negroes, and Joseph Gould, a white man.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.

Will Improve Bi

From New York yester
Griffith wired his general
McCarthy, at the Tremon
he had started the prepa
film to add to "The Birth
now playing that theatre.
age will show the progress
race since the Civil War. As and figures will be disclos
negro advancement.
The suggestion made by
Fleischer, that this work wou
the historical value of "The Bi Nation," appealed to Mr. Griffith and before leaving Boston for N
Tuesday night he decided to carr

WORLD
New York City
Apr 18 19

"BIRTH OF A NATION" CAUSES BOSTON RIOT.

William Munroe Trotter Arrested, and Hundreds of Negroes Parade on Common.

BOSTON, April 17.—A race disturbance to-night in the lobby of the Tremont Theatre, where the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," was presented, resulted in the arrest of William Munroe Trotter, Secretary of the National Equal Rights League; the Rev. Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, two negroes and a white man.

Trotter claims he was struck in the face by a policeman. Puller was arrested on the same charge. Trotter said he had decided to go to the theatre to-night after receiving a letter from Mayor Curley that the producers of the play had made changes in films at the request of people who sympathized with objections of the negroes.

The refusal of the theatre to sell tickets to Trotter precipitated the trouble. The explanation given by the management was that the house was sold out.

During the disturbance in the theatre lobby and for a long time afterward, hundreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont Street between files of police reserves, or clustered on Boston Common until dispersed.

Mr. Trotter recently headed a committee of negroes who called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of department employees at Washington.

Enterprise
Marlboro Mass
Apr 17, 1915

MAE MARSH
In "The Birth of A Nation

D. W. Griffith's wonderful spectacle of war and peace, "The Birth of A Nation," is playing to capacity audiences twice daily at the Tremont theatre, Boston. Everybody who can do so should see the spectacle this week. During the 50th anniversary of the closing events of the Civil war, the play offers an unusually vivid portrayal of those great scenes. It is just half a century after Lee's surrender to Grant, the collapse of the Confederacy, and the terrible assassination of President Lincoln by the madman, Wilkes Booth, in Ford's theatre, Washington. These are depicted by Mr. Griffith in so realistic a manner as to startle with their realism the few remaining survivors and participants. The entire period from 1861 to 1865 is covered in the first half of the picture, notable being the battle scenes illustrating the horrors of war and the blessedness of peace. In the second half Mr. Griffith takes up the soul-stirring drama of Reconstruction. He shows the rescue of the stricken South from the carpet bagger oppressors by the Scottish clans of the Carolinas. Here the dramatic power reaches its zenith. The eyes of spectators are glued to the screen with an engrossing interest that no interruption can disturb. Orchestra music by a band of 40 expert players accompanies the spectacle. Extensive mechanical effects are also used in connection with it.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the first musical film spectacle to play any Boston house at first class theatrical prices. Its success promises to revolutionize the business of showmanship. "As a woman patron remarked. "I would gladly pay $10 for my seat if I could not in any other way witness this wonderful production." The prices are ranged to suit all purses, and the spectator with his quarter or half-dollar will get as much enjoyment out of it as a representative of high society who pays $2 for an orchestra stall.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR

'BIRTH OF NATI WORRIES W

Following complaints fro
sources Gov. Walsh has cont
Police Commissioner O'Mea
whether the commissioner
the production of "The Birth
tion," now being shown at the Theatre.
Commissioner O'Meara as Governor that he is powerles vent the photo-play from bei

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
AP

Will Improve Bi

From New York yester
Griffith wired his general m
McCarthy, at the Tremon
he had started the prepa
film to add to "The Birth
now playing that theatre.
age will show the progress
race since the Civil War. As and figures will be disclos
negro advancement.
The suggestion made by Fleischer, that this work wou
the historical value of "The Bi Nation," appealed to Mr. Griffith
and before leaving Boston for N
Tuesday night he decided to carr

TRAVELER & E
Boston, Mass
AP

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 15 19

SUN
New York City
APR 1
18 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATIO TO HAVE NEW

From New York, yesterday,
Griffith wired his general m
the Tremont Theatre that he al the preparatiton of a new fi to "The Birth of a Nation,"
show the progress of the Neg since the civil war. The sug made by Dr. Charles Fielscher appea to Mr. Griffith strongly, and leaving Boston for New night, he decided to ca
time the management
with the demand for s tinged to put the ks ahead—that is on sale for the th

RIOT OVER FILM SHOW.

Arrests in Boston Result From "Birth of a Nation."

BOSTON, April 17.—Agitation which some negroes of this city started over the film show "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre culminated in a row in the theatre lobby. Twelve persons were arrested, including W. Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, who had trouble at the White House not long ago when President Wilson said Trotter had insulted him, and the Rev. Alian Fuller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church. Several white men were among those arrested.

The movie management say that they received intimations that an attempt was going to be made to-night to break up the show. Many police were on duty. They said that Trotter, Fuller and other negroes when unable to buy tickets started the row.

A new film, to illustrate the progress of negroes since the Civil War, is to be added to the pictured spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont in deference to various suggestions to the management.

P. Hiller, Mrs. Kelley Jennison, Mrs. W. M. Gilbert and Mrs. Dillon Brenson.

The anniversary of the conference Temperance Society will be this evening at 7 o'clock, the Rev. G. R. Heath presiding. The speaker will be the Rev. Sam Small of Georgia, who will talk on "King Alcohol."

Following this, at 8 o'clock, will be the "Anniversary of the Freedman's Aid." The Rev. J. W. Stephen will preside, and the speaker will be the Rev. P. J. Maveety, D. D.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 17, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" CONTINUES AT TREMONT

"The Birth of a Nation," as everyone in Boston must know by this time, is at the Tremont. Controversial features aside, it is an extraordinary film show, with Civil War and reconstruction scenes serving as a background for a romantic story involving young Southerners and Northerners.

There are intensely vivid battle episodes. The burning of Atlanta is seen as through a window. The shooting down of President Lincoln by Booth and the meeting of Grant and Lee at Appomattox are pictures presented with startling fidelity to history. The turbulent history of the Ku Klux Klan is set forth in a long series of films, which alternate with scenes illustrating the working out of the negro problem. Mr. Griffith, the producer, has added films showing some of the progress the negroes have made since emancipation days.

There are performances every afternoon and evening.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 17, 1915

Sunday Ban on "Birth of Nation"

George C. Neal, acting chief of the state police, put a ban on "The Birth of a Nation" as a Sunday attraction when he disapproved of the presentation of the picture at Lynn Sunday night, under the auspices of the local lodge of Elks. Deputy Neal, who saw the pictures in Boston last Wednesday, decided they were not satisfactory for a Sunday entertainment. The State police has power of censorship over motion-picture films.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 17, 1915

MASS MEETING TO PROTEST FILM

To protest against the [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" and to set forth another view of the Reconstruction period the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, which perpetuates the spirit of northern abolitionism, will have a mass meeting of colored and white citizens at 2 P. M. tomorrow in Faneuil Hall.

Frank H. Sanborn of Concord will preside, and the speakers will include Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature; Rufe Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, Michael J. Jordan of the United Irish League, the Rev. Francis H. Rowley of the Humane Society, Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., and William T. Ingham, secretary of the association.

GLOBE
s: Boston, Mass.
APR 17 1915

[illegible] The film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is the attraction at the Tremont Theatre.

Times, Boston Mass
Apr. 17, 1915

The success of "The Birth of a Nation" has incidentally given rise to a flood of suggestions to David W. Griffith concerning his next picture. In one of these—the suggestion of filming the Holy Grail story—Mr. Griffith has taken deep interest. One of his purposes in visiting Boston is to see, for the first time, the famous paintings in the Public Library, of which he will make a careful study.

Record 4/17/15

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 17, 1915
1703

For the Garden
Read the Feature on Page 11

PRICE ONE CENT

[illegible]ES AID [illegible]TO-PLAY

Informs 2000 Negroes Who Storm State House He Will Appeal to Legislature If Necessary.

WARRANT TO BE ASKED FOR PROMOTERS TODAY

"Birth of Nation" Tends to Invite Race Prejudice and Bigotry Is Governor's Decision.

Following one of the most dramatic scenes the State House has ever witnessed, during which nearly 2000 negroes stormed the Capitol in protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation," Gov. Walsh yesterday announced his complete sympathy with the contention that the pictures tend to incite race prejudice and bigotry, disturbing the equal rights guaranteed to citizens of all classes under the constitution, and promised to use all his power to stop the production of the play.

"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this in the State House in all its history," said the governor. "I hope to God it will never happen again."

As the first step toward stopping the production a warrant is to be asked for in the Municipal Court this morning under Chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910, relating to immoral entertainments, for the arrest of the promoters of the pictures against which the negroes protest.

MAY ASK LEGISLATURE TO ACT

If the court decides that the photo-play is not in violation of that act, Gov. Walsh says he will ask the Legislature to pass a law which will end the production of the pictures in this State.

The act under which the warrant will be asked provides for an amendment of the Revised Laws, so that Section 21 of Chapter 212 thereof shall read as follows:

"Section 21—Whoever as owner, manager, director, agent or in any other capacity prepares, advertises, gives, presents or participates in any lewd, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure show or entertainment, or in any show or entertainment suggestive of lewdness, obscenity, indecency, immorality or impurity, or in any show or entertainment manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $500 or by both such fine and imprisonment."

Nearly 2000 on Steps

While the governor was considering the matter in the executive council chamber with a committee of 50 appointed by the protesting negroes, a throng of nearly 2000 waited on the front steps of the capitol. At various times the crowd sang "Onward Christian Soldiers" and a version of "John Brown's Body," which voiced the resentment against the author of the Clansman and which ran "We'll Hang Tom Dixon to a Sour Apple Tree."

When some one started "America" there was so much hissing that the [illegible] abandoned. There was a like [illegible]

[illegible] governor's body, [illegible] during the evening. [illegible] Gov. Walsh [illegible] the chorus of [illegible] the house had emptied [illegible] the crowd remained [illegible] during the [illegible] of the crowd [illegible] Chief Neal [illegible] Commissioner [illegible] Crowley [illegible] Boston [illegible] Massachusetts are regarded by him as among the most loyal citizens of the State.

"He assured me that under his administration the equal rights to all citizens for which America began its fight 140 year ago today will not be trampled upon and that no influence which tends to race prejudice and bigotry shall be allowed to exist within the community.

"The governor told us he does not hold the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association responsible for the demonstrations which may be made by some of the less responsible of our race, but he urged upon us to be calm and leave the matter to him.

"We all remember the assistance given to our race in the past by men of the governor's race. We all remember Daniel O'Connell. We all remember John Boyle O'Reilly and others who were the friends of the downtrodden black man in the dark days of slavery and I say to you that we are justified in leaving the situation in the hands of Gov. Walsh."

Posed at the very edge of the balcony, supporting himself with his left hand gripping the iron rail behind him and leaning far out over the heads of the crowd, Trotter roused his audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm and praise for the position the governor had taken.

Attacks Producers

After eulogising Walsh and urging the negroes to proceed in a calm and orderly manner, Trotter branched out into a further attack on the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" and spoke for nearly 20 minutes.

At the conclusion of his address, the crowd dispersed quietly.

Before meeting the committee of 50 the governor conferred with Police Commissioner O'Meara, Superintendent of Police Crowley, George C. Neal, acting chief of the State police; Nelson P. Brown, first assistant attorney general, and a committee representing those gathered on the steps. The committee included William H. Lewis, former assistant United States district attorney; Attorney Butler Wilson, John W. Schenck, C. Henry Robbins, Superior

Belgium Is Still Helpless

The New England Belgian Relief [illegible] Against segrega[illegible] at Wash[illegible]

EVENING MAIL
New York City APR 14 15

BOSTON STIRRED BY DIXON FILMS

Negroes Denounce His Civil War Pictures, While Gov. Decides on Power to Stop Them

Boston, April 19.—Gov. Walsh summoned Attorney General Attwill, Chief Neal of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner of this city, and Superintendent Crowley of the local police to a conference at the state house to-day, to determine whether he had authority to prohibit further exhibition in this city of picture films of Dixon's "Birth of a Nation."

Resolutions protesting against the pictures were adopted by the New England Methodist conference in session here, but Mayor Curley decided that he could not stop the production, as it was not established that the pictures were obscene.

While the governor was closeted with the officials several hundred negroes, waiting to be heard in protest against the exhibition, occupied the steps of the state house opposite the memorial to Col. Robert Gould Shaw, a white officer who lost his life while leading a negro regiment in the charge against Fort Wagner.

BROOKLINE (Mass.) T
APRIL [illegible]

TREMONT THEATRE.

D. W. Griffith's wonderful spectacle of war and peace, "The Birth of a Nation," is playing to capacity audiences twice daily at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. Everybody who can do so should see the spectacle this week.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the first musical film spectacle to play any Boston house at first-class theatrical prices. The prices are ranged to suit all purses, and the spectator with his quarter or half-dollar will get as much enjoyment out of it as a representative of high society who pays $2.00 for an orchestra stall.

BROOKLINE (Mass.) CHRONICLE
APRIL 17, 1915

Tremont Theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation," the film story of the history of the country from the time of the Civil War, has drawn large audiences to the Tremont Theatre. The Boston Transcript says od it:

"The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War — Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln — on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and the Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheoses of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle."

Evening Journal
Apr 17, 1915

HIGH-PRICE FILM PLAY PIONEER

David W. Griffith, whose prodigious spectacular photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," is now being exhibited with remarkable success at the Tremont Theatre.

Moving Pictures World
N.Y. Apr 17, 1915

[illegible] TRANSC
BOS[illegible]ston, Mass.
APR

For the front of the [illegible]
Party and the unemployed equal division, two of Brot
"Balaustion's Adventure" anes's Apology"—will be se of the Plymouth Theatre on noon, April 20. They hav gether in dramatic form
"Balaustion's Euripides,"
A. Clarke, and the new v read in the current number zine, "Poet-Lore." The par will be acted by practicin
"lecturers and readers of will be decorated with "I dances by young women six settings and costumes
Platt, as yet the ablest ar native practitioner in Ameri stagecraft.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
AP

Will Improve Big

From New York yester
Griffith wired his general
McCarthy, at the Tremont
he had started the prepa
film to add to "The Birth
now playing that theatre.
age will show the progress
race since the Civil War. As and figures will be disclos
negro advancement.
The suggestion made by I Fleischer, that this work would the historical value of "The Bi Nation," appealed to Mr. Griffith
and before leaving Boston for N
Tuesday night he decided to carr

TRAVELER & I
Boston, Mass.
AP

NEW YORK—Howard Schae
as he comes from Boston, took a at "The Birth of a Nation" fi Liberty Theatre last night. Ho astered the screen and the or a with a few dozen eggs.
e eggs here—and they were not

TRAVELER & EVE. HERAL
s: Boston, Mass.
APR

'BIRTH OF NATI WORRIES W

Following complaints fro
sources Gov. Walsh has cont
Police Commissioner O'Mea
whether the commissioner c
the production of "The Birth
tion," now being shown at the Theatre.
Commissioner O'Meara assce
Governor that he is powerless to re vent the photo-play from being sh

TRAVELER & EVE. HE
Boston, Mass.
APR 15

'BIRTH OF A NATI TO HAVE NEW

From New York, yesterday,
Griffith wired his general m
the Tremont Theatre that he the preparatiton of a new fil
to "The Birth of a Nation,"
show the progress of the Neg since the civil war. The sugge made by Dr. Charles Fleischer app to Mr. Griffith strongly and leaving Boston for Ne
night, he decided to ca
time the management with the demand for liged to put the ks ahead—that is on sale for the th

STAR
New York City
APR 21 1915

MAYOR CURLEY PERMITS

After eliminating several scenes which he regarded as being offensive Mayor Curley of Boston will permit D. W. Griffith's motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," to be shown to the Boston public. He does not, however, say the picture is obscene or immoral.

PRESS
New York City
APR 20

ALSH AGAINST RACE FILMS

State Governor Will Ask for Law Barring "Birth of Nation."

BOSTON, April 19.—Governor Walsh told several hundred negroes who gathered at the State House to-day to protest against the production in this city of the film "The Birth of a Nation" that he would ask the Legislature to pass a law prohibiting plays or picture exhibitions that raised the race question.
In addition to the negroes there was a white representation also opposed to the pictures. These included Mrs. Joseph Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips; William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, and Miss Elizabeth Putnam.
Walsh said the sole reason why he did not act arbitrarily and forthwith to stop the exhibition was because he lacked authority. He advised the committee to make a formal complaint against the exhibitors in the Municipal Court, and said the Police Commissioner, who was directly responsible, would accept the court's decision.

Will
BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 17, 1915 171

BISHOP QUAYLE ADVISES PASTORS

"Do not complain to your wife how tired you are. Think how tired she must be of you. Do not insist on receiving letters of condolence from your wife."
This was the advice given today by Bishop William A. Quayle to two newly ordained ministers who were admitted into full membership of the New England conference of Methodist churches in People's Temple. The two ministers are Constantine N. Pappo of Amherst and Wiley C. Hawkets [illegible] [illegible]tive young men stood before the bishop in the presence of the whole conference while he gave them advice. Among other things he said:
"Don't get into debt. If you don't have money, refrain from buying. Neighbors will help you to get along and when the time comes that you cannot buy food. Fast a little, you'll fatten up after a while. Pay as you go. Don't Uuse tobacco. Preach the Gospel.
"Do not get egotistical or give too much prominence to the intellectual microbe that may be in you. Look after your conscience and keep it up-to-date. When you make a call, remember to get out before the people go to sleep."
The bishop gave an address on the debt of civilization to Palestine, in which he contended that whatever we have in the family life and Christian life come to us from Palestine through the Prophet Christ.
Rev. Dr. Wilson of the Methodist Church Temperance Society asked from the conferences the sum of $35,000 for temperance work and said that over one million total abstainence pledges were signed during the year. "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented in Boston, was unanimously condemned by the conference after a speech by the Rev. W. J. King, pastor of the Fourth Church of Boston.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO OPEN IN BOSTON.

Expected Protest Realized—Mayor Curley Petitioned—What Parkhurst Says.

"The Birth of a Nation" will open its Boston engagement at the Tremont theater on Saturday afternoon, April 10, for an indefinite period.
As soon as this announcement was made public, several prominent Bostonians, including Francis J. Garrison and the Rev. Horace Bumstead, signed resolutions, which were sent to Mayor Curley, asking that the exhibition of the photoplay be prohibited.
The following is the communication received by Mayor Curley from the association:

My Dear Sir: At a meeting of the board of directors of Boston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the enclosed resolution was unanimously adopted requesting a hearing for the purpose of opposing the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston. And I respectfully request that such a hearing be granted at some early date prior to April 10, 1915.
Very Respectfully,
Butler Wilson, Secretary.

Whereas, it is announced in the public press that "The Birth of a Nation" is to be produced at the Tremont theater in Boston, beginning April 10, 1915, and
Whereas, the film should not be shown in Boston.
First, because it is a libel upon and an insult to a large number of Boston citizens.
Second, because it engenders race hatred.
Third, because it tends to a breach of the public peace
Resolved, that the executive committee of the Boston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People respectfully request the Hon. James M. Curley, mayor of Boston, to grant us a public hearing at an early date, prior to April 10, 1915, for the purpose of producing the evidence and showing the reasons why the film should not be shown in Boston.
The following resolution was also passed:
Resolved, that we earnestly protest against the exhibition in the moving picture theaters of Boston and vicinity of Thomas Dixon's play, "The Birth of a Nation." This play, like some previous literary and dramatic productions of the author, being a gross and demoralizing misrepresentation of the colored population of our country, untrue in fact, cruel in spirit, fruitful of race prejudice, demoralizing to whites and blacks alike, and dangerous to the public welfare. We appeal to the mayors of Boston and neighboring cities, and to all others in authority to use every power entrusted to them to suppress this vicious play.
Mayor Curley has received a letter from the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst of New York City, regarding the production, which read in part:
"The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him and when he was rioting in the deliciousness of a liberty so new and untried that he had not yet learned to understand it and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it.
"It is in this respect exactly true to history and if it reflects upon the negro as he was then, it is a compliment to the black man of to-day. An exhibition of negro lawlessness might not have been proper thirty or forty years ago. Such proprieties, however, change with the passing of time."

"DON'T PUTTER"—QUAYLE

Methodist Bishop Gives Advice to Ministers

Sunshine-Blue Sky-South Breezes Doctrine

Conference Opposes "Birth of a Nation"

Prohibition Promised in Five Years

Bishop Quayle was again the actual as well as the nominal leader today at the session of the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at People's Temple, and in counselling C. M. Penuncio of Amherst and Wylie C. Hawsam of West Roxbury, candidates for full membership in the conference, he gave advice which served as well for the ministers who heard him, for the laymen and for the world.
The bishop began by emphasizing the wise doctrine of "Pay as you go." Continuing, he said: "We do not pass judgment on the use of tobacco, but the Ladies' Home Journal does not care for it; and seriously, a minister who goes into households at the times of birth, death and marriage has no business to have a colored breath."
As the two candidates stood in front of the platform, listening intently, the bishop asked, according to the discipline: "Do you know all the rules?"
"Yes," they replied promptly.
"Then," smiled Bishop Quayle, "you know more than anybody else here."
Becoming serious again, the counsellor advised: "Don't explain too much in your preaching; make things obvious; particularly don't endeavor to explain voluminously about the Trinity—proclaim it. If, after examination, you believe our doctrines to be not in accord with the Holy Scriptures, don't at once decide against the doctrines. Look again; the fault may be with you.
"Don't be egotistical. If you have to change from our methods, do so; flock with others, if you can find them, or flock by yourself; don't bother us.
"Do you know our church discipline and polity? I trust so. The Methodist discipline is a good thing; and the conference is like sticky fly-paper. If you walk off you leave your legs behind.
"And, speaking of conferences, it doesn't seem quite fair to bring an unsuspecting man like me down here to administer it. Everything seems to be glued down. What the preachers don't advise me, the laymen do.
"Now, there is no more self-respecting job than to be a Methodist preacher. You never have to ask for a place to preach. It comes to you. That is Methodist economy. You won't always get the best wages, but in round numbers, you'll get all you're worth. If you don't have thick clothes all the time, be glad that summer comes periodically, when you can wear your thin ones. There are as many Methodist ministers overpaid as there are underpaid ones.
"Be diligent. If you keep busy, you won't have time to talk about it. Don't fuss about your work, do it. Don't complain to your wife how tired you are. Think how tired she is of you. Don't 'putter.' Stick to your own job. Teach your laymen manners, not as having any yourself, but as having inquired of Him that hath.
"The bigger preacher you are, the more you visit. But don't stay too long. Go, take sunshine, blue sky and south wind—and get out! Give the people a chance to rest up.
"Don't be a lop-sided preacher."
Dismissing the candidates, and speaking generally, Bishop Quayle compared Greece and Palestine, giving to Greece logic, mathetics, sculpture, architecture, eloquence, literature and philosophy, and to Palestine individualism, the family, democracy, ethics, the Bible and Christ.
"Kingdoms," continued the bishop, "think men have to be managed; democracies think men can manage themselves. I came from a foreign land, but I glory that I live in a land where we choose our President. The Greek civilization was a civilization of men, but it fell because it did not take account of the women. Christ has made womanhood holy. We do not inherit the family life from China, Japan, India or Greece. The family is the gift of God through Jesus Christ. Ethics is the largeness of the human soul under obligation to the universe. Christianity comes from Palestine, and it is the only religion that will stand the test of time. The Bible is a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. Greece had Olympus, but Palestine had Calvary."
The conference adopted the following minute against the production of "The Birth of a Nation": "Resolved, That we urgently protest against the exhibition in the moving-picture houses, within the New England Methodist Episcopal Conference, of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.'"
"This play is a gross and demoralizing misrepresentation of the colored population of our country, untrue in fact, cruel in spirit, fruitful of race prejudice, demoralizing alike to blacks and whites and dangerous to the public welfare."
Dr. Howard Russell, one of the national secretaries of the Anti-Saloon League, predicted that in five years the United States would have national prohibition. He said that at the close of the present session of the General Court in Massachusetts the Anti-Saloon League will announce a unique plan, to be developed by "Billy" Sunday, when he comes to Boston.
Professor Harry F. Ward of the Boston University School of Theology spoke yesterday afternoon for passive resistance in case a foreign power should attack the United States. He said that such action would send the enemy back with the laughter of the world ringing in their ears. He denounced religion for its lack of heart in world service and said that many persons gave money for Belgium when they should have helped the [illegible] Home. [illegible] and his officials under the law. [illegible] and decided upon no course to be [illegible] by either of them.
[illegible]sioner O'Meara declined to [illegible] statement as to the nature scored "bundle days" and such schemes saying they were practically worthless.

A new film, to illustrate the progress of negroes since the Civil War, is to be added to the pictured spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont in deference to various suggestions to the management.

Bishop Quayle addressed a crowded auditorium last night which he gave his lecture on "Shakespeare's Tragedy of Greatness." His lecture was upon "Julius Caesar," and more than $1000 was realized for the benefit of the retired ministers' fund.

The assignment of preachers at Greater Boston churches tomorrow is as follows:

People's Temple—Bishop W. A. Quayle in the morning and Rev. Dr. W. F. Oldham of New York in the evening.

Tremont Street Church—Bishop R. J. Cooke of Portland, Or., in the morning and Rev. W. E. Vaudermark of Cambridge in the evening.

Baker Memorial—Rev. C. C. P. Hiller, morning, and Rev. Kelley Jenness, evening.

Malden Centre Church—Rev. Edward A. Elliott of Trinity, Springfield, morning and evening.

Newton Centre—Rev. L. J. Birney at both services.

Winthrop Street—Rev. Kelley Jenness, morning, and Rev. W. W. Bowers, evening.

Chelsea First—Rev. C. H. Hannaford of South Lancaster, both services.

Greenwood Memorial—Dr. L. H. Murlin, president of Boston University, in the morning.

Medford Hillside—Rev. E. G. Hooper of Charlemont, both services.

Boston First—Rev. Charles H. Atkins of Cambridge, evening.

Hyde Park—Rev. James R. Coons of Waltham, both services.

Cambridge, Harvard Street—Rev. Charles F. Rice of Boston, evening.

LYNN (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 17 1915

BARS MOTION FILM "BIRTH OF NATION"

Deputy Neal Says It Is Not Fit for Elks to Present Here.

George E. Neal of this city, deputy chief of the state police, today notified the Lynn lodge of Elks that the moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is not fitting for a Sunday show. The local lodge had planned to present the big motion picture at the Olympia theatre a week from Sunday night. Manager Griffith of the company presenting the picture had offered it to the lodge and the management of the Olympia had also extended the courtesy of their playhouse for the performance.

All "movies" exhibited anywhere in the state on Sunday are subject to state police censorship, and, accordingly, the Lynn Elks applied to the state police for permission. Deputy Neal wrote to John D. Aspin, chairman of the Lynn Elks' entertainment committee:

"I attended an exhibition of the 'Birth of a Nation,' and I am satisfied that it is not a fitting production for Sunday entertainment, and I, therefore, shall be obliged to disapprove of the exhibition on the Lord's day in the state of Massachusetts.

"Your object is a good and a very worthy one, but I see no way of helping you out, not at least with this kind of an entertainment."

Henry McMahon, Boston manager of the "Birth of a Nation," said that the exhibition and services of the orchestra were offered to the Lynn Lodge of Elks some time ago, at the request of the lodge officers, and without knowledge that in this state such exhibitions were forbidden on Sundays.

After learning of the law the proprietors of the show, who were to receive nothing, thought that as the proceeds were to be for a benevolent object the authorities would not object. The offer has been withdrawn on learning the attitude of the state police, he said.

DORCHESTER (Mass.) BEACON
APRIL 17, 1915

TREMONT THEATRE.

D. W. Griffith's wonderful spectacle of war and peace, "The Birth of a Nation," is playing to capacity audiences twice daily at the Tremont Theatre. During the fiftieth anniversary of the closing events of the Civil War, the play offers an unusually vivid portrayal of those great scenes. It is just half a century after Lee's surrender to Grant, the collapse of the Confederacy, and the terrible assassination of President Lincoln by the madman, Wilkes Booth in Ford's Theatre, Washington. These are depicted by Mr Griffith in so realistic a manner as to startle with their realism the few remaining survivors and participants. The entire period from 1861 to 1865 is covered in the first half of the picture, notable being the battle scenes illustrating the horrors of war and the blessedness of peace. In the second half Mr Griffith takes up the soul-stirring drama of Reconstruction. He shows the rescue of the stricken South from its carpetbagger oppressors by the Scottish Clans of the Carolinas. Here the dramatic power reaches its zenith. Orchestra music by 40 players accompanies the spectacle. Extensive mechanical effects are also used.

New York City

APR 20

MOVIE [illegible] IN BAY STATE.

Gov. Walsh Fights "The Birth of a Nation."

Boston, Mass., April 19.—Several thousand negroes waited on the State House steps to-day while a delegation lodged a protest with Gov. Walsh against the movie show called "The Birth of a Nation."

The Governor will ask the Legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of this show and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice in case the courts decide that there is no law prohibiting such exhibitions.

A complaint will be filed and if the court finds that the law has been violated Commissioner O'Meara will report to Mayor Murray and he can stop its production. Otherwise the Governor will ask for a new law.

NGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 17, 1915

[illegible] of the cause of the Allies and the Germans is already [illegible]

[illegible] of Mark here this week [illegible] made by Dixon and [illegible] maligner of their Negro fellow-citizens to eliminate the whole colored race by [illegible] and unheard-of situations in the [illegible] which represents the emancipation of Lincoln, the lawless carpetbaggers, the Ku Klux in the former slave states after emancipation, and the alleged evils of the reconstruction period affecting the newly-surrendered rebels and the newly-enfranchised slaves. The truth of history has never been adhered to by Dixon. Singular as it may seem, the slaveholder has always misunderstood the Negro slave, attributing to him an eagerness for rebellion and painting in glaring colors the horrors of the "insurrections" that the American negro has never shown any strength or desire to raise. No other race in slavery has shown the patience and long suffering of the negro, yet the slaveholders are always prepared to fear their rising in revolt. Never was there a better opportunity than the civil war afforded; yet no corporal's guard of the slaves rebelled. Instead of that they stayed on the plantations, did the work of their masters, and protected the women and children of the families who were left unguarded by their militant men folks. Instead of hatred and slander, the southern whites ought to show and feel profound gratitude to this faithful race, which never sought to take advantage of the situation that the folly of the whites had created. Some of the more scandalous parts of the show at the Boston theater have been stricken out by order of the police, but there still remain very objectionable passages intended to insult and offend thousands of Negro Bostonians. If similar insults were offered, in a performance of this kind, to the Irish-Americans, the German-Americans, or the English or French residents here, how long would the public endure it? A single matinee would be enough to sweep the offenders out of a theater which sheltered such illnature and historic falsehood.

The evils of which the white southerners complained during reconstruction, so far as they were avoidable, were mostly psychological. "The man who has injured you will never forgive you," says the proverb and it is [illegible] natural. Conscious that they done unpardonable deeds, by which slaves had suffered, they resented the [illegible] which they believed the Negroes [illegible] them, but which hardly existed in kindly souls.

[illegible] Brown himself was under some [illegible] as to the insurrectionary [illegible] of the slave. Valuing discipline [illegible] own side, he thought his freed slaves [illegible] put under strict rules to prevent [illegible] from getting beyond control; but our [illegible] in the civil war, and later, [illegible] own that they are easily controled, [illegible] make admirable soldiers with less [illegible] of discipline than the low down [illegible] needs for the same result. As for [illegible] negro's pursuit of the white woman, which Dixon is obsessed, it is far [illegible] obvious than the corresponding pas- [illegible] of the white for the colored, as the [illegible] history of the South has shown. [illegible] ading of the two races comes from [illegible] native of the white man; and it [illegible] me so far, in nearly three centuries [illegible] ginia, that purely a full-blooded [illegible] is to be found in the seceding [illegible] as old slaveholders who still sur- [illegible] ow well. A few pure Africans [illegible] troduced into Carolina and Georgia [illegible] revived slave trade during Pierce's [illegible] chanan's administrations, as Prof [illegible] knew very well from his experi- [illegible] Carolina. Nothing but mischief [illegible] ult from the proximity of Dixon [illegible] ville, either South or South. A [illegible] on Sunday afternoon [illegible] held to denounce [illegible] Boston [illegible] ing in the revised [illegible]

[illegible] assumptions of history which [illegible] vicious hatred of the Negro habitu- [illegible] are well exposed this morning [illegible] Herald by Miss Storey, who, [illegible] etary and stenographer of Senator [illegible] knew the facts as they occurred [illegible] time. The [illegible] slaveholders, [illegible] representative, [illegible] Booth, had [illegible] ated Lincoln and [illegible] to assassi- [illegible] [illegible] near the fruits [illegible] result of their at- [illegible] free republic. [illegible] om by John- [illegible] ent in their [illegible] show their [illegible] that prac- [illegible] to peonage, [illegible] form of re- [illegible] Carl Schurz, [illegible] in general [illegible] and pro- [illegible] the only al- [illegible] ment, and it [illegible] to decency [illegible] evils half so [illegible] had [illegible]

Main Telegram
N. Y. after, 1915

THAT riot which resulted from the production in Boston of "The Birth of a Nation", a film play dealing with the race problem in the South, must have been caused by objection to the "caste".

TRIBUNE
Tampa, Fla

APR 18 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS STIRRING UP THE BLACKS

RACIAL DISTURBANCE IN BOSTON THEATER

Follows Similar Disturbances Recently In New York—Trotter Refused Admission

BOSTON, April 17.—A racial disturbance which developed tonight in the lobby of the Tremont Theater, where a motion picture play dealing with the reconstruction period in the South was presented, resulted in the arrest of William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League; Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church; two other negroes and a white man.

Trotter, who is charged with disturbing the peace, claims he was struck in the face by a policeman. Puller was arrested on the same charge. Trotter said he had decided to go to the theater tonight, after receiving a letter from Mayor Curley to the effect that the producers of the play had made changes in the films at the request of persons who sympathized with objections made by negroes who had seen the exhibition.

The trouble followed the alleged refusal of the theater to sell tickets to Trotter. The explanation given by the manager was that the house was sold out.

Disorders had been anticipated by the police and more than 100 reserves were near the theater at the opening hour. During the disturbance in the theater lobby and for a long time afterward hundreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont Street between files of police reserves or clustered on Boston Common until dispersed.

Trotter came into prominence recently when he headed a committee of ne[illegible] called upon Preside[illegible] against segrega[illegible] employes at Was[illegible]

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNIO
APRIL 18, 1915

MINISTERS ON ANXIOUS SEAT

Methodist Bishop May "Pickle" Some of Anticipated Appointments.

GIVES REASONS WHY

Conference Condemns "The Birth of a Nation," Motion Picture Show.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 17—While it had been said that the list of appointments had practically been completed and would probably be announced early Monday, Bishop Quale's announcement of a proposed "pickling" of some of the ministers resulted in a large gathering of the ministers in the bishop's office in the Wesleyan Building, Copley Square, late this afternoon. Many were among the gathering whose pastorates were believed to have been permanently settled, leading to the belief that there may be a big shake up in the list as prepared by the ministers and superintendents.

This belief was strengthened by the action taken by the bishop in the case of Rev. Joseph M. Shepler of Hyde Park and his prompt elimination as a candidate for the superintendency of the Springfield district, following the visit of the Springfield laymen to urge his candidacy.

Appointments Uncertain.

The sudden turn in affairs makes it impossible to predict with certainty the appointments to be made Monday. How far the shakeup goes is a mystery, even to the ministers themselves and all are now on the anxious seat, awaiting the turn of affairs during the next 24 hours.

No name is now mentioned for the Springfield superintendency excepting that of Rev. Charles O. Ford of Greenfield, formerly of Asbury Church, Springfield. Yet the ministers now shake their heads doubtfully when his probable appointment is mentioned. Since the bishop is a comparative stranger in New England and a resident of St. Paul, Minn., it was believed that he would be largely governed by the advice of the members of the conference.

Apparently there is no change in the proposed appointment of Rev. J. Frank Knotts of Park Avenue Church, Somerville, to the Lynn district superintendency. He united with the New England conference in 1906 and has held pastorates at Wesley Memorial Church, Boston, 1906-7; First Church, Lynn, 1908-12, and Park Avenue, Somerville, 1913-14.

It is practically certain that Rev. E. J. Knox, who has been supplying the pulpit of Grace Church, Springfield, since the death of its pastor, Rev. H. H. Paine, will continue in that position for another year. His salary has been increased to $1400 and house rent. Rev. N. M. Caton of Liberty Church, Springfield, will be retired this year and his successor is a matter of extreme doubt. Whether or not Rev. L. W. Staples will return to Asbury First Church is also a question of some doubt. Rev. W. C. Townsend of St. James, Rev. E. A. Elliott of Trinity and Rev. R. A. Colpitts of Wesley Church, Springfield, will all be returned to their respective pastorates for another year.

Protest Motion Pictures.

Unanimous [illegible] against showing the pictures of "The Birth of a Nation," in any of the motion picture houses in the State. The following resolution of Rev. W. J. King, colored, of the Fourth Church, Boston, was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that we urgently protest against the exhibition in the motion picture theaters [illegible] Massachusetts of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' This [illegible] gross and demoralizing misrepresentation of the colored population of our country, untrue in fact, cruel in spirit, hurtful of race prejudices, demoralizing to whites and blacks alike and dangerous to the public welfare."

"We must [illegible] be [illegible] harsh on the motion theatre pictures," cautioned Bishop Quayle. "We are the most deadly foes in existence to the liquor interests."

Temperance Address.

Secretary Wilson of the Conference Temperance Society and Dr. Howard Russell, national secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, both delivered addresses telling of the work being done to secure temperance legislation throughout the Nation. The latter speaker said; "When Billy Sunday comes here in 1916 he is going to help push this temperance legislation through in Massachusetts."

Rev. Joseph M. Shepler was appointed to preach the conference missionary sermon next year. Upon motion of Rev. J. M. Gage of Chicopee Falls, a resolution was adopted after some debate, providing that the committee of the conference should not always have the same membership, but that at least one third of the membership of each committee should be moved off each year.

Rev. Dr. Charles F. Rice of Winthrop Street Church, Boston, formerly of St. Luke's and Wesley Churches, Springfield, reported on church federations. On motion of Rev. J. E. Charlton of Salem the following were received into the conference [illegible] Massachusetts [illegible] Thomas T. [illegible] against the [illegible] in the film [illegible] who

A. Clare and Henry S. Lutzel. The candidates were received into full membership. They are C. M. Panunzio, who has been preaching at Amherst in the Springfield district, and Wylie C. Houser.

Charge to New Members.

In his charge to the new members, Bishop Quayle cautioned them never to go in debt. "If you don't have food for that day," he said, "perhaps some neighbor will provide it. If not, it will not harm you to fast.

"You are asked to abstain from using tobacco, but you are not asked to preach against tobacco. The reason we ask you not to abstain from using tobacco is because the Ladies' Home Journal will have none of it. The doctrine of Christian perfection has about as much imperfection in it as any doctrine I know of. What it asks is that you be a gentleman.

"There are as many jobs in the Methodist ministry overpaid as there are jobs underpaid. A big man in a small place will make that place big. Diligence means to work a lot and not talk about it. Don't complain to your wife how tired you are. Think how tired she is of having you. I know some ministers who demand resolutions of condolence every night from their wife. Don't putter and fool away your time. Stick to your own job and let the other people look after theirs. Look after your conscience. Keep it in repair and up to date. Some people's consciences are mighty wizened-up affairs.

"Don't get [illegible] you get an intellectual [illegible] the whole universe must be changed. If you change we will bid you good [illegible] What Methodists need is Methodists.

Bishop's P[illegible]

In closing his [illegible] the candidates Bishop Qu[illegible] criticized the action of minister[illegible] ing down the appointments. He [illegible]

"It is not a fair [illegible] square way to do to ask a bishop to administer a conference and when he arrives find everything is already glued down. I say this in the friendliest spirit to you. Neither is it fair to have the laymen take a hand in the matter. Many of these ministers have hopes. Some of these hopes will be pickled."

Women's Conference.

The entire afternoon was devoted to the women's part of the conference work and many of the ministers took the opportunity of attending the ball game and watching the Braves in action. Mrs. H. L. Wriston, formerly of Springfield and now of Boston, presided at the Women's Foreign Missionary anniversary and Miss Laura M. White of Nanking, China, told of the work being done there through the support of the Methodist Church. Mrs. O. H. Durrell presided at the Women's Home Missionary meeting and Mrs. May Leonard Woodruff was the speaker. Following these meetings a reception was tendered the visiting women by the wives of the Boston ministers. The hostesses were Mrs. L. H. Murlin, Mrs. Charles Parkhurst, Mrs. E. C. E. Dorion, Mrs. H. L. Wriston, Mrs. E. J. Helms, Mrs. A. H. Nazarian, Mrs. C. C. P. Hiller, formerly of Springfield; Mrs. Kelley Jenness, Mrs. W. M. Gilbert and Mrs. Dillon Bronson.

In the evening the conference temperance anniversary was held, with Rev. Sam Small of Georgia as speaker and Rev. G. E. Heath of Lynn presiding, and the freedman's aid anniversary with Rev. J. W. Stephan presiding and Rev. P. J. Maveety of Cincinnati as speaker.

Bishop Quayle will preach the sermon tomorrow morning in the People's Temple, following a love feast at 9 o'clock, led by Rev. W. F. Warren of Brookline. Anniversaries of the home and foreign missionary societies will be held in the evening. Practically all of the business of the conference has been cleaned up and Monday morning the conference is expected to act upon minor matters of business and to receive the appointments to pastorates, ending the conference.

COURIER JOURNA[illegible]
LOUISVILLE KY
APR 18

CLASH BETWEEN RACES CAUSES NEGROES' ARREST

TROUBLE OCCURRED AT THEATER WHERE RECONSTRUCTION FILM IS SHOWN.

Boston, April 17.—A racial disturbance which developed to-night in the lobby of the Tremont Theater, where a motion picture play dealing with the reconstruction period in the South was presented, resulted in the arrest of William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League; the Rev. Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist church, two other negroes and a white man.

Trotter, who is charged with disturbing the peace, claims he was struck in the face by a policeman. Puller was arrested on the same charge. Trotter said he had decided to go to the theater to-night after receiving a letter from Mayor Curley to the effect that the producers of the play had made changes in the films at the request of persons who sympathized with objections made by negroes who had seen the exhibition.

The trouble followed alleged refusal of the theater to sell tickets to Trotter. The explanation given by the management was that the house was sold out.

Disorders had been anticipated by the police and more than 100 reser[illegible] were near the theater at the [illegible] hour. [illegible] was dem[illegible]

Durin[illegible] Hall [illegible] permitted [illegible] crowded. [illegible] ence recently [illegible] ence re[illegible] when he [illegible] who called upon President Wilson to [illegible] test against segregation of [illegible] employes at Wash[illegible]

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 18 1915

DISCUSS DAYS AFTER THE WAR

Mass Meeting to Take Up Reconstruction Period

Prominent Bostonians, aroused by the attack on the reconstruction legislation for which Massachusetts citizens and statesmen were to a great degree responsible, in the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," have called a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall for Sunday at 3 o'clock, open to the public, at which well known New Englanders and a Southerner, the Hon. Joseph C. Manning of Alabama, will give the correct history of the reconstruction era.

The promoters represent the Abolitionists and their descendants, who on Sunday will give historical data on the course of events in the South after the war, the meeting being held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association.

Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, an authority on reconstruction history, will preside. The Hon. Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature, will tell of conditions from the knowledge of a Southerner on the ground, which will be interesting, as the author and producer of the photo-play are both Southerners. Other speakers will be Rolfe Cobleigh of The Congregationalist, Michael J. Jordan of the United Irish League, William D. Brigham, the Rev. F. H. Rowley of the Humane Society and Dr. A. P. Russell.

RECORD
Philadelphia, Pa.
APR 18 1915

NEGRO BAITER OF PRESIDENT IS ARRESTED IN BOSTON RIOT

Photo-Play Toned to Meet Negroes' Protests Fails to Appease and Outbreak Follows at Theatre.

Boston, April 17.—An attempt by hundreds of negroes tonight to break up the performance of "The Birth of a Nation," a photo-play based on "The Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, resulted in a riot in front of the Tremont Theatre and arrest of four negroes. Among them was William Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, Trotter is the negro whom President Wilson practically ordered out of the White House a short time ago, when he was baiting the President, at a conference with colored leaders, over the alleged discrimination against negro Government employees. Rev. Aaron Fuller, a negro, also was arrested. The police received advance information that the negroes were to make a demonstration at the theatre. Negroes have protested vigorously in the press, as have descendants of the old Massachusetts abolitionist school against the glorifying of the Klu Klux Klan in the film and the unfavorable light in which it puts the negro immediately after the civil war. Mayor Curley toned the film somewhat, but not enough to suit them.

At 7.30 o'clock tonight there were 60 plain-clothes men inthe theatre, and in front of it, along the Boston Commons, were 200 officers in uniform. The management at first refused to sell tickets to negroes, a great number of whom crowded the lobby before the doors were opened. Then tickets were refused everybody and no one was permitted to enter unless he had purchased a ticket in advance. With the superintendent of police in charge the officers started to clear the lobby. There was much jostling and many negroes were handled roughly by the police.

Trotter was arrested at the ticket window when he was demanding vigorously that he be permitted to purchase a ticket. He was charging with disturbing the peace and was led away by a burly sergeant and three police officers to a station several hundred yards away. Several hundred negroes followed, yelling loud protests at his arrest. One plain-clothes man hit him on the jaw while the arrest was being made. The other arrests were made in the melee that came when Trotter started toward the station. According to John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, whose wife was the late Agnes Booth, a relative of John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin, many negroes in the crowd that tried to storm the doors were overheard to say: "The Mayor will not grant us our rights and we propose to take them into our own hands."

A mulatto who had gained entrance unnoticed scattered chemicals that made it necessary to open all the windows in the theatre.

From POST
Address: Boston, Mass.
APR 18 1915

+ + + + + +

At first sight it seems incredible that the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented at the Tremont, should have taken such a wonderful hold on the public. No play of any description has visited Boston in years, if ever before, that has drawn from the outset such vast concourses of people, nor has there ever been such widespread comment. The latter fact is one reason for the immense patronage, for there is scarcely a human being old enough to know anything, but has heard of "The Birth of a Nation," and has been curious to witness it.

But after viewing the performance, quite a few reasons are apparent for its popularity. In the first place it is the acme of motion picture photography up to the present time. The groupings of the various scenes, the training of the participants and the realism of the episodes, are marvellous examples of stage management, while the clearness and lack of flickering in the films, almost make the spectator forget he is regarding a photograph. The scenes portraying the assassination of President Lincoln are, in many respects, the most wonderful, for all the actors, by their facial expression and movements, play a congruous part.

+ + + + + +

I was much interested in Mae Marsh, the little Southern girl who met an untimely death. I am told she is an Irish lass, who never made any especial fame on the stage, but who possessed, so it was discovered, remarkable ability to portray her emotions through her features. Never in my experience have I seen such remarkable facial ability as Miss Marsh displays, and as she is supposed to be young and temperamental, the skill required is much greater. She is the belle of the film, and the really, and perhaps only, pathetic feature of the entire production is her cruel death. I should enjoy witnessing Miss Marsh in a play, but possibly my anticipations would not be realized.

From New York David W. Griffith wired his general manager, J. J. McCarthy, at the Tremont Theatre, that he had started the preparation of new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation" now playing at that house. The new feature will show the progress of the negro race since the Civil war. Astonishing facts and figures will be disclosed concerning negro advancement. The suggestion made by Dr. Charles Fleischer that this work would add to the historical value of "The Birth of a Nation," appealed to Mr. Griffith strongly, and before leaving Boston he decided to carry it out.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 18, 1915

Tremont Theatre

With the Patriots' day matinee tomorrow afternoon, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will start the second week of its engagement at the Tremont Theatre. This great spectacle crowded the theatre at every performance last week, and the advance sale for this week indicates that it will continue to make the same record. Requests from parties of people who desire to attend the play range from veterans of the civil war to school children. The orchestral effects are said to be evan more beautiful than the music as played at the Liberty Theatre, New York. The picture recites most momentous events in American history. Interest is maintained by a romance of sweetness, poignancy and charm. The picture is to be seen every afternoon and evening, the matinee and night performances being exactly alike in all respects.

It is expected to add to the play this week the supplemental feet of film being prepared by Mr. Griffith, showing the progress of the Negro race since reconstruction and thus rounding out the great cycle of [illegible] from slavery until now.

AMERICAN, Boston Mass.
Apr. 18, 1915

Tremont Theatre.

With the Patriots' Day matinee tomorrow afternoon, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will start the second week of its engagement at the Tremont Theatre. The great spectacle was by far the most popular attraction in Boston last week, crowding the Tremont at every performance, and the enormous advance sale for this week indicates that it will continue to make the same record.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 18, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"
Pictures at the Tremont

D. W. Griffith's wonderful motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," has been crowding the Tremont Theatre as it never was before by a production of this character.

The picture recites most momentous events in ..merican history, the part of the great American story which, according to the producer, lends itself best to dramatic picturization. The human interest is maintained by a love romance of poignancy and charm.

"The Birth of a Nation" is on view at the Tremont Theatre every afternoon and evening. It is expected to add to the play this week the supplemental film being prepared by Mr Griffith, showing the progress of the negro race since reconstruction and thus rounding out the great cycle of historical events from slavery until now.

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 18 1915

Tremont Theatre

With the Patriots' Day matinee, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will start the second week of its engagement at the Tremont Theatre. The great spectacle was by far the most popular attraction in Boston last week, crowding the Tremont at every performance, and the enormous advance sale for this week indicates that it will continue to make the same record. Indeed, it is so difficult to satisfy the throngs that seats have been placed on sale four weeks in advance. Requests from parties of people who desire to attend the play are pouring into the management. These range from veterans of the Civil war to school children, and from people in society to people in the humblest ranks. The orchestral effects accompanying "The Birth of a Nation" are said to be even more beautiful than the music as played at the Liberty Theatre, New York. Mr. Arundell, the director, has found the Tremont players singularly capable, and has harmonized their work with unusual skill.

The picture itself recites the most momentous events in American history, the only part of the great American story which, according to the producer, lends itself to the highest drama. "The Birth of a Nation" is on view at the Tremont Theatre every afternoon and evening, the matinee and night performances being exactly alike in all respects.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 18, 1915

MASS MEETING TO PROTEST "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

To protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and to set forth another view of the Reconstruction period, the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, which perpetuates the spirit of northern abolitionism, will have a mass meeting of colored and white citizens at 3 P. M. today in Faneuil Hall.

Frank B. Sanborn of Concord will preside, and the speakers will include Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature; Rolfe Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, Michael J. Jordan of the United Irish League, the Rev. Francis H. Rowley of the Humane Society, Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., and William T. Brigham, secretary of the association.

LYNN (Mass.) TELEGRAM
APRIL 18, 1915

FORBIDS ELKS TO SHOW FILM

Neal Puts Ban on "Birth Of Nation" as Sunday Benefit

Deputy George C. Neal, acting chief of the district police, Friday put the ban on "The Birth of the Nation" as a Sunday attraction, when he disapproved of the presentation of the pictures in this city Sunday night, under the auspices of the Lynn Lodge of Elks.

The district police has the power of censorship over moving picture films which may be produced on Sundays.

Deputy Neal saw the pictures in Boston Wednesday night and yesterday expressed his disapproval of them as a Sunday entertainment in the following letter to the Lynn Elks:

"Your application for my approval of an exhibition of the 'Birth of a Nation' as an entertainment to be given at the Olympia Theatre in Lynn on some evening of the Lord's day, for the benefit of the organization you represent was duly considered.

"I attended an exhibition at Tremont Theatre of the 'Birth of a Nation' and I am satisfied that it is not a fitting production for Sunday entertainment, and I therefore shall be obliged to disapprove of its exhibition on the Lord's Day in the State of Massachusetts.

"Your object is a good and a very worthy one, but I see no way of helping you out, not, at least, with this kind of an entertainment."

In reference to the Lynn episode, "The Birth of a Nation" manager said last night:

"We knew that a film of the Civil War, with its representation of sudden deaths and casualties, could not be presented Sundays in this state, and have made no attempt to present it. However, the request came from Lynn for our free presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" for a charitable object, and imagining there would be no objection we accorded to the request. We are glad now to withdraw the proffer, though we regret that our Lynn friends will be unable to profit their benefit funds through our agency."

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 18, 1915

NEGROES ARRESTED

RIOT AT BOSTON THEATER

OBJECTED TO RACE PICTURES

Charge That Tickets Were Sold Only to White People—William M. Trotter Taken Into Custody.

Special Dispatch to The Republican.

Boston, Saturday, April 17.

Hundreds of negroes stormed the Tremont theater tonight in an endeavor to gain admission to the performance of "The birth of a nation," the photoplay based on "The Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, over which there has been much protest because of the alleged unfavorable representations of Negroes in the South immediately after the war.

Admission to the theater was refused to all Negroes, and there ensued a melee with the police, during which four Negroes were arrested. Among them was William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the national equal rights league, and editor of the Gaurdian, who was censured by President Wilson a short time ago when he was leading a delegation of Negroes to protest against alleged discrimination against colored government employes. The delegation was informed at that time that Trotter could not come to the White House again. The others arrested were Aaron W. Fuller, pastor of the People's Baptist church; Joseph Gould and Fred Banks. Gould was held on the charge of assaulting an officer and the other three for disturbing the peace. All were released on bail. A white man was also arrested.

The police had received advance information of the demonstration and at 7.30 o'clock there were 600 plain clothes men in the lobby and in the alleys off Avery and Tremont streets around the theater. Outside were 200 officers in uniform, who lined both sides of the street from Avery to Boylston streets. John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theater, whose wife was the late Agnes Booth of the famous Booth family that included John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin, claims to have heard Negroes in the lobby exclaim: "The mayor wouldn't give us our rights, and we will take the law into our own hands."

With Superintendent of Police Crowley in personal charge, the police cleared the lobby. Trotter was arrested at the ticket window when he was demanding that he be sold a ticket. He claims that an officer in plain clothes hit him on the jaw. A burly sergeant and a patrolman literally dragged him to the Lagrange-street station. Hundreds of Negroes followed shouting and many whites from curiosity. Trotter protested that he would go along willingly if the police would not hurt his wrists. There was great excitement between Avery and Tremont streets and a crowd of about 5000 gathered. The other arrests were made in front of the theater and in the lobby.

Chemical Stench in the Theater.

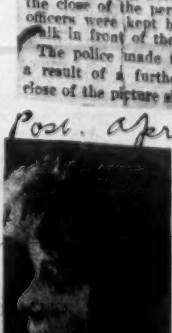
Meanwhile the sale of all tickets to the performance was stopped. Admission was granted only to those who had bought tickets in advance. The production was given in full to an audience that only half-filled the house and somebody let loose chemicals that made the atmosphere of the theater unbearable. All the windows had to be opened.

Trotter gave this version of his arrest: "I received to-day a letter from Mayor Curley saying that the film of 'The birth of a nation' had been altered so that the objectionable features were removed. To satisfy myself I went to the theater and tried to buy a ticket. Every Negro there was refused a ticket and at least one white man told me that he had bought a ticket and that while colored men were refused admission, whites were told they could go in. I was creating no disturbance. The seller told me there were no tickets for sale and I asked why there were no signs up to that effect. Then an officer hit me on the jaw. They dragged me to the station, though I would have gone without protest."

The Negroes were angry, but no threats of violence were heard. Most of the remarks were denunciations of the police and references to Wendell Phillips and William Lloyd Garrison. The excitement continued along Tremont street until after the close of the performance and the 200 officers were kept busy clearing the sidewalk in front of the theater.

The police made three more arrests as a result of a further disturbance at the close of the picture show.

Post. Apr. 18, 1915.



Mae Marsh.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
APR 18 1915

MOVING PICTURES

DUSTIN FARNUM IN "CAPTAIN COURTESY" BOSWORTH FILM SHOWN AT THE PARK.

SCENE SHOWING WHERE THE MOTHER DISCOVERS HER SOLDIER BOY IN HOSPITAL. SEEN IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE TREMONT.

MAE MARSH, STAR IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

SCENE SHOWING PRESIDENT LINCOLN IN THE BOX AT FORD'S THEATRE, WASHINGTON, SHOWN IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE TREMONT.

Griffith Making United States History Live in "Birth of a Nation."

By HARLOW HARE.

David W. Griffith's most extraordinary achievement with his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—slavery, the war of secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of reconstruction, and the reconciliation of the North and the South.

These things, it would have seemed a year ago, were beyond the scope of the motion picture camera. But the master producer has successfully combined, in 12,000 feet of celluloid, a thrilling, consecutive presentation of national greatness with a vital and human love story. According to experts who have viewed the work, Griffith has not only surpassed in many ways the art of the "indoor" theatre, but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old-fashioned history or historical novel. A very eminent public man has nicknamed it "history by lightning."

Eighteen thousand people were employed in taking the historical pictures. One sees Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for troops, the battles of the conflict, Sherman's march, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the South in the throes of change, the carpetbaggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the K. K. K.

Parties of war veterans and sons of veterans are coming in great numbers to the Tremont. It is difficult for many of them to refrain from shouting the old war-cries or from shuffling the feet to the rhythm of the martial music. Scenes in the latter half of the picture are so skilfully managed, the interest is so tensely maintained, that often the applause is practically continuous for half to three-quarters of an hour.

"Cabiria" and "Quo Vadis?" marked great steps forward in the screen drama. "The Birth of a Nation" points a still more wonderful development. The epic method of narration has been adopted. Enormous ranges of time and space are covered. All the arts contribute to the spectacular realization of poetry, history and romance. In the 5,000 scenes of the picture there are said to be 200,000 historical details. Besides the achievement of the picture itself, the exhibition of it employs 100 flesh and blood helpers at each performance.

Theatrical producers and observers are wondering what will be the next evolution. Will the motion picture replace the text book in the public schools? Will the Walter Scotts and the W. M. Thackerays of the future do pictures instead of novels? Will the historian be replaced by the camera man, and the still-life painter by one who, like Griffith, can turn out hundreds of Rembrandt, Corot and Turner-like scenes in an evening's entertainment?

Some of these queries seem daring now, even grotesque. Yet, in view of what is happening around us, it is hard—nay, impossible—to set any limits to the future achievements of the motion pictures.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 18 1915

An article in the May Green Book Magazine concerning David W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," tells many interesting stories of the methods he uses to make players appearing before the camera rise to the requisite hights of dramatic emotion. In the early days of Mary Pickford's career, when she was engaged to her present husband, Owen Moore, who was working with her in Biograph productions, Director Griffith would accuse her fiance of a lack of intelligence. Miss Pickford, you must remember, was only a child—just 16 years old. She would lose her temper and become angry. Then Griffith would turn quickly to the camera man and whisper, "Go ahead! Grind!" The result was always an exhibition of temperament on the part of "Little Mary" that exactly fitted the character she was portraying.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) POST
APRIL 18, 1915

RACE RIOT AT THEATER

Hundreds of Colored Men Try to Invade Boston Film Show.

W. M. TROTTER IS ARRESTED

Colored Editor Whom Wilson Practically Ordered From White House After Clash in Interview Charged With Disturbing the Peace—Police Reserves Clear Lobby at "Birth of a Nation," Photo Drama.

Special to The Washington Post.

Boston, April 17.—An attempt by hundreds of colored men tonight to break up the performance of "The Birth of a Nation," a photoplay based on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, resulted in a riot in front of the Tremont Theater and five arrests. Among those arrested was William Munroe Trotter, colored, editor of the Guardian, a paper. Trotter is the man whom President Wilson practically ordered out of the White House a short while ago when he was baiting the President at a conference with colored leaders over alleged discrimination against colored government employes. The Rev. Aaron Fuller, colored, was also arrested, as were two other colored men and one white man.

260 Policemen on Guard.

The police had received advance information that colored men were to make a demonstration tonight at the theater. Colored men have protested vigorously in the press, as have descendants of [illegible] old Massachusetts abolitionists, against the picture. [illegible] in the film. [illegible] who [illegible] when he [illegible] who called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of [illegible] employes at Washington.

At 7:30 tonight there were 40 police in plain clothes in the theater and in uniform along Boston Common in front of the theater. The manager at first refused to sell tickets to colored men, a great number of whom crowded the lobby before the doors were opened. Then tickets were refused to everybody and no one was permitted to enter unless he had purchased a ticket in advance.

Clear Crowd From Lobby.

With the superintendent of police in charge, the officers started to clear the lobby. There was much jostling and many colored men were handled roughly by the police.

Trotter was arrested at the window, when he was denied admission, after he had been permitted to buy a ticket. He was [illegible] ence recently between a committee of negroes who called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of [illegible] employes at Washington.

PUBLIC LEDGER
Philadelphia, Pa.
APR 18 1915

RACE-PROBLEM PHOTOPLAY MAKES TROUBLE IN BOSTON

500 Negroes Demand Admission—Six Arrests Follow

BOSTON, April 17.—The trouble threatened ever since the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," began its engagement at the Tremont Theatre culminated tonight when 500 negroes, headed by William Monroe Trotter, who made what was called an insulting address to President Wilson at the White House not long ago, gathered in a body and tried to buy tickets. When the management declared the house was sold out, Trotter and his friends, among whom were several white men, assumed such an attitude that the manager, Mr. Schoeffel, called in the police, and a squad of 100, headed by Superintendent Crowley in person, hurried to the theatre in automobiles and cleared the lobby.

Six arrests were made, Trotter, the Rev. R. W. Fuller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church; John Hines, and two other negroes, and Joseph Gould, a white man.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 18 1915

David W. Griffith returned to New York from Boston last week to confer with Harry E. Aitken on the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" in London and Chicago. The London engagement will open the latter part of May at the Globe Theatre. The Chicago engagement will be played at the Western city's most fashionable playhouse, the Illinois Theatre. At the end of the war Messrs Aitken and Griffith purpose introducing to Europe the same methods that have made the American motion picture art the greatest in the world. After a flying trip across the Continent to Los Angeles, Mr. Griffith will return East by way of Chicago for that premiere and will then go to England.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 18, 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" CAUSES NEAR-RIOT

Alleged Plot to Destroy Film Results In Wild Scenes and 11 Arrests.

□ □

Crowds Keep 260 Policemen Busy—Thousands Watch the Row From Street.

REV AARON W. PULLER,
Colored Minister Arrested.

□ □

Rev Dr Puller, W. M. Trotter And One White Man Among Those in Custody.

□ □

NEGROES AND WHITES CLASH

Four of the Latter Are Slashed.

Row on Shawmut av Follows the Theatre Demonstration.

Three Colored Men Are Taken Into Custody.

Three colored men, bound to their Roxbury homes after the Tremont Theatre disturbance of last evening, fell in with a group of white men in front of 67 Shawmut av early this morning.

The negroes are now under arrest, and the white men were sent to the City Hospital.

The negroes, all charged with assault with knives, gave their names as William Frye, 47, of 11 Fairweather st, Roxbury; James E. Stewart, 32, single, of 84 Ruggles st, Roxbury, and David Malcom, 26, of 63 Ruggles st, Roxbury. When Frye was searched a 38-caliber revolver was found on him.

Those injured are Joseph Cohen, 21, of 33 Compton st, South End, incised wound of the lower lip; Abraham Rosenberg, 22, single, of 151 Talbot av, Dorchester, lacerated wound of the arms, muscles severed; his younger brother, Jacob Rosenberg, same address, torn clothing and slight cuts, and Charles E. Sullivan, 27, married, 47 Roxbury st, Roxbury, scalp wounds and abrasions of head and body. All were treated as out patients.

The negroes were arrested by patrolmen Leary and Trainor of the East Dedham-st Station. The same ambulance which carried the three to the station took the others to the City Hospital where they were treated as out-patients.

Clash Comes When Ticket Sale Ends.

Outbreak Is Culmination of Long Agitation Over Play.

It was with disturbance and arrests before it, egg-throwing and the explosion of "stinkpots" during the performance, and more disturbance and arrests at its close that "The Birth of a Nation," the photo-play of the Reconstruction period, was produced last night at the Tremont Theatre.

Since its opening the colored population of Boston had vainly protested against the play. Last night they gave free vent to their feelings.

Of the 11 persons arrested during the evening only one was a white man. The others were colored, two women and eight men, the latter including two of the local colored leaders, Rev Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church in the South End, and William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League.

Negro Plot Charged.

As a racial demonstration probably nothing like it has been seen in Boston since before the Civil War. There was no bloodshed, to be sure, and little actual violence, but without the presence of 61 policemen in the theatre and 200 outside it is hard to tell what might have happened.

The theatre management asserts that there was an organized plot to fill the house with negroes, destroy the films and stop the play, and that only by the help of the large force of police was this prevented.

This charge is denied by the negro leaders arrested. That the demonstration was a prearranged thing, however, is suggested by William D. Brigham of Dorchester, one of the leading Boston white champions of the colored race.

As early as 6 o'clock, too, a colored woman telephoned to the Globe to advise that a reporter be sent to the theatre, as "there might be something interesting happen."

Crowds Defy Police.

The trouble in the lobby before the play, when a crowd of negroes and whites were clamoring for tickets that were refused; the struggles of the police details to clear the premises and preserve order, and the later demonstration when the performance was over, gave Boston one of the most exciting free shows it has known in years.

All the great, uneasy Saturday night crowd seemed to congregate about the theatre. From before 7:30, when the trouble began, until after 11:30 they stood about there by the thousands, defying the efforts of the officers to make them "move on."

On Tremont st, from Boylston to Mason sts, wherever the officers would let them stand, and on Avery st and the Common, they were ranked as densely as ever they pressed about a bulletin board for a World Championship game. And as time passed and the unruly element increased, they became the more turbulent.

Story in Three Parts.

The story is really in three parts: the trouble in the lobby before the play, when four were arrested; the course of the performance, with one eviction and an arrest inside and another outside the theatre, and the close of the play, with five arrests outside the theatre.

The whole affair came as the culmination of a fortnight of agitation by the colored people of Boston and their friends against the production of this play, which, they contended, was not only an insult to the colored race, but was an incentive to race hatred and to lawlessness.

Meetings had been held, protests voiced, appeals made to the Mayor and other authorities, but the play continued.

Yesterday, according to the theater management, word was learned of a plot to pack the theater with negroes, seize and destroy the films, which are kept in the operating box at the back of the orchestra, and stop the play by force.

At each performance in addition to the regular police detail the management has had at its own expense the services of 10 police officers and a sergeant scattered about the house in plain clothes to prevent trouble.

Police in Strategic Positions.

Last night, however, this plain clothes force was increased to 40. The front row of the orchestra was filled with policemen, so that nobody from the house could reach the stage.

A strong guard also was bunched about the operating booth, and other officers guarded the wires leading from that booth down into the cellar.

Individual officers were scattered through the orchestra, the balcony and the reserved section of the gallery. The rush seats in the gallery had not been put on sale, so as to avoid trouble in that quarter.

In addition to all these plain clothes men and a uniformed detail on Tremont and Avery sts outside the theatre, arrangements had been made with Supt Crowley to have 100 men at the Lagrange-st Station, ready for call at 8 o'clock if needed.

Even before 8 o'clock the need became evident, for, by the management's account, it was shortly before 7:30 that there appeared a large body of colored men led by William Munroe Trotter.

WILLIAM MONROE TROTTER,
Negro Leader Who Was Among Those Who Fell Into the Hands of the Police.

The police reserves, led by Capt James Canney in person, soon arrived, and time after time they cleared the lobby out and restored order. At last, about 8 o'clock, they formed a cordon across the entrance to the lobby and refused to let any person pass, even the reporters.

Sergt Martin King was taking care of the lobby detail, so it was he who in three of the four cases made the complaint. Trotter and Puller, according to the police, were ringleaders among the negroes, but other arrests might have been made, for the indignation was expressed in vehement language and only the very visible presence of so many policemen apparently prevented serious trouble.

Record of Early Arrests.

The record of the arrests at this time, with the fifth that shortly followed, is as follows:

7:55 p m, Joseph Gould, white, 23, single, of Norwood. Arrested for assault and battery on patrolman William Hartigan, who was in uniform, on complaint of Hartigan.

8 p m, William Munroe Trotter, colored, 43, married, of 97 Bawyer av, Dorchester. Arrested for disturbing the peace on complaint of Sergt Martin King.

8:45 p m, John Hines, colored, 20, married, of 8 Concord sq, South End, arrested for sauntering and loitering on complaint of Sergt Oscar W. Burgess.

All five were taken to the Lagrange-st Station, where they were promptly bailed in turn by Joshua A. Crawford, a colored bail commissioner: Gould in $500, Rev Mr Puller and Trotter in $30 each, and Banks and Hines in $20 each.

Trotter Denies He Leads Mob.

After the lobby was cleared and the heat of the fray had cooled a bit, Trotter acted as the spokesman of his party and gave his version of the matter.

He had come to the theatre, he said, not as the head of a mob, but alone and in all good faith to see whether as, according to a letter received from Mayor Curley, certain portions of the play had been eliminated. This letter follows:

"City of Boston, Office of the Mayor,
"April 16, 1915.

"William M. Trotter, Esq, 40 Cornhill, Boston, Mass:

"My Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your communication of recent date, and replying thereto will state that I have taken up not only the request made by you but by practically every other person opposed to the presentation of the photo-play, The Birth of a Nation, and the eliminations originally requested by me have been assented to.

"I am perfectly agreeable to doing anything that the law permits of my doing, and there is no way legally, as I have previously pointed out to you and as the corporation counsel of Boston has informed me, that I can do more than has been done with reference to this production until such time as the State Legislature changes the existing law. Sincerely yours,

"James M. Curley, Mayor."

Trotter Attacks the Play.

Whatever has been done on that point Mr Trotter added, other parts to which he had objected, and the elimination of which he had requested, had been enlarged rather than reduced.

"It is a rebel play," he declared angrily, "an incentive to great racial hatred here in Boston. It will make white women afraid of negroes and will have white men all stirred up on that account. If there is any lynching here in Boston, Mayor Curley will be responsible."

He noted, too, the irony of fate in that this should have occurred just across from the monument to Crispus Attucks, the negro killed in the Boston Massacre.

However many negroes might have been in the lobby, he asserted, he had come to the theatre alone, and knew of no plot and did not believe there was any.

He had got in the line for the ticket window, had been put out of it by the police, and had returned to the line only again to be ejected. Yet, he said, while negroes were refused tickets, he saw a white man receive and pay for three. The man then waved them in the air and said: "I've got three, you colored people, and if you want me to get more, I'll do it."

It was for this that he charged the management with racial discrimination in the sale of seats.

He said further that, while in line, he was struck on the jaw by a white man whom he supposed to be a civilian, but who proved to be patrolman Dennis Harrington of the Lagrange-st Station, dressed in plain clothes.

Trouble Inside the Theatre.

In the theatre, meanwhile, although the play progressed without interruption, there was no little disorder, spattering out here and there, but never making much headway because of the presence of the police.

It was shortly after 12 o'clock that Charles P. Ray, colored, 24, of 215 Tremont st, South End, sitting in about the 10th row of the orchestra, spattered a very ancient egg by a well-directed shot over the exact middle of the white screen. He was promptly arrested by patrolman Crawford, one of the plain-clothes men, on the charge of malicious mischief.

In several parts of the house "stink pots" were exploded, and there was occasional hissing and other demonstration, usually promptly suppressed.

One man, accused of exploding a "stink pot," was evicted from the first balcony. He contended that he had bought his ticket from some one else, and he was given back a dollar for his seat and let go.

The presence of the officers in plain clothes, however, kept most of the 200 odd colored men and women in the house from imitating him, but when the curtain was rung down and the audience rose to go out the confusion served to cover the explosion of a score of the ill-smelling things, and women were forced to press handkerchiefs to their noses to keep from choking.

Colored Women Are Active.

It was after 11 o'clock then, but the crowd outside had not lessened in numbers, merely changed somewhat in composition, and the usual efforts of Saturday night became more apparent.

The colored members of the audience joined their fellows outside and, feeling themselves the center of attraction, determined to make the most of it, so that the police had to keep after them all the time to clear the street.

Many negro women were among the more active, possibly believing themselves more secure from arrest, and one pair in particular were especially troublesome.

One of them, Mrs Clara Forsky, 23, of 19 Phillips st, West End, at last got herself arrested for assault on an officer, and in the trouble that followed three more negroes were arrested, charged with attempting to rescue the prisoner.

These three are: Mrs Luginia Foster, 23, of 29 Grove st, West End; Stephen Massey, 32, of Cambridge, and James T. Bivens, 24 also of Cambridge. About the same time James L. Dunn colored, 60 of West Newton, was arrested for profanity. Like all the others, these were soon bailed.

The persistent, tireless work of the great number of officers—the first 100 having been later supplemented by reserves—did great credit to Capt Canney and Supt Michael H. Crowley, who supervised their work in person. With all the makings of a real race riot at hand, serious trouble was averted, and at last the crowd died away.

All through the night, however, a police guard was maintained outside and inside the theatre, to prevent any breaking of windows or an attack on the films. Today, too, a special police detail will probably be provided for the indignation meeting in Faneuil Hall, at which most of the negroes last night seemed to intend to be present.

Statement by Theatre Manager.

The theatre management last night gave out the following statement:

"The management of the Tremont Theatre was informed late this afternoon of a plan arranged by a certain gang of colored men to raid the theatre and destroy the picture and booth. In pursuance of this information the management arranged with Supt of Police Michael H. Crowley for police protection.

"About 7:20 p m a large crowd of colored men and women gathered outside the doors of the theatre on Tremont st. The box office was then closed and no seats were sold to anyone. Immediately thereafter the lobby of the theatre was filled with several hundred colored people, led by a man we art told, who was Munroe Trotter.

"They were informed by the management that the box office was closed and that there were no further tickets for sale. Several colored men then addressed the crowd and advised them that as the authorities would not stop the show they had sufficient force to do so and they had better take the law into their own hands.

"Everything was in confusion when a force of police came out and cleared the lobby, arresting some of the more boisterous ones. All during the evening numbers of these people remained parading before the theatre, but police protection was sufficient to keep order as far as we know.

"The management regrets that this incident has occurred, but feels that the men and women engaged in the attempt to destroy property and disturb the performance are not representative of the colored people of Boston. That there was not serious damage to property and perhaps injury to our patrons we lay entirely to the efficient work and good judgment of the Superintendent of Police and the officers and men under his command.

"John B. Schoeffel,
"Manager Tremont Theatre."

Was It All Prearranged?

William D. Brigham of 41 Wheatland st, Dorchester, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and member of the National Independent Voters' League, was asked late last night whether the demonstration was prearranged or not.

"You can see for yourself," he said. "I don't think any formal vote was taken, but the word easy have been passed along.

"Such a mild demonstration as this, where no clubs were drawn and nobody was injured, is necessary to impress on the people of Boston that this show is objectionable to the colored people who live here and who must be protected."

Mr Brigham said he was not at the show last evening, but that on a previous evening, when he did go, he had witnessed discrimination in the sale of tickets. A negro in front of him, he said, was told there were only 25 seats left, although he was able to buy 75-cent seats.

...lobe, apr 18, 1915

...Tells His Story.

...Aaron W. Puller, who is pastor ...People's Baptist Church, at Tre...

...and Camden sts, South End, was ...y a reporter at his home at 57 ...er st, Roxbury, late last night. ...eclared that he was one of the ...for peace in the trouble which ...over showing the photo ...fe called attention to his atti... peace at the protest meeting ...week in his church, when he ...those present to be moderate ...ir remarks and criticism.

Dr Puller said he came to Boston Tuskegee, Ala., about three years Soon after he became minister at alvary Baptist Church, Waltham d Shawmut av, South End. Some ...go the latter church was ...d with St Paul's Baptist Church, ...e became pastor of the united con...tions.

...a representative of the local col... people, he said, he had attended ...conferences at the Mayor's office ...erning the film and went to the ...tre last night for the purpose of ...ing whether the objectionable part ...e film had been stricken out.

...e minister said: "I wanted a peace... settlement of the matter and was ...ious for it. I was one of those who ...made plans for a public protest ...eting on Boston Common Monday, ...we gave up this idea because I ...red such a demonstration might in... violence.

When I stepped up to the box office the theatre last night the man with... said: 'There are no tickets to be ...d.' I stood by a moment and while ...was there I saw that the man in the ...x office refused to sell a white woman ...ticket.

...ized by the Police.

"I started to leave the lobby, and ...hen nearing the street I stumbled. A ...policeman gave me a slight shove which ...astened me to the sidewalk. Outside ...ere about 25 other colored people, all ...of the better class. Dr Thornton, who ...ad a ticket in his possession and who ...was about to go in with me, was pushed ...out when I was. While we were stand... ...g there in the street along came Dr ...altimore, another prominent colored ...an, who said to us, 'They are selling ...kets.'

"I tried to reason with one of the po...emen so that the people might go ...way in a peaceful manner. He would ...t listen to me, and then I talked to a ...rgeant on duty there. A crowd gath...ed around me, and presently I was ...ruck on the side of the head by one ...the officers, I believe. There was ...reat confusion and I heard the ser...ant, I believe, say, 'Lock him up.' ...nstantly two policemen grabbed me ...bout the throat and began choking ...two others held my arms and a ...th had a hold on my coat collar. In ...e scuffle my bag containing my Bible, ...nuscript and letters was lost. The ...cers hustled me toward the station ...se and a great crowd of white peo... followed, crying out vengeance.

...was immediately bailed and had a ...talk with my attorney. I have no ...for either the white or the black ...will stir up trouble. I advocate ...e and quietness; I don't believe in ...tting fire. Mayor Curley has treated ...colored people in an admirable man... and I have the greatest faith in ...authorities. I am still anxious to ...perate with the authorities in keep... peace. I hope the play will ...ped. It is unfortunate that this ...g should happen. I am not out for ...rgeance, I am out for victory; ...ant protection."

Albany, N.Y. Argus
Apr. 18, 1915.

...RACIAL WAR IN A BOSTON PLAYHOUSE

...GROES IN TROUBLE AT MO... ...TION PICTURE SHOW OF RE... CONSTRUCTION DAYS.

...liam Munroe Trotter, Pastor A. W. ...ller, Two Other Negroes and a White Man Arrested — Were Refused Tickets to Show.

...ston, Mass., April 17.—A racial dis... ...ance, which developed to-night in ...lobby of the Tremont theatre, ...a motion picture play, dealing ...the reconstruction period in the ...south presented, resulted in the ...of William Munroe Trotter, sec... ...of the National Equal Rights ...gue; Aaron W. Puller, pastor ...People's Baptist church, two ...negroes and a white man.

...ter, who is charged with dis... ...g the peace, claims he was ...n in the face by a policeman, ...r was arrested on the same ...e. Trotter said he had decided to ...the theatre to-night after re... ...a letter from Mayor Curley to ...that the producers of the ...had made changes in the films at ...uest of people who sympathized ...objections made by negroes who ...seen the exhibition.

...alleged refusal of the theatre to ...to Trotter precipitated the ...explanation given by the ...was that the house was ...

...Trotter came into prominence ...when he headed a committee ...who called upon President ...to protest against segregation ...ment employes at Washing...

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
APRIL 18, 1915

BOSTON RIOT OVER FILM PRODUCTION

Four Negroes Arrested in Demonstration Against "Birth of a Nation."

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 17—An attempt by hundreds of Negroes tonight to break up the performance of "The Birth of a Nation," a photo-play based on "The Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, resulted in a riot in front of the Tremont Theater and the arrest of four Negroes. Among them was William Monroe Trotter, editor of The Guardian. Trotter is the Negro President Wilson practically ordered out of the White House a short while ago when he was hitting the President at a conference with colored leaders over the alleged discrimination against Negro government employes. Rev. Aaron Fuller, a Negro, was also arrested.

The police had received advance information that Negroes were to make a demonstration tonight at the theater. Negroes have protested vigorously in the press, as have descendants of the old Massachusetts abolition school against the glorifying of the Ku Klux Klan in the film and the unfavorable light in which it presents the Negroes of the period immediately after the Civil War. Mayor Curley toned down the film somewhat, but not enough to suit them. At 7.30 o'clock tonight there were present 60 plain clothes men in the theater and 200 officers in uniform along Boston Common in front of the theater. The management at first refused to sell tickets to Negroes, a great number of whom crowded the lobby before the doors were opened. Then tickets were refused everybody and no one was permitted to enter unless he had purchased a ticket in advance with the superintendent of police in charge the officers started to clear the lobby. There was much jostling and many Negroes were handled roughly by the police.

Trotter was arrested at the ticket window when he was demanding vigorously that he be permitted to purchase a ticket. He was charged with disturbing the peace and was led by a burly sergeant and three police officers to a station several hundred yards away. Several hundred Negroes followed, yelling loud protests at his arrest. One plain clothes man hit him on the jaw while the arrest was being made. The other arrests were made in the melee that came when Trotter started toward the station. According to John R. Schoeffel, manager of the theater, whose wife was the late Agnes Booth, relative of John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin, many Negroes in the crowd that tried to storm the doors were overheard to say: "The Mayor will not grant us our rights and we propose to take them into our own hands." A mulatto who had gained entrance unnoticed, scattered chemicals that made it necessary to open all the windows. Fuller, the Negro minister, pastor of the People's Baptist Temple, claims to have been beaten by six policemen. He, like Trotter, was arrested for disturbing the peace when he was demanding that he be sold a ticket.

Not since antebellum days has Boston been so stirred up over the Negro question as it has been over "The Birth of a Nation." Moorfield Storey, E. A. Pillsbury and other white leaders, have written to the newspapers denouncing the photo-play. Only one paper has published the letters, the others, receiving heavy advertising. The management has advertised the approval given to the film by Congressman Kitchin and other Southern leaders.

Before the play came here the Mayor was asked by Negroes to suppress it. He refused, but had certain portions that he considered immodest, such as a Negro chasing a white girl into her boudoir, eliminated. Yesterday the State police refused to permit Sunday exhibitions of the film and the Negroes intended tonight to impress the Mayor by "booing" the performance.

Excitement continued on Boston Common in front of the theater until a late hour tonight and hundreds of officers were kept busy making Negroes and curious whites move on. After the performance there was another riot, in which Negro women vied with the men in shouting at the police and jostling. During the performance two men, whites, were ejected for [illegible] at the screen. Policemen lined the boxes and the aisles.

REPUBLICAN
Springfield, Mass.
APR 18 1915

APPOINTMENTS ARE DUE

AT METHODIST CONFERENCE

MAY BE KNOWN TO-MORROW

Rev J. M. Gage of Chicopee Falls Reads Two Reports — Women's Missionary Society Anniversary.

Special Dispatch to The Republican.

BOSTON, Saturday, April 17.

The bishop is hustling the business of the conference through and the indications are that the appointments may be received on Monday morning. Unless some laymen appear and by their persuasions overturn the present plans, the appointments as they are now on the district superintendents' lists will stand. Just what that list is, of course, is not known to the public. Representatives from various churches know concerning their respective churches; and most ministers know where they are slated; but everyone is keeping still. Nor is Bishop Quayle a man who is easily overpersuaded.

The bishop in the devotional service commented on Thomas, absent and present. After the reading of the minutes the bishop called on the preachers in charge on the Boston and Lynn districts; the majority of these were not in the room when their names were called; the occasion was used by the bishop to exhort the brethren to be promptly on time.

The matter of receiving young preachers into the conference was taken up; the committee recommending that nine be received into the conference on trial and it was voted. The nine men included two who are to go to the foreign field, Henry S. Leitzel and M. A. Clare. The other seven are as follows: H. A. Hansen, who has been supplying at Southville; Thomas F. Johnstone, who is at Easthampton; Raymond A. Withey of Swampscott; Wallace E. Hayes; Arthur A. Pitman; Horatio S. Putnam and R. E. Miller. Those who are this year received into full membership number but two: Constantine M. Panunzio of Amherst and Wylie C. Hansen. At 10.30 the bishop gave his charge to these men as they were formally received into full membership. In his running commentary on the disciplinary questions he gave many helpful suggestions. He began with "Don't go into debt," and cautioned the preachers to so pay as they go that bystanders shall never question their honesty. He requested them to not preach on tobacco, but merely keep from using it for decency's sake.

He described Christian perfection as the living the life of love up to the limit and up to date. "Live it," said the bishop, "but do not talk much about it." In asking the young men if they would be loyal to Methodist doctrine and polity, he said, "If you want to be a Congregationalist or a Baptist or a Presbyterian, go and be one; but do not be one and seek to remain a Methodist. Methodism does not know any "call" from a church, nor an "accepting an invitation." Yet many try to have the appointments all made weeks before the bishop arrives.

He further cautioned the preachers to be diligent, be punctual, not to waste time and opportunity; to train the children and not think it a small task; to visit from house to house and not to be ever discouraged.

The bishop then gave an address to the congregation on "The contribution of Greece and Palestine to civilization." He described the seven great contributions of logic, esthetics, sculpture, architecture, eloquence, literature and philosophy, showing that all these came from Greece; they were the inventors, all others have merely followed in their train. But over against this Palestine his given us individualism, democracy, the family, ethics, religion, the Bible and Christ.

Greece never taught individuality, while the Hebrews always insisted on the responsibility of each man. I had no use for a king; thank God for the democracy of America, learned from the democracy of Palestine. I am glad that my father and mother came from a foreign land years ago, even though they came in the steerage. Greece fell because they had no place for the wife; the family life came from Palestine; ethics is better than esthetics; the only religion worth while is that that came from Palestine. The Bible is a lamp to our feet that helps us to live aright. And for power to go even to the end and through the dark valley, we have Jesus Christ.

Rev W. J. King of the Fourth church in Boston, attended by Negroes, presented a resolution which created much enthusiasm and was unanimously voted. It was as follows: "Resolved that we urgently protest against the exhibition in the moving picture theater of the play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' This play is a gross and demoralizing misrepresentation of the colored population of our country, untrue in fact, cruel in spirit, fruitful of race prejudice, demoralizing to whites and blacks alike, and dangerous to the public welfare." Rev Dr Howard Russell of the antisaloon league gave a short address.

A report by Rev J. M. Gage of Chicopee Falls, advocating a better place of constituting the committees that continue from year to year by replacing each year at least one-third of the members on each such committee, elicited much discussion, but was passed. Mr Gage also read a report pledging the conference to a better support of certain country charges through the sustentation fund. Rev Dr V. A. Cooper was instantly on guard lest the rights of the old preachers should not be jeopardized, but the conference was heartily with him. There was, however, no danger, for the committee had already safeguarded those interests.

Rev Dr Wilson of the church temperance society told of the great successes recently achieved. Rev Dr C. F. Rice gave a report on the federation of churches. Rev Dr Samuel W. Irwin, principal of East Greenwich academy, told of the work of that institution. Rev Dr L. H. Murlin spoke of Boston university, which in the past four years has increased in enrolment from less than 1400 to over 3000. He also announced as the motto of Boston university the Indian word "Tuckabachee," which means "add to and stick together."

In the afternoon at 2 o'clock was the anniversary of the women's foreign missionary society, Mrs H. L. Wriston presiding. Miss Laura M. White, a missionary from China, delivered the address. At 3 o'clock was the anniversary of the women's home missionary society, Mrs O. H. Durrell presided, the address being by Mrs May Leonard Woodruff. At 3.30 the bishop met the candidates for ordination. At 4 o'clock there was a reception tendered to the wives and daughters of the ministers of the conference. The hostesses were Mrs L. H. Murlin, Mrs Charles Parkhurst, Mrs E. C. E. Dorion, Mrs H. L. Wriston, Mrs E. J. Helms, Mrs A. H. Nazarian, Mrs C. C. P. Hiller, Mrs Kelley Jenness, Mrs W. M. Gilbert and Mrs Dillon Bronson. In the evening the conference temperance society observed its anniversary, the address being given by Rev Sam Small of Georgia.

At 8 o'clock at the anniversary of the freedmen's aid society, Rev P. J. Maneety gave the address.

Sunday at 9 will be held the love feast; at 10.30 sermon by the bishop; at 2.30 ordination of deacons and elders. In the evening will be the services of the missionary societies, with addresses by Rev Dr Freeman D. Bovard and W. F. Oldham. The conference will adjourn Monday, probably by noontime.

Tribune Bay City, Mich
Apr 18, 1915

MOVIES CAUSE NEAR RACE RIOT

SHOWING OF RECONSTRUCTION PICTURE IN BOSTON RESULTS IN ARRESTS.

(By Associated Press.)

BOSTON, April 17.—A racial disturbance which developed tonight in the lobby of the Tremont theater, where a motion picture play dealing with the reconstruction period in the south was presented, resulted in the arrest of Wm. Munroe Trotter secretary of the National Equal Rights league; Rev. Aaron W. Pulles, pastor of the People's Baptist church, two other negroes and a white man.

Trotter, who is charged with disturbing the peace, claims he was struck in the face by a policeman. Pulles was arrested on the same charge.

The trouble followed alleged refusal of the theater to sell tickets to Trotter. The explanation given by the management was that the house was sold out.

Disorders had been anticipated by the police and more than 100 reserves were near the theater at the opening hour.

Hundreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont street, between files of police reserves, or clustered on Boston common until dispersed.

Trotter came into prominence recently when he headed a committee of negroes who called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of department employes at Washington.

Evening
MOBILE, ALA.
APR 18 1915

TROTTER CAUSES BOSTON RACE TILT

Negro Who Insulted President Arrested In Demonstration.

BOSTON, April 17.—A racial disturbance which developed tonight in the lobby of the Tremont Theater, where a motion picture play dealing with the reconstruction period in the south was presented, resulted in the arrest of William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League; Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, two other negroes and a white man.

The trouble followed the alleged refusal of the theater to sell tickets to Trotter. The explanation given by the management was that the house was sold out.

Disorders had been anticipated by the police and more than 100 reserves were near the theater at the opening hour. During the disturbance in the theater lobby and for a long time afterwards hundreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont street between files of police reserves, or clustered on Boston common until dispersed.

Trotter came into prominence recently when he headed a committee of negroes who called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of department employes at Washington.

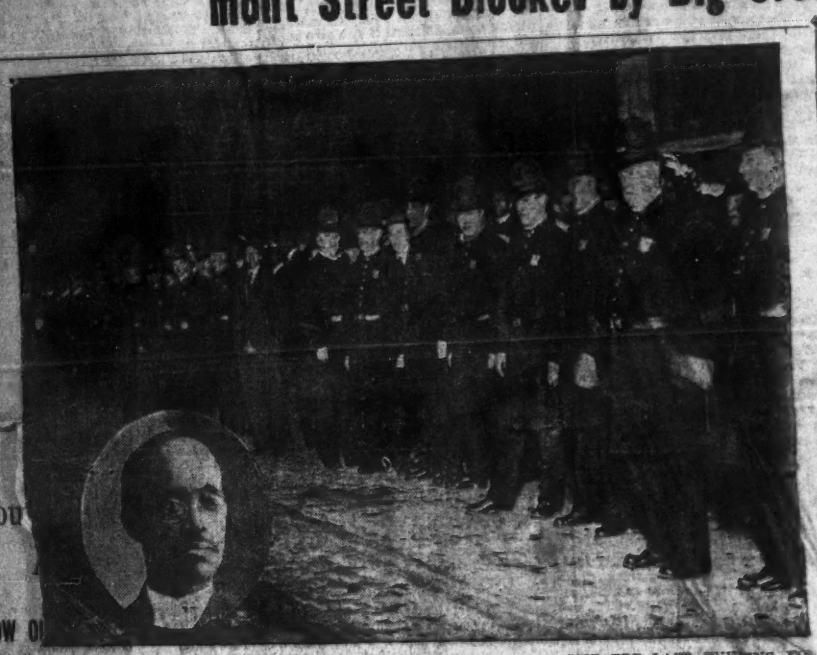
From AMERICAN
Address Boston, Mass.
Date APR 18 1915

Frederick Arundel, musical director of "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] Tremont Theatre, is the first director in the country co-operating the theatre new art of musical spectacle as developed by David W. Griffith, the explanation the tendency has been to cut down theatre orchestras. With [illegible] ment was that of the regular drama the orchestra [illegible] appeared altogether music of the stage, on the other hand, [illegible] secured a trained and in the through its enlarged use of this screen. Disorders [illegible] and handling of [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN... BOSTON (Mass.) POST APRIL 18, 1915

"ARMY OF POLICE NIP THEATRE RIOT IN BUD

11 Arrests Follow Attempt of Colored Citizens to Purchase Tickets for "Birth of a Nation"—Theatre Refused Seats, Claiming None Left—200 Policemen Clear Lobby and Wild Excitement Follows—Tremont Street Blocked by Big Crowd



AIL OF POLICE OFFICERS WHICH WAS RUSHED TO THE TREMONT THEATRE LAST EVENING FOLLOWING THE DEMONSTRATION OVER THE PHOTO-PLAY, "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."
ert is the Rev. A. W. Puller, D. D., LL. D., Pastor of the People's Baptist Church, who was among those arrested, charged with disturbing the peace.

Arrest Man Who Threw Egg at Screen During Show

Two Colored Spectators Manage to Get Inside

One Opens Up Noxious Bomb to Break Up Performance

Riot attended last night's performance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, when several hundred colored people stormed the box-office and demanded tickets.

Refused, on the grounds that the house was sold out, they claimed discrimination, maintaining that white people were securing tickets, and resisted the police efforts to clear the lobby.

Two hundred police officers battled with the crowds in the lobby, and on the streets, before and after the show. Many arrests were made. Among those taken into custody were leaders of the colored race in this city, one a clergyman.

Both police and those arrested claim that blows were struck. Men and women, white and colored, were among those arrested, and in the big throng that surged through the lobby and pushed and struggled against the police on the sidewalks.

Inside the theatre, a colored man was ejected for setting off an acid bomb in the balcony, soon after the show began. Near the end of the play an egg was hurled at the curtain, and another colored man was arrested.

MORE RIOTING

As the crowds left the theatre after the show, more rioting ensued.

The utmost excitement was precipitated in the theatre, when, during the performance, Charles P. Ray, 25 years old, of 215 Tremont street, threw a

Continued on page Fifth Column

...otten egg onto the stage. Rising ... in seat and taking deliberate aim, h... rew the egg with force. It was du... g the scene where the white gi... rescued by a colored soldier, jumpe... om a cliff to her death on the rocks ...low. This was the part of the play ...ested to by the colored race.

One of the scores of police about ...ped over the seats when he ob... rved the man rise to fling the egg ...nto the stage. Ray was seated in ...he 15th row of the orchestra. He was ...rrested, charged with malicious mis...hief.

Rushed to Police Station

One after another, the police seized ...ersons in the crowd and rushed through the throng to the LaGrange street police station, where they were booked on various charges, including disturbing the peace.

W. Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League, and editor of the Guardian, and the Rev. Aaron Puller, both leaders of the colored race in Boston, were among those arrested.

Mutterings Heard

As the crowd began to arrive at the theatre things began to liven up and mutterings were heard among the colored people in the theatre lobby who had been unable to buy tickets for the performance.

The presence of many police, both inside and outside the theatre, didn't seem to improve things any.

Colored people complained that they were being discriminated against and that white people were allowed to buy tickets while the ticket seller told the colored people that the seats were all sold.

A number of colored persons are alleged to have complained to the ticket seller and to the police that their rights as American citizens were being trampled upon.

Another Crowd Gathers

With the arrest of Secretary Trotter the crowd of colored people began to surge to and fro, and it looked for a time as if there would be serious consequences. It was with difficulty that the police got Trotter through the crowd into the street, and there another crowd gathered in spite of the efforts of the police to hold them back.

Right after Trotter's arrest disturbances broke out in various parts of the throng, and the police arrested two or three in the lobby and another outside.

All during the performance Tremont street was filled with excited people. For a time the police stood in a long line on the opposite side of the street, holding the surging crowd back on the Common. This crowd was restless and some one in it threw a missile that barely missed striking a police officer.

In consequence the order was given to disperse the crowd. The police drove men and women this way and that and managed to keep the people fairly well separated.

At the close of the performance the crowd, composed to a large extent of colored people, crowded in upon the theatre entrance and made it next to impossible for the patrons to leave the place.

Colored men and women paraded back and forth along Tremont street, and frequently discourteous remarks were made to and about the police officers.

In the crush in front of the theatre, Patrolman Lanningham ordered a woman to move along, and it is said that she refused. He is said to have tried to force her to go along, whereupon she is alleged to have struck him. He placed her under arrest, and it is said two colored men and a colored woman tried to effect her release.

Other officers came to Patrolman Lanningham's aid and the four were booked at the Lagrange street station as Clara Fosky, charged with assault and battery upon an officer; Stephen Massey, James T. Bivens and Eugenia Foster, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner.

Hissing and Applause

For about 20 minutes after the performance was over there was considerable excitement and the police were busy dispersing the people.

During the performance there was occasional hissing and applauding as the views pleased or displeased.

One colored man was ejected because it was alleged he dropped into the audience an acid bomb that caused an objectionable odor. He was paid back the price of the seat he occupied.

PASTOR TELLS STORY

Was Attempting to Prevent Trouble, He Says, When He Was Struck on the Head, Choked and Arrested

The Rev. Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, South End, when seen at his home last night said:

"I regret the whole situation very much. After visiting Mayor Curley at his office yesterday I concluded not to secure a permit for a mass meeting on the Common on Monday lest that it might stir up our people. Then I went to North Cambridge and Everett on parochial work. Returning, I reached Boylston street about 7:26, and thought I would like to see the photo-play again. I had seen it once, when first presented, but was informed by Mayor Curley's censor, Mr. Casey, that certain features had been expunged, which made it less objectionable from our point of view.

"I went into the theatre, approached the box office and asked for tickets, and was informed that all tickets had been sold. I then withdrew to the sidewalk and stood there but a moment when Dr. Lattimer came out and told me that they were selling tickets and why not try to get one.

Struck on Head

"About the same time I noticed a group of colored people and they seemed to be rather restless, so I approached the sergeant of police and asked him if he wished me to say anything to them. He replied, 'Yes, tell them there are no more tickets to be sold and that they had better go home.' Howev... before I was able to ... was seized and ... several policemen ...

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN APRIL 18, 1915 17?

Taken

...Arundel, musical director of "The Birth of a Nation" at the ...heatre, is the first director in the country co-operating in the ...roxbury boy musical spectacle as developed by David W. Griffith. Of late ...a disturbancy has been to cut down theatre orchestras. With some forms ...ilar drama the orchestra has disappeared altogether. But the ...ith a grou... the stage, on the other hand, has received a tremendous impetus ...67 Shawmut ...s enlarged use of the screen drama, and in this use and the skil...

The negro... ing of large numbers of symphonic players Mr. Arundel is the ...

Three colo... ...

...ND (Me.) PRESS APRIL 18, 1915 70.

MOVIES IN HUB CAUSE RACE RIOT

...ntered Around ...e Where Was ...Southern Story; Negroes Arrested ...y Others Present.

April 17—A racial disturbance developed tonight in the the Tremont theatre, where a picture play dealing with the ...ction period in the South was ...resulted in the arrest of ...unroe Trotter, secretary of ...l Equal Rights league; Rev. ...uller, pastor of the People's ...ber negroes and ...

Trotter said he had decided to go to the theatre tonight after receiving a letter from Mayor Curley to the effect that the producers of the play had made changes in the films at the request of people who sympathized with objections made by negroes who had seen the exhibition. The alleged refusal of the theatre to sell tickets to Trotter precipitated the trouble. The explanation given by the management was that the house was sold out.

Disorders had been anticipated by the house and more than 100 reserves were near the theatre at the opening hour. According to Supt. Michael J. Crowley, word had come to him that negroes from many places in and about this city were to make a demonstration tonight.

During the troubles in the theatre lobby, and for a long time afterward, hundreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont street, between files of police reserves, or clustered on Boston common until dispersed.

Mr. Trotter recently headed a committee of negroes which called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of department employes at Washington. The President at the time took occasion to express his displeasure at the tone of Trotter's remarks.

The police made three more arrests as a result of a further disturbance at the close of the picture show. Eleven arrests in all were made.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD 1702
APRIL 18, 1915

150 PATROLMEN GUARD "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Editor Trotter and P...or Puller of Calvary Baptist Church Among Those Arrested While Seeking Admission to Tremont Theatre—Reserves in Force Forbid Big Disturbance.

EGGS THROWN, NOXIOUS ACIDS SPILLED INSIDE

Several thousand persons gathered near the Tremont Theatre last night, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being presented, and police reserves were called out. Superintendent of Police M. H. Crowley took charge eventually, and no person was allowed to enter the outer doors of the theatre without first showing his ticket to a policeman. A line of police extended from Avery street to Boylston street, along the sidewalk, keeping everybody moving, and a second line was drawn up opposite along the curbstone of the Common.

There was a number of colored persons in the assemblage, and these arrests were made:

William M. Trotter (colored), publisher of the Guardian, charged with disturbance of the peace, bailed in $50 by Simon Washington.

The Rev. Aaron W. Puller (colored), pastor Calvary Baptist Church, charged with disturbance of the peace, bailed in $50 by John M. Burrill, 34 School street.

Joseph Gould, Norwood, charged with assault on an officer, bailed in $100 by Simon Washington.

Fred Banks, Camden street (colored), charge profanity, bailed in $50 by Simon Washington.

John Hines, 8 Concord square (colored), charge sauntering and loitering, bailed by Joshua Crawford.

Those arrested during and after the performance are:

Charles T. Ray, colored, 815 Tremont street, charge malicious mischief, bailed by Basil F. Hutchins.

Clara Foskey, colored, Cambridge, charge assault and battery on a police officer, bailed by Basil F. Hutchins.

Stephen Massey, colored, Cambridge, charge attempt to rescue a prisoner, bailed by Basil F. Hutchins.

Stephen T. Bivins, colored, Cambridge, charge attempt to rescue a prisoner, bailed by Basil F. Hutchins.

James L. Dunn, colored, West Newton, charge profanity, bailed by Basil F. Hutchins.

Luginia W. Foster, colored, Grove street, charge attempt to rescue a prisoner, bailed by Basil F. Hutchins.

Hutchins, the bailor, gave his address as 799 Tremont street. He is a Negro and conducts an undertaking business in the South end.

Police on the Alert.

As the result of information received by the police, about 60 policemen in plain clothes were stationed in and about the theatre early in the evening, and more than 100 others were held in reserve in the downtown stations.

There was only a small demonstration against the film in the theatre during the show. Two rotten eggs were thrown at the screen, striking in the centre of it. Two colored men, who are alleged to have thrown the eggs, were taken from their seats by plain clothes men stationed in the theatre before the audience realized what had happened.

From the balcony, vials containing sulphuric acid and other chemicals with objectionable odors were broken, but did not have the effect that the makers intended. There was little hissing.

The entire front row of the auditorium was occupied by policemen in plain clothes. Others witnessed the production from boxes and were ...long before them towards the station house. I protested that I was only for peace, that I wanted no violence and had taken the matter up quietly with Mayor Curley, but all to no ...

I was brought before the station ... desk and booked. Later I was released on bail.

"I have always urged peaceful persuasion in obtaining rights for the Negro, and believe it is the most efficacious method. My talks with Mayor Curley were all pleasant, and I want to say here that I believe that he has sympathy with us and will ultimately help us.

"It was my intention to preach tomorrow morning on this situation, but I have changed my subject to 'The Mission of Love,' in which I will urge peace on the Negro people."

Several More Arrests.

After the presentation of the photoplay, crowds of both white and colored persons thronged the streets near the theatre. Policemen kept the throngs on the move, quieting in several instances spirited conversations in which the voices of the participants had been raised.

Failing to move along when she was told, according to the officers, a colored woman, made an attack upon Patrolman Van Laningham of station 2, who was detailed on the sidewalk of Tremont street, a short distance from Boylston street. She was placed under arrest on the charge of assault on an officer.

When the arrest was made, three other colored persons, one of them a woman, sprang to rescue their companion, the officers say, and as a result Luginia Foster of Grove street, Stephen T. Bivins and Stephen Massey, both of Cambridge, were placed under arrest on that charge.

Charles T. Ray of 815 Tremont street was arrested charged with malicious mischief. The officers allege that he threw an egg while in the theatre. James L. Dunn of West Newton was held on a charge of profanity. He was arrested while walking through the crowd on Tremont street and, it is alleged, shouting loudly.

At about 11:20 o'clock the streets were cleared and the police details returned to their stations.

Orators on the Common.

Crowds numbering several hundred, among whom were many colored people, collected several times during the evening on the Common opposite the theatre and listened to orations from various colored leaders.

Here is a sample speech by W. H. Whaley, a colored lawyer, formerly of New York:

"My friends," he began, placing his hand on the shoulder of W. M. Trotter, "this is Mr. William Munroe Trotter, who is the hero of the evening. He has been arrested, simply because he sought his rights guaranteed under the constitution of the United States. He sought to buy a ticket to the theatre across the way, but he was refused because—well, you know why. He was arrested, for no fault of his own, but he was bailed. He bounced out like a rubber ball!

"My friends, we had $50,000 to bail out every colored man and every colored woman arrested. We haven't been obliged to use it all up yet.

"My friends, Mayor Curley is studying up the lawbooks, and next week Gov. Walsh will be studing up the lawbooks, and if they can't find a law to stop this outrageous production, we can. Wait till next week."

Such speeches as the above were short and the gatherings quickly broke up, as the police were on the alert to keep people moving, a large force of officers being on duty till after the performance had concluded.

Mayor Curley was told of the trouble at the theatre while he was attending the Knights of Columbus banquet at the Copley-Plaza. When asked if he would stop the production he said, "The matter is entirely in the hands of the police, it being a disturbance. As far as stopping the production, my hands are tied. A board of censors has seen it and reported that there is absolutely nothing obscene or immoral about the film."

He said that two delegations of colored people had waited upon him and asked him to stop the show. "I told them today that I could not do so and they threatened to go to the Governor and I said that they might." He denied that he had told them to make a demonstration.

Patrolmen from the Lagrange street station were detailed to guard the theatre throughout the night, as the police feared that an attempt might be made to damage the building.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST 170
APRIL 19, 1915

At first sight it seems incredible that the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented at the Tremont, should have taken such a wonderful hold on the public. No play of any description has visited Boston in ... years, if ever before, that has drawn from the outset such vast concourses of people, nor has there ever been such widespread comment. The latter fact is one reason for the immense patronage, for there is scarcely a human being old enough to know anything, but has heard of "The Birth of a Nation," and has been curious to witness it.

But after viewing the performance, quite a few reasons are apparent for its popularity. In the first place it is the acme of motion picture photography up to the present time. The groupings of the various scenes, the training of participants and the realism of the episodes, marvellous examples of stage management, while the clearness and lack of flickering in the films, almost make the spectator forget he is regarding a photograph. The scenes portraying the assassination of President Lincoln are, in many respects, the most wonderful, for all the actors, by their facial expression and movements, play a ... congruous part.

+ + + + + +

I was much interested in Mae Marsh, the little Southern girl who met an untimely death. I am told she is an Irish lass, who never made any especial fame on the stage, but who possessed, so it was discovered, remarkable ability to portray her emotions through her features. Never in my experience have I seen such remarkable facial ability as Miss Marsh displays, and as she is supposed to be young and temperamental, the skill required is much greater. She is the belle of the film, and the really, and perhaps only, pathetic feature of the entire production is her cruel death. I should enjoy witnessing Miss Marsh in a play, but possibly my anticipations would not be realized.

From New York David W. Griffith wired his general manager, J. J. McCarthy, at the Tremont Theatre, that he had started the preparation of new film to add to "The Birth of a Nation" now playing at that house. The new feature will show the progress of the negro race since the Civil war. Astonishing facts and figures will be disclosed concerning negro advancement. The suggestion made by Dr. Charles Fleischer that this work would add to the historical value of "The Birth of a N...," appealed to Mr. Griffith strongly, and ... leaving Boston he decided to carry it o...

AGE HERALD
...ess BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
APR 18 19

MOVIE CAUSES RACIAL FRICTION

Negroes and Whites Placed Under Arrest in Boston

Boston, April 17.—A racial disturbance which developed tonight in the lobby of the Tremont theatre where a motion picture play dealing with the reconstruction period in the south was presented, resulted in the arrest of William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights league; Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist church, two other negroes and a white man.

Trotter, who is charged with disturbing the peace, claims he was struck in the face by a policeman. Puller was arrested on the same charge. Trotter said he had decided to go to the theatre tonight after receiving a letter from Mayor Curley to the effect that the producers of the play had made changes in the films at the request of persons who sympathized with objections made by negroes who had seen the exhibition.

The trouble fol... the alleged refus... of the theatre ... tickets to Trot... The explanatio... by the man... ment was that ... was sold ... Disorders ... cipated by ...

dreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont street between files of police reserves, or clustered on Boston Common until dispersed.

Trotter came into prominence recently when he headed a committee of negroes who called upon President Wilson to ... test against segregation of ... employes at Wash...

...him. I do fear that... ...ently. ...in my church Sun... ...subject of the 'Out... ...but I certainly will ...imply preach on the ... Again I intended ...ght for East Orange, ...a week's evangelical ...much as I must re... ...day morning on the ...ing the peace, I will ...last engagement."

...ler came to this city ...November, 1913, as ...Calvary Baptist Church, ...consolidated with St. ..., this year, he was ...both, under the name ...Baptist Church. He ...ker T. Washington at ..., and is a graduate of ...rsity of Pennsylvania ...and lives with his wife, ...er at 57 Windsor street.

WERE READY

...s Made in Afternoon Trouble, Which It ...rumored Would Come

...behalf of the Tremont ...secret conference with ...of Police Michael H. ... Saturday afternoon ...n told by the manager ...re that 500 colored men, ...oe Trotter, were to at... ...eatre in the evening. ...ere then made for the ...50 policemen in plain ...the theatre at various ...

...F. Cannay of the La... ...ation was also notified ...en from various sta... ...were held in readiness ...occurred. When the ... before 8 o'clock, the ...in automobiles to the ...

...geants Traynor, King, ...and O'Dea with Spe... L. Anderson, who Im... ...harge of the forces.

...Takes Charge

...of Police Crowley, ac... ...aid, Captain Charles ...during the height of ...perintendent Crowley ...to clear the theatre ...done, but not with... ...protests on the part of ...and their escorts, who ...be given a chance ...the same as white per... ...securing tickets en... ...ement said, by tele...

...an struck Sergeant ...the Lagrange street ...several times, but ...ound.

...of Police Crowley had ...the minds of several ...was also a police officer, ...they had tickets they ...lobby of the theatre. ...was cleared the police ...to enter who did not ...several colored men and ...tickets were allowed to ...

...Theatre Lobby

...first to leave the lob... ...to see the pictures, ...lobby waiting for ...one to have white ...kets at the theatre ...

...the Lagrange street ...ers, making a total ...on duty during the ...

...e Lieutenant John ...arrested persons as ..., and turned them ...ommissioners, who ...

...e Tremont street ...crowds of colored ...street. Those who ...re were compelled ...as were white persons.

...S STATEMENT

...Declares Plot to Mob ...Destroy Film Was ...ng Afternoon

...Theatre management ...the statement: ...of the Tremont ...late this after... ...ed by a certain ...to raid the the... ...the picture and ...of this informa... ...arranged with ...H. Crowley ...

...a large crowd of ...men gathered out... ...atre in Tremont ...was then closed, ...to anyone. Im... ...the lobby of the ...with several hun... ...led" by a man ...Monroe Trotter. ...entrance to the ...

...by the manage... ...ice was closed ...further tickets ...men admitted ...advised them ...would not stop ...dent 'force to ...the law ...

...letter from him in which he evaded these issues and informed me that some changes would be made. He did not say what they would be, so I came down tonight to see for myself.

"I went into the lobby to buy a ticket. There were other colored men ahead of me and they could not buy tickets. They were told there were none. While we were there, white men bought tickets. One white man just ahead of me bought three tickets and waved them over his head and said 'I've just bought three tickets. I'll buy you all you want.'

"I and others protested to the police that we were being discriminated against. I tried to reach the box office but was prevented.

"He insisted that they put a sign out saying 'No tickets sold,' before I would give up trying to buy a ticket.

"Sergeant King wouldn't let me past him. I protested that I was an American citizen and had a right to see the ...

...in civilian clothes, whom I ...ed was Officer Dennis Ha... ...stepped up to me and struck ...e jaw. I asked that he be ...for assault and battery, but ...after Sergeant King took him ...oulder and said that I was ...riot and told me to get out. ...would do anything he said, but ...'I'll arrest you for inciting a ...d he did.

...e crush our woman were shoved ...mmalled. I saw Sergeant King ... club, but he did not use it. ...way they treated us is shameful ...t is an outrage. All last week ...

...Many ...Curley ...

...Theatre ...

...Special Policeman Badge ...Lapel Button, Police Dept. ...Name Engraved Free ...617-621 TREMONT ...

NEWS
LYNN, MASS.

APR 19 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO BE STOPPED

(Special to The Herald)

April 19.—As a result of a ... made at the state house today ... crowd of over a thousand colored ... Governor Walsh and a committee ... proposed a plan to the people to ... cute the producers of the film, ...th of a Nation," now playing ... Tremont Theatre.

... prosecution will be asked for ... section 367 of the Acts of 1910, ... prohibits the showing of "sug... ive" entertainments and provides ... a fine of $500 or imprisonment for ... year or both for the producers of ... ch entertainment as shall be proved ... suggestive."

A group of colored people on the steps of the state house began to sing "America," but hissing drowned out the singing. The singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" was received in the same manner. A parody on "We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree," substituting the name of Tom Dixon, the author of the "Clansman," from which the play was taken, was sung by the entire crowd.

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE APRIL 19, 1915

...OV WALSH AND ... APPEAL TO COURTS ON "NA...

If No Law Prohibits Shows Tending to C... Racial Hatred, Governor

...ition ... Photographs ...d Girls ...ls..... 8

... Girls to ... of West on ... Exposition Tour

... New Hampshire, Vermont and ... to turn her photograph into a ...ific Coast expositions at San Fran...

... unbelievable, yet it is true. Fur... it. It does not cost even a penny ...ual chance. ...eed in doing it. They are to be ...

German Submarine Compels the Whole Crew of British Trawler to Drown.

HULL, Eng., April 19—The Grimsby trawler Vanilla was torpedoed and sunk (with all hands by a German submarine Sunday. Word of the disaster was brought here today by the trawler Ferno, which was in the vicinity at the time.

The Ferno tried to rescue the crew of the Vanilla, but was driven off by the submarine, which fired a torpedo at that trawler.

CONVICTED MAYOR ON WAY TO JAIL

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 19—Bearing Mayor Donn M. Roberts and 14 co-conspirators in the Terre Haute election frauds, the Missouri Pacific special arrived in the yards here shortly before 6 A. M. The train was kept here an hour before proceeding to Leavenworth where the prisoners will begin serving sentences ranging from six years to a year and a day in the federal penitentiary.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 19, 1915

Delegation Protesting Anti-Race Film to Gov. Walsh

Parties to Conference in Governor's Office, Left to Right—John M. Casey, C. Harry Perkins, Gov. Walsh, Butler R. Wilson, William H. Lewis and the Rev. Samuel A. Brown. (Photo Taken in Governor's Office by Evening Star Photographer.)

CONVICTED MURDERER DOOMED TO DEATH

Leo M. Frank.

SUPREME COURT DENIES APPEAL IN PHAGAN MURDE...

COURT TEST TO DECIDE ... PROTEST IN RACE FILM

Warrant to Be Applied for Tomorrow on Grounds That "The Birth of a Nation" Is Immoral, Walsh Tells Committee at State House.

During a conference today at the State House, attended by Gov. Walsh, state and city police officials and a committee representing 1000 colored and white citizens who stood outside on the steps, it was decided to test the legality of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," by applying for a warrant in the police court tomorrow.

It will be charged that the film is a violation of the law which prohibits the production of immoral or obscene shows, because two of the scenes show a Negro attempting to assault a white woman.

The contention will be that these ... comes constitute a ... the law.

The warrant will be applied for by the police commissioner, a representative of his department or a representative of the Negro protestors. Police Commissioner O'Meara is willing that the court shall determine whether the play is in violation of the law. He and Mayor Curley previously held that it was not.

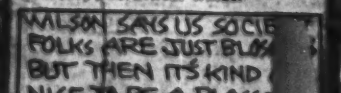
Today's conference was in the Governor's private office and was attended by Police Commissioner O'Meara, Superintendent of Police Crowley, George C. Neal, acting chief of the state police; Nelson P. Brown, first assistant attorney general, and a committee representing those gathered on the steps. The committee consisted of William H. Lewis, former assistant United States district attorney; Atty. Butler Wilson and Hen... C. Robbins, superior court stenographer. Judge Edward L. Logan of the South Boston district court attended as personal adviser of the Governor.

At the conclusion of the conference the Governor crossed into the executive council chamber, where a committee of ... from the crowd was assembled, and announced the decision. There was considerable applause. Two or three members of the committee of 10 announced the decision to the throng on the steps of the State House and it cheered lustily.

Shortly after 1 o'clock, at the conclusion of the conference between the Gov...

THE WEATHER

FORECAST—Fair tonight and Tuesday; northwest winds.



GERMAN ADVANCE IN FRANCE GIVEN UP, SAYS REPORT

ROME, April 19, via Paris, April 19... official] communications received by the Italian cabinet and statements made by Germans in official circles have given the impression here that the German general staff has abandoned plans for a general offensive movement on the French front and has decided simply to maintain the defensive.

This information has caused a deep impression here, because it is believed it signify Germany has no hope of penetrating further into French territory.

...glish Routed at ...pres, Claims Ber...

BERLIN (via wireless to the United Press through Sayville, L. I.), April 19 ... The British attempt to destroy, through mining operations, the strong German positions southeast of Ypres has failed, the war office today announced. The British were repulsed with heavy loss. The official statement said:

"The English, after some blasting, last night rushed the German position on the heights southeast of Ypres. They were at once repulsed in a counter attack. The fighting here continues.

"In the Champagne the French have blasted a trench in the position taken by them April 16 by the Germans between ... and the Argonne.

Tremont Theatre.

For more than an hour they waited patiently in the warm sun. One lonely policeman stood out in Beacon st, and two State House watchmen came out on the great columned veranda and kept the people below its level.

Gov Walsh arrived at 9:15 a m, and slipped into the State House from his automobile without being seen by the crowd.

There was much hasty consultation with State and city police departments, and finally patrolmen Lorden and Melody of Division 2 were sent to the front door of the State House. There was no need of police, for the crowd was very orderly.

For a long time nobody seemed to have much idea what was wanted. The demonstration was in response to the understanding, wide at yesterday's mass meeting in Faneuil Hall, that since Mayor Curley had professed himself helpless to stop the production of the objectionable film, the race in protest must appeal to the Governor.

The three who asked apparent leaders of the crowd what they intended to do, and Rev Mr Fuller, the minister who was arrested at the Tremont Theatre Saturday night, said they were waiting for William Munroe Trotter.

W. M. Trotter Chose 60 Delegates.

Mr Trotter arrived about 9:30 a m, and went to the doorway, where he took charge of affairs. Gov Walsh had agreed that a committee might be admitted, and Mr Trotter began calling off the names of ministers, heads of organizations and societies, and prominent colored men and women, until some 60 had been admitted.

Then he shouted, "No more—pray for us!" and entered himself. The doors were at once locked, and the crowd left outside contented itself by singing hymns, while it waited for the result of conferences inside.

At no time was there any disorder outside. Trotter, standing beside patrolman Lorden, joked his people.

"Be orderly, but firm!" he told them. "No favorites are played here; I can't let you in just because you're good looking."

The committee when it got in simply stood about Doric Hall for a long time. Meanwhile, however, the executive department was busy.

Gov Walsh had come with Judge Edward L. Logan, with whom he returned yesterday from New York, and with his private secretary, Thomas H. Connelly. They had just come down from the Hotel Lenox.

The party entered by the side door and went at once to the Governor's office, and went into action. Supt of Police Crowley, who is said to have had a conference over the telephone with Police Commissioner O'Meara first, came to the State House about 9:40 a m, and went into consultation with the Governor. It was understood that Gov Walsh had sent also for Commissioner O'Meara.

Police Stations Lack Reserves.

Threat of disorder would have put a heavy problem on th. Police Department, because the sporting events of the day have called for heavy details and the stations are drained of reserves.

The patient negroes on the steps began to sing. Somebody started "America," but it was stopped by a storm of hisses. "The Star Spangled Banner" went better, though interrupted by hissing.

"We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree" went better, and a version which stated that "We'll Hang Robert Dixoxn to a Sour Apple Tree" went best of all. Then they sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and other hymns with splendid voices and fine musical feeling.

Deputy George Neal of the State Police was sent for by the Governor, and was understood to have stated in response to the Executive's query that he considered the production of the film to

It may have been expected by the crowd that the Governor would open the doors of the State House then. The Governor does not have to go to the building being in the custody of the sergeant-at-arms. It is solely within the province of the sergeant-at-arms to say who shall be admitted to the State House on Sundays and at such times as it is closed to the general public.

Colored Men Confer With Governor.

William H. Lewis, Butler Wilson, Samuel Bronson and Henry C. Robbins came to the Governor's office and went into conference with him. Meanwhile an opinion had been asked from Attorney General's Department on the general question of what to do and what was possible.

Outside the crowd had begun making speeches to itself, and punctuating them with cheers and hisses. A good many white people had joined the ranks—indeed, a good many white people had come with the colored people, and took an active part in the formation of the committee. Several of them were women.

At 10:25 a m, an automobile containing Commissioner O'Meara and Attorney General Allen drove up, and the men entered the executive offices.

It is said that although the State police have authority over the production of moving picture films in Boston as well as in other cities and towns in the State, they have never interfered, feeling that the Boston authorities are fully competent to adjust such matters. That is the reason, it was said at the State House today, why the State Police have not previously acted.

Gov Walsh Asks Legal Advice.

Gov Walsh called the newspaper men into his office just before 11 a m, and said he had sent for Atty Gen Attwill and Police Commissioner O'Meara. Mr Atwill, by the way, is said to be in New Hampshire.

The Governor said he has been interested in the production of the complained of film for more than a week, and that he has come to understand that the objection to it is not sporadic, but widespread and deep-rooted among the members of the colored race. When this became apparent last week he had a conference with Mr O'Meara, and said that he understood that the Police Commissioner is taking legal advice about the extent of his authority.

Gov Walsh added that he doubts his own authority to act at this stage, but, he added, "If the production of this film continues to be the cause of riots I will act as commander-in-chief of the Militia."

Two colored women fainted during the speechmaking outside the State House. They were carried to another part of the balcony, and there were revived.

Asst Atty Gen Nelson P. Brown went into conference with the Governor about 11:20 a m.

Among those who addressed the crowd were Josiah A. Crawford, Rev Benjamin W. Swaih of the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Church, Rev D. O. Walker and Prof Allen A. Whaley of New York.

When the crowd was singing "We'll hang Bob Dixon to a sour apple tree," Mr Crawford suggested "that if Mayor Curley didn't behave himself, they'd sing it about him."

The speakers counselled order, but advised their hearers to insist upon their rights as citizens, including their rights to purchase tickets to the performances of the motion picture play.

O'Meara to Appeal to Courts.

When Gov Walsh was ready to meet the delegation after the departure of Police Commissioner O'Meara and Supt Michael Crowley, the newspapermen were invited to come out of the chamber where the colored delegation was assembled. By the way this invitation was delivered it looked as if Gov Walsh wished to have a short, private talk with the reporters before meeting the delegation. When the reporters had left the room, however, Gov Walsh entered the unbelievable, yet it is true—

it. It does not cost even a penny ual chance.
eed in doing it. They are to be four states. Their reward will be such as every American longs to he lap of luxury, too.

selected by discriminating judges for their attractiveness. Because of the

(Continued on Page Three, Column 6)

of 53

SINCLAIR'S thrilling a girl forced by a ination of circumhome in the East
the great Northwest

oday on

PHAGAN MURDER

WASHINGTON, April 19—The preme court today refused to set as the conviction of Leo M. Frank, young Atlanta Jew, of murdering M Phagan. Frank now faces death on gallows unless the Governor of Geo grants clemency. The court den Frank's application for a habeas corpus writ on which he sought a new trial.

Summing up, Justice Pitney said:

"Frank's petition shows that, having been formally indicted for murder, he was placed on trial before a court of competent jurisdiction, with a jury legally constituted, he had a public trial deliberately conducted, with the benefit of counsel; he was found guilty and sentenced.

"Twice he has moved the trial court to grant a new trial and once to set aside the verdict as a nullity; these times he has been heard upon appeal before the court of last resort of

(Continued on Page Fourteen, Column 1.)

THE OUTLOOK IS GOOD FOR Patriots' Day
AT THE HOTEL PLAZA
419 Columbus Avenue
Our Famous Specials
SERVED FOR TWO
$1, $1.25, $1.50
Special Musical Programme — Patriotic Songs and Music

FOLKS ARE JUST BLOWN BUT THEN IT'S KIND NICE TO BE A BLOSSOM

Sun rises 5:14, sets 6:30; Tuesday, rises 4:12, sets 6:31. High tide, 3:18 A. M., 3:40 P. M. Low tide, 9:40 A. M., 9:50 P. M. Moon sets 11:34 P. M., Tuesday.
Light auto lamps before 7 P. M.

THRIFT
is the foundation of success, and one means economy, independence and happiness, either to an individual or a community. The habit of thrift may be acquired. Start saving now.
Interest Begins April 22, 1915.
Last Dividend at the rate of 4½% per year
Deposits may be made by mail.
CAMBRIDGE SAVINGS BANK
15 Dunster St.—HARVARD SQ.
Cambridge, Mass.

Shortly after 1 o'clock, at the conclusion of the conference between the Governor and committee, W. Munroe Trotter appeared on the balcony of the third floor of the State House, and, stepping outside the iron railing, addressed the crowd, which by this time numbered close to 1500 persons. He spoke of Gov. Walsh's attitude toward the photo-play and said that the executive had promised to do everything within his power to prohibit a further showing. Trotter was cheered, as was also the Governor.

The speaker renewed the warning given earlier in the day against any demonstration. A collection was taken up among the crowd which is to be used in paying the fines of the several women arrested in connection with the disturbance at the Tremont Theatre Saturday night, if they are found guilty and fined. Gov. Walsh is personally opposed to any further exhibition in its present form of the photoplay which depicts alleged scenes of the reconstruction period of the South.

The object of the protest was to show the Governor that the production of the picture was illegal because of scenes bordering on immorality, and personally to urge the Governor to stop its production.

Question of Authority.

But whether the Governor has the authority to take any action was the big question. To obtain information on this point the Governor summoned into conference Police Commissioner O'Meara

(Continued on Page Two, Column 6.)

COURT TEST FOR PROTEST OVER RACE PHOTOPLAY

(Continued from Page One.)

Superintendent of Police Crowley, Acting Chief George C. Neal of the state police, a representative of the department of the attorney-general, and the following prominent Negroes: William H. Lewis, Butler Wilson and Henry C. Robbins. The first two—Lewis and Wilson—are well known attorneys in Boston and members of the American Bar Association.

While this conference was going on, the throng gathered on the main steps of the State House and sang hymns and songs.

One of the big developments of the conference was the statement made to the Governor by Acting Chief Neal of the state police that it was his opinion the production of the play was a violation of the state law forbidding the production of plays of an obscene or immoral character. Neal, who has seen the play, based his opinion on a scene in the play of apparent attempt at rape.

Acting Chief Neal has already forbidden the production on Sundays in this state of the play.

British Capture 200 Yards of German Trenches

PARIS, April 19, via London—To-French war office today gave out the lowing:

"British troops yesterday captured
Ypres, near Wieltje, 200 yards of German trenches. These they have tained in spite of several countercks.

"We have been successful on the anks of the River Fecht, in Alsace, r advance to Metzeral permits us the north bank. We have gained mmit of Burgkorpfeld, southwest Hilltschewasen, which directly ands the valley. On the south be-ear Schnecfarrith, we have made le progress, our troops marching e south to the north in the direc-of the Fecht and Metzeral, which southwest of Colmar. In this sec-we made an important gain with the upation of a series of elevations, orthernmost height of which ands the course of the Fecht, in front Burgkorpfeld.

"In the course of the action we cap-ured a division of mountain artil-two cannon of 75-millimetres calibre and two machine guns.

Austrians Abandon Assaults on Heights

PETROGRAD, April 19—Austrian tacks on the heights of the Mem-horos district of Hungary, where Austrians for six days have been ously attempting to regain posi-recently taken by the Russians, to have definitely subsided.

BOSTON (Mass.) HERALD
APRIL 19, 1915

NEGROES WILL MARCH ON STATE HOUSE TODAY

Thousands at Mass Meetings Protesting Film of "The Birth of a Nation" Pledge Themselves to Appeal to Governor to Use Influence with Police Head.

NAMES OF PRESIDENT AND MAYOR ARE HISSED

More than 2000 Negroes of Greater Boston, with about 250 white persons, gathered this afternoon in front of Faneuil Hall yesterday afternoon in a demonstration of protest against the continued exhibition of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now being shown at the Tremont Theatre. Although the overwhelming majority of colored persons at the meetings that were held simultaneously were swayed by their emotions and frequently interrupted the speakers with shouts of approbation or cries of denunciation and hisses of derision at the names of officials and others named by the speakers, good order prevailed both in the hall and outside of it and the small squad of police officers detailed to the scene had nothing to do except stand around.

At the conclusion of the speaking in Faneuil Hall the entire audience, numbering probably about 1300, was appointed a committee to wait upon Gov. Walsh at the State House this morning at 9 o'clock and to ask him to intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara to have that official forbid the further exhibition of the film. Notice of the adoption of this vote was carried to the overflow meeting outside the hall and everybody there was invited to join the throng that was to go to the State House. The invitation was accepted with one loud, Monged shout. It was stated that the Governor would be at his office this morning, notwithstanding the holiday.

Frank B. Sanborn Presides.

The venerable Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, the last of the group of New England abolitionists that included William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, presided at the meeting in Faneuil Hall, which was held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association. Bowed by his 85 years and carrying the gold-headed cane made from a piece of the railing of the old [illegible] where he in years long [illegible] ated in the Anthony Burns [illegible] t is [illegible] man slowly made his way [illegible] t, the [illegible] form, with the entire au[illegible]ce, G[illegible] and white—on its feet [illegible] to ru[illegible] to the echo. With char[illegible]ow-citizumor, he laid his cane be[illegible]ains on the platform. "I heard of [illegible] them on Tremont street last night," [illegible]ons as [illegible]outh referring to the trouble in front [illegible]urd Tremont Theatre Saturday night, [illegible] I thought I'd bring my stick along [illegible]ase of trouble."

[illegible]o speakers at the main meeting [illegible] representative of various races [illegible]make up the population of cosmo[illegible]tan Boston. William D. Brigham, [illegible]retary of the Wendell Phillips Me[illegible]rial Association, proclaimed himself [illegible] Yankee. Michael J. Jordan of the [illegible]nited Irish League declared that he [illegible]uld not have been true to the tradi[illegible]ns of his race if he had not come to [illegible]his protest against the photo-play. [illegible]C. Manning of Birmingham, [illegible] formerly a member of the [illegible]e of that state, represented [illegible]people of the South. Rolfe [illegible]ssistant editor of the Con[illegible], denounced the film. The [illegible]kers were William Munroe [illegible]itor of the Guardian, who [illegible]: those arrested in the affair [illegible]t street; Dr. A. P. Russell, [illegible]e Rev. Montrose W. Thorn[illegible]g, others on the platform [illegible]v. Edward M. Gushee, the [illegible]ctor of St. Phillips Epis[illegible] Cambridge, and Col. [illegible]e of the 11th colored [illegible] war.

[illegible]ne Hissed.

[illegible]at the writers were [illegible]ious and imperative [illegible] attending the meet[illegible] the film, were read [illegible]. Rowley, president [illegible]ta Society for the [illegible] to all colored fellow-citizens, chiefly to fill their own pockets with the price of tickets.

"They have the aim of assassins and the methods of forgers—assassinating true history and forging a pretended chronicle which bears the same relation to the facts of the period that is seen in the present inflamed account of our peaceful and central republic which the German press and the German mobs are spreading throughout Germany and Austria. These should be compelled by an aroused public sentiment to follow Hamlet's advice to far better players. 'Reform it altogether.' Take away this shooting-iron, aimed at 10,000,000 good American citizens; give it a new lock, stock and barrel, and aim it at flagrant national vices, of which there are plenty, before you return to Boston with it."

Michael J. Jordan.

Mr. Jordan said he believed the meeting to be one of the most important held in Boston since that at which Wendell Phillips, "sitting up there in that very gallery," stood up and told the attorney general of this state that he was saying what wasn't so when he said that Massachusetts stood for slavery.

"The presence of so many colored people here shows that they appreciate the freedom that has been given them and that they are determined that no power shall prevent them from enjoying that freedom to the fullest extent," said the speaker, amid cheers. "The amendment that gave you your freedom would merely be written in a book and nothing more if you did not meet here today to protest as you are protesting."

Mr. Jordan said that the evil of the prohibited pictures of the prize fight at Havana was insignificant to that of "The Birth of a Nation." The film is a calumny on a people. "If there are any people who have suffered from calumnies, it is the Irish people, and I would not be true to the traditions of my race if I did not come here today to join in the protest against an exhibition that can have but a degrading effect."

"Suppose a film should be shown that was against the Irish people as this film is against the colored race, what would be left of the theatre?" asked Mr. Sanborn, as Mr. Jordan took his seat. "Nothing! Not a brick of it," were some of the answers shouted back from the audience.

A Southerner's Voice.

Mr. Manning spoke with every evidence of intense feeling. "The Birth of a Nation' will mean the birth of hell and damnation in this country, if it is permitted to continue," he began, and the audience went wild in approbation of the sentiment. "I am a native southerner and my people before me were native southerners," he continued, "and I say to you that there has never been a democracy in the South. Robert Toombs boasted that he would call the roll of his slaves under the shadow of Bunker Hill, perhaps now he is calling the roll of a dead confederacy in hell. Dixon and Griffith are doing even worse than Toombs did. Their picture is an infamous, wilful, contemptible lie. The statement that the Klu Klux was inspired as a protection to the virtue of the white women of the South is not true. It was a political organization, organized to intimidate and murder white men of the South who desired to carry out their oaths to support the constitution of this country. It had nothing to do with the colored people at all."

Mr. Manning declared that the film was a gross libel on the colored people in its insinuations against their morality. "That picture doesn't show Negroes toiling in tatters and rags in the Southland raising food to support the white women left unprotected except by the Negroes, while their men were away to the war," he observed.

"That picture is nothing but a common day Alabama political speech," continued the man from Alabama. "It is unfair, venomous, libelous. There is nothing at which they will halt to uphold the Democratic rule in the South. They control Alabama with 60,000 ballots in a voting population of 300,000. And now they are coming north to make cheap the sacrifice of the North."

Mr. Manning said the film is a "Southern propaganda." It is a desecration of every monument to the heroic dead of the north, of the grave of every hero. Behind it all is the political cunning to spread in the north a sentiment of sympathy with the bourbon democracy of the South. To do this, northern confidence in the Negro must be destroyed.

Mr. Manning closed by declaring that if the continued exhibition of the picture led to acts of violence, the moral responsibility for such acts would rest upon the officials who permitted the picture to go on, after knowing of the feeling against it.

Other Speakers.

Mr. Cobleigh said that Dixon had personally tried to convince him that the picture was all right, but only convinced him that it was all wrong. "Mr. Dixon and Mr. Griffith plead for free speech; they seem to forget that there is a point where liberty becomes license." He denounced the play as falsehood and slander on the colored race in America.

Dr. Russell spoke briefly and said that law abiding citizens who went to Tremont Theatre Saturday night were maltreated by the police. He read resolutions he said had been adopted by the Business League of Cambridge, in which Philip J. Austin and William O. Cox, colored men of that city, were denounced as "race traitors" for having commended the film.

Mr. Trotter urged all his hearers, men and women, to go to the State House this morning. The meeting closed soon after 5 o'clock, because the time for which the hall was given over to the association then expired.

Overflow Meeting.

When it became evident that there was no longer standing room inside Faneuil Hall, the police closed the doors. People continued to gather outside, however, and finally an overflow meeting was arranged by the Equal Rights League, and a series of addresses were made from the steps of new Faneuil Hall Market, to a crowd which soon numbered over 1000. Enthusiasm was rampant, and cheers and applause in waves echoed similar outbursts which came from within the walls of the historic structure.

William Munroe Trotter was received with cheers. "Mayor Curley has stopped other plays," he said. "If this was an attack on the Irish race he would find a way pretty quick to stop it (applause). He has asked managers to take off other plays, and they have done it. All we ask is that he do the same now. (Applause.) This play is an attempt by Tom Dixon (cries of 'down with him') to libel our race, and the northerners of white blood. It contains one scene which insults the memory of the sainted Charles Sumner, picturing him in petty squabbles with his colored housekeeper, who is depicted as his concubine. (Cries of 'shame.') Colored men ask for only one-tenth of as much as a white man, and they are far more ready to follow white leaders than men of their own race. This play stirs up racial prejudice, and leads to lynchings. No play should be permitted which depicts, even as fiction, the men of one race pursuing the women of another race to their ruin. But this play is represented as history." (Cries of "no, no.")

A Militant Pastor.

The Rev. Montrose W. Thornton, of the Charles Street A. M. E. Church, told a story of his experiences on Saturday night. He exhibited a ticket to the Tremont Tneatre, and charged that despite the ticket he was refused admission. He alleged discrimination by the theatre people.

He continued—"I was met by force, and was struck down, and placed under arrest, but when they found I had a ticket on me they said 'We've got nothing against this man. Let him go.'

"My friends, Crispus Attucks died here for liberty. His blood animates us, and I urge you to be as courageous as those who were arrested last night. So help us God there's going to be more of the same sort (cries of approval from the women, and yells and applause). We have resolved, if it takes the very last drop of our blood, to continue our protest against this outrageous play. They shall not turn my full brother to exterminate me. We have the right to walk the streets and we are not going to be muzzled. ("No! No!"). There are hosts of us ready to go to jail for the righteousness of our cause."

Allen W. Whaley of New York and George R. Blackwell of Cambridge, Mr. Manning, the Rev. W. W. Ryan of Mt. Olive Church, West Newton; Clement C. Morgan, William D. Brigham and Maj. Wesley J. Furlong also spoke. The meeting was continued after that in the hall was finished.

ONE PRISONER A STUDENT OF RACIAL CONDITIONS

Joseph F. Gould Harvard Graduate in Class of 1911.

Joseph F. Gould of Norwood, who was arrested during the disturbance at the Tremont Theatre, Saturday evening and will appear in court tomorrow to answer to a charge of assault upon an officer, is a Harvard graduate of 1911 and the son of Dr. Clarke S. Gould of Norwood. He has made a long study of racial conditions and has lectured in behalf of educating the poor southern Negroes with Emmanuel Brown of Richmond, Ala. When the films of "The Birth of a Nation" were first shown in Boston Mr. Gould remonstrated with Mayor Curley and asked him to forbid the play. As he had understood that trouble was brewing Saturday evening he went to the theatre not for rioting but in the interest of the negro race, he says.

Mr. Gould has made a study of every nation, the people and their lives. He is at present engaged in social work among the Albanians of Boston.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 19, 1915

TO TAKE PROTEST TO GOV. WALSH

Delegation of Negoes to Visit State House to Ask Discontinuance of Photo Play

CLAIM "BIRTH OF A NATION" HAS BECOME STATE SCANDAL

Mass Meeting at Faneuil Hall, Attended by Overflow Crowd, Decides to Take Action

A great delegation of Negroes will go to the State House this morning to urge upon Gov. Walsh that the display of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," should be discontinued. The ground upon which this action will be based is that the play "has become a scandal on the State, a cause of great unrest among the people and endangers the public peace."

This action was decided upon at a mass meeting held at Faneuil Hall yesterday afternoon. It was at first proposed that a committee should go, but this was changed to a committee of the whole, and it is expected that several thousand persons interested in the stopping of the play will gather at the State House between 9 and 10 a.m. It was stated by those in charge of the meeting that they expect to see the Governor at the latter hour.

Every person who was allowed to enter Faneuil Hall attended the meeting inside the building, while hundreds who were turned away by the police applauded and cheered the speakers who addressed the open air meeting which went on simultaneously with that in the hall. There was a sprinkling of white people in the hall.

Frank B. Sanborn presided at the meeting in the hall and there were addresses by Joseph C. Manning, formerly a member of the Alabama legislature, Rolfe Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, Michael J. Jordan, former president of the Charitable Irish Society and prominent in the United Irish League, and William D. Brigham, Dr. A. P. Russell jr., Rev. Montrose W. Thornton of the First African Methodist Church and W. Monroe Trotter.

Letters strongly denouncing the play were received from Rev. Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and Rev. Dr. Horace Bumstead, for many years president of Atlanta University. Dr. Rowley said that the play "wholly misrepresents the reconstruction period, defames the colored citizens and deepens race prejudice," that he was "outraged at the performance," which he regards as "a cruel insult." During the letter from Dr. Bumstead, he stated that the play was "a pure and malicious fiction," and expressed his agreement with the writer who has spoken of it as "the assassination of a race."

During the meeting a resolution passed yesterday morning by the Business League of Cambridge, a negro organization, was read, in which the play was denounced, and W. Alexander Cox and Philip J. Alston, who are said to have approved of the play, were denounced as race traitors.

The name of President Wilson was enthusiastically hissed, when he was mentioned as having approved of the play.

Frank B. Sanborn was much cheered when he spoke and later when he left the hall everybody rose and applauded him. "And what is it," said Mr. Sanborn, "that this pretended disciple of Christ and his disciple Griffith and those who are following them are attempting to do now? Their effort is to assassinate history, to ruin the good repute of their fellow citizens, often their own cousins or half brothers, by representing them in pictured and printed fictions as the authors of troubles at the South for which the whites were chiefly responsible."

Michael J. Jordan said that he would not be true to the traditions of the race to which he belongs if he did not protest against the play and that he was very happy to add his protest against "that unjust and improper attack."

Joseph C. Manning said that he knew there were people who come to the North and say that "you do not know conditions as we do or your opinion would be different." He said that he was Southern born, that his people before him were Southern born and he, too, knew conditions there. "I have seen 'The Birth of a Nation,'" said he, "which if not stopped will mean the birth of Hell and damnation in this land."

Mr. Cobleigh said that if the pictures told the truth, that he would protest against it. "This picture is a lie," said he, "just as the Clansman was a lie. Dixon spent a good share of a morning in my office trying to convince me that the pictures were all right. He convinced me that his motives were all wrong." He expressed the hope that the protest would be kept up until the fight was won, said that the pictures wage a war upon a race and declared that the claim of a dominant desire on the part of a Negro to marry a White was a slander and a falsehood.

Dr. A. P. Russell jr., after denouncing the play, spoke of the arrests at the theatre Saturday night, saying that some law-abiding citizens went to the theatre to see if the play had been censored and were refused admittance, though tickets were being sold to whites. He earnestly urged the support by the audience of W. Monroe Trotter.

Rev. Mr. Thornton said that he had his ticket, which he exhibited, but that he was struck down and, going to the assistance of Dr. Fuller, was put under arrest. As he explained it, when it was found that he had a ticket the door of the station house was shut in his face.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCR
WALSH APRIL 19, 191

...OWD STANDS FOR HOURS

...ehmaking and Singing "John Brown's Body" Holds Crowd Outside State House Until Governor's Decision Is Announced —"America" Is Hissed

While the conference was going on within the State House the throng of four or five thousand negroes outside on the steps alternately listened to the exhortations and hanged Thomas Dixon, D. W. Griffith or Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree, to the tune of John Brown's body. For a while interest was intense, but, as the hours dragged along, oratory began to lag and even the stimulating music of "The Fight Is Won,' led by a sister jammed against the State House door lost some of its effect.

The crowd was nervous and excitable. There was so much hissing when "America" was being sung that the leading singers stopped. There was also hissing, though in smaller volume, when "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung.

William Munroe Trotter presided at the speaking outside the State House, and Joseph A. Crawford, Rev. Ormond Walker, Rev. Benjamin W. Swain addressed the crowd, denouncing "The Birth of a Nation." Professor Allen W. Whaley of New York had the hardest task, for he attempted to talk until the governor's decision should be handed down. He did it, but he took the negro race through history from the time it left Africa up to the present, and, though the throng occasionally preferred a little more "John Brown's body," to his oratory, he was not discouraged, and continued when the singing let up.

"We are engaged in the greatest work the negro has undertaken since he came from chattel slavery," he said. "We are here to tell not only Governor Walsh, but the whole nation, that we want justice and that we have been downtrodden long enough, and will stand no more. The negro has unsheathed his sword. We are here to tell Thomas Dixon and his damnable crowd that the American negro is great enough and powerful and rich enough to scatter in 10,000 pieces such work as he has done. When we are through with him he will look like an infinitestimal, absolute blockhead, time-served, hypocrite and rogue. We do not propose to stop until "The Birth of a Nation" is removed from the stage, not only of Massachusetts, but of the United States."

William D. Brigham spoke briefly, and William H. Lee made a vigorous plea against race prejudice. He was still talking when cheers from the negroes on the steps announced the appearance in the balcony above of Mr. Trotter, who announced the governor's action on the protest. Cheers greeted this announcement and the assemblage broke up quietly.

The negroes went to the State House by exhortation of the speakers at the Sunday afternoon Faneuil Hall mass meeting. At that meeting a committee of twenty was appointed to wait upon the governor. Today on the State House steps the original committee was somewhat ignored. W. Munroe Trotter read a list of sixty persons who would constitute the protesting delegation. Later W. D. Brigham, one of the committee named at Faneuil Hall, made a protest to the governor's office that he and his associates had been obliged to wait two hours while the governor was in conference with city and State officials.

This lack of harmony in arrangements was noticeable in the big crowd outside the State House. The conference with the governor was supposed to take place at nine o'clock. But at that time the governor was conferring with Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the State police, who has been acting chief since the death of Chief Whitney; Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara, Superintendent of Police Crowley, William H. Lewis, Butler R. Wilson, Henry C. Robbins and Attorney General Attwill. The negroes' delegation of sixty was allowed to pass into the State House and they stood in Doric Hall for more than two hours waiting for the first conference to end.

The Governor stated: "I am trying to find out what my powers are. I doubt whether I have the authority to close the theatre or to revoke the license. Of course if the situation should become so bad as to cause race rioting, I could exercise my authority as commander-in-chief."

Among the members of the committee of sixty were Mr. Trotter, Rev. Aaron Puller, Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, Rev. A. A. Brown, Rev. W. A. Thornton, Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, Elizabeth C. Putnam of 104 Marlboro street, Mrs. Anna Phillips Williams, a niece of Wendell Philips, of 505 Beacon street; Miss A. E. Fisher, Mrs. B. Crosswhite, representing the colored women's clubs.

CROWD AT TREMONT THEATRE

Many Stand in Line to Buy Tickets for Afternoon Exhibition, Including Negroes While Hundreds Await Possible Developments—Police on Hand

A crowd, made up apparently of persons who were anticipating a repetition of the events of Saturday night, gathered in front of the Tremont Theatre this afternoon some time before the motion-picture performance of "The Birth of a Nation" was scheduled to begin. Most of the crowd assembled on Lafayette mall, opposite the theatre. Many negroes were included in it. At 1.3 a line of persons who wished to purchase tickets extended from the theatre half way down to Boylston street. Quite a few negroes were in the line. Ten patrolmen were on duty in the lobby, and these allowed only ticket holders to enter. Every one seemed to be in a more or less expectant attitude, but no disturbance of moment occurred.

MINISTERS OPPOSE PLAY

Congregational Association Calls Upon Governor Walsh to Stop "The Birth of a Nation"

The Congregational Ministerial Association, at its meeting this forenoon [illegible]

Theatre. The resolutions, while admitting the artistic value of the pictures, condemned the exhibition as calculated to create race prejudice and to have a deleterious effect generally, and in view of the fact that Mayor Curley had announced that he could take no action in the matter, called upon Governor Walsh to take any step within his power to suppress the further presentation of the same.

The meetin galso adopted warm eulogistic resolutions upon the death of Rev. Arthur Little, D. D., and elected a new board of officers for the ensuing year, as follows:

Moderator—Rev. Ansel Johnson of Everett. Vice Moderator—Rev. J. H. Quint of Chelsea. Secretary—Rev. D. E. Burtner of Lynn. Executive Committee—Revs. Doland B. McLane of Jamaica Plain, R. W. Brawbridge of Belmont and Isaac Fleming of Canton. Nominating Committee—Revs. Asa Parker of Everett, Richard Wright of Cambridge and E. E. Batchelder of Cambridge.

President Marion Leroy Burton of Smith College addressed the gathering on the subject "Ministers as Educators." He gave an elaborate account of his experiences with college students in the matter of their intellectual and moral development and opinions, and declared that the college student of the present day is as much interested in the eternal verities as ever was the case; that those subjects are always new and fresh; and that ministers in order to supplement the work of the educational institutions should first of all be scholars, should take an interest in and search out college students in their communities, should be certain of their own opinions and never afraid to state them with the utmost positiveness, and should have a positive answer to the moral and religious questions which most vitally concern the growing minds of the world of the schools.

PROTESTS AT FANEUIL HALL

Frank B. Sanborn Presided at Meeting Where Photo-Play Was Denounced and Plans Made for Beacon Hill March

Faneuil Hall was altogether too small to accommodate the crowd of Negroes and white persons who went there Sunday afternoon to join in a protest against the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation." It was at this meeting that the plans were formed for the march up Beacon Hill for a call upon the governor.

Frank B. Sanborn of Concord presided over the meeting, which was held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association. He referred to the scenes in and round the Tremont Theatre Saturday night, when several Negroes were arrested, and declared that the photo-play was "an assassination of history." Reviewing the events that led to the assassination of Lincoln, he asked: "And what is it this pretended disciple of Christ, Rev. Tom Dixon, and his disciple, Griffith, are trying to do now? Their effort is to ruin the good repute of their fellow citizens—oftentimes their own cousins or half-brothers—by representing them in pictures and printed fiction as the authors of troubles at the South that grew out of the vices and murders for which the whites were chiefly responsible. These men are such disciples of Jesus as Judas was—they value their thirty pieces of silver, and the gratification of their inherited hatred of the race their ancestors robbed more than they regard the Sermon on the Mount and the other kindly teachings of their alleged Master. Their whole implied history of Johnson's Administration is a falsehood. They have been compelled to withdraw a part of their false and odious insinuations, but they still continue to hate and insult their colored fellow citizens, chiefly to fill their own pockets with the price of tickets."

Michael J. Jordan of the United Irish League declared that he would not have been true to the traditions of his race if he had not come to voice his protests against the play. He believed the meeting to be one of the most important since that at which Wendell Phillips stood up and told the attorney general that he was saying what was not so, when he said that Massachusetts stood for slavery. He declared that the evil of the prohibited pictures of the prize fight at Havana was insignificant to that of "The Birth of a Nation." The film, he regarded, as a calumny on the nation.

Joseph C. Manning of Birmingham, Ala., and formerly a member of the Legislature of that State, declared that "The Birth of a Nation" will mean the birth of hell and damnation in this country. The picture is an infamous, wilful, contemptible lie, he said. "The statement that the Klu Klux was inspired as a protection to the virtue of the white women of the South is not true," he said. "It was a political organization, organized to intimidate and murder white men of the South, who desired to carry out their oaths to support the Constitution of this country."

Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist, said that Dixon had personally tried to convince him that his picture was all right, but only convinced him that it was all wrong. "Mr. Dixon and Mr. Griffith plead for free speech; they seem to forget that there is a point where liberty becomes license," he said.

The negro speakers were William Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, who was one of those arrested Saturday night; Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., and Rev. Montrose W. Thornton. Letters of regret at being unable to be present were read from Dr. Francis W. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and Dr. Horace Bumstead, formerly of Atlanta University. Dr. Row-

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR 1719
APRIL 19, 1915

CITIZENS PLEAD AT STATE HOUSE FOR FILM BAN

Large Gathering Waits on Governor to Ask Intercession in Stopping Performances of "The Birth of a Nation"

Upwards of 1000 white and negro citizens gathered at the State House this forenoon to wait on Governor Walsh to plead that he intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara, to have that official forbid further performances of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented at a Boston theater.

Shortly after 11 a. m. the Governor called the committee into the council chamber, following his conference with Police Commissioner O'Meara, Deputy Neal of the state police, and Superintendent Crowley of the Boston police. The Governor then went over the whole situation, with particular heed to the legal phases of the situation, it having been agreed that the question must be approached on the gronuds of disturbance of the peace, since the performance is not otherwise objectionable under the city ordinances. Another question gone into is the right of the state police to step in and stop the performances on the ground of preservation of the public peace.

The majority of the orderly throng waited upon the steps, and beguiled the time with hymn singing, after appointing a committee of 60 to go inside.

Remonstrants against the presentation of the film, have been finally told by Mayor Curley that he can go no further under the law, as both the city censors approved the film after several episodes had been cut out. The mayor claims that the city censor powers extend only to inquiry into allegations of the picturing of immorality, acting in concert with the police commissioner. The policy of the police commissioner, in cases where theatrical performances have caused disturbances of the peace, has been to heavily police the theater and the surrounding territory, thus preserving order or its semblance, as was done Saturday evening, when a number of objectors to the film were arrested. That the film causes disturbances of the peace is not regarded by Mr. O'Meara as cause for closing the performance.

Mass Meeting Held

The State House delegation of today is practically the audience of last evening at the Faneuil hall mass meeting called by Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, with Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, one of the original abolitionists in this state, in the chair.

The attitude of all the speakers was that the film is misrepresentative of history, in that it shows only one side and selected incidents to enforce that side, all tending to bring obliquity upon the negro's history in this country. David Griffith, maker of the film, is reported to have admitted that the story could be made more complete by showing another reel depicting the progress of the negro race since the war up to the high standards attained today by them in business and educational life. Mr. Griffith is now said to be at work making this reel.

Mr. Sanborn protested the film as an "assassination of history." Continuing he said:

Called Misnomer

"Why do these men talk of 'The Birth of our Nation?' Are they so ignorant as not to know that the nation was born under Washington, Franklin and Jefferson, men who hated slavery and protected the negro, while they only hate the negro and would restore slavery if they could. Their whole implied history of Johnson's administration and the Ku-Klux period is a falsehood, as Moorfield Storey conclusively proves.

Michael J. Jordan of the Irish National League characterized "The Birth of a Nation" as disgusting, brutal and a libel on the colored people of this country.

J. C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature, a Republican, aroused cheering by his denunciation of the film. He said: "The statement that the Klu Klux was inspired as a protection to the white women of the South is not true. It was a political organization, organized to intimidate and murder white men of the South who desired to carry out the oaths to support the constitution of this country. It had nothing to do with the colored people at all."

Southerner Protests

Mr. Manning declared that the film was a gross libel on the colored people in its insinuations against their morality. "That picture doesn't show negroes toiling in tatters and rags in the southland raising food to support the white women left unprotected except by the negroes, while their men were away to the war," he observed.

Mr. Manning closed by declaring that if the continued exhibition of the picture led to acts of violence, the moral responsibility for such acts would rest upon the officials who permitted the pictures to go on, after knowing of the feeling against it.

There were many other speakers at this meeting and at the overflow assembly on the steps.

Saturday evening there were upwards of 250 policemen at Tremont theater to preserve order and several persons were arrested, charged with disturbing the peace, including William Munroe Trotter, editor of a negro newspaper, and the Rev. Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the

LEADER
Cleveland, Ohio
APR 19 1915

RACE ROW STARTS OVER FILM PLAY

Four Negroes and One White Man Are Placed Under Arrest in Boston.

BOSTON, April 18.—A racial disturbance, which developed last night in the lobby of the Tremont theater, where a motion picture play dealing with the reconstruction period in the south was presented, resulted in the arrest of William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League; Rev. Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist church; two other negroes and a white man.

Trotter, who is charged with disturbing the peace, claims he was struck in the face by a policeman. Puller was arrested on the same charge. Trotter said he had decided to go to the theater after receiving a letter from Mayor Curley to the effect that the producers of the play had made changes in the films at the request of persons who sympathized with objections made by negroes who had seen the exhibition.

The trouble followed alleged refusal of the theater to sell tickets to Trotter. The explanation given by the management was that the house was sold out.

Disorders had been anticipated by the police and more than 100 reserves were near the theater at the opening hour. During the disturbance in the theater lobby and for a long time afterward, hundreds of negroes walked up and down Tremont st., between files of police reserves, or clustered on Boston Common until dispersed.

Trotter came into prominence recently when he headed a committee of negroes who called upon President Wilson to protest against segregation of department employees at Washington.

JOURNAL
PITTSFIELD, MASS
APR 19 1915

WILL PROSECUTE "BIRTH OF NATION"

Boston, April 19:—As the result of a protest made at the state house today by a crowd of over 1,000 colored people Governor Walsh and a committee of the protesting people agreed upon a plan of criminal prosecution for the producers of the film "The Birth of a Nation," now being given at the Tremont street theatre.

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 19, 1915 179

Conference Called by Gov. Walsh

Over "The Birth of a Nation"

The strains of "Onward Christian Soldiers" floated far and wide this morning from a throng of some 1000 persons, white and colored, who waited outside the State House while a delegation asked Gov. Walsh to use his influence in stopping performances of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre.

The throng consisted largely, if not entirely, of persons who had attended a mass meeting of protest against the play at Faneuil Hall, Sunday. They opposed the play on the ground that it is a scandal to the State, a cause of unrest among the people and a danger to public peace.

The crowd was very orderly, except for one colored man who started a little demonstration, but was quickly quieted. The protestants were largely colored persons, but contained a large sprinkling of whites. A delegation of 50 representing it was admitted to conference with the Governor and talked the matter over with him shortly after 10.30 a.m. This followed a conference of the Governor with Supt. Crowley of the Boston police, who declined to state its result when he left the executive chamber.

Individual Demonstration Meets With Jeers of Crowd

One colored man started to make a personal demonstration on the State House steps as the crowd waited, but he was jeered by the crowd and told to "go down to the Tremont Theatre" if he wanted to be a hero. John Noonan, a messenger at the State House, who handled the crowd at the State House, quieted him.

So orderly was the crowd that only two policemen were in evidence for some time, though more were sent for later.

Arriving shortly after 9 a.m., Gov. Walsh soon invited a delegation of 50 representatives of the throng to confer with him, and this was done. It was headed by Rev. S. A. Brown of Boston, and named by W. Monroe Trotter. Among those on the committee was State Rep. Joseph Manning of Alabama, who was cheered by the crowd.

Among those present were three white women prominent in the demonstration. They were Elizabeth C. Putnam of 104 Marlboro st., Mrs. Anna Phillips Williams, niece of Wendell Phillips, of 505 Beacon st., and Miss A. E. Fisher. Mrs. B. Crosswhite, colored, representing colored women's organizations, and Rev. Benjamin W. Swin of the Zion Methodist Church, Boston, were also present.

Before the delegation was admitted to the State House, Gov. Walsh summoned Supt. of Police Crowley, Police Comm'r O'Meara, Atty.-Gen. Atwill and Acting Chief Neal of the state police for a conference in the Executive Chamber. The statutes governing public theatrical performances were gone over in an effort to learn whether there was any law which might prohibit further exhibitions of the pantomotion-picture play.

[illegible]day Meeting Has Overflow Outside

[illegible] person who was allowed to enter Faneuil Hall attended the meeting inside their [illegible]ding, while hundreds who were [illegible] to run away by the police applauded and [illegible]w-citizens the speakers who addressed the [illegible]sins of air meeting which went on simultaneously with that in the hall. There was [illegible] sprinkling of white people in the hall.

Frank B. Sanborn presided at the meeting in the hall and there were addresses by Joseph C. Manning, formerly a member of the Alabama legislature, Rolfe Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, Michael J. Jordan, former president of the Charitable Irish Society and prominent in the United Irish League, and William D. Brigham, Dr. A. P. Russell jr., Rev. Montrose W. Thornton of the First African Methodist Church and W. Monroe Trotter.

Letters strongly denouncing the play were received from Rev. Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and Rev. Dr. Horace Bumstead, for many years president of Atlanta University. Dr. Rowley said that the play "wholly misrepresents the reconstruction period, frames the colored citizens and deepens race prejudice," that he was "outraged by the performance," which he regards as "a cruel insult." During the letter from Dr. Bumstead, he stated that [illegible] was "a pure and malicious [illegible]" expressed his agreement with the letter who has spoken of it as "the caricination of a race."

During the meeting a resolution passed yesterday morning by the Business League of Cambridge, a negro organization, was read, in which the play was denounced, and W. Alexander Cox and Philip Alston, who are said to have approved the play, were denounced as race traitors.

[illegible] Wilson for [illegible]val of Play

The name of President Wilson was enthusiastically hissed, when he was mentioned as having approved of the play.

Frank B. Sanborn was much cheered when he spoke and later when he left the hall everybody rose and applauded him. "And what is it," said Mr. Sanborn, "but this pretended disciple of Christ and disciple Griffith and those who are following them are attempting to do now? The effort is to assassinate history, to [illegible] of their fellow citizens and cousins or half brothers [illegible] them is pictured and [illegible]

[illegible] and signed [illegible]

[illegible] Boston

[illegible] Boston, Mass.

APR

[illegible] Boston, Mass.

APR 19 1915

[illegible] Boston, Mass.

APR 19 1915

(Continued from Page One)

[illegible]isted fictionists the authors of [illegible] the South from which the whites were [illegible]hiefly responsible.

Michael J. Jordan said that he would [illegible] so true is the traditions of the [illegible] which he belongs if he did not protest against the play and that he was very happy to add his protest against "that unjust and improper attack."

Joseph C. Manning said that he knew there were people who come to the North and say that "you do not know conditions as we do or your opinion would be different." He said that he was Southern born, that his people before him were Southern born and the he, too, knew conditions there. "I have seen 'The Birth of a Nation,'" said he, "which if not stopped will mean the birth of Hell and damnation in this land."

Call Its Lie Like That of "Clansman"

Mr. Cobleigh said that if the pictures told the truth, that he would protest against it. "This picture is a lie," said he, "just as the Clansman was a lie. Dixon spent a good share of a morning in my office trying to convince me that the pictures were all right. He convinced me that his motives were all wrong." He expressed the hope that the protest would be kept up until the fight was won, said that the pictures wage a war upon a race and declared that the claim of a dominant desire on the part of a Negro to marry a White was a slander and a falsehood.

Dr. A. P. Russell jr., after denouncing the play, spoke of the arrests at the theatre Saturday night, saying that some law-abiding citizens went to the theatre to see if the play had been censored and were refused admittance, though tickets were being sold to whites. He earnestly urged the support by the audience of W. Monroe Trotter.

Rev. Mr. Thornton said that he had his ticket, which he exhibited, but that he was struck down and, going to the assistance of Dr. Fuller, was put under arrest. As he explained it, when it was found that he had a ticket the door of the station house was shut in his face.

WORCESTER (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 19, 1915

MAYOR AND CHIEF MAY STOP PICTURE

Will Have Private Show of "Birth of Nation" If It Comes Here

Mayor George M. Wright and Chief of Police George H. [illegible] are watching with interest the trouble that has resulted from the production of the moving picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre in Boston. It is probable that an attempt will be made to produce the show in Worcester, but if the showing of the picture here is liable to produce any trouble it is improbable that any theatre will be given permission to stage the great photo drama.

Mayor Wright said today he and Chief Hill would have a conference on the matter soon and if the picture was booked for Worcester they would probably witness a performance of it and decide whether or not the production was suitable to be shown in a Worcester theatre.

Chief Hill said that if he believed the production of the picture here would result in rioting or any other similar disturbances, the police would not permit its production.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.

APR 19 1915

WE quote from Beau Broadway in this morning's New York Telegraph:

"The photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," caused a riot in Boston upon its initial presentation there. Some of the colored ladies in the cast must have let their stocking slip down."

S. S.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 19, 1915

Springfield Negroes Pleased at Banning of Objectional Plays From This City.

Springfield Negroes probably will not be seen in the delegation which plans to appear at the state capitol in Boston to-day to protest to Gov. David I. Walsh against the further display in this state of "The birth of a nation," the moving picture play over which there was a riot in Boston Friday. Local leaders among the Negroes said last night they thought Springfield people will let the Bostonians do the protesting. The Negroes of this city feel secure against moving picture "outrages" since Mayor Stacy banned "The nigger," which was to have been shown here two weeks ago. Rev Dr William N. De Berry of St John's church said he felt that the present city administration is displaying commendable fairness to all classes and all races in Springfield.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.

APR 19

CARRY FILM FIGHT TO THE GOVERNOR

Some 1,200 men and women, mostly colored, who attended a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall to protest against the continued presentation of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," are expected to march to the State House today to ask Governor Walsh to intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara to forbid the production in Boston.

William Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, who was arrested Saturday night in the lobby of the Tremont Theatre on the charge of disturbing the peace, says he will apply for a warrant tomorrow for the arrest of Patrolman Dennis Harrington on a charge of assault and battery, and also will proceed against Harrington in the civil courts. Mr. Trotter has placed his case in the hands of attorneys. He denies there was any conspiracy or organized attack on the theatre.

Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, the last of the group of New England abolitionists that included William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, presided at the meeting in Faneuil Hall, which was held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association. He carried a gold-headed cane made from a piece of the railing of the old court house where he participated in the Anthony Burns riot and laid it beside him on the platform. "I heard of the affair on Tremont street last night, so I thought I'd bring my stick along in case of trouble."

TROTTER SPEAKS.

The speakers included William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association; Michael J. Jordan of the United Irish League, Joseph C. Manning of Birmingham, Ala., and formerly a member of the Legislature of that State; Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist. The negro speakers were William Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian; Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., and the Rev. Montrose Thornton. Among others on the platform were the Rev. Edward M. Gushee, rector of St. Phillip's Episcopal Church, Cambridge, and Colonel Howard P. Sprague of the Eleventh Colored Regiment in the Civil War.

When Mr. Trotter first mentioned the Mayor's name there was hissing. "Don't hiss," cried Trotter. "The Mayor has yet a chance to make good in the matter if he will. We said to him, 'If you insist that the only morality under the law relating to theatres in Boston is sex morality, stand forth as a man and say to the manager of the Tremont Theatre that you want the film discontinued.'" Mr. Trotter commended the Mayor for having caused some theatrical performances to be discontinued because of impropriety.

Mr. Brigham told of the hearing given by Mayor Curley on the question of suppressing the film and said the fact that such men as Moorfield Story, Dr. Alexander Mann, Dr. Francis W. Rowley and Dr. Horace Bumstead there opposed the film was ample evidence of its impropriety.

OVERFLOW MEETING.

Mr. Jordan said the evil of the prohibited pictures of the prize fight at Havana was insignificant to that of "The Birth of a Nation." He declared: "If there are any people who have suffered from calumnies, it is the Irish people, and I would not be true to the traditions of my race if I did not come here to join in the protest against an exhibition that can have but a degrading effect."

When it became evident there was no longer standing room inside Faneuil Hall, the police closed the doors. People continued to gather outside and finally an overflow meeting was arranged by the Equal Rights League and a series of addresses were made from the steps of new Faneuil Hall Market.

NORTH ADAMS (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 19, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Photo-Play In Boston Theatre Denounced In Mass Meeting

Boston, April 19.—A crowd which packed Faneuil hall beyond its capacity and swarmed into the street, where an overflow meeting was conducted, cheered, applauded, hooted and hissed as speaker after speaker denounced the photo-play "Birth of a Nation," now running at the Tremont theatre, its promoters and the authorities who permit it to be continued.

The claim was made that Mayor Curley had been called upon repeatedly to halt the production of "The Birth of a Nation," but had dodged the issue.

The name of President Wilson, who was quoted as endorsing the play, was hissed repeatedly. The bitterest feeling was shown at the mention of the name of Curley, jeers and hisses mingling. About a third of the audience was composed of white persons, the rest being negroes.

[illegible] and that [illegible] 909 will be a [illegible]

[illegible]ridge Company Pla[illegible]

Dated [illegible] April [illegible]

[illegible] Other of them, [illegible] Mayor O'Meara [illegible] statement as to the future [illegible] discussed [illegible]

[illegible] BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APR

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.

C.R.2.19-1915

Crowds Protest To Walsh

To Stop "Birth of Nation"

THRONG JAMS STATE HOUSE IN BODY

Attempt Will Be Made to Bring Theatre Proprietors Into Court

The sight of a colored man standing on the balcony of Bulfinch front without the Governor's office, where no man has stood to speak in many years, addressing a crowd of 2000 colored men and women gathered on the steps below, came as the climax to the spectacular demonstration made by the negroes in their protest today against the production of the "moving picture drama" the Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre.

As a result of their protest a complaint will be sworn out by representatives of the colored people and a representative from Police Commr. O'Meara's office against some person concerned in the production of the play on the ground that the play is immoral and contrary to the statute of 1910. Then, if the court upholds the complaint, Police Commr. O'Meara will make a finding against the production and so inform the Mayor. Then the play will be stopped.

The action towards prosecution will be taken Tuesday.

The Governor first announced this to a committee of about 100 colored men and women in the Executive Council's room mid cries of "God Bless you, Governor," from women who wept with the joy.

Gov. Walsh's Statement To the Committee

The Governor made this statement to the protesting committee:—

"I know the purpose of your visit. The committee representing you with whom I have been in conference, has informed me of its purpose. I want to say that I am very much pleased that you have come here so peacefully and orderly that I am very glad to give up my engagements for the morning and to devote even further time to the consideration of the question which you present.

You, of course, understand that at present this performance is now being carried on under legally licensed authority. I am now on the one hand to consider and hear your impressions and your views and also the views and authority of other public officials who have given approval to this performance. One of those officials is the police commissioner of the city of Boston, whom the Governor appoints to office. Chapter 494 of the acts of 1906, clearly and unmistakably places upon the police commissioner and the Mayor of the city of Boston the sole power of deciding what of a theatrical nature is immoral, obscene or tends to injure the morals of the community.

"These officials through their representatives have made findings which in substance mean that there is nothing in this performance, as is now presented of an "obscene, immoral or tending to injure the morals of the community." You seriously question the finding made by their representatives as I understand it. We have public authorities on statutes and decisions of the court to see what could be done.

(Concluded on Page Two)

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 19, 1915

If any proof were needed of the unadvisability of permitting the exhibition in Boston of the "Birth of a Nation" photoplay, to which Negroes have made strong objection, the disturbance of Saturday night at the Tremont theater has furnished it. The form of the protest may be open to criticism, but the fact that it seemed a last resort should not be lost sight of. Mayor Curley exercised all the authority that he had in procuring the excision of objectionable features, but how limited his authority is will appear in Mr Sanborn's letter, elsewhere printed, which was written before the outbreak had added another chapter to the entanglement. The theater people had made ample preparations to meet trouble, and as always in such cases there is much divergence in the stories told by the two parties to the fracas—but the most effective way to check the threatened discord would have been to withdraw the offending display. Mr Sanborn writes with all the heat of an early abolitionist, and Mr Trotter is not the most discreet of leaders, but the root of the trouble lies back of them in the insistence upon going on with that which gave such bitter cause for offense. It is not good public policy needlessly to invite breaches of the peace. No desirable end was to be served by giving further vogue to the partisan and misleading Dixon play, whose bias can

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 19, 1915 1709

PRICE ONE CENT

ETING TO-PLAY

By Sanborn and J. C. Manning Condemn "Birth of Nation" in Faneuil Hall—Curley and Wilson Hissed.

E FILM VILIFIES COLORED RACE, SAYS CONCORD'S SAGE

gation to Call on Governor Walsh Today to Urge Him to Stop Exhibition of the Picture.

"It is an assassination of history and a vilification of the ored race," were the words of Frank B. Sanborn, the Sage of ncord, in an address yesterday afternoon at the meeting in neuil Hall to protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a ation."

"If this play is not stopped it means the birth of hell and lamnation in this country," said J. C. Manning of Alabama. "The picture is a wilful lie . . . designed to support the hellish conditions in the South. If it leads to anarchy and lawlessness, the men who produced the photo-play are responsible. It is a desecration to the men of the North who fought for freedom."

The names of President Wilson and Mayor Curley were hissed.

WILL PROTEST TO GOVERNOR TODAY

As a result of the meeting, a delegation of negroes and white sympathizers of Boston will go to the State House at 9 o'clock this morning to protest to Gov. Walsh.

Thirteen hundred persons, both colored and white, attended yesterday's meeting, which was supplemented with an overflow meeting outside the hall, where more than 500 persons, unable to gain entrance, had gathered.

At both meetings enthusiasm ran high and a bitter feeling of protest was constantly manifest. Frank B. Sanborn, the only living "original" New England Abolitionist, and president of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, under whose auspices the meeting was held, presided. William M. Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights League, and a leader of the colored men in this city, presided at the outdoor gathering.

Appland Denunciations

The throng that filled the floor and galleries of Faneuil Hall applauded every denunciation of the play made by the speakers.

The meeting in the hall was addressed by Mr. Sanborn, J. C. Manning of Alabama, former member of the Alabama Legislature; William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association; Michael J. Jordon of the Irish Land League; William M. Trotter, Rolfe Colbeigh, associate editor of the Congregationalist; A. P. Russell, Jr., and the Rev. William M. Thornton.

The photo-play was characterized by Mr. Sanborn as "an assassination of history and a vilification of the colored race."

"Its presentation in Boston is a disgrace to the city," he said. "I would say to your mayor and police commissioner that if anarchy and lawlessness ensue as a result of it those who permitted it are the ones responsible.

Calls It Un-American

"The danger of the picture is that the masses of people who see it do not read or hear about the other side of the case. It is unfair and un-American as well as being a libel.

"Take it from me, there is more behind this picture than is apparent. Those men responsible for the anti-negro agitation in the South have come to the North with a pictorial proposition designed to destroy the spirit of liberty in the North and support the hellish condition in the South.

"This picture is not entirely an insult to the colored race. Its effect is to reflect upon the sacrifice and heroism of the men of the North who made it possible to preserve the Union. It is a desecration to every monument to the heroic dead, and a desecration of every grave.

"The statement that it represents the history of the reconstruction period is entirely false. They forget that reconstruction saved the South from anarchy, and it did more. It instituted public schools for children to enable them to secure the education that would bring them to the full enjoyment of their liberty and rights.

Anything Can Happen

"If this picture can be presented in Boston, what can happen to American

ALMANAC FOR TODAY

Sun rises ..... 5.11 A.M.
Sun sets ..... 6.38 P.M.
Length of day 13.27
Moon sets ..... 2.15 A.M.
High water ..... 11.30 A.M.
Length of night 10.33
Light automobile lamps at 7 P.M.

TEMPERATURES COMPARED

BOSTON AT 8 P. M. FRIDAY.

Albany		New Orleans
Atlanta		New York
Atlantic City		Omaha
Baltimore		Philadelphia
Bismarck		Pittsburgh
Buffalo		Portland, Me.
Chicago		Portland, Ore.
Cincinnati		San Francisco
Cleveland		St. Louis
Denver		St. Paul
Detroit		Washington
Jacksonville

Average temperature yesterday 51
Average temperature same day last year 51
Highest temperature yesterday 61
Lowest temperature yesterday 41
Highest temperature same day last year 61
Lowest temperature same day last year 41
Average temperature for April 1 to 18 41
Average temperature for April last year 51
Excess or deficiency since April 1 51
Excess or deficiency since Jan. 1 51
Excess or deficiency since Jan. 1 last year 51

LATE COMMENTS ON DYS-PEP-LETS

Copied from genuine voluntary letters.

"Dys-pep-lets are very useful."
"Capital for after-dinner troubles."
"Excellent for sour stomach."
"Proved good in my case."
"Splendid for stomach disorders."
"Helped me in digestion and sleep."
"Never found anything else so effective."
Dys-pep-lets are made from pepsin, mint, rhubarb and other harmless stomach aids. Ask your druggist for a box. What they have done for others they will do for you. —ADV.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 19, 1915

BOSTON'S SHOW CENSORSHIP

Denunciation of the Present Law — The Dixon Moving Pictures and the Negroes.

To the Editor of The Republican:—

A condition of the law and the fact developed by the Boston objections to the Dixon and Griffith slanders on the Negro citizens of the South, in their moving picture show (which includes the assassination of Lincoln) is so little understood even in Boston that it should be made known through The Republican, which is to no small conquetied relation to theater managers here as to keep the truth from your readers, who are numerous in Boston.

The licensing of theaters and shows under the old city charters was a duty imposed on the aldermen, who thus acquired a power of censorship of plays and spectacles which could be used, and often was, to exclude objectionable spectacles or parts of them, from public exhibition in Boston. This privilege was more or less abused by individual aldermen to get free tickets to desirable and sometimes to undesirable performances. In revising the charter this power was taken from the aldermen and given to the mayor alone, as it manifestly should be exercised by some one judicious authority.

Theatrical managers found this single-headed censorship,—the only kind worth having,—inconvenient, and used to restrict their formerly unlimited privilege of putting on the stage any attractive indecency or partisan polemic which they thought would sell their tickets. Some of them, therefore, employed an adroit lawyer to draft a statute that should practically nullify the amended charter, and check the mayor in the exercise of his censorship. His cunning took the effective form of section 2 of chapter 494 of the Acts of 1908, which runs thus:—

If at any time under a license granted hereunder there shall be given a theatrical exhibition, public show, public amusement or exhibition, any part of which, in the opinion of both the mayor and the police commissioner of Boston, is obscene or immoral, or tends to injure the morals of the community, and is not eliminated at the request of the mayor, then he may suspend the license for such particular representation.

This was intended cunningly to limit the general powers of the mayor (the actual licenser) by confining him to certain specified evils in the show; and by implication forbidding him to suspend licenses until the police commissioner has been consulted and has agreed with the mayor in his view of the objectionable piece. This commissioner is given no power to act, but only to assent or dissent in regard to the mayor's view; and for this he ought to read or see the play or other show, at much inconvenience to himself, and with only a mockery of power in a matter where the mayor had, and ought to have, unchecked authority and responsibility. The intended effect has been secured by the crafty managers; and practically the censorship, as in this gross instance of the Dixon abominations, is nullified, so that neither the mayor nor the commissioner can find legal authority to suspend the troublesome license.

Three times since this crafty amendment became law (7½ years), the mayor and police commissioner have joined with the Watch and Ward society in petitions to have this veto on the mayor removed; but the legislative committees,—possibly influenced by tickets and boxes freely contributed by managers or other interested persons,—have neglected or refused to restore his proper power to the mayor. And the Boston newspapers, for reasons best known to their counting rooms, have neglected to inform their readers of this thoughtful deal, by which shows like this of Dixon & Griffith (if that is the name of Dixon's coadjutor) can be thrust upon the notice of the large and worthy class in our population who are intentionally libeled and slandered in course of it. Upon remonstrances by Mayor Curley, the most dastardly passages have been suppressed, a confession that the original piece was unfit for exhibition. But there still remain things that must give just offense, and should warrant the canceling of the Tremont theater license.

At this theater, twice a day (2.10 and 8.10 p. m.) this mixture of thrilling tragedy and falsified history is presented to hundreds of young persons, as ignorant of their country's history as Charles Fleischer seems to be, and thus made to accept a view of our colored fellow-citizens which has no basis in fact, but gives a false color and a distorted scheme of cause and effect. This is not innocent error, as with Mr Fleischer, who was not born when the events sophisticated took place; but it is malicious perversion for a partisan and evil purpose,—to keep alive a fire of caste and hate, as pernicious to good government as it is forbidden by both the Old and the New Testament.

F. B. SANBORN.

Boston, April 15, 1915.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
APRIL 19, 1915

Massmeeting in Boston to Ask Governor's Support in Prohibition.

SANBORN IS SPEAKER

More Than 2000 Attend the Demonstration in Faneuil Hall.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 18—More than 2000 Negroes of Greater Boston, with about 250 white persons, gathered in and in front of Faneuil Hall this afternoon in a demonstration of protest against the continued exhibition of the photoplay, "The [redacted] which is now being shown at the Tremont Theater. Although the overwhelming majority of colored persons at the meetings that were held simultaneously were swayed in their emotions and frequently interrupted the speakers with shouts of approbation or cries of denunciation and hisses of derision at the names of officials and others named by the speakers, good order prevailed both in the hall and outside of it and the small squad of police officers detailed to the scene had nothing to do except stand around.

At the conclusion of the speaking in Faneuil Hall the entire audience, numbering probably about 1300, was appointed a committee to wait upon Gov. Walsh at the State House tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and to ask him to intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara to have that official forbid the further exhibition of the film, notice of the adoption of this vote was carried to the overflow meeting outside the hall and everybody there was invited to join the throng that is to go to the State House. The invitation was accepted with one loud, prolonged shout. It was stated that the Governor would be at his office tomorrow morning notwithstanding the holiday.

The venerable Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, the last of the group of New England abolitionists that included William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, presided at the meeting in Faneuil Hall, which was held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips' Memorial Association. Bowed by his 85 years and carrying the gold-headed cane made from a piece of the railing of the old court house, where he in years long gone participated in the Anthony Burns riot, the old man slowly made his way to the platform, with the entire audience—black and white—on its feet cheering him to the echo. With characteristic humor, he laid his cane beside him on the platform. "I heard of the affair in Tremont Street last night," he said, referring to the trouble in front of the Tremont Theater Saturday night, "so I thought I'd bring my stick along in case of trouble."

The speakers at the main meeting were representatives of various races that make up the population of cosmopolitan Boston. William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, proclaimed himself a Yankee. Michael J. Jordon of the United Irish League declared that he would not have been true to the traditions of his race if he had not come to voice his protest against the photoplay. Joseph C. Manning of Birmingham, Ala., and formerly a member of the Legislature of that State, represented the white people of the South. Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist, denounced the film. The Negro speakers were William Monroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, who was among those arrested in the affair in Tremont Street; Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., and Rev. Montrose W. Thornton. Among the others on the platform were Rev. Edward M. Gushee, the venerable rector of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, Cambridge, and Col. Howard P. Sprague of the 11th colored regiment in the Civil War.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
APRIL 19, 1915

KEENLY INTERESTED IN BOSTON TROUBLE

Colored People Here Tell Why Motion Picture Should Not Be Shown.

Colored people of Springfield were keenly interested in the accounts published yesterday morning of the race feeling in Boston Saturday night in connection with the showing of the motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation." This show was especially obnoxious to the colored people, as it showed them in an unfortunate and unfair light and tended to provoke race prejudice. In spite of protests from the leading colored people of Boston, from the New England Conference of Methodists and from many well-known citizens, the show was allowed to go on and a riot was narrowly avoided by the arrest of several colored people.

The feeling among the Springfield colored people is that the motion picture should not have been put on and they point with much satisfaction to the fact that when Francke W. Dickinson was mayor of Springfield a protest from them against the presentation of "The Clansman" resulted in a refusal to allow the play to be presented and that their recent protest against "The Nigger" was equally effective. The motion picture which started the trouble in Boston is based [illegible] "The Clansman," and is [illegible] more offensive in pic- [illegible] than as presented on [illegible]

n CALL

ress: San Francisco, Cal.

APR 19 1915

Governor Acts Against "Birth of Nation" Film

By International News Service.

BOSTON, April 19.—Governor Walsh and a committee of negroes today formulated plans for the prosecution of those responsible for the play, "The Birth of a Nation," being produced here.

JOURNAL
PITTSFIELD, MASS.

APR 19 1915

That near-negro riot in Boston over the "Birth of a Nation," recalls that it wasn't so very long ago that the Irish Players were hooted off the stage in New York by as vulgar a mob as th[illegible] which assembled in Bo[illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.)
OST
Boston, Mass.
APR 19 1915

ALL DENOUNCE PHOTO-PLAY

White and Colored at Faneuil Hall Demand "The Birth of a Nation" Be Stopped—To Wait on Governor Today

MICHAEL J. JORDAN AND WILLIAM D. BRIGHAM.

Mr. Jordan of the United Irish League (at left) delivered a fiery speech at the mass meeting of colored people at Faneuil Hall yesterday, when a vigorous protest was made against "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Brigham condemned the play and made a number of references to President Wilson which were unfavorably received.

White and colored people who packed Faneuil Hall beyond its capacity and swarmed into the street, where a big overflow meeting was conducted, yesterday afternoon, cheered, applauded, hooted and hissed as speaker after speaker denounced the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," now running at the Tremont Theatre, its promoters and the authorities who permit it to be continued.

The play was scored from all angles by most of the speakers who addressed the big gatherings inside and outside the hall were white men of prominence in and around Boston and elsewhere.

Several speakers pointed out the fact that Mayor Curley found no difficulty in banning such shows as "Maternity," by simply notifying the theatre that he was opposed to such performances and his request was heeded promptly. The claim was made that the Mayor had Irishmen called upon repeatedly to take a similar stand on "The Birth of a Nation," but had dodged the issue.

Governor Walsh was praised for his strong condemnation of the play.

Colored Citizens to Ask Governor to Stop Offensive Photo-Play Today

Continued From First Page

The name of President Wilson, who was quoted as endorsing the play, was hissed repeatedly. The bitterest feeling was shown at the mention of the name of Mayor Curley, jeers and hisses mingling.

ONE-THIRD WHITE

The audience, about a third of which was composed of white people, sympathetic with the grievance of the colored race over the photo play, almost worked itself into a frenzy of excitement and enthusiasm as the show and those whom they regard as responsible for its production and the privilege of being presented in Boston were impaled on the oratorical shafts of the several speakers.

Michael J. Jordan, national secretary of the United Irish League, was given a mighty reception as he was introduced. The big audience jumped to its feet and cheered and waved hats and handkerchiefs.

Terms Play a Libel

Mr. Jordan denounced the play as a "disgusting and brutal exhibition, and a libel upon the colored population of the country."

"It's a sad thing to think that it is necessary to gather in protest against such a spectacle as is now being witnessed in Boston," he said.

"This play is vilifying a large body of American citizens nightly. If you didn't gather in protest at such things the great cause of emancipation would be simply written in a book and forgotten.

"It is not fair to the colored people to have such a libellous spectacle produced.

"Think what would happen if somebody produced a picture of this, which is a fact, 77 homicides in Massachusetts in a year, 20 murder trials in a year, and produced that film in some foreign country. Would not the American citizens there rise in a mighty protest that such a picture did not show the true intelligence and honor of American life? No matter how you look at it this play is not justified.

"We have forbidden the production of the prize fight films in this State, and this is an insignificant matter compared with the vicious pictures now being shown here.

Irish Quick to Resent

"I would be untrue to the Irish race if I did not come here to join in this protest with you. The Irish have suffered humiliation for centuries and we would be quick to rise in protest against a similar unjust treatment of our race.

"I assure you that this will be the last time that it will be necessary for you to hold a meeting of protest over any such thing in Boston." ("We wouldn't be here now if it wasn't for Curley," somebody in the rear shouted.)

Tremendous applause followed the completion of Mr. Jordan's talk.

See Governor Today

The meeting voted to wait upon Governor Walsh in a body at the State House this forenoon, assembling between 9 and 10 o'clock and to meet the Governor at 10 o'clock.

The speakers were particularly bitter in their arraignment of the authorities who failed to terminate the production in Boston.

The purpose of the photo-play was attacked and the promoters were ridiculed.

Two colored men who were quoted in a newspaper article prepared by one of the promoters of the picture as approving of it were hailed as "traitors to the race" and a resolution to repudiate them as colored men was cheered to the echo and their names hissed as they were read.

President's Name Hissed

The mention of President Wilson's name in criticism of him approving the play was roundly hissed. Several times the audience hissed and hooted as the President's name and attitude were referred to by the speakers.

Mayor Curley was ridiculed for not stopping the play when the colored people made a strong protest to him, and he was hissed, although William Monroe Trotter, the secretary of the National Equal Rights League, who was speaking at the time, urged the audience not to hiss, for the "Mayor yet has a chance to make good."

Shouts About Curley

Later in the impassioned talk of Mr. Trotter, when he fairly screeched, "Where is the valiant Jim Curley of old?" members of the audience shouted, "He's bought up." "He's sold out," "He's afraid of the money class."

At times the speakers became so embittered in their remarks that they implied recourse to strenuous measures to prevent the continuance of the play. One speaker said that other nationalities would not submit to such an objectionable portrayal of their races.

F. B. Sanborn Presides

The meeting was conducted by the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association. Secretary William D. Brigham called the meeting to order and Frank B. Sanborn, the "Sage of Concord," and one of the few living abolitionists, presided.

The overflow meeting was conducted by the National Equal Rights League and was presided over by W. Monroe Trotter. Inside the hall it is estimated there were upwards of 1200 people, while outside the crowd numbered at times between 600 and 700.

Following Mr. Jordan's address, Mr. Sanborn asked:

Answer Sanborn's Questions

"If a play were produced slandering the Irish race in such fashion as the colored race is slandered in this play, what would happen to the theatre? I dare say there would be nothing left of it." ("It would be burned." "There wouldn't be a splinter left of it," were among the shouts that went up from the audience amid a roar of cheering and applause.)

It was in Secretary Brigham's speech that President Wilson was hissed. He said that the meeting was for "serious business," approved the agitation that has been stirred up about it, and said the meeting was for the purpose of "opposing with all moral force possible the further production of this obnoxious play."

"The production of this play," continued Mr. Brigham, "has been opposed in other cities and has made trouble wherever it has been suggested.

BANGOR (Me.) COMMERCIAL
APRIL 19, 1915

BOSTON NEGROES IN MOVIE FIGHT

Carry Protest Against Civil War Film Up to Governor Walsh.

Boston, April 19.—Gov. Walsh summoned Attorney General Atwill, chief Geo. E. Neal of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner of this city, and Supt. of Police Michael Crowley to a conference at the state house Monday to determine whether he had authority to prohibit the further exhibition in this city of picture films purporting to portray scenes of the Civil war.

Mayor Curley has decided he cannot stop the production as it is not established that the pictures were obscene. While the governor was closeted with the other officials several hundred negroes waiting to be heard in protest against the pictures occupied the steps of the state house.

Among them were a number who were arrested following a demonstration at the theatre Saturday night.

In addition to the negro protestants there was a white representation also opposed to the pictures. These included Mrs. Jos. Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips; Wm. D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial association and Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

During the wait for the hearing by the governor several speeches were made. The speakers declared that the exhibition was a travesty on history designed not only to discredit the negro race but to hold up to contempt and ridicule the abolitionists of Massachusetts and the Union soldier. They asserted that in addition to creating race prejudice the pictures gave the younger generation a false impression of the war and served to revive the bitterness once existing between north and south.

The governor after the conference told a delegation representing the protestants that he would ask the legislature to pass a law prohibiting plays or picture exhibitions that would raise the race question.

Police Commissioner O'Meara said he thought that a statute enacted in 1910 governing public exhibitions would authorize him to stop the one in question and he asked the committee to call at his office Tuesday to frame a complaint.

TRIBUNE
Los Angeles, Cal.
APR 19 1915

Clansman Film Cause of Big Row in Boston

[By Tribune Leased Wire]

BOSTON, April 18.—A fuss at the Tremont theater which some of the colored folk of this city made over the film show, The Birth of a Nation, first produced in Los Angeles under the name of the Clansman, culminated last night in a considerable row in the theater lobby.

Five arrests were made, including W. Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, who had trouble at the White House not long ago when President Wilson claimed Trotter had insulted him.

The charges are for loitering or disturbing the peace.

From POST
Address
Date HARTFORD, CONN. APR 19 1915

NEGROES FILE PROTEST AGAINST PHOTOPLAY

Gather at State House in ston in Opposition to nced The Birth of a Nation" ston, Apr 19.—More than 1,- an, women and chil- here at the state house to- against the photoplay, the Nation," playing Theater and to plead val of P oductions of the film army of remonstrants ably on the steps of nce a committee spoke present the "colored hall everybo the state" conferred "And what Walsh. hat this pretenders were confined to s disciple Griffith mmittee as they en- ing them are although effort is to

JOURNAL
MERIDEN, CONN
APR 19 1915

NEGROES PROTEST AGAINST "BIRTH OF THE NATION"

Boston, Mass., April 19.—More than 1,000 negroes, men, women and children gathered at the state house today to protest to Governor Walsh against the photo-play, "The Birth of the Nation," playing at the Tremont theatre, and to plead that further productions of the film be prohibited.

While the army of remonstrants were massed peaceably on the steps of the bulfinch entrance, a committee claiming to represent the "colored population of the state" conferred with Governor Walsh.

Demonstrations were confined to cheering the committee as they entered the state house.

RUTLAND (Vt.) HERALD
APR 19 1915

"The Birth of a Nation."

It remained for Boston, by reputation the most conservative and decorous city in the country, to precipitate a race issue in connection with D. W. Griffith's wonderful motion pictures, "The Birth of a Nation."

These pictures are founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," a very indifferent bit of literary rustian, but are so much better than he book and so tremendous in their conception of the dramatic possibilities of the great war and the reconstruction period that they have prevailed in New York by sheer virtue f artistic and historic merit.

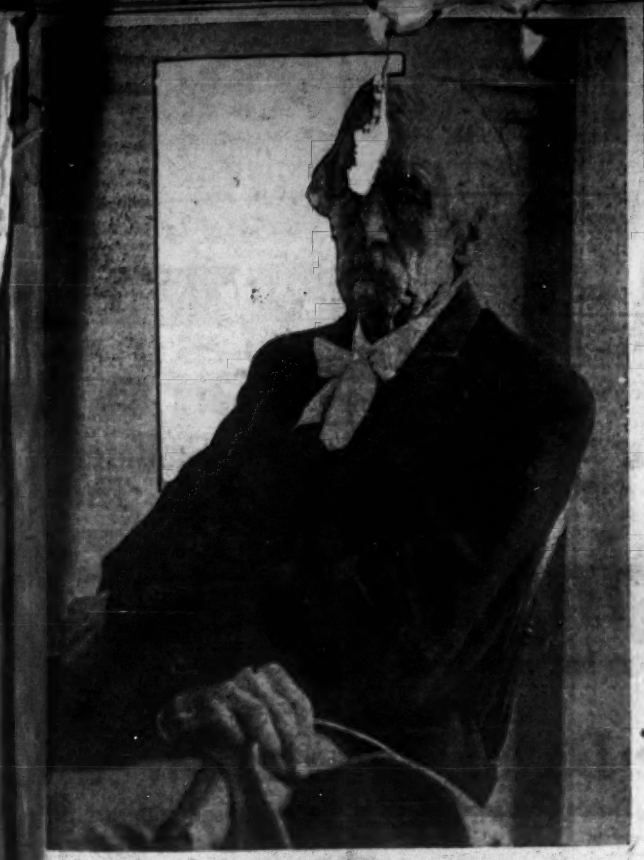
The note of danger was sounded, owever, by several far-seeing metropolitan editors, who saw in the incients of negro outrage and reprisal he fuel for inflaming the never-quenched fires of race hatred which ill smoulder in this country. Even the making of the films, the da er was noted and the producers w arned.

The disturbance in Boston Sa day night resulted from an alleged plot to destroy these priceless films, and the succeeding arrests created a scene which required a heavy police detail to restore order. The withdrawal of the showing may follow.

On the face of it, it would seem as though the naked truth should be taught and shown, so long as it does not outrage social decency or religious feeling, but when an entertainment suggests the awful scenes of a negro outrage upon a white woman, it becomes a question whether its exhibition is not disorderly in effect.

Boston, with its high regard for artistic truth, might be well fitted to pass upon the question, were it not for the surviving vein of puritanism and prudery which in the past has draped nude statues and rejected great works of art on the score of prurient suggestion.

It may be that the objectionable scene can be censored, but, judging from the published criticisms, it is rather fundamental to the great



FRANK B. SANBORN, "THE SAGE OF CONCORD."

One of the few living New England Abolitionists, who presided yesterday at the meeting of the colored people in Faneuil Hall, held to protest against the continuance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre. Mr. Sanborn characterized the play as an "assassination of history."

tumely and insinuation that this play heaps upon the colored people there wouldn't be a splinter of the theatre left!" he shouted, while the audience shouted its approval of the sentiment.

Everybody in Delegation

A man in the audience moved that a delegation wait upon Governor Walsh at the State House this morning and demand that he use his influence to stop the photo-play.

"Shall the delegation be five?" asked Secretary Brigham. "No," came the answer from the audience, "Everybody." The formal vote was then passed to have the delegation comprise the whole colored population of Boston.

Mr. Trotter, who was arrested Saturday night at the theatre and charged with disturbing the peace, was then introduced. The audience again jumped to its feet and cheered him as he rose to speak. Mr. Trotter referred to the failure of Mayor Curley to stop the play. The mention of the Mayor's name was greeted with hisses.

Gives Mayor a Chance

"Don't hiss, please," Mr. Trotter cautioned, "the Mayor still has a chance to make good." Mr. Trotter then told of the arrests on Saturday night. The audience shouted "Outrage" as he told of the arrests and of the police driving the colored people out of the theatre lobby.

The following letter was among those read at the meeting:

Horace Bumstead's Letter

"Brookline, Mass., April 16, 1915.

"Mr. W. Brigham,
"Secretary Wendall Phillips Memorial Association.

"My dear Mr. Brigham:

"As my contribution to the meeting of your association to be held in Faneuil Hall next Sunday afternoon, wich whose announced purpose I am in full sympathy, I will ask you to accept, in my unavoidable absence, this letter, stating some of my impressions of the reconstruction period, based on long residence in the South, and as related to the photoplay, 'The Birth of a Nation.'

"The vicious untruthfulness of that play, which I have seen, consists in the dramatic exaggeration [illegible] certain alleged evils of the reconstruction period with the insinuation that they were its general characteristics, and the utter failure to show anything connected with reconstruction that was creditable to the negro or his Northern friends.

Malicious Fiction

"It is pure and malicious fiction to represent the negro men of the South, who had shown no propensity to harm white women during the four years of war when these women were practically at their mercy, as being suddenly obsessed with a desire to make them their victims after their male protectors were at home again and ready to defend them.

"If such a tendency did exist in some communities, here and there, and the Southern white people were unable to suppress it in a legal way, and had to be helped out by overpowering cavalcades of lawless and murderous night-riders, it would seem to argue that white government was a failure.

"That is just what it was, and its failure and iniquity were shown not only by the organization of the Ku Klux Klan, but also by the enactment of the notorious 'black laws' in the white Legislatures, which reduced the freed negroes to a condition of peonage but little better than slavery.

"It was this failure that called for and justified the more stringent legislation of Congress, under which reconstruction was finally accomplished. It should be noted, too, that the Ku Klux and the 'black laws' were not devised to combat lustful tendencies of the negroes, but to suppress their economic and political freedom.

Historically Misleading

"Again the play is misleading, historically, in the impression it makes that the scandals of the reconstruction period were general over the entire South. The fact is that they were confined to a comparatively few States, and in these they were largely the result of sullen refusal of the white people to go to the polls and co-operate with the congressional legislation.

"Even in South Carolina, where the scandals were possibly the worst, they were combated so vigorously and successfully by the carpet-bag Governor Chamberlain that a large section of the white Democrats aided in his re-[illegible]tion, which was only annulled by the compromise that sacrificed him to a Bourbon and put Hayes in the White House.

Carpet-Baggers Misrepresented

"Furthermore, the 'carpet-baggers,' as a class, were not such as the play represents. That was simply a term of reproach convenient for a time of heated controversy. Most of the Northerners who went South after the war became bona fide residents and entered into business and social relations with the white people.

"This is true even o[illegible]me of the most prominent politicians [illegible] friends of the negro. I knew four [illegible] men in one city who had the en[illegible] of the most exclusive white society [illegible] d clubs. One of them became ministe[illegible] o Japan. As a class the carpet-bagge[illegible] were high-minded and worthy people, and they sought to promote peace rather than discord between the two races.

"Finally this play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' fails utterly to show any of the creditable features of the negro life and activity during the reconstruction period, of which there is abundant evidence. This silence is hardly short of being criminal libel, or, as one writer has called the play, 'The Assassination of a Race.'

"The apologies of one of its defenders, that it does not represent the negro of today, is inconsistent with the teaching of the author of 'The Leopard's Spots' (Thomas Dixon), that the negro does not change; nor does the statement of the same apologist that, of course, negroes today would not do such things as are shown in the play, harmonize with the apposite statement upon which lynching is so commonly (and falsely) justified today.

"That such a play as this should receive official toleration or public approval in the city of Garrison and Phillips and Sumner and Andrew is most lamentable.

(Signed) "HORACE BUMSTEAD."

"We are told in one of the advertisements that it was given before the President (hisses) of the United States and that he approved of the film. (Hisses and hooting.) Well, why shouldn't he? (More hissing.) The fact that he approved it ought to condemn it for us. (Applause, hooting, cheers, the audience rising in a body and yelling.) A man unfaithful to the trust reposed in him by the colored people and in whose administration the question of segregation was first put into effect. (Hisses.)

"Two things about Mr. Trotter's interview didn't suit the President. The first was, he didn't like Mr. Trotter's background of passion' with which he spoke, and secondly, he didn't like his tone. On the other hand, Mr. Trotter didn't like his tone. (Laughter and applause.)

"He said that when next a delegation of colored men came to visit him they would be obliged to have a different doorman, to which I add, when the next delegation of colored men visits him I hope they will find a different President in the White House. (Cheers and applause.)

"We need courageous leaders. I think the colored people of this country need an intelligent and aggressive leadership.

Villifies Colored Race

"I have witnessed this play and am impressed with the amount of villification given the colored race. For at least two hours out of the three, everything the negro did is put in the most unfavorable light, and the play, which abounds in scenes of attempted rape, murder, ignorant and domineering officials of government and assassins of the Ku Klux Klan, can only tend toward immorality.

"There could not be a worse place in the world than Boston to bring a play like this; in fact, it is not fit to be produced in any part of the world.

Ku Klux Scenes Not Needed

"The only world in which the surroundings would seem to fit it would be in one of the two worlds which exist after death. I will leave it to you to judge which one.

"In view of the many hold-ups here in Boston, by night and by day, officers shot, highwaymen, etc., we do not need any additional scenes of the Ku Klux murders exhibited before us.

Immorality Suggested

"I should think no sane man could see anything else than immorality suggested in many of the scenes. Of course it all depends upon what the standard of immorality is.

"Someone asks if we are afraid of the truth of history. I should say 'Yes,' if it were uncalled for to state the truth. It isn't enough that a thing should be true in order to justify its presentation. It is true that the sewers run under all the streets of Boston, but we don't live in the sewers nor talk much about them. Illustrated books on physiology are true, but we don't put them into the hands of children.

Accept Gauntlet Laid Down

"We are told that the things depicted were historical. There is nothing historical about assaults on children and murder. They have always existed and probably always will.

"We accept the gauntlet laid down and we won't stand the continued exhibition of this play, if its removal can be secured by any legitimate means."

Referring to the producers of the play, Mr. Sanborn said:

Implied History False

"And what is it that this pretended disciple of Christ, Dixon, and his disciple, Griffith, are trying to do now? Their effort is to assassinate history, to ruin the good repute of their fellow citizens, by representing them, in pictures and printed fiction, as the authors of troubles at the South that grew out of the vices and murders for which the whites were chiefly responsible.

"Their whole implied history of Johnson's administration and the Ku Klux period is a falsehood. They still continue to hate and insult their colored fellow citizens, chiefly to fill their own pockets with the price of tickets. They have the aim of assassins and the methods of forgers, assassinating true history and forging a pretended chronicle. Take away this shooting iron, aimed at 10,000,000 good American citizens; give it a new lock, stock and barrel and aim it at flagrant national vices, of which there are plenty, before you return to Boston with it."

In a fiery speech the Hon. J. C. Manning of Alabama, a representative of the white people of the South, called the photoplay "an infamous, contemptible, wilful lie." He said that it means death in the South for a colored man to attack a white girl, while a white man attacking a colored girl is set free.

"This picture," said Mr. Manning, "is nothing but a common, everyday Alabama democratic speech, unfair and un-American." He forcibly said that it is part of the Southern political propaganda to break the faith of the people of the North in the colored race.

A "Covert Political Attack"

"If the Irish, the Italians or any other race were held up to the insults, con-

---

COMMERCIAL
BANGOR, ME.
APR 19 1915

BOSTON NEGROES PROTEST "BIRTH OF A NATION."

A thousand Boston negroes with some white sympathizers voted at a mass meeting Sunday to go to the state house at 10 o'clock Monday morning to enlist the aid of Gov. Walsh in an effort to prevent further exhibition of the motion pictures which were the cause of the racial disturbance in the lobby of the Tremont theatre Saturday night when several negroes were arrested. The pictures are based on Thomas Dixon's story, The Clansman, and purport to represent incidents of the reconstruction period in the south.

William M. Trotter, one of those arrested Saturday night on a charge of disturbing the peace, Michael J. Jordan of the Irish Land League, Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, who was introduced as the "only living abolitionist" and J. C. Maling of Montgomery, Ala., a former member of the legislature of that state, addressed the meeting. They asserted that the effect of the pictures was to stir up race prejudice against negroes.

[illegible] Bulletin
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 19 1915

PROTEST AGAINST FILM SPECTACLE

Massmeeting in Boston to Ask Governor's Support in Prohibition.

SANBORN IS SPEAKER

More Than 2000 Attend the Demonstration in Faneuil Hall.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 19—More than 2000 Negroes of Greater Boston, with about 250 white persons, gathered in and in front of Faneuil Hall this afternoon in a demonstration of protest against the continued exhibition of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now being shown at the Tremont Theater. Although the overwhelming majority of colored persons at the meetings that were held simultaneously were swayed in their emotions and frequently interrupted the speakers with shouts of approbation or cries of denunciation and hisses of derision at the names of officials and others named by the speakers, good order prevailed both in the hall and outside of it and the small squad of police officers detailed to the scene had nothing to do except stand around.

At the conclusion of the speaking in Faneuil Hall the entire audience, numbering probably about 1300, was appointed a committee to wait upon Gov. Walsh at the State House tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and to ask him to intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara to have that official forbid the further exhibition of the film, notice of the adoption of this vote was carried to the overflow meeting outside the hall and everybody there was invited to join the throng that is to go to the State House. The invitation was accepted with one loud, prolonged shout. It was stated that the Governor would be at his office tomorrow morning notwithstanding the holiday.

The venerable Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, the last of the group of New England abolitionists that included William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, presided at the meeting in Faneuil Hall, which was held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association. Bowed by his 85 years and carrying the gold-headed cane made from a piece of the railing of the old court house, where he in years long gone participated in the Anthony Burns riot, the old man slowly made his way to the platform, with the entire audience—black and white—on its feet cheering him to the echo. With characteristic humor, he laid his cane beside him on the platform. "I heard of the affair in Tremont Street last night," he said, referring to the trouble in front of the Tremont Theater Saturday night, "so I thought I'd bring my stick along in case of tr[illegible]

The speakers at the main meeting were representatives of various races that make up the population of cosmopolitan Boston. William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, proclaimed himself a Yankee. Michael J. Jordon of the United Irish League declared that he would not have been true to the traditions of his race if he had not come to voice his protest against the photoplay. Joseph C. Manning of Birmingham, Ala., and formerly a member of the Legislature of that State, represented the white people of the South. Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist, denounced the film. The Negro speakers were William Monroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, who was among those arrested in the affair in Tremont Street; Dr. A. P. Russell, Jr., and Rev. Montrose W. Thornton. Among the others on the platform were Rev. Edward M. Gushee, the venerable rector of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, Cambridge, and Col. Howard P. Sprague of the 11th colored regiment in the Civil War.

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
APRIL 19, 1915

POWER OF THE FILMS.

In Boston on Saturday something which very nearly approaching a riot grew out of the presentation at the Tremont theatre of a photo drama called "The Birth of a Nation. The colored people in Boston, or many of them at any rate, objected to the presentation of this picture-play because, as they claim it gives a false impression of the colored people and does the race great injustice. The part of the picture they most object to is that which shows the reconstruction period in the days just following the Civil war when the Southern states were over run with "carpet-baggers" and the government of those states was for a time in control of the negro voters. The colored people in Boston endeavored to have some parts of this photo-play eliminated and were promised that this should be done before the pictures were publicly exhibited but whether it was done or not does not appear from the news stories which have been published concerning the disturbance on Saturday evening.

The excitement aroused over this film drama is illustrative of the great factor the moving picture has become in the education of the masses. It is much to be regretted that any photo play should be produced which might serve to create racial prejudice or to give a wrong impression of any people. Such was not the intention of the author or the producers of this particular photo play, so it is claimed. It was intended only to give a correct historical reproduction of one of the trying periods through which the nation passed just following the Civil war. The incidents thrown upon the screen covering this period may have been, and probably were, grossly exaggerated but such scenes have time and again been described in fiction and in periodicals without any such protests as were made in Boston on Saturday. The reason for the feeling which has been manifested against this photo play is undoubtedly due to the fact that comparatively few people read the novel or the periodical while hundreds of thousands do see and are influenced by the pictures.

Demand Walsh Stop 'Birth of a Nation'

AFTER CONFERENCE WITH THE GOVERNOR IT IS ANNOUNCED PRODUCERS WILL BE PROSECUTED.

As a result of a protest made at the State House today by a crowd of more than 1,000 negroes, Governor Walsh and a committee of the protesting people agreed upon a plan of criminal prosecution of the producers of the film "The Birth of the Nation," now being given at the Tremont Theatre.

Prosecution will be asked for under Section 367 of the Acts of 1910, prohibiting "suggestive" entertainments and providing for a fine of $500 or imprisonment for a year or both for the producers of such entertainments.

"It has not been decided whether the Police Commissioner of Boston or the colored people of the city will begin this prosecution, but it will be brought at once," said former Assistant Attorney-General of the United States William H. Lewis, a member of the committee which called upon the Governor.

While the army of remonstrants was massed peaceably on the broad steps of the Bulfinch entrance fronting on Beacon street, a committee, the members of which claimed they "represented the colored population of the State," conferred with Governor Walsh in the executive chamber, where they were cordially received shortly after 10 o'clock.

BOSTO[illegible] which developed [illegible]t in the lobby of the Tremont Theatre [illegible]re a motion picture play, dealing with [illegible]construction period the South wa[illegible]ted, resulted in the Date[illegible]e of William[illegible]e Trotter, secretary e National [illegible] Rights League; the Aaron W[illegible]itor of the People's [illegible] Chur[illegible] two other negroes and a [illegible] Gather[illegible] charged with disturbing [illegible]ston[illegible]e was struck in the face [illegible]oller was arrested on the [illegible]he [illegible] tonight after receiving [illegible]on, m[illegible]or Curley to the effect [illegible]roducers of the play had made [illegible] films at the request of persons [illegible]tisfied with objections made by [illegible]who had seen the exhibition.

[illegible]ble [illegible]oft wed alleged refusal of [illegible]to sell tickets to Trotter. The [illegible]eiven by the management was [illegible]e was sold out.

[illegible]had been anticipated by the [illegible]more than 100 reserves were [illegible]eater at the opening hour [illegible]ing disturbance in the theater [illegible]and for a long time afterward, [illegible]negroes walked up and down [illegible]treet between files of police [illegible]clustered on Boston Common [illegible]hatred.

[illegible]disturbing [illegible]prominence recently [illegible]ing [illegible]of negroes, who [illegible]effort is to [illegible]to protest [illegible]employes

[illegible]hearing on the film entitled [illegible]Nation," which is booked [illegible]here beginning [illegible]Saturday, [illegible]

The colored delegations began to arrive singly and in groups from all points of the compass an hour earlier. It was hot in the sun, but they stood close. Women and children squatted on the stone steps. They were good-natured, but terribly in earnest. They talked about Saturday night's trouble and the ringing sentiments expounded by the orators last night in the Cradle of Liberty, which was altogether too small to accommodate the crowd that stormed its doors.

CROWD GREW QUICKLY.

The crowd quickly grew. When the first 300 assembled there was only one policeman on the scene, Patrolman Mellody of Court square station. Later he was joined by Patrolman John J. Lordan from the Joy street station. They, with John Noonan, a State House messenger, had no difficulty in handling the crowd.

Superintendent Crowley arrived just before 10 o'clock and was promptly admitted to the Governor's private room, where he was joined soon afterward by Acting Chief Neal of the State Police.

At 10:30 a group of colored people on the steps started to sing "America." They had gotten part through the first verse when others began to hiss. The hissing grew in volume and at the end of the first verse the singing was completely drowned out.

SING PATRIOTIC SONG.

Then the same group sang two stanzas of "The Star Spangled Banner," amid hissing. When the refrain, "We'll hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree," was started all the colored people joined in and sang it vociferously. The crowd then bellowed a parody on the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., the author of the "Clansman," from which the theme of "The Birth of a Nation" was taken. The parody ran:

We'll hang Thomas Dixon to a sour apple tree,
We'll hang Thomas Dixon to a sour apple tree,
We'll hang Thomas Dixon to a sour apple tree,
As his soul goes marching on."

Rev. S. A. Brown, chairman of the committee, said:

"We desire to protest to Governor Walsh against The Birth of the Nation' and to point out that the law is sufficient to prevent further productions of these vile films. The law I speak of is the same law that Mayor Curley referred to when he said his censors were not equipped with sufficient authority to stop the pictures."

Following the demonstration and singing on the State House steps Governor Walsh announced to the newspapermen at 10:40 that he had sent for Attorney-General Henry C. Attwill and Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara of Boston.

"The purpose of this conference," said the Governor, "is to determine what authority there is under the present statutes for either the State or the police department of Boston to prevent further production of the much-discussed 'Birth of a Nation' in the event that we desire to stop it.

IN DOUBT AS TO AUTHORITY.

"I have been impressed for several days by the fact that there is considerable agitation against this photo drama. I was impressed at the start. The agitation did not centre in a few people and was not sporadic, but was widespread and almost unanimous among one group of people of the State.

"In view of that fact I sent for Mr. O'Meara last week and was in conference with him at two different times with the purpose of determining what authority there is for possible action.

"I understood that Mr. O'Meara was to secure a legal opinion on the situation and I expect him to submit it to me when he arrives.

"I am still in doubt as to what authority I have to exercise in the matter. If riot[illegible] could result I am [illegible] principals. [illegible] photography is seen and the view of [illegible] scenes is a truly [illegible]

REPUBLICAN
s: Springfield, Mass.
APR 19 191[illegible]

BIG MEETING IN HUB

Protest Of Negroes

GOOD ORDER MAINTAINED

Demonstration Against Production of "Birth of a Nation"—F. B. Sanborn Presides at Faneuil Hall.

Special Dispatch to The Republican.

BOSTON, Sunday, April 18.

More than 2000 Negroes of Greater Boston with about 250 white persons gathered in and in front of Faneuil hall this afternoon in a demonstration of protest against the continued exhibition of the photoplay "The birth of a nation," which is now being shown at the Tremont theater. Although the overwhelming majority of colored persons at the meetings that were held simultaneously were swayed by their emotions and frequently interrupted the speakers with shouts of approbation or cries of denunciation and hisses of derision at the names of officials and others named by the speakers, good order prevailed both in the hall and outside of it, and the small squad of police officers detailed to the scene had nothing to do except stand around.

The venerable Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, the last of the group of New England abolitionists that included William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, presided at the meeting in Faneuil hall, which was held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips memorial association. Bowed by his 85 years and carrying the gold-headed cane made from a piece of railing of the old court-house where he in years long gone participated in the Anthony Burns riot, the old man slowly made his way to the platform with the entire audience—black and white—on its feet, cheering him to the echo. With characteristic humor, he laid his cane beside him on the platform. "I heard of the affair on Tremont street last night," he said, "so I thought I'd bring my stick along in case of trouble."

Few direct references were made to Mayor Curley, except by Mr Trotter, in the hall. When he first mentioned the mayor's name there was hissing. "Don't hiss," cried Trotter, whose speech was impassioned. "The mayor has yet a chance to make good in the matter if he will. We said to him: 'If you insist that the only morality under the law relating to theaters in Boston is sex morality, stand forth as a man and say to the manager of the Tremont theater that you want the film discontinued.

"Where is the Jim Curley of old—the friend of the people—lovable Jim Curley, whom we colored people supported for the mayoralty against the advice of some of our white friends? If we were good enough to support you for mayor, we ought to be good enough for you to be protected by you from this southern misrepresentation of our race,'" he said.

At the conclusion a committee was appointed to wait upon Gov Walsh at the state house to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock and ask him to intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara to have that official forbid further exhibition of the film.

ACCOUNT OF THE EXCITEMENT

DELIBERATE PLOT ALLEGED

Negroes Deny It—Minister Says He Was Struck When He Offered to Speak to Crowd.

As a racial demonstration probably nothing like Saturday night's disturbance at the moving-picture presentation of "The birth of a nation" has been seen in Boston since before the civil war. There was no bloodshed, to be sure, and little actual violence, but without the presence of 60 policemen in the theater and 200 outside it is hard to tell what might have happened.

The theater management asserts that there was an organized plot to fill the house with Negroes, destroy the films and stop the play, and that only by the help of the large force of police was this prevented. This charge is denied by the Negro leaders arrested. That the demonstration was a prearranged thing, however, is suggested by William D. Brigham of Dorchester, one of the leading Boston white champions of the colored race. As early as 6 o'clock, too, a colored woman telephoned to the Boston Globe to advise that a reporter be sent to the theater, as "there might be something interesting happen."

The trouble in the lobby before the play, when a crowd of Negroes and whites were clamoring for tickets that were refused; the struggles of the police detail to clear the premises and preserve order and the later demonstration when the performance was over, gave Boston one of the most exciting free shows it has known in years. All the great Saturday night crowd seemed to congregate about the theater. From before 7.30, when the trouble began, until after 11.30 they stood about there by the thousands, defying the efforts of the officers to make them "move on."

The whole affair came as the culmination of a fortnight of agitation by the colored people of Boston and their friends against the production of this play, which, they contended, was not only an insult to the colored race, but was an incentive to race hatred and to lawlessness. Meetings had been held, protests voiced, appeals made to the mayor and other authorities, but the play continued. Saturday, according to the theater management, word was learned of a plot to pack the theater with Negroes, seize and destroy the films, which are kept in the operating box at the back of the orchestra, and stop the play by force.

Inside the theater a colored man, ejected for setting off an acid bomb in the balcony, soon after the show began. Near the end of the play an egg was hurled at the curtain, and another colored man was arrested.

One after another, the police seized persons in the crowd and rushed through the throng to the LaGrange-street police station, where they were booked on various charges, including disturbing the peace. William Monroe Trotter, secretary of the national equal rights league, and editor of the Guardian, and Rev. Aaron Puller, both leaders of the colored race in Boston, were among those arrested.

Colored people complained that they were being discriminated against and that white people were allowed to buy tickets while the ticket seller told the colored people that the seats were all sold. A number of colored persons are alleged to have complained to the ticket seller and to the police that their rights as American citizens were being trampled upon.

In the crush in front of the theater, Patrolman Lazzingham ordered a woman to move along, and it is said that she refused. He is said to have tried to force her to go along, whereupon she is alleged to have struck him. He placed her under arrest, and it is said two colored men and a colored woman tried to effect her release. Other officers came to Patrolman Lazzingham's aid and the four [illegible] LaGrange-st[illegible]

Pastor Tells [illegible]

Rev Aaron W. Puller, [illegible] People's Baptist church, [illegible] seen at his home Saturday [illegible]

"I regret the whole affair. After visiting Mayor Curley yesterday I concluded to permit for a mass-meeting on Monday, just that it might people. Then I went to [illegible] and Everett on parading, ing, I reached Boylston and thought I would like play again. I had seen first presented, but was [illegible] or Curley's censor, Mr [illegible] tain features had been [illegible] made it less objectionable of view.

"I went to the theater, box office and asked for [illegible] informed that all tickets [illegible] then withdrew to the [illegible] there but a moment when [illegible] came out and told me that [illegible] ing tickets and why not try

Struck on Head

"About the same time I [illegible] of colored people and they [illegible] rather restless, so I approached [illegible] geant of police and asked him [illegible] me to say anything to them. 'Yes, tell them there are no [illegible] to be said and that they [illegible] home.' However, before I [illegible] dress them I was seized [illegible] ded by several policemen, [illegible] on the head, almost [illegible] Others grabbed me by the [illegible] I could hardly breathe.

"Then I was escorted to [illegible] tion and could hear the crowd [illegible] shouted to kill me and to [illegible] calling me vile names. [illegible] reached the station [illegible] by Attorney John M. [illegible] Cambridge, who also [illegible] School street.

"He is the superintendent [illegible] day-school, and, hearing [illegible] trouble, hastened to assist [illegible] me into the guard room and [illegible] went to search me the only [illegible] could find was a small pencil [illegible] I had picked up on the [illegible] of the theater, evidently [illegible] in the crowd.

"I believe Mayor Curley [illegible] honest in the way he has [illegible] in regard to the play, and [illegible] but the warmest feelings [illegible] spect for him. I do feel [illegible] acted roughly."

Theater's Statement

The Tremont theater [illegible] urday night issued this [illegible]

"The management of the [illegible] after was informed late this [illegible] a plan, arranged by a certain [illegible] ored men, to raid the theater [illegible] the picture and booth. In [illegible] this information, the manager [illegible] with Superintendent Michael [illegible] for police protection.

"About 7.20 p. m. a large [illegible] ored men and women gathered [illegible] door of the theater in The [illegible] The box-office was then [illegible] seats were sold to anyone. [illegible] thereafter the lobby of the [illegible] filled with several hundred [illegible] led by a man who we are told [illegible] Trotter. They loudly demanded [illegible] to the theater.

"They were informed by the [illegible] that the box office was closed [illegible] there were no further tickets [illegible] Several colored men then [illegible] crowd and advised them that [illegible] thorities would not stop the [illegible] had sufficient force to do it [illegible] better take the law into their [illegible]

"Everything was in [illegible] force of police came out from [illegible] into the lobby, arresting some [illegible] boisterous ones. All during [illegible] numbers of these people remained [illegible] before the theater, but [illegible] filled steps of the State House today in protest to Govergainst photoplay "The Birth of a Nation."

cient to keep order as far as gement regrets that this inurred, but feels that the men engaged in this attempt property and disturb the are not representative of people of Boston. That there as damage to property and y to patrons, we lay entirely t work and good judgment of ndent of police and the of-n under his command."

ales Plans Made.

was bailed out, Secretary
the national equal rights league nothing of any planned dem-

As far as I am concerned, none. I came down town to-the performance as an indi-have seen the performance second time I saw it, features objectionable to my people lly lengthened after our proa conference with the mayor this afternoon I got a letter which he evaded these issues d me that some changes would

He did not say what they o I came down to-night to see into the lobby to buy a ticket.

other colored men ahead of r could not buy tickets. They there were none. While we white men bought tickets. One just ahead of me bought three.
waved them over his head an-just bought three tickets. I'll you want.'

ers protested to the police that being discriminated against. I ch the box office, but was pre-insisted that they put a sign out tickets sold,' before I would ing to buy a ticket.

King wouldn't let me pass rested that I was an American had a right to see the show.
civilian clothes, whom I have s Officer Dennis Harrington, to me and struck me on the ked that he be arrested for as-battery, and shortly after Ser-took me by the shoulder and was inciting a riot and told me
I said I would do anything he said, 'I'll arrest you for in-
,' and he did.

Curley agreed to ask the man-leave out some objectionable nd he has failed to keep his

D. Brigham of 41 Wheatland hester, secretary of the nationon for the advancement of col-ple and member of the national voters' league, was asked late night whether the demonstrarearranged or not.

see for yourself," he said. "I any formal vote was taken, but may have been passed along.
demonstration as this, where were drawn and nobody was in-ecessary to impress on the peoton that this show is objection-e colored people who live here must be protected."

ham said he was not at the show evening, but that on a previous hen he did go, he had witnessed tion in the sale of tickets. A front of him, he said, was told e only $2 seats left, although he to buy a 75-cent seat.

Orators on the Common.

Crowds numbering several hundred, among whom were many colored people, collected several times during the evening on the common opposite the theater and listened to orations from various colored leaders. Here is a sample speech by W. H. Whaley, a colored lawyer, formerly of New York, according to a Boston paper:—

"My friends," he began, placing his hand on the shoulder of W. M. Trotter, "this is Mr William Munroe Trotter, who is the hero of the evening. He has been arrested, simply because he sought his rights guaranteed under the constitution of the United States. He sought to buy a ticket to the theater across the way, but he was refused because—well, you know why. He was arrested, for no fault of his own, but he was jailed. He bounced out like a rubber ball! My friends, we had $50,000 to bail out every colored man and every colored woman arrested. We haven't been obliged to use it all up yet.

"My friends, Mayor Curley is studying up the law books, and next week Gov Walsh will be studying up the law books, and if they can't find a law to stop this outrageous production, we can. Wait till next week."

Mayor Curley was told of the trouble at the theater while he was attending the Knights of Columbus banquet at the Copley-Plaza. When asked if he would stop the production he said, "The matter is entirely in the hands of the police, it being a disturbance. As far as stopping the production my hands are tied. A board of censors has seen it and reported that there is absolutely nothing obscene or immoral about the film."

He said that two delegations of colored people had waited upon him and asked him to stop the show. "I told them to-day that I could not do so and they threatened to go to the governor and I said that they might." He denied that he had told them to make a demonstration.

There was a fight between three colored men and a group of white men at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Compton street, just before midnight, during which razors were freely used and two white men were so badly slashed they had to be taken to the city hospital. Three men, all colored, were arrested by the police who hurried to the spot, and were locked up at the Dedham-street police station, charged with assault with dangerous weapons.

Hearst Hall
Democrat Today N.Y.
Apr 19 1915

HOUSES NEGROES.
...ril 19.—As the result of
...t m... at the State House to-
...a... of over 1,000 colored
Go... Walsh and a com-
...f the protesting people agreed plan of criminal prosecution of ducers of the film "The Birth
...tion," now ... ...n at the ...n Street thea...

Clipping Bureau of the World
EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS
APR 19 1915

PICTURE FILM CAUSES RIOT

Negroes Storm Boston Playhouse In Effort to Gain Admission to See Pictures.

Big Protest Meeting Held Later and Matter Is To Be Taken to the Governor.

BOSTON, APRIL 19—The Tremont theatre was stormed by hundreds of negroes Saturday night in an effort to gain admission to the performance of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation" based on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, over which there had been much protest because of the alleged unfavorable representations of the negroes in the South immediately after the war. Admission was refused all negroes and there ensued a melee during which 60 plain clothes men, assisted the 200 officers in uniform in keeping control of the situation. Four negroes were arrested, among them, William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the national equal rights league and editor of The Guardian.

As the result of this near riot, a mass meeting of more than 2000 negroes of Greater Boston, together with 250 white persons, was held in Faneuil hall yesterday afternoon as a demonstration of protest against the continued exhibition of the film. Good order prevailed during the meeting and the police officers present as a precautionary measure had little to do. A committee was appointed to wait upon Governor Walsh today and have him intercede with Police Commissioner O'Meara to have the latter forbid further exhibitions of the film.

POLICE FOREWARNED.

The police had received advance information Saturday night of the proposed demonstration of the negroes and had sent many officers to the neighborhood of the playhouse to preserve order. John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, whose wife was the late Agnes Booth, of the famous Booth family that included John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin, claims to have heard negroes in the lobby exclaim: "The mayor wouldn't give us our rights, and we will take the law into our own hands."

The police cleared the theatre lobby and arrested Trotter at the ticket office when he was demanding that he be sold a ticket. He claims that he was hit on the jaw by an officer without provocation and he was then led away to the police station, followed by hundreds of angry negroes. There was great excitement and a crowd of about 5000 people gathered. Three other negroes were later arrested, Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist church, Joseph Gould and Fred Banks. Gould was held on the charge of assaulting an officer and the other three for disturbing the peace. All were released on bail. A white man was also arrested.

Meanwhile the sale of all tickets to the performance was stopped. Admission was granted only to those who had bought tickets in advance. The production was given in full to an audience that only half-filled the house and somebody let loose chemicals that made the atmosphere of the theatre unbearable. All the windows had to be opened.

TROTTER'S STORY.

Trotter gave this version of his arrest. "I received today a letter from Mayor Curley saying that the film of 'The Birth of a Nation' had been altered so that the objectionable features were removed. To satisfy myself I went to the theatre and tried to buy a ticket. Every negro there was refused a ticket and at least one white man told me that he had bought a ticket and that while colored men were refused admission, whites were told they could go in. The seller told me there were no tickets for sale and I asked why there were no signs up to that effect. Then an officer hit me on the jaw. They dragged me to the station, though I would have gone without protest."

MAYOR HISSED

At the protest meeting yesterday afternoon Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, the last of the group of New England abolitionists that included William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, presided, the meeting being held under the auspices of the Wendell Phillips Memorial association.

Few direct references were made to Mayor Curley, except by Mr. Trotter, in the hall. When he first mentioned the mayor's name there was hissing. "Don't hiss," cried Trotter, whose speech was impassioned. "The mayor has yet a chance to make good in the matter if he will. We said to him: 'If you insist that the only morality under the law relating to theatres in Boston is sex morality stand forth as a man and say to the manager of the Tremont theatre that you want the film discontinued.

"'Where is the Jim Curley of old—the friend of the people—lovable Jim Curley, whom we colored people supported for the mayoralty against the advice of some of our white friends? If we were good enough to support you for mayor, we ought to be good enough for you to be protected by you from this southern misrepresentation of our race,'" he said.

As a racial demonstration, the disturbance Saturday was probably the largest seen in Boston since the Civil war and the presence of so many police officers, it is believed, alone prevented possible bloodshed.

The whole affair came as the culmination of a fortnight of agitation by the colored people of Boston and their friends against the production of this play, which, they contended, was not only an insult to the colored race, but was an incentive to race hatred and to lawlessness. Meetings had been held, protests voiced, appeals made to the mayor and other authorities, but the play continued. Saturday, according to the theatre management, word was learned of a plot to pack the theatre with negroes, seize and destroy the films, which are kept in the operating box at the back of the orchestra and stop the play by force.

Negro leaders deny the truth of this charge, however. Some of them do admit, however, that the demonstration was planned in advance. Regarding their arrest, the four colored men taken into custody claim that they were not acting in a disorderly manner but simply insisting on securing tickets, which were refused them although whites were being sold tickets. They claimed that it was racial discrimination and that they were within their rights.

MAYOR'S STATEMENT

Mayor Curley was told of the trouble at the theatre while he was attending the Knights of Columbus banquet at the Copley-Plaza Saturday night. When asked if he would stop the production he said, "The matter is entirely in the hands of the police, it being a disturbance. As far as stopping the production my hands are tied. A board of censors has seen it and reported that there is absolutely nothing obscene or immoral about the film."

He said that two delegations of colored people had waited upon him and asked him to stop the show. "I told them today that I could not do so and they threatened to go to the governor and I said that they might." He denied that he had told them to make a demonstration.

LEDGER
ess
BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
APR 19 1915

WALSH TO PROSECUTE PRODUCERS OF FILM.

BOSTON, April 19.—As the result of a protest made at the state house today by a crowd of over 1000 colored people Governor Walsh and a committee of the protesting people agreed upon a plan of criminal prosecution of the producers of the film, "The Birth of a Nation" now being given at the Tremont theater.

NASHUA (N. H.) TELEGRAPH
APRIL 19, 1915

PROTEST PICTURE

"Birth of Nation" Object of Official Concern

Boston, April 19. Governor Walsh summoned Attorney General Attwill, Chief George E. Neal of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner of the city, and Supt. Michael H. Crowley of the local police to confer at the state house to determine whether he had authority to prohibit the further exhibition in this city of picture films purporting to portray scenes of the Civil war.

Mayor Curley has decide ithat he cannot stop the production inasmuch as it has been established that the pictures are not obscene. While the governor was closeted with other officials, several hundred negroes were waiting to be heard in a protest against the exhibition, and occupied the steps of the state house. Among them were a number who were arrested following a demonstration at the theater Saturday night.

In addition to the negroes there were white representatives also opposed to the pictures. During the time spent in waiting before the hearing several speeches were made in which they stated that it invited race prejudice, gave a false impression of the war, and served to revive the bitterness once existing between the North and the South.

PORTLAND (Me.) ARGUS
APRIL 19, 1915
70

RACIAL INCIDENT 18 AT THE HUB

Mass Meeting Yesterday, Visit at State House Today.

Boston, April 18.—A thousand negroes with some white sympathizers voted at a mass meeting today to go to the State House at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to enlist the aid of Gov. Walsh in an effort to prevent further exhibition of the motion pictures which were the cause of the racial disturbance in the lobby of the Tremont Theatre last night when several negroes were arrested.

The pictures are based on Thomas Dixon's story "The Clansman," and purport to represent incidents of the reconstruction period in the South.

William M. Trotter, one of those arrested last night on a charge of disturbing the peace; Michael J. Jordan of the Irish Land League, Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, who was introduced as the "only living abolitionist," and J. C. Manning of Montgomery, Ala., a former member of the Legislature of that State, addressed the meeting.

They asserted that the effect of the pictures was to stir up race prejudice against negroes.

APR 19 1915

NEGROES ARRESTED

150 Patrolmen Guard "Birth of the Nation"

RIOT IN ONE OF BOSTON'S THEATRES

Wm. M. Trotter and Pastor Puller Taken into Custody

Boston, April 19.—Hundreds of negroes stormed the Tremont theatre Saturday night in an endeavor to gain admission to the performance of "The Birth of a Nation," the photoplay based on "The Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, over which there has been much protest because of the alleged unfavorable representations of negroes in the South immediately after the war.

Admission to the theatre was refused negroes, and there ensued a melee with the police, during which four negroes were arrested. Among them was William Munroe Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights league, and editor of The Guardian, who was censured by President Wilson a short time ago when he was leading a delegation of negroes to protest against alleged discrimination against colored government employes. The delegation was informed at that time that Trotter could not come to the White House again. The others arrested were Aaron W. Fuller, pastor of the People's Baptist church; Joseph Gould and Fred Banks. Gould was held on the charge of assaulting an officer and the other three for disturbing the peace. All were released on bail. A white man was also arrested.

The police had received advance information of the demonstration and at 7:30 o'clock there were 600 plain clothes men in the lobby and in the alleys off Avery and Tremont streets around the theatre. Outside were 200 officers in uniform, who lined both sides of the street from Avery to Boylston streets. John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, whose wife was the late Agnes Booth of the famous Booth family that included John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin, claims to have heard negroes in the lobby exclaim: "The mayor wouldn't give us our rights, and we will take the law into our own hands."

With Superintendent of Police Crowley in personal charge, the police cleared the lobby, Trotter was arrested at the ticket window when he was demanding that he be sold a ticket. He claims that an officer in plain clothes hit him on the jaw. A burly sergeant and a patrolman literally dragged him to the Lagrange street station. Hundreds of negroes followed shouting and many whites from curiosity. Trotter protested that he would go along willingly if the police would not hurt his wrists. There was great excitement between Avery and Tremont streets and a crowd of about 5,000 gathered. The other arrests were made in front of the theatre and in the lobby.

Meanwhile the sale of all tickets to the performance was stopped. Admission was granted only to those who had bought tickets in advance. The production was given in full to an audience that only half-filled the house and somebody let loose chemicals that made the atmosphere of the theatre unbearable. All the windows had to be opened.

Trotter gave his version of his arrest: "I received to-day a letter from Mayor Curley saying that the film of 'The Birth of a Nation' had been altered so that the objectionable features were removed. To satisfy myself I went to the theatre and tried to buy a ticket. Many negro there was refused a ticket At least one white man told me that he had bought a ticket and that while Chinamen were refused admission, they were told they could go in. I protesting no disturbance. The seller told me there were no tickets for sale and I asked why there were no signs up to that effect. Then an officer hit me on the jaw. They dragged me to the station, though I would have gone without protest."

The negroes were angry, but no threats of violence were heard. Most of the remarks were denunciations of the police and references to Wendell Phillips and William Lloyd Garrison. The excitement continued along Tremont street until after the close of the performance and over 200 officers were kept busy clearing the sidewalk in front of the theatre. The police made three more arrests in order to head off further disturbance at the crowded picture show.

DEMOCRAT
Dover N. Hamp.
APR 19 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Photo-Play In Boston Theatre Denounced In Mass Meeting

Boston, April 19.—A crowd which packed Faneuil hall beyond its capacity and swarmed into the streets where an overflow meeting was conducted, cheered, applauded, hooted and hissed as speaker after speaker denounced the photo-play "Birth of a Nation," now running at the Tremont theatre, its promoters and the authorities who permit it to be continued.

The claim was made that Mayor Curley had been called upon repeatedly to halt the production of "The Birth of a Nation," but had dodged the issue.

The name of President Wilson, who was quoted as endorsing the play, was hissed repeatedly. The bitterest feeling was shown at the mention of the name of Curley, jeers and hisses mingling. About a third of the audience was composed of white persons, the rest being negroes.

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 20, 1915

One of the busiest mortals at the State House yesterday, during the demonstration by the colored and white protestants to the continuance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was Jim Hain, the watchman. He was stationed at the side entrance and was kept busy admitting persons to the buildings. Each person passing through the entrance was given a check and the name was placed on a pad. These persons had to go out the door they entered and as they left the building they turned in their check and their name was scratched off the list. It was an admirable system

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 20, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

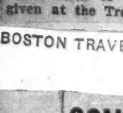
Yesterday crowds thronged the matinee and night performances of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre.

Nervousness over the reports of opposition and the disturbances of Saturday night were not in the least apparent, and profound interest and much applause marked the view taken by the two big audiences.

The large attendance of women at the matinee can no doubt be attributed to the many romantic and pathetic incidents of the play. The desire to see the great film on its merits as a vast spectacle has naturally been augmented by a curiosity on the part of thousands to view a subject that has caused so much discussion.

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 20, 1915

AT THE MAYOR'S GATE



The silliness as of death hung around City Hall yesterday, for the municipal building did not receive any of the protesters against "The Birth of a Nation," those against the film having transferred their base of operations to the State House. The protesters did not get what they went after at City Hall, but they got many soft words. The Mayor remembered that "a soft answer turneth away wrath."

HERALD
Washington, D. C.
APR 20 1915

Agrees to Film Firm Prosecution.

Boston, April 19.—As the result of a protest made at the State House today by a crowd of over 1,000 colored people, Gov. Walsh and a committee of the protesting people agreed upon a plan of criminal prosecution of the producers of the film, "The Birth of a Nation," now being given at the Tremont Theater.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 20, 1915

CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS PASS FILM PROTEST

The Boston Congregational Ministers' meeting has passed resolutions condemning "The Birth of a Nation" and asking Gov. Walsh to take whatever action is necessary to discontinue the exhibition of the film. The resolutions are:

"Whereas, the photo-drama entitled 'The Birth of a Nation,' now being presented in Tremont Theatre, has aroused the entire Negro population of Boston and created a most unfavorable impression upon many fair-minded persons irrespective of race or color;

"And, whereas, the committee appointed one week ago to investigate this play and report its findings is unanimous in the feeling that, although from the artistic standpoint it is a wonderful exhibition, its final effect is thoroughly evil and vicious; that it arouses and strengthens the race prejudice which is so serious a menace both in the North and in the South; that it fans into flame the sectional feeling which all loyal Americans are endeavoring to eliminate; and that its implied justification of the Ku Klux and of lynch law is thoroughly against good morality and law;

"Therefore, be it resolved that we, the Boston Congregational Ministers' Meeting, hereby earnestly petition his excellency, the Governor of the commonwealth, to take such action as is necessary, in the interests of true democracy, justice and morality, to discontinue its presentation.

"Be it further resolved, that copies of this petition be sent to the leading Boston journals."

Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

THEATRE.—"The ...on" continues its ...gagement. De... greatest picture ...

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 20, 1915

Hundreds Flock to City Court

To Hear "Birth of Nation" Case

EXTRA POLICE KEEPS CROWDS IN ORDER

Walsh Determined on New Legislation If Court Takes No Action

Police Commr. O'Meara was visited this morning by a representative of the colored residents of Boston, who are protesting against the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," and after a short conference a warrant was applied for in the courts for the arrest of those responsible for the exhibition of the film at a local theatre.

The warrant was sought on the ground that the show is a violation of the law which prohibits performances which may be classed as immoral. The decision the court reaches will be submitted to the officials of Boston, by whom further action will then be taken. The report will be made by Commr. O'Meara.

First Skirmish Won By the Opponents

The first skirmish in the court battle was won by the opponents of the film when Judge Dowd in the Municipal Court refused to stay the warrant proceedings at the request of Atty. John F. Cusick, who appeared for the defendants. Atty Cusick asker that the hearing be delayed for 24 hours, saying that ot would take him that length of time to collect his evidence.

Judge Dowd decided to render his decision late this afternoon on the request for warrants for John B. Schoffel and David W. Griffith, respectively proprietor of Tremont Theatre and producer of "The Birth of a Nation."

"This complaint should be heard immediately," said Judge Dowd, "before any more fuel is added to the flames. I will hear the complainants at 2 p.m. if there is any legal obstacle the play should be stopped at once. If there is none the producers of the play should be allowed to continue their performance without being molested."

Atty. Cusick extended an invitation to Judge Dowd and all the judges on the Municipal Bench to attend the show. Judge Dowd said that he would like to see the photo-show, but not until the conclusion of the present hearing.

In the Municipal Court this morning 11 persons were arraigned as a result of the disturbance in front of the Tremont Theatre on Saturday evening.

An extra detail of police was summoned to keep back the throng of colored persons who swarmed into the corridors of the court in Pemberton sq. to attend the arraignment. When court was called the crowd numbered several hundred, each one seeking admission to the court room.

Only a few could be let in, however, and the remainder were ordered back from the doors. The gathering was orderly, but the police were prepared for any untoward demonstration.

As a result of his conference with Gov. Walsh, Monday, Commr. O'Meara will probably have his own opinion at the performances of the photo-play today.

After receiving delegations of colored residents at the State House, Gov. Walsh announced that if the courts ruled that the play was not violating the law he would immediately appeal to the Legislature to pass a law which would prohibit spectacles which threaten to arouse racial antagonism.

Thousands of the curious were in front of the Tremont Theatre, Monday evening among them a few colored people, expecting, perhaps, to see a repetition of the scenes of Saturday night. A squad of police in charge of Supt. Crowley kept the crowd off the sidewalks. There was no disturbance in the lobby of the theatre and when the crowd was informed that there were no more seats for sale, they left quietly.

SPRINGFIELD (MASS.) MOR. UNION
APRIL 20, 1915

The worst feature of the agitation against the production of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," is that it affords a lot of free advertising for the book on which the objectionable scenes in the production are based. The colored people of Boston may succeed in having the play suppressed or the objectionable scenes expurgated in that city, but by doing so they are calling attention to the book and increasing its sales, and the impression created by reading the book is likely to be more lasting and more prejudicial to their interests than that produced by seeing the play.

Herald. Syracuse N.Y.
Apr. 20 1915

NEGROES PROTEST FILM.

Boston.—As a result of a protest made at the State House by a crowd of over 1,000 colored people, Governor Walsh and a committee of the protesting people agreed upon a plan of criminal prosecution of the producers of the film, "The Birth of a Nation," now being given at the Tremont street theater.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

"The Birth of a Nation."

Yesterday crowds thronged the matinee and night performances of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre.

Nervousness over the reports of opposition and the disturbances of Saturday night were not in the least apparent, and profound interest and much applause marked the view taken by the two big audiences. The large attendance of women at the matinee can no doubt be attributed to the many romantic and pathetic incidents of the play. The desire to see the great film on its merits as a vast spectacle has naturally been augmented by a curiosity on the part of thousands to view a subject that has caused so much discussion.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

COURT TO RULE ON PHOTO-PLAY

Decision by Governor After Conference.

Colored People Storm State House, but Keep Calm.

O'Meara Looks Over Night Crowd at Theatre.

Yesterday was another eventful day, though not a violently exciting one in the Boston career of Griffith's photo drama, "The Birth of a Nation," which has aroused the resentment of the colored people and of many white people in this city.

The culmination of the day's events was the decision of Gov Walsh expressed in these words to a committee:

"A suggestion has been substantially assented to that your committee, with the assistance of the Police Commissioner of Boston, will apply to the Municipal Court of Boston for a warrant and that in the event that the court shall find a violation of the law the Police Commissioner will at once accept the decision of the court and report the matter to the Mayor of Boston."

Continued on the Second Page.

Though the person on whom a warrant shall be served was not specified, the law under which the proposed action will be taken is broad enough to include a large number of men connected with the production.

The Persons Liable.

Chapter 212, Section 2, Revised Statutes, as slightly amended by Chapter 367, Acts of 1912, makes liable "whoever as manager, director, agent or in any other capacity proposes, advertises, gives, presents or participates in any lewd, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure show or entertainment," etc.

In the late forenoon and early afternoon a crowd of several thousand colored people and a few whites gathered on the front steps, the portico and sidewalk of the State House and waited while a committee called on Gov Walsh to protest against the further presentation of the photo drama at the Tremont Theatre.

The committee saw the Governor and he told them of the legal effort which is to be made today to stop the production in this city, and if this fails, of the effort he will make to have a law passed by this Legislature that will stop it.

In the meantime the crowd was addressed by a number of speakers until the committee reported the result of the interview with Gov Walsh. Then there was some more speaking and singing of hymns and songs, and the crowd dispersed peaceably.

In the evening several thousand curious people, among them a very few colored, gathered in front of the Tremont Theatre on the Common and waited patiently for something to happen. But nothing happened. It was a fine night and the crowd just hung there.

There was a squad of policemen present to keep the sidewalk clear and the people on the sidewalk moving. Supt Michael H. Crowley was in charge.

O'Meara Looks Crowd Over.

Commissioner O'Meara strolled down the mall of the Common just before 8 o'clock, passed through the crowd, crossed over to the sidewalk near the corner of Tremont and Boylston sts and walked back, hands in overcoat pockets, very leisurely past the theatre, gave the crowd and the entrance and the policemen a careful scrutiny, and then sauntered back to Headquarters without speaking to anybody.

A few policemen and plain-clothes men saw him make his tour, salute, and that was all. No thrills, no excitement, but the crowd still hung on.

The ticket lobby was crowded early and every seat in the house was sold before 8 o'clock. A great many people had evidently purchased tickets in advance.

There was no disturbance in the lobby or on the stairway, and the people departed quietly when informed there were no more seats. There were very few colored people among the ticket purchasers.

Inside the theatre there were no demonstrations and the show passed off quietly.

There was no doubt that the colored people had determined to keep away from the theatre last evening and wait for the law to take its course. They were advised so to do by the speakers at the State House demonstration. They put all their efforts yesterday into the State House protest, and colored men and women came there from all over Greater Boston.

The legal effort which will be made today to stop the production was suggested by Moorfield Storey to Police Commissioner O'Meara. He suggested that the show as presented is a violation of Chapter 367, Acts of 1912, which in substance prohibits a performance that may be regarded as indecent, immoral, impure or suggestive of lewdness or obscenity. The act is rather broad in scope, but the legal opinion has also been advanced that the show can be stopped on the ground of a public nuisance.

Walsh Promises Action.

Gov Walsh went over the whole ground with the committee and pointed out his own position as well as the position of the Mayor and the Police Commissioner under the statute of 1912.

The committee that waited on Gov Walsh consisted of William H. Lewis, Butler Wilson, Rev Samuel Bronson, John W. Schenck and Rev Samuel A. Brown. Besides these about 50 were permitted to attend the conference. Prior to the arrival of the committee the Governor had been in consultation with Police Commissioner O'Meara and Police Supt Crowley.

When the committee and delegates arrived in the conference room Gov Walsh addressed them, saying in part:

"I know the purpose of your visit and I want to say that I am very much pleased that you have come here so peacefully and orderly, that I am very glad to give up my engagements for the morning and to devote even further time to the consideration of the question which you present.

"You, of course, understand that at present this performance is now being carried on under legally licensed authority. I am asked now on one hand to consider and hear your impressions and your views and also the views and authority of other public officials who have given approval to this performance. One of those officials is the Police Commissioner of the city of Boston, whom the Governor appoints to office.

"Chapter 64 of the Acts of 1913 clearly and unmistakably places upon the Police Commissioner and the Mayor of the city of Boston the sole power of deciding what of a theatrical nature is immoral, obscene or tends to injure the morals of the community. These officials, through their representatives, have made findings which in substance mean that there is nothing in this performance, as is now presented, of anything 'obscene, immoral, or tending to injure the morals of the community.'

Warrant to Be Asked.

"You seriously question the finding made by their representatives, as I understand it. We have public authorities on one side and an element in the community making contentions that the facts are not well founded. This morning we have been consulting statutes and decisions of the court to see what could be done.

"A suggestion has been substantially assented to that your committee, with the assistance of the Police Commissioner, will apply to the Municipal Court in Boston for a warrant, and that, in the event that the court shall find a violation of the law, the Police Commissioner will at once accept the decision of the court and report the matter to the Mayor of Boston.

"That is the first step to be taken. I sympathize with you tremendously. I don't propose, while I am Governor, to allow any movement arousing antagonism to any race of people in Massachusetts.

"I want to ask you to be patient, and let us in our own way work out this problem, and if there is not any law, we will try to have some law enacted."

There were remarks by Rev M. A. N. Shaw, Miss E. Putnam, Dr I. L. Roberts, Josiah A. Crawford, Dr Alice W. McCann, Mrs A. Sparrow, Mrs Agnes Adams, Rev E. A. Auten, Rev S. A. Brown, Rev Ormonde Walker, Mrs Anna Phillips Williams, William Munroe Trotter and William Dexter Brigham.

Hisses for "America."

After these addresses the Governor said:

"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this witnessed in the State House in all its history. Men and women coming here with tears in their eyes, asking the Governor to protect them from race hatred! I hope to God it will never happen again.

"I want you to know that I intend to assert every influence and power that I possess to keep Massachusetts free from race or religious prejudices."

During the conference Nelson P. Brown, first assistant Attorney General, was called in to hear what was said.

In the crowd outside two colored women fainted. Somebody started "America," but it was stopped by a storm of hisses. "The Star Spangled Banner" was treated more courteously, and "We'll Hang Jeff Davis" was sung with a vim, especially when the name "Thomas Griffith" was substituted for "Jeff Davis."

William Monroe Trotter addressed the crowd after the meeting with Mr Walsh, and counseled patience, as the Governor was working to stop the play. He suggested that a subscription be taken up for the colored women who were arrested at the theatre Saturday night. The hat was passed around and the crowd dispersed.

Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

Tremont Theatre

Interest in "The Birth of a Nation," the photo-play at the Tremont Theatre, continues unabated. Twice yesterday the auditorium of the house was filled and the performance thoroughly enjoyed. A new film has been incorporated by orders of David W. Griffith showing the progress of the negro race in this country. The record of advancement completed the story from the time the negro, as shown in the first part of the picture, was brought in chains from Africa, up to the present, when he has developed extraordinary industrial resource and skill in the arts, professions, crafts and agriculture. It is now a permanent part of the entertainment.

...1915

...ROWD IN ...OTEST TO WALSH

...RONG AT STATE HOUSE OPPOSES PHOTO-PLAY

Conference Decides That Court Action Against "The Birth of a Nation" Be Started

The sight of a colored man standing on the balcony of Bulfinch front without the Governor's office, where no man has stood to speak in many years, addressing a crowd of 2000 colored men and women gathered on the steps below, came as the climax to the spectacular demonstration made by the negroes in their protest yesterday against the production of the "moving picture drama," the "Birth of a Nation" as at the Tremont Theatre.

As a result of their protest a complaint will be sworn out by representatives of the colored people and a representative from Police Commr. O'Meara's office against some person concerned in the production of the play on the ground that the play is immoral and contrary to the statute of 1909. Then, if the court upholds the complaint, Police Commr. O'Meara will make a finding against the production and so inform the Mayor. Then the play will be stopped.

The action towards prosecution will be taken Tuesday.

The Governor first announced this to a committee of about 100 colored men and women in the Executive Council's room paid cries of "God Bless you, Governor," from women who wept with the joy.

The Governor made this statement to the protesting committee:—

"I know the purpose of your visit. The committee representing you with whom I have been in conference, has informed me of its purpose. I want to say that I am very much pleased that you have come here so peacefully and orderly that I am very glad to give up my engagements for the morning and to devote even further time to the consideration of the question which you present.

"You, of course, understand that at present this performance is now being carried on under legally licensed authority. I am now on the one hand to consider and hear your impressions and your views and also the views and authority of other public officials who have given approval to this performance. One of those officials is the police commissioner of the city of Boston, whom the Governor appoints to office. Chapter 494 of the acts of 1909, clearly and unmistakably places upon the police commissioner and the Mayor of the city of Boston the sole power of deciding what of a theatrical nature is immoral, obscene or tends to injure the morals of the community.

"These officials through their representatives have made findings which in substance mean that there is nothing in this performance, as is now presented of an "obscene, immoral or tending to injure the morals of the community." You seriously question the finding made by their representatives as I understand it. We have public authorities on statutes and decisions of the court to see what could be done.

"A suggestion has been substantially assented to that your committee with the assistance of the police commissioner of the city of Boston will apply to the municipal court of the city of Boston for a warrant and that in the event that the court shall find a violation of the law the police commissioner will at once accept the decision of the court and report the matter to the mayor of Boston.

Outlines Limitations

"That is the first step to be taken, and in the meantime I think possibly it may be desirable to have another person censor the play sometime during the day.

"I want you to know that the law does not give me any power in the premises except to consult with the Police Commissioner, by reason of his receiving his appointment from the state government.

"I sympathize with you tremendously. If there is anything tending more to destroy and undermine American institutions and American liberty it is a race or religious prejudice. I don't propose while I am Governor of this state to allow any movement arousing antagonism to any race of people in Massachusetts. If any such movements are to be carried on in Massachusetts they have got to be carried on underground where the sunlight does not come.

"So I want to ask you to be patient and let us in our own way work out this problem, and if there is not any law we will try to have some law enacted. I hope you will be patient and quiet and try to preserve peace and order.

"Massachusetts has always been a friend of your race and your men have fought and died for Massachusetts as bravely as any other men of any other race, and you are all loyal to her today. The constitution of this government guarantees to every man, woman and child an equal opportunity in life, and those things which tend to and create prejudices and hatred and bigotry must be eliminated not by force but by law. Through your committee I will keep in touch with the situation."

"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this witnessed in the State House in all its history. Men and women coming here with tears in their eyes, asking the Governor to protect them from race hatred! I hope to God it will never happen again.

"I want you to know that I intend to assert every influence and power that I possess to keep Massachusetts free from race or religious prejudices. If our government has become great and has given to the world evidence of its God-given mission to mankind, it is due chiefly to the fact that here all men and all races are guaranteed equality of opportunity for the enjoyment of the blessings which the framers of our government guaranteed to all our citizens, and for which one hundred and forty years ago today the farmers of Massachusetts struck the first blow at Concord Bridge."

The climax of the day came when W. Monroe Trotter, leader of the delegation, authorized by the governor to give his message to the people outside on the steps chose the most spectacular method and spoke from the balcony far above the steps.

With characteristic daring he stood without the balcony rail on a narrow coping and shouted a report of what the governor had said to the black sea of faces staring up from the steps.

Such a scene has not been enacted in many years at the State House. The sacred Bulfinch front in the foreground, the crowds of negroes shouting thanksgivings and in the background the statue of Col. Robert Shaw and his black soldiers.

Almost equal to this was the hysterical scene in the Council chamber when Governor Walsh explained the new move that would put the matter up to the courts. Cries of "God Bless Our Governor" from the women and the sound of weeping and laughing at the same time echoed through this chamber of calm deliberation. The joy of the colored people seemed to know no bounds for in their enthusiasm they begged the Governor so step to the balcony and make the announcement over again to the people left outside.

It was only after several minutes of argument that the Governor was able to convince them that this would be "too spectacular and would rob the protest of its calm judicial character." They finally accepted his refusal, and the Governor appointed Trotter to tell the people what had taken place.

The new procedure against the play had a history, which the Governor recited to the newspapermen soon after the conference. On Friday, Moorfield Storey, the [illegible] a letter to Commr. O'Meara citing the law and claiming that the performance could be barred, on the ground that it was immoral and contrary to the statute of 1910 governing performances.

O'Meara replied in a letter which has not reached Storey, but which was shown for the first time to the delegation at the Governor's office.

In it he proposed that the court should settle the question. The committee representing the colored people, which consisted of former assistant U. S. Dist. Atty. Lewis, Henry C. Robbins, a stenographer in the Superior Court, Butler R. Wilson and one or two others then decided to follow it out. In the conference at the time was O'Meara and Supt. of Police Crowley, Judge Edward Logan of South Boston and Nelson Brown, first assistant attorney-general.

The Governor said personally that he thought that this was a happy solution of the problem and urged the colored people to be patient. O'Meara and Crowley left the room then and the larger committee of speakers were invited in.

When they were settled in the Council Chamber the Governor came out, but not until the newspaper men had been enticed from the room and the doors shut. Later the decision to bar the newspaper men was reversed, evidently, and while the colored people were speaking the reporters were admitted.

Among the speakers was Miss Anna Phillips Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips; Joshua Crawford, Alice W. McKane, Mrs. A. Sparrow, Dr. R. L. Roberts, Mrs. Agnes Adams, Mrs. E. Putnam, Rev. E. A. Autem, Rev. Ormond Walker, William D. Brigam and Mr. Trotter.

After they had concluded the Governor retired to his office but not until several women had rushed to shake his hand. One woman fell on her knees grasping the Governor's hands and repeating thrice in a loud voice "God Bless you Governor, I shall pray for you."

Later a collection was taken up to help pay the fines of the men arrested Saturday night at the Tremont Theatre. The crowd started gathering as early at 9 a.m.

The throng consisted largely, if not entirely, of persons who had attended a mass meeting of protest against the play at Faneuil Hall, Sunday. They opposed the play on the ground that it is a scandal to the State, a cause of unrest among the people and a danger to public peace.

The crowd was very orderly, except for one colored man who started a little demonstration, but was quickly quieted. The protestants were largely colored persons, but contained a large sprinkling of whites. A delegation of 50 representing it was admitted to conference with the Governor and talked the matter over with him shortly after 10.30 a.m. This followed a conference of the Governor with Supt. Crowley of the Boston police, who declined to state its result when he left the executive chamber.

One colored man started to make a personal demonstration on the State House steps as the crowd waited, but he was jeered by the crowd and told to "go down to the Tremont Theatre" if he wanted to be a hero. John Noonan, a messenger at the State House, who handled the crowd at the State House, quieted him.

So orderly was the crowd that only two policemen were in evidence for some time, though more were sent for later.

LYNN (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 20, 1915

WALSH TO ASK LAW TO STOP RACE PLAYS

Governor Walsh will ask the legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice, in the event the courts decide there is no law on the statute books prohibiting such exhibitions.

REPUBLICAN
ess: Springfield, Mass.
APR 20 1915

GOVERNOR GETS PROTEST

HE WANTS FILM SUPPRESSED

IS IN SYMPATHY WITH NEGROES

Says He Will Urge Legislature to Forbid Productions That Raise Race Question.

Gov Walsh summoned Attorney-General Henry C. Attwill, Chief George E. Neal of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner of Boston, and Superintendent Michael H. Crowley of the Boston police, to a conference at the statehouse yesterday to determine whether he had authority to prohibit the further exhibition in that city of picture films purporting to portray scenes of the civil war. Resolutions protesting against the pictures were adopted by the New England Methodist conference now in session there, but Mayor Curley decided that he could not stop the production, inasmuch as it was not established that the pictures were obscene.

The governor, after the conference, notified a delegation representing the protestants that he would ask the Legislature to pass a law prohibiting plays or picture exhibitions that raised the race question. Police Commissioner O'Meara told the protestants that he thought a statute enacted in 1910 governing public exhibitions would authorize him to stop the one in question. He asked the committee to call at his office to-day to frame a complaint.

In addressing the committee, Gov Walsh said that the sole reason why he did not act arbitrarily and forthwith to stop the exhibition was because he lacked authority. He advised the committee to make a formal complaint against the exhibitors in the municipal court, and said the police commissioner, who was directly responsible, would accept the court's decision. He added:—

"I sympathize with you tremendously. If there is anything tending to destroy and undermine American institutions and American liberty it is race or religious prejudice. I do not propose while I am governor to allow any movement arousing antagonism to any race of people in Massachusetts. If there is no law covering the subject we will try to have one enacted."

While the governor was closeted with the other officials, several hundred Negroes, waiting to be heard in protest against the exhibition, occupied the steps of the statehouse opposite the memorial to Col Robert Gould Shaw, a white officer who lost his life while leading a Negro regiment in the charge against Fort Wagner. Among them were a number who were arrested following a demonstration at the theater Saturday night. In addition to the Negro protestants there was a white representation also opposed to the pictures. These included Mrs Joseph Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips; William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips memorial association, and Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

During the wait for the hearing by the governor several speeches were made. The speakers declared that the exhibition was a travesty on history, designed not only to discredit the Negro race, but to hold up to contempt and ridicule the abolitionists of Massachusetts and the Union soldier. They asserted that in addition to intensifying race prejudice, the pictures gave the younger generation a false impression of the war and served to revive the bitterness once existing between the North and South.

National Song Hissed.

Four or five thousand persons, who had stood on the state-house steps for nearly four hours, awaiting the decision of the conference within, applauded and sang when William Munroe Trotter appeared on the balcony and announced the governor's decision. Throughout the morning they had waited on the steps, singing, cheering and listening to speeches. The demonstration was marred only by the hissing of "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner" when some of those in the crowd began to sing.

While the conference was going on within the state-house the throng of 4000 or 5000 Negroes outside on the steps alternately listened to the exhortations and hanged Thomas Dixon, D. W. Griffith or Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree, to the tune of John Brown's body. For a while interest was intense, but, as the hours dragged along, oratory began to lag and even the stimulating music of "The Fight Is Won," led by a sister jammed against the state-house door, lost some of its effect.

The crowd was nervous and excitable. There was so much hissing when "America" was being sung that the leading singers stopped. There was also hissing, though in smaller volume, when "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung.

CROWD AT TREMONT THEATER.

Many Stand in Line to Buy Tickets for Afternoon Exhibition — Police on Hand.

A crowd, made up apparently of persons who were anticipating a repetition of the events of Saturday night, gathered in front of the Tremont theater yesterday afternoon some time before the motion picture performance of "The birth of a nation" was scheduled to begin. Most of the crowd assembled on Lafayette mall, opposite the theater. Many Negroes were included in it. Ten patrolmen were on duty in the lobby and these allowed only ticket holders to enter. Everyone seemed to be in a more or less expectant attitude, but no disturbance of moment occurred.

MINISTERS OPPOSE PLAY.

Congregational Association Calls Upon Governor to Stop It.

The Congregational ministerial association, at its meeting in Pilgrim hall, Boston, yesterday, unanimously adopted resolutions presented by a committee of five persons, who had been appointed to investigate and report upon the moral tendencies of the picture show entitled "The birth of a nation," now being given at the Tremont theater. The resolutions, while admitting the artistic value of the pictures, condemned the exhibition as calculated to create race prejudice and to have a deleterious effect generally, and in view of the fact that Mayor Curley had announced that he could take no action in the matter, called upon Gov Walsh to take any step within his power to suppress the further presentation of the same.

POST
: Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

CUT OUT THE RAPE FILMS

The simple and sensible course to pursue in the "Birth of a Nation" controversy is for the management to eliminate at once the objectionable films, showing the two attempts at rape.

These films have given grave offence, not only to colored people in the community, but to a large proportion of the population that sympathizes with them in their indignant protest. The Post is of the opinion that these representations are within the meaning of the law, "obscene, immoral or tending to injure the morals of the community." We believe, if the question goes into court, that it will be so held. But whether this is the case or not from a strictly legal point of view, it is clear that these repulsive scenes are regarded as unfair and insulting by the colored people of Boston and their many friends.

In other respects, this photo-play is one of the most remarkable productions ever seen in Boston. Artistically it represents a notable advance in moving picture development. It is a great pity that it should be marred by slurs upon a race, slurs that arouse racial bitterness and antagonism and tend to injure the well-being of the community.

Without waiting for further agitation or for the decision of any court, the offending films should be promptly and permanently cut out by the management.

EVENING RECORD
: Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

Flickerings From Film-land

Mae Marsh, whose spectacular rise to the head of the ranks of motion picture actresses is generally attributed to the training of D. W. Griffith, is possessed of natural capacities of a pre-eminent order, according to Mr. Griffith himself.

"If I have done anything," the great director says, "I have shown this remarkable girl how to get the best out of the unusual talent which is hers. Today she is, perhaps, the best we have. But she owes her success as much to her own perseverance and determination as to any other quality."

Miss Marsh's star has been rising since the production a year ago of "The Escape." Her two recent appearances in the Mutual Masterpictures, "The Outcast," by Thomas Nelson Page, and "The Outlaw's Revenge in the Birth of a New Republic," as well as the electric performance she gave on the film in "The Birth of a Nation," have established her fame securely.

To those who remember her as an awkward school girl who followed her sister to the studio two years ago, the transformation seems almost impossible. Under the tight-coiled hair, D. W. Griffith, however, saw what is now conceded to be the most perfectly shaped head in motion pictures. She has been a mimic from childhood. For Griffith the rest was easy.

HERALD
: Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

TREMONT THEATRE

Yesterday the crowds that thronged the matinee and night performances of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre equalled the record breaking attendance the film picture enjoyed on its opening day. An hour before each performance the sale was exhausted and hundreds turned away. Many outlying towns were represented. Nervousness over the reports of opposition and the disturbances of Saturday night was not in the least apparent. The large attendance of women at the matinee can be attributed to the many romantic and pathetic incidents.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 191

Hold 2 For Starting Play Riot

At First "Birth of Nation" Hearing

"GOVERNOR'S CASES" HEARD IN AFTERNOON

City Court Crowded With Throng Eager to Attend "Movies" Hearing

This was Municipal Court day in the troubles over the production at the Tremont Theatre of the moving picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," which the negroes of Boston and their sympathizers say does a gross injustice to the colored man. There were two hearings in the city courts on various phases of the case, and they were attended by throngs. The first was the disposition of the cases which resulted from arrests that were made at the Tremont Theatre Saturday night when there was a riot in front of the theatre.

The second, and by far the more important hearing, was one which was the result of the protest of 1200 negroes to Gov. Walsh at the State House on Patriots' Day.

At this second hearing, which came during the afternoon, warrants were asked for the arrest of John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, and David W. Griffith, owner of the film. The Governor expected to make a solution of the case if warrants were issued against the theatrical men for running an improper entertainment. If warrants were refused, the Governor said he should seek legislation to prohibit plays that excited race prejudice.

Held in $200 for Inciting Riot

At the first session, that at which the rioting cases were considered, the charges against W. M. Trotter, 43, of 97 Sawyer ave., and Rev. A. W. Puller, 56, of 57 Lyndeboro st., Roxbury, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, were changed from disturbing the peace to inciting a riot. They were held in $200 bonds for hearing April 23.

Joseph Gould, 25, of Norwood, charged with assaulting Police Officer William Berglass by kicking him while he had a prisoner under arrest, pleaded not guilty. His case will be heard Wednesday.

There were several other cases, all of which were continued for hearing until April 23. They were:—

Fred Banks, 23, of 7 Camden st., Roxbury; charged with using profanity.

John Hines, 30, of 8 Concord sq.; charged with sauntering and loitering in violation of the city ordinances.

Clara Fosky of 19 Phillips st., charged with assault and battery on Patrolman

Stewart Massey of Cambridge, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner; T. Vivens of Cambridge, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner; Lucia Foster, 39 Grove st., charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner; James L. Dunn of West Newton, charged with using profanity; Charles P. Ray, 26, of 815 Tremont st., charged with throwing an egg from the theatre during the performance.

(Concluded on Page Two)

(Continued from Page One)

Sergt. King of station 4, who had charge of the prosecution of these riot cases, told the court he seriously objected to a continuance. In view of his objection, the court warned the prisoners to keep away from the Tremont Theatre until their cases were heard.

Ruled There Should Be No Continuance

The so-called Governor's end of the case was soon was not brought about without opposition from the film's representative, Mr. Cusick.

He asked a continuance when the case came up, but Judge Dowd said that he would be tried at once.

He said that if there was any legal objection the play should be stopped at once so as to take the fuel added to the flames of discontent. He also said that if the play was stopped the production the theatre management would be freed from molestation.

This morning's hearing was in the police court room, which is a small one, and Judge Dowd took the bench in the more than 100 persons packed the Boston Municipal auditorium, and Judge Dowd said: "I may say to all that this is a very important hearing and I ask all to avoid any expression of approbation or disapprobation, as the testimony may require it. This court room is at the present time packed beyond all endurance, and I ask, therefore, all persons to keep out of court. Witnesses will be called when they are needed."

The next point the court was cleared of all persons except court officers, members of the press and witnesses.

At the beginning of the hearing Attorney Cusick, for the complainants, stated that he did not want the case to be against the Governor. He held a conference with Attorney Nutter Dick, for the defendants, who said that Mr. Carty was "nearing the producing of the film" than Griffith, the producer. Therefore by an agreement of attorneys, the complaint was made against McCarty instead of Griffith, and was also made against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the

BOSTON AMERICAN
APR 15

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

ARRAIGN 14 ARRESTED OUTSIDE THEATRE IN RACE FILM MIX-UP

Fourteen men, 13 of them colored, arrested in and about the Tremont Theatre Saturday night, were arraigned in the municipal criminal court before Judge Dowd today. All but three of the cases were postponed until a week from tomorrow. Two of the accused were granted a hearing this afternoon and the third will be tried tomorrow. The two women arrested along with the 14 men have not been arraigned.

Those arrested Saturday night, who were arraigned this morning, a nd the charge or charges against them, follow:

William M. Trotter, editor of the Guardian, charged with causing a riot and disturbing the peace, and also with assault and battery on Patrolman John A. Connare.

Rev Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, Boston, charged with causing a riot and disturbing the peace.

Fred Banks, charged with using profanity.

Charles F. Ray, charged with disturbing an assembly by maliciously injuring a curtain by throwing an egg at it.

James L. Dunn, charged with using profanity.

Stephen Massey, charged with assault and battery on Patrolman Thomas H. Dowling with intent to rescue a prisoner.

James Bivens, attempting to rescue a prisoner.

John Hines, loitering.

William Fry, assault and battery and carrying a revolver.

Daniel Malcolm, assault and battery.

(Continued on Page Seven, Column 5.)

Formal application for summons to bring into court Manager John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre, and David W. Griffith, producer of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," in the fight which is to be waged to bar further presentation of the film, will be made before Judge Dowd in the municipal court this afternoon. A preliminary skirmish, in which both sides discussed the proposed application for summons, was held in Judge Dowd's chambers this morning.

Atty. John F. Cusick appeared in behalf of the theatre and film producer, while practically all of the colored attorneys of Boston were on hand to represent the applicants, with Atty. Butler R. Wilson as chief counsel.

Considerable discussion followed the application of Cusick to have the hearing on the application for the summons put over until Thursday, it was finally agreed by the court to allow Mr. Cusick until 2 this afternoon. The attorney for the theatre requested that action be deferred until after Judge Dowd had witnessed the photo-play, but the court said he would rather hear the evidence first and then view the film.

Judge Dowd, discussing the necessity for immediate action, said:

"This hearing should be held as soon as possible. It is a matter of exigency and should be heard before more fuel is added to the flames. It is a matter of large importance to both parties. After hearing the evidence I should like to

(Continued on Page Seven, Column 4.)

(Continued from Page One)

James E. Stewart, assault and battery.
Harris McDonald, assault.
James Gould, assault and battery on a police officer.
Charles F. Sullivan, assault.

Clara Foskey, charged with assault on a policeman, and Lucenia Foster, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner, are the two women arrested, but who have not yet been arraigned. All the defendants, with the exception of Charles F. Sullivan, are Negroes.

Trotter and Puller Released.

Trotter and Puller were released on their own recognizance of $250, and the bail bond of the other accused, upon which they were released following their arrests, is continued in force pending their hearing.

Sullivan and McDonald were crowded their hearing this afternoon. They are accused of mutual assault. The hearing of Gould was continued until tomorrow, while the cases—the other 11 defendants were put over until next week.

Considerable controversy was occasioned in court this morning over the right of attorneys for the defendants for continuances. The police vigorously opposed a continuance, Sergt. King, who swore to the complaints against the 14, demanding that the cases be tried at once. Speaking for immediate action, King said:

"In view of conditions existing with a mob so lawless that it attempts to force an entrance to a theatre we don't know how serious this may become. We ask for a hearing this week and sufficient bonds to hold these people."

Judge Dowd, addressing the defendants, said he would continue the cases with the understanding that the defendants keep away from the Tremont Theatre. "The colored people," he said, "ought to stay away." He agreed with Atty. Benjamin, representing some of the defendants, that this did not apply to those who purchased tickets for the purpose of witnessing the film.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) EVE. UNION
APRIL 20, 1915

GOVERNOR ACTS ON FILM PROTEST

Conference at State House May Lead to Ban on Photoplay.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 20—"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this witnessed in the State House in all its history. Men and women coming here with tears in their eyes, asking the Governor to protect them from race hatred. I hope to God it will never happen again." Statement by Gov. Walsh at the close of a conference yesterday with Negro citizens, who protested to him against the further production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Tremont Theater.

Two thousand Negroes, excitable and demonstrative, accompanied by numerous white persons, had assembled at the State House by 9 o'clock in the morning, acting on the exhortation of speakers at the Sunday Faneuil Hall massmeeting. In the crowd was a band of singers and when they started "America" there was hissing and the singing stopped. There was also hissing, though in smaller volume when "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung. Somebody started the song, "We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree," and many in the gathering substituted the name of Tom Dixon, the author of the play, for that of Davis.

After a long wait 60 persons, constituting the protesting delegation to be received in the Governor's office, headed by William Monroe Trotter, were admitted. Meanwhile the Governor had been in conference with George C. Neal, deputy chief of the State police; Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner; Michael H. Crowley, superintendent of police; William H. Lewis, Butler R. Wilson, Henry C. Robbins and Atty. Gen. Henry C. Attwill.

Informing the delegation that there had been a consultation of the statutes and the decisions of the courts to see what could be done, Gov. Walsh stated the wisest course would be to apply to the Boston Municipal Court for a warrant and that in event that the court should find a violation of the law the police commissioner will report the findings to the Mayor of Boston.

"This is the first step to be taken," the Governor said, "and in the meantime I think possibly it may be desirable to have another person censor the play some time during the day. I want you to know that the law does not give me any power in the premises except to consult with the police commissioner, by reason of his receiving his appointment from the State government."

While the conference was going on in the Governor's office the big crowd in front of the State House began a period of speechmaking and singing that kept the throng of 2000 or more interested. Gospel hymns were sung with fervor and all the speeches were wildly applauded. They seemed to be very nervous and highly excitable.

Shortly after 1 o'clock at the conclusion of the conference Trotter appeared on the balcony of the third floor of the State House and, stepping outside the iron railing, addressed the crowd. He spoke of Gov. Walsh's attitude and said that the Governor had promised to do everything in his power to end the exhibition of the photo-play. Trotter was cheered, as was also the Governor.

Gov. Walsh made it plain that he is personally opposed to any further production of the picture-play in its present form, giving alleged scenes of the reconstruction period of the South. But whether the Governor has any authority to take action against it was the big question, finally settled by the agreement to have the case taken into the local court, which means its [illegible] higher courts, in any

The Governor also made the point that if there is not any law to sustain the court he will try to have some law enacted. He showed that chapter 494 of the acts of 1908 puts it up to the local authorities to determine what of a theatrical nature is obscene, immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community.

If the court finds, after a hearing, that there has been a violation of the law the police commissioner will make a finding that the play is immoral or obscene and will notify the Mayor to that effect. Gov. Walsh said that would be a happy ending of the case. But if the court should make an adverse ruling, then the Governor will send a special message to the Legislature, asking for a new law.

Police Commissioner O'Meara told the protestants that he thought a statute enacted in 1910 governing public exhibitions would authorize him to stop the one in question. He asked the committee to call at his office today to frame a complaint.

In addressing the committee, Gov. Walsh said that the sole reason why he did not act arbitrarily and forthwith to stop the exhibition was because he lacked authority. He advised the committee to make a formal complaint against the exhibitors in the Municipal Court, and said the police commissioner, who was directly responsible, would accept the court's decision. He added:

"I sympathize with you tremendously. If there is anything tending more to destroy and undermine American institutions and American liberty it is race or religious prejudice. I don't propose while I am Governor of this State to allow any movement arousing antagonism to any race of people in Massachusetts. If any such movement is to be carried on in Massachusetts they have got to be carried on underground, where the sunlight does not shine.

"Try to use your good advice and say to your people that the Governor is interested in your welfare and that the sole reason he does not arbitrarily act forthwith is simply that he has not the authority or power; that he can act only through the legal agency which defines his authority. In good time I hope to be able to assist you. So let me ask you to go away peacefully and orderly and conscious of the fact that you enjoy just as full measure of rights as any other class of people and that your race and your color have as much right to be respected as any other race or color, that you have no reason at all to be ashamed or humiliated at the fact that there may be here and there something objectionable to you and your people.

"Massachusetts has always been a friend of your race and your men have fought and died for Massachusetts as bravely as any other men of any other race and you are all loyal to her today. The Constitution of this Government guarantees to every man, woman and child an equal opportunity in life, and those things which tend to and create prejudices and hatreds and bigotry must be eliminated not by force but by law. Through your committee I will keep in touch with the situation.

"The calm and sincere way in which you have presented to me your just grievances is another proof of the fact, if proof be needed, that your people have a right to enjoy the same privileges and rights of any class of people in the community. Perhaps your present misfortune and sufferings, for you evidently are suffering, will do more for the community than you realize. Sometimes even greater prejudices than those which are raised by a situation like this are eliminated and removed for the benefit of other races and classes of people outside of your own, and this agitation may result in a better understanding between all in the community.

"I want you to know that I intend to assert every influence and power that I possess to keep Massachusetts free from race or religious prejudices. If our Government has become great and has given to the world evidence of its God-given mission to mankind, it is due chiefly to the fact that here all men and all races are guaranteed equality of opportunity for the enjoyment of the blessings which the farmers of our Government guaranteed to all our citizens, and 140 years ago the farmers of Massachusetts struck the first blow at Concord Bridge."

FITCHBURG (Mass.) SENTINEL
APRIL 20, 1915

TO ASK COURT FOR WARRANT

Effort to Stop Production of "Birth of a Nation"—Negroes at State House

Boston, April 20.—Following one of the most dramatic scenes in [illegible] house has ever witnessed, during which nearly 2000 negroes surrounded the capitol in protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation," Governor Walsh announced sympathy with the contention that the pictures tend to incite race prejudice and bigotry, disturbing the [illegible] rights guaranteed to citizens of all classes under the constitution, and promised to use all his power to stop the production of the play.

As the first step toward stopping the production a warrant is to be asked for in the municipal court under chapter 367 of the acts of 1913 relating to immoral entertainments, for the arrest of the promoters of the pictures, against which the protest.

If the court decides that the play is not in violation of the [illegible] Walsh says he will ask the legislature to pass a law which will end the production of the pictures in this state.

While the governor was considering the matter in the executive council chamber with a committee of [illegible] appointed by the protesting negroes, a throng of nearly 2000 waited on the front steps of the capitol. At various times the crowd sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and a verse of "John Brown's Body," which voiced the resentment against the showing of The Clansman.

When some one started "America" there was so much hissing that the song was abandoned. There was a like demonstration against the "Star Spangled Banner," but not sufficient to prevent its rendition by the crowd.

The crowd wanted the governor to come out and make a statement, but he refused on the ground that such an appearance by him might lead to demonstrations which would carry the situation beyond that of calm, sound judgment.

The scene presented when William M. Trotter, bearing the protest message, stepped over the rail of the third floor balcony and began his address to the throng below him was extremely dramatic.

After eulogizing Walsh and urging the negroes to proceed in a calm and orderly manner, Trotter branched off into a further attack on the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and spoke for twenty minutes. At the conclusion of his address, the crowd dispersed quietly.

CONSTITUTION
Atlanta, Ga.
APR 20 1915

RECONSTRUCTION FILMS STIR BOSTON NEGROES

Boston, April 19—Governor Walsh today discussed with Attorney General Attwill, Chief Neal, of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, Boston police commissioner, and superintendent Crowley, of the Boston police, the question whether he had authority to prohibit further exhibition here of pictures alleged purporting to portray scenes of the civil war.

Resolutions protesting against the pictures were adopted by the New England Methodist conference, now in session here, but Mayor Curley announced he could not interfere, as it was established that the pictures were not the scene.

While the governor was closeted with the other officials, several hundred negroes, waiting to be heard in protest against the exhibition, occupied the steps of the statehouse. Among them were a number who were arrested after a demonstration at a local theater Saturday night.

The governor, after the conference, notified a delegation representing the protestants that he would ask the legislature to pass a law prohibiting the picture, race question, reconstruction exhibitions that [illegible]

Police Commissioner O'Meara said he thought a statute enacted in 1910 governing public exhibitions [illegible] to stop the sale in

AMERICAN

Boston, Mass.

APR 20 1915

ASK WARRANT IN FIGHT UPON FILM

A representative of the colored residents of Boston, who are protesting against the production at a local theatre of the film play "The Birth of a Nation," will today meet Police Commissioner O'Meara, and with him apply to the courts for a warrant for the arrest of those concerned with the exhibition of the films.

The court will be asked to pass on the question whether the play is immoral within the meaning of the law.

If the court finds that the show is violating the law, Commissioner O'Meara will make an official finding that the play is immoral. That finding wil lbe submitted to the city officials of Boston.

Governor Walsh said, after receiving several delegations at the State House, that if the court should rule that the play is not unlawful, he would at once ask the Legislature for legislation which would specifically forbid spectacles which threaten to arouse racial antagonism.

At a gathering of colored people at No. 1072 Tremont street W. Munroe Trotter, a leader of the colored protestants, declared that the halting of demonstrations against the play was only a truce until the legal battle is concluded.

As a result of the conference with Governor Walsh, Police Commissioner O'Meara will probably have a censor at the performances today.

In the evening several thousand curious people, among them a very few colored, gathered in front of the Tremont Theatre on the Common. There was a squad of policemen present to keep the sidewalk clear. Superintendent Crowley was in charge.

Commissioner O'Meara strolled down the mall of the Common. A few policemen and plain-clothes men saw him make his tour, saluted, and that was all. There were no thrills, no excitement; but the crowd still hung on.

There was no disturbance in the lobby or on the stairway, and the people departed quietly when informed there were no more seats.

There was no doubt the colored people had determined to keep away from the theatre and wait for the low to take its course.

In the criminal court today eleven persons will be arraigned on charges growing from the disturbance in and around the theatre Saturday night.

TIMES

Washington, D. C.

April 21

APR 20 1915

Massachusetts Governor Opposed to Race Films

BOSTON, April 20.—Governor Walsh told several hundred colored people who gathered at the State House to protest against the production in this city of the film "The Birth of a Nation," that he would ask the legislature to pass a law prohibiting plays or picture exhibitions that raised the race question.

In addition to the negroes there was a white representation also opposed to the pictures. These included Mrs. Joseph Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips; William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, and Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

Walsh said the sole reason why he did not act arbitrarily and forthwith to stop the exhibition was because he lacked authority. He advised the committee to make a formal complaint against the exhibitors in the municipal court, and said the police commissioner, who was directly responsible, would accept the court's decision.

WORCESTER (Mass.) TELEGRAM

APRIL 20, 1915

May Bar Birth of a Nation,"

Mayor George [illegible] and Chief of police George [illegible] decided yesterday the theatrical exhibition "The birth of a nation" probably would not receive a permit to show in Worcester. The presentation of the show has caused much trouble in Boston.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT

Boston, Mass.

APR 20 1915

PICTURES AND MUSIC

Tremont—The Birth of a Nation

A FILMED spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music a [illegible] spectacle.

GOVERNOR WALSH AND COMMITTEE THAT PROTESTED PLAY; PART OF CROWD THAT WAITED OUTSIDE THE STATE HOUSE

From left to right, John W. Schenck, C. Henry Robbins, Governor Walsh, Butler R. Wilson, William H. Lewis, the Rev. Samuel A. Brown.

NEW YORK PRESS

Date ..... APR 20 1915

WALSH AGAINST RACE FILMS

Bay State Governor Will Ask for Law Barring "Birth of Nation."

BOSTON, April 19.—Governor Walsh told several hundred negroes who gathered at the State House to-day to protest against the production in this city of the film "The Birth of a Nation" that he would ask the Legislature to pass a law prohibiting plays or picture exhibitions that raised the race question.

In addition to the negroes there was a white representation also opposed to the pictures. These included Mrs. Joseph Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips; William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, and Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

Walsh said the sole reason why he did not act arbitrarily and forthwith to stop the exhibition was because he lacked authority. He advised the committee to make a formal complaint against the exhibitors in the Municipal Court, and said the Police Commissioner, who was directly responsible, would accept the court's decision.

EVENING SUN

New York City

APR 20 1915

MOVIE OPPOSED IN BAY STATE.

Gov. Walsh Fights "The Birth of a Nation."

BOSTON, Mass., April 20.—Several thousand negroes waited on the State House steps here while a delegation lodged a protest with Gov. Walsh against the movie show called "The Birth of a Nation."

The Governor will ask the Legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of this show and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice in case the courts decide that there is no law prohibiting such exhibitions.

A complaint will be filed and if the court finds that the law has been violated Commissioner O'Meara will report to Mayor Hurley and he can stop its production; otherwise the Governor will ask for a new law.

EVENING WORLD

New York City

APR 20 1915

To Prosecute Producers of "Birth of a Nation."

BOSTON, April 20.—As a result of a protest made at the State House to-day by a crowd of more than 1,000 negroes, Gov. Walsh decided upon a plan of criminal prosecution of the producers of the film "The Birth of a Nation," now being given at the Tremont Theatre. Prosecution will be asked for under section 287 of the acts of 1910, prohibiting "suggestive" entertainments.

News, Yonkers N.Y.
Apr. 20, 1915

NEGROES OPPOSE FILM.

Boston, Mass., April 20.—Several thousand negroes waited on the state house steps yesterday while a delegation lodged a protest with Gov. Walsh against the movie show called "The Birth of a Nation."

The Governor will ask the legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of this show and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice in case the courts decide that there is no law prohibiting such exhibitions.

Eagle, Pittsfield, Mass. Apr 20, 1915

SHOULD SUPPRESS THE PLAY.

In New York city as careful a newspaper as the World after a first-hand inquiry criticized severely "The Birth of a Nation" as calculated to stir up discord and provoke race feeling. The author of the book upon which the photoplay is based is a southerner who in none of his writings has given the negro his just deserts.

Frank B. Sanborn of Concord bases his objection to the play on the ground that it is historically inaccurate and therefore pernicious in its influence on the youth of the land. If there is perversion of facts in this display which is made for the benefit of the masses who seldom take the trouble to verify their historical impressions, the performance cannot be too severely condemned. Those who applaud the play apparently are as little versed in history as they are in dramatic technic. Mr. Sanborn, who is the last survivor of the famous Boston school of abolitionists and who worked shoulder to shoulder with John Brown in the underground railroad days, writes to the Republican:—

"Upon remonstrances by Mayor Curley, the most dastardly passages have been suppressed, a confession that the original piece was unfit for exhibition. But there still remain things that must give just offense, and should warrant the canceling of the Tremont theatre license. At this theatre twice a day (2.10 and 8.10 p. m.) this mixture of thrilling tragedy and falsified history is presented to hundreds of young persons, as ignorant of their country's history — Charles Fleischer seems to be, and thus made to accept a view of our colored fellow-citizens which has no basis in fact but gives a false color and a distorted scheme of cause and effect. This is not innocent error, as with Mr. Fleischer, who was not born when the events sophisticated took place; but it is malicious perversion for a partisan and evil purpose,— to keep alive a fire of caste and hate, as pernicious to good government as it is forbidden by both the Old and New Testament."

When there is so much that is clean and decent and objectionable in the motion picture world, it seems a crime to both public patience and public morals to attempt to force upon the country [illegible] started product[illegible]

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

SURE VICTORY HAS BEEN WON

Opponents of "Birth of a Nation" Await Court Action Today— No Demonstration Last Night

The protestants to the production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," rested on their arms last night. They are sure victory has been won and that the play will be stopped.

Following their conference with Governor Walsh yesterday, and the agreement to place the question of the production before the courts, leaders of the opposition urged their followers to refrain from any demonstration until the courts take action on the warrant which will be asked for today.

As a result the show was unmolested last night. Crowds of people, in anticipation of disturbances which marked the course of the performance Saturday night, walked about the section of Tremont street near the Tremont Theatre until late at night, but everything was quiet.

Continued on Page 6—First Column

Continued From First Page

MAY FORBID RACE PLAYS

On Governor Walsh the colored and white protestors are pinning their faith for ultimate victory. His promise that if the courts will not sustain the complaint to be made today he will seek a new law which will forbid the future production of race plays was last night hailed as an initial victory by those opposing the film.

But in any event the fight against the "Birth of a Nation" show is to be waged to an end.

This was announced from several sources last evening. At a gathering of colored people at 1072 Tremont street W. Munroe Trotter, a leader of the colored protestants, declared that the halting of demonstrations against the play was only a truce until the legal battle is concluded.

Another Censor Today

As a result of the conference with Governor Walsh, Police Commissioner O'Meara will probably have a censor at the performances today.

Trotter declared to the Post last night that he hoped the court action would halt the play.

"But if it is not stopped by the courts," he stated, "the colored people will not rest until it is stopped. We propose to see this thing through to a finish."

Grounds for Warrant

A warrant will be sought today on the ground that the show is a violation of the law which prohibits a performance which is lewd, obscene, indecent, impure or suggestive of these.

The proponants declare the photoplay comes within the scope of this law and that a warrant can be issued.

Should this fail, the Governor stated that he would try and place a new law upon the statute books which would remedy the production of such plays in the future.

He made his statement to the 40 members of the protesting committee which represented the 200 who marched to the State House in the morning.

Today, also, the cases of the 11 arrested Saturday at the rioting will come before the Municipal Court.

Enter Complaint Today

Probably while this is in progress, a committee representing the protesters will appear before the police commissioner and enter a complaint against the film. It is the wish of those objecting to the photo-play to have the matter brought before the court without delay, so that the exhibition can be stopped immediately if the court decides it is a violation of the law.

The outcome of the court's action is eagerly awaited by the opponents of the show. Should it be unfavorable to them, further action will follow. Just what this will be has not been stated by their leaders.

Theatre Under Guard

Despite the improbability of further disturbance at the theatre, during the legal battle for the suppression of the film, police guards will be maintained about the premises.

Interest this morning will be divided upon the courts which are to hear the two phases of the film protest.

Charged With Rioting

In the criminal court a large following is expected to be present for the disposition of the riot cases. Those who will appear and the charges against them are as follows:

W. Munroe Trotter, 41, of 97 Sawyer avenue, editor of the Guardian and secretary of the National Equal Rights League; charged with disturbing the peace.

The Rev. Aaron W. Puller, 38, of 52 Windsor street, Roxbury, pastor of the People's Baptist Church, Tremont and Camden streets; charged with disturbing the peace.

Fred Banks, 22, of 7 Camden street, Roxbury; charged with using profanity.

Joseph Gould, 25, of Norwood; charged with assaulting Policeman William Harrigan by kicking him while he had a prisoner under arrest.

John Hines, 20, of 6 Concord square; charged with sauntering and loitering in violation of the city ordinances.

Clara Peaky of 19 Phillips street; charged with assault and battery on Patrolman Van Lannighan.

Stephen Massey of Cambridge, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner; James T. Vivens of Cambridge, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner; Lugenia Foster, 20 Grove street, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner; James L. Dunn of West Newton, charged with using profanity; Charles P. Ray, 26, of 815 Tremont street, charged with throwing an egg in the theatre during the performance.

GOVERNOR AROUSED

Outlines Plan of Action to Committee of Protest and Assures Them that if the Present Laws Fail He Will Seek a New Law Covering Case—Crowd Outside State House Hisses "America"

At the conclusion of the protest meeting of both colored and white citizens of the city before Governor Walsh at the State House yesterday, the Governor called the reporters into his executive office and told the newspapermen that a happy temporary solution of the troubles arising over the production of the movie film, "The Birth of a Nation," had finally been reached.

A warrant will be applied for on the grounds that the show is a violation of Chapter 367 of the Acts of 1913, which, in substance, prohibits a performance which is "lewd, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure, or suggestive of lewdness, obscenity, immorality, indecency or impurity." With a warrant served on the management of the show, it is hoped prosecution will be speedy.

Would Seek a New Law

This will mean that the courts will be resorted to to decide whether the production of "The Birth of a Nation" violates the law. The Governor declared that if the court so decided, Commissioner O'Meara "will make a ruling different from that which he has already rendered." The Governor was asked if in the event of the court ruling that the law cannot be so construed as to stop the show, he would try to get legislation passed that would. "I most certainly shall," was his ready response.

During the quiet protest by 40 people in the executive chamber more than 200 people of both races were holding an orderly demonstrative meeting on the great broad steps, in front of the building. One by one the colored speakers would mount the last step and amid occasional cheers and much applause would voice the murmurings of the masses.

Hisses Stop "America"

Mingled with the speeches the vast throng would now and then break forth with a gospel hymn with much fervor. Once someone in the crowd of song leaders started "America," but owing to continued hissing on the steps the leaders at once stopped the song. The "Star Spangled Banner" was also unwelcome, but the hissing at this song was hardly noticeable.

There was one song, however, that was received with much fervor. It was after a song leader had started "We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree." The word was passed along the crowd that they were to change the lines, and soon the entire throng were howling:

And This Is the Song

"We'll hang Tom Dixon to a sour apple tree,
We'll hang Tom Dixon to a sour apple tree,
We'll hang Tom Dixon to a sour apple tree,
While his soul goes marching on."

The crowd, although always orderly, was not in extremely good humor. It was excitable and nervous from the start. The whole affair was the outcome of Sunday afternoon's Faneuil Hall mass meeting where it was voted to visit the State House in a body.

Will Support O'Meara

The suggestion that the prosecution be carried on was made by Police Commissioner O'Meara and a committee of colored citizens including William H. Lewis, Butler R. Wilson and C. Henry Robbins. Mr. O'Meara's explanation of how he proceeded was as follows: "On last Friday I received a letter from Moorfield Storey in which Mr. Storey told me that the moving picture was a violation of the statute, and that it was possible for me to proceed. I replied to Mr. Storey, but the letter did not reach Mr. Storey on Saturday."

Mr. O'Meara is willing to undertake the prosecution of the management of "The Birth of a Nation" but he believes that he should have the support of certain individuals in order that it

SOME OF THE 200 COLORED AND WHITE PEOP
"BIRTH OF A NA

QUINCY (Mass.) LEDGER
APRIL 20, 1915

WILL DISCUSS "BIRTH OF NATION"

The motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," will be discussed by prominent men at the meeting of the South Quincy Brotherhood in the vestry of the First Presbyterian church this evening. Alexander Cowe, detailed to see the film, will make his report. Among the speakers will be John D. Mackay, chairman of the school committee.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 20, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation."

Yesterday crowds thronged the matinee and night performances of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre.

Nervousness over the reports of opposition and the disturbances of Saturday night were not in the least apparent, and profound interest and much applause marked the view taken by the two big audiences. The large attendance of women at the matinee can no doubt be attributed to the many romantic and pathetic incidents of the play. The desire to see the great film on its merits as a vast spectacle has naturally been augmented by a curiosity on the part of thousands to view a subject that has caused so much discussion.

PORTLAND (Me.) EXPRESS & ADV. 707
APRIL 20, 1915

MOVING PICTURE SHOW FIGHT AROUSES NEGROES

Boston Court House Corridors Crowded. Different Phases of Matter Before Two Judges.

BOSTON, April 20.—While one Municipal Court Judge was hearing the application of police officers today for warrants for the arrests of 11 Negroes taken into custody Saturday night in connection with a disturbance at a moving picture exhibition, another Judge was considering the request of attorneys for the Negroes for warrants against the theater managers for producing an objectionable entertainment.

The courthouse corridors were crowded with Negroes and those who sympathized with them, many of whom had attended a meeting at the State House yesterday, when Governor Walsh and Police Commissioner O'Meara suggested legal proceedings to prohibit the show.

THE WEATHER.

Fair and cooler tonight and Wednesday.

LYNN (Mass.) ITEM
APRIL 20, 1915

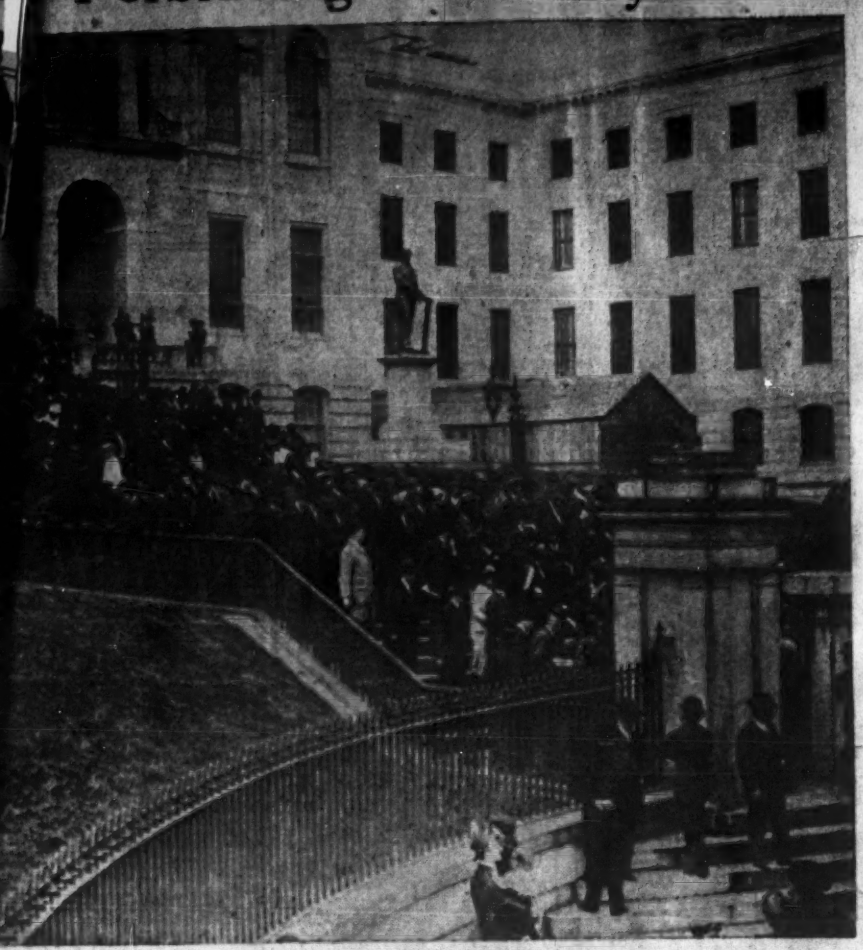
PREJUDICE AND BIGOTRY.

The production of a moving picture play entitled the "Birth of a Nation" has created an excitement in Boston quite out of the ordinary. It is claimed that it tends to invite race prejudice and bigotry. Mayor Curley is criticised because he permits the exhibition to proceed. A mass meeting, that recalled the abolition movement of half a century ago, made a strong protest. On Monday a great body of colored people waited upon the Governor by a delegation and he pronounced his complete sympathy with the contention that the pictures tended to disturb the equal rights guaranteed by the Constitution to citizens of all classes. The case is to be taken into the courts, and if it is decided that the photo play is not a violation of the laws, the Governor will ask the Legislature to enact a law that will end the production of such plays in this State. Race prejudice is becoming too strongly entrenched in the popular mind, and the attempt to inflame it, which is evidently the object of the play, should be discouraged. Governor Walsh is entitled to praise for the manner in which he is handling the case.

Was. Waltham, Mass
apr 20, 1915

there is no doubt that the colored people of Boston are justly protesting against "The Birth of a Nation," their manner of protesting will not gain them much sympathy.

Forbidding Race Plays



ITE PEOPLE WHO CALLED UPON GOVERNOR WALSH YESTERD.. Y TO PROTEST AGAINST TH OF A NATION" PHOTO-PLAY, LEAVING THE STATE HOUSE.

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) CHRONICLE 713
APRIL 20, 1915

...free from Prejudice

"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this witnessed in the State House in all its history. Men and women coming here with tears in their eyes, asking the Governor to protect them from race hatred! I hope it will never happen again.

"I want you to know that I intend to assert every influence and power that I possess to keep Massachusetts free from race or religious prejudices. If our government has become great and has given to the world evidence of its God-given mission to mankind, it is due chiefly that here all men and all races are guaranteed equality of opportunity for the enjoyment of the blessings which the framers of our government guaranteed to all our citizens, and for which 140 years ago today the farmers of Massachusetts struck the first blow at Concord Bridge."

Ministers Say "Stop It"

The Congregational Ministers' Association yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon Governor Walsh to prevent the further production of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Tremont Theatre. The reslution was drawn up by a committee of five persons appointed to view the play and report upon it. The committee reported that the play was calculated to create race prejudice and that its effect was generally deleterious.

An eulogistic resolution upon the death of the Rev. Arthur Little, D. D., was adopted. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Moderator, the Rev. Ansel Johnson of Everett; vice-moderator, the Rev. J. H. Quint of Chelsea; secretary, the Rev. D. E. Burtner of Lynn; executive committee, the Rev. Doland B. McLane of Jamaica Plain, the Rev. R. W. Drawbridge of Belmont and the Rev. Isaac Fleming of Canton.

President Marion Leroy Burton of Smith College addressed the ministers on the subject of "Ministers and Educators." He said that the college students of the present day are anxious for enlightenment on religious subjects and advised the ministers to seek them out and to work industriously to bring them into closer touch with the churches.

...not appear as a complaint from ...olice commissioner alone. Several ...ers of the committee of colored ...n will therefore join the commis... tomorrow morning in seeking a ...nt.

Governor Deeply Touched

...the conclusion of the conference ...overnor communicated the result ... larger committee of colored citi... ...nd was not only cheered but cries ...d bless our Governor" were heard ...the room. He said he was deeply ...d by the spectacle of people com... ...the State House with tears in ...es to protest against an outrage ...their race, and added: "I sin... ...ope to God it will never happen ...

After the smaller delegation ...ired the Governor was besieged ...hrong of women who begged the ...executive of the Commonwealth to ...their hand.

...ors of all the colored churches ...ston and a group of prominent ... men and women were on the ...ation of protest. Among the white ...ies were Miss Elizabeth C. Put... ...of No. 104 Mariboro street; Mrs. ... Phillips Williams of No. 505 Bea... ...treet, niece of Wendell Phillips, ...bolitionist; Miss A. E. Fisher of ...n, and Joseph Manning, former ...sentative from Alabama.

Rev. S. A. Brown of St. Mark's ...egational Church was made chair... He also enlisted committee mem... The colored members were: The ... Aaron Puller, pastor of the Peo... Baptist Church; the Rev. M. A. ...aw, pastor of the Twelfth Bap... ...hurch; the Rev. W. A. Thornton, ... of the Charles street A. M. E. ...h; Miss Crosswhite, representing ...olored women's organizations in ...n, and the Rev. Dr. Ray W. ..., pastor of the A. M. E. Church. committee went out on the bal... where William Munroe Trotter, ... as the Gover...or's mouthpiece.

...ERLY (Mass.) TIMES
APRIL 20, 1915

COLORED MEN ARRESTED.

...d Were Being in Plot to Destroy Films.

... men, four colored and one ... were arrested Saturday even... ...what was little short of a riot ... lobby of the Tremont theatre, ... where the Reconstruction ...lay, "The Birth of a Nation," ... produced.

... of the colored men arrested, ...aron W. Puller, pastor of the ... Baptist church in the South ...nd William Munroe Trotter, ...ry of the National Equal ... League, are leaders of the ... Boston.

...theatre management asserts ...plot to destroy the films and ... the production of the play was ... and was stopped only by the ... nearly 200 police officers, who, ...rm and plain clothes, guarded ...atre outside and in.

explained the outcome of the meeting to the waiting throng.

Prosecution Today

Mr. Trotter said:

"Ladies and gentlemen—Your delegation has waited upon the Governor and he has assured us that the management of the Tremont Theatre will be prosecuted tomorrow morning in the criminal courts.

"The law under which this prosecution will take place will be one framed against shows which are lewd or immoral. He assured me that this afternoon or tonight another censor will be sent to see the performance at the Tremont Theatre, and that this censor will not be the censor previously sent by Mayor Curley or Commissioner O'Meara.

Sends Another Censor

"If after this censor has viewed the show and reports that it is not of a fit character to be presented to the public, the Governor stated that he has no doubt a warrant will be issued for the management of the theatre."

The committee of colored citizens in private conference with the Governor included William H. Lewis, Butler R. Wilson, the Rev. Samuel A. Brown and C. Henry Robbins. Meanwhile an opinion had been asked from the Attorney-General's department on the general question of what to do and what was possible. Later an automobile containing Commissioner O'Meara and Superintendent Crowley drove up and the two entered the executive offices.

Gov. Walsh's Statement

Governor Walsh's statement to the committee was as follows:

"I know the purpose of your visit. The committee representing you, with whom I have been in conference, has informed me of its purpose. I want to say that I am very much pleased that you have come here so peacefully and orderly and I am very glad to give up my engagements for the morning and to devote even further time to the consideration of the question which you present.

"You, of course, understand that at present this performance is now being carried on under legally licensed authority. I am asked now on the one hand to consider and hear your impressions and your views and also the views and authority of other public officials who have given approval to this performance. One of those officials is the police commissioner of the city of Boston, whom the Governor appoints to office.

Power Vested in Two

"Chapter 494 of the Acts of 1913 clearly and unmistakably places upon the police commissioner and the Mayor of the city of Boston the sole power of deciding what of a theatrical nature is immoral, obscene or tends to injure the morals of the community. These officials through their representatives have made findings which in substance mean that there is nothing in this performance, as is now presented, of an 'obscene, immoral or tending to injure the morals of the community.' You seriously question the finding made by these representatives, as I understand it. We have public authorities on one side and an element in the community making contention that the facts are not well founded. This morning we have been consulting statutes and decisions of the court to see what could be done.

"A suggestion has been substantially assented to that your committee with the assistance of the police commissioner of the city of Boston will apply to the Municipal Court of the city of Boston for a warrant, and that in the event that the court shall find a violation of the law the police commissioner will at once accept the decision of the court and report the matter to the Mayor of Boston.

"That is the first step to be taken, and in the meantime I think possibly it may be desirable to have another person censor the play sometime during the day.

"I want you to know that the law does not give me any power in the premises except to consult with the police commissioner by reason of his receiving his appointment from the State government.

In Full Sympathy

"I sympathize with you tremendously. If there is anything tending more to destroy and undermine American institutions and American liberty, it is race or religious prejudice. I don't propose, while I am Governor of this State, to allow any movement arousing antagonism to any race of people in Massachusetts. If any such movements are to be carried on in Massachusetts they have got to be carried on underground where the sunlight does not shine.

"So, I want to ask you now to be patient and let us, in our own way, work out this problem, and if there is not any law, we will try to have some law enacted. I hope you will be patient and quiet and try to preserve peace and order.

Enjoy Full Measure of Rights

"Try to use your good advice and say to your people that the Governor is interested in your welfare, and that the sole reason he does not arbitrarily act forthwith is simply that he has not the authority or power; that he can act only through the legal agency which defines his authority.

"In good time I hope to be able to assist you. So, let me ask you to go away peacefully and orderly, and conscious of the fact that you enjoy just as full measure of rights as any other class of people, and that your race and your color have as much right to be respected as any other race or color, that you have no reason at all to be ashamed or humiliated at the fact that there may be here and there something objectionable to you and your people.

Safeguarded by Law

"Massachusetts has always been a friend of your race, and your men have fought and died for Massachusetts as bravely as any other men of any other race, and you are all loyal to her today.

"The Constitution of this government guarantees to every man, woman and child an equal opportunity in life, and those things which tend to and create prejudices and hatreds and bigotry must be eliminated, not by force, but by law. Through your committee I will keep in touch with the situation."

Bring Better Understanding

Governor Walsh said at the close of the hearing:

"The calm and sincere way in which you have presented to me your just grievances is another proof of the fact, if proof be needed, that your people have a right to enjoy the same privileges and rights of any class of people in the community.

"Perhaps your present misfortune and sufferings, for you evidently are suffering, will do more for the community than you realize. Sometimes even greater prejudices than those which are raised by a situation like this are eliminated and removed for the benefit of other races and classes of people outside your own, and this agitation may result in a better understanding between all in the community.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO BE STOPPED

Boston, April 19.—As a result of a protest made at the state house today by a crowd of over a thousand colored people, Governor Walsh and a committee proposed a plan to the people to prosecute the producers of the film, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Tremont Theatre.

The prosecution will be asked for under section 367 of the Acts of 1910, which prohibits the showing of "suggestive" entertainments and provides for a fine of $500 or imprisonment for one year or both for the producers of such entertainment as shall be proved "suggestive."

A group of colored people on the steps of the state house began to sing "America," but hissing drowned out the singing. The singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" was received in the same manner. A parody on "We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree," substituting the name of Tom Dixon, the author of the "Clansman," from which the play was taken, was sung by nearly the entire crowd.

...dress N... LYNN, MASS
APR 20 1915

RACE FILM FIGHT IN BOSTON COURT TODAY

Boston, April 20.—With the application for warrants against the manager of the Tremont theatre, where the photoplay is being shown, and the producer of the film, the vigorous fight being made to stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation," was transferred to the municipal court today.

With some 800 Negroes and many of their white sympathizers packing the courtroom and corridors of the court house, Sergt. John Anderson of station 4 was designated to represent the police department in the application for the warrants. It was decided to ask for the issuance of warrants against Manager John B. Schoeffel of the theatre and David W. Griffiths, the producer of the film.

J. Mott Hallowell, a former assistant attorney-general, was in charge of the legal forces representing the opposition to the film.

...ress NEWS, RUTLAND, VT
...e APR 20 1915

NEGRO PROTEST ON RACE FILM

Plan to Decide If In Boston by a Court Test

HAS SYMPATHY OF GOVERNOR

Boston, April 20.—Following one of the most dramatic scenes the state house has ever witnessed, during which nearly 2000 negroes stormed the capitol in protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation," Governor Walsh announced his sympathy with the contention that the pictures tend to incite race prejudice ang bigotry, disturbing the equal rights guaranteed to citizens of all classes under the constitution, and promised to use all his power to stop the production of the play.

As the first step toward stopping the production a warrant is to be asked for in the municipal court under chapter 367 of the acts of 1910, relating to immoral entertainments, for the arrest of the promoters of the pictures against which the negroes protest.

If the court decides that the photoplay is not in violation of that act, Walsh says he will ask the legislature to pass a law which will end the production of the pictures in this state.

While the governor was considering the matter in the executive council chamber with a committee of fifty appointed by the protesting negroes, a throng of nearly 2000 waited on the front steps of the capitol. At various times the crowd sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and a version of "John Brown's Body," which voiced the resentment against the author of The Clansman.

When some one started "America" there was so much hissing that the song was abandoned. There was a like demonstration against the "Star Spangled Banner," but not sufficient to prevent its rendition by the crowd.

The crowd wanted the governor to come out and make a statement, but he refused on the ground that such an appearance by him might lead to demonstrations which would carry the situation beyond that of calm, sound judgment.

The scene presented when William M. Trotter, bearing the governor's message, stepped over the rail of the third floor balcony and began his address to the throng below him was extremely dramatic.

After eulogizing Walsh and urging the negroes to proceed in a calm and orderly manner, Trotter branched out into a further attack on the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" and spoke for twenty minutes. At the conclusion of his address, the crowd dispersed quietly.

Mail
Galesburg, Ill.
APR 20 1915

COLORED PEOPLE ENTER PROTEST

Boston, April 19.—As the result of a protest made at the state house today, by a crowd of over 1,000 colored people, Governor Walsh and a committee of the Protesting people agreed upon a plan of criminal prosecution of the producers of the film, "The Birth of a Nation," now being given at the Tremont Theatre.

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE
APRIL 20, 1915

COURT HEARING ON FILM TODAY

Summons to "Birth of a Nation" Producers Requested.

Colored People Crowd Corridors, Awaiting Action.

"This is a matter of emergency and exigency; a matter of much import to both sides, and I think calls for action as soon as possible. I think there should be a hearing on the matter today. Of course, that does not mean that immediately after the hearing a summons or a warrant shall be granted.

"There should be a hearing, however, as soon as possible, because of the public clamor, and either the alleged grievances should be alleviated, or the show allowed to continue without further interference," said Judge Thomas Dowd in relation to "The Birth of a Nation" this morning.

This statement was made in the third session of the Municipal Court, where Sergt Anderson of the LaGrange-St Police Station, and a host of colored leaders crowded about the judicial bench to apply for a summons to John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, and David W. Griffiths, producer of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation."

When attorney John F. Cusick, representing the two theatrical men, approached the bench, a flock of others interested in both sides of the case crowded close behind him.

"I think before the hearing on the granting of the warrant," said attorney Cusick, "that your honor should see the play. I should like to ask for a continuance until Thursday, by which time we will be able to collect evidence on our side of the matter and the court will have a chance to view the play."

One of the opposing faction then said that it was a summons, not a warrant, that was asked for.

Judge Dowd then made the statement quoted above, saying that in his opinion the hearing should take place as soon as possible, preferably today. Attorney Cusick again asked that the judge view the pictures before the hearing.

Just What Are Your Objections?"

To this Butler Wilson shook his head.

"Why do you shake your head, Mr Wilson?" asked Atty Cusick. "Just what are your objections to the court seeing the play before the hearing?"

"I don't think that will make much difference, one way or the other," said Judge Dowd, "after the hearing I think I should like to see the play. It might make some difference and it might not. However ,the hearing should be held at once."

"May I ask then," said Atty Cusick, "that the hearing be held at 2 o'clock?"

"At 2 o'clock, then," replied Judge Dowd.

At this point Michael J. Joradn, National secretary of the United Irish League, counsel for some of those arrested last Saturday night, who was in the large group before the bench, asked that the cases against all persons arrested be held up until after the hearing on the play.

"Warrants have already been granted in those cases," replied the Judge.

Mr Jordan argued on the question.

"Those cases have nothing to do with this matter," said Judge Dowd, "they have no bearing on this case. I have granted the warrants, but I presume they are ready to serve."

In the court room at the time were a large number of representative colored people and some white sympathizers. Prominent among the latter were Rev Horace Bumistead of Brookline, formerly president of Atlanta University; J. Mott Hallowell, an attorney; Rev Herbert S. Johnson, William D. Brigham and Mr Jordan.

Among the prominent colored people in the court room were John Long, who is 92; William Monroe Trotter, Butler Wilson, C. Henry Roubins, Superior Court stenographer; Will L. Reed, one of Gov Walsh's messengers; William H. Lewis, Rev D. O. Walker of Chelsea, Prof Allen Whaley of New York and Dr Alice W. McKane.

Acting Chief George C. Neal of the State police was an interested spectator.

Sergt Anderson Complainant.

The complainant in the case will be Sergt Anderson of Station 4, who viewed the play at the Tremont Theatre yesterday and will base his complaint on that performance.

His seeing the play as a censor was the result of a conference between Gov David I. Walsh, Police Commissioner O'Meara, Chief Neal and the colored leaders who went yesterday to the State House, and with tears in their eyes protested against the play. Gov Walsh told the delegates that although two censors had already viewed the play and had passed it after the elimination of a few scenes, another man would view the play yesterday, and under direction of Commissioner O'Meara application would be made to the courts to grant a warrant for the management of the show.

It was apparent that the colored people present regarded Judge Dowd's decision to hold a hearing immediately as a score in their favor, as the management was striving for a continuance.

After Judge Dowd had announced that the hearing would begin at 2 p m Mr Trotter went about the corridors telling the witnesses to stay around, so that they would surely be present at 2.

Corridors Jammed at 9 A M.

By 9 a m, when the courts opened, the lower corridor was so jammed that one could hardly walk across through into any of the courtrooms. Judge Dowd, sitting in the Domestic Relations Session, was asked by Sergt Martin King of the La Grange-st Police Station and other officers who made arrests Saturday evening to grant warrants for the persons whom they had taken into custody. This was one.

William H. Lewis and William Monroe Trotter asked the judge to grant a warrant for Manager Schoeffel and for the producer of the picture play "The Birth of a Nation," but Judge Dowd said that he would not take that matter up until 11 a m, when attorney Cusick, appearing for the two managers, [illegible] court in their be-

Telegraph.
Lawrence, Mass.
APR 20 1915

Gov. Walsh Taking Right Course.

In granting the appeals of the thousands of colored people of this state who went to the state house yesterday and requested that something be done towards putting an end to the presentation of the play "The Birth of a Nation," Gov. Walsh is taking the right course, a course dictated by considerations of justice and by regard for the rights of a weak race, by regard for the bright record of this commonwealth in all its glorious struggles for freedom and against racial or religious bigotry.

The colored people here in the north have a bitter, a cruelly bitter, road to travel. All of them who have the least sparkof manhood and self respect are humiliated in a thousand ways every day.

They are ostracized openly. They are blackmailed secretly. They are stabbed and derided by the scum of all the white races. And because there is no law against a man or a group of men slandering a whole race in a play or a book they are expected to sit supine and allow the flames of racial hatred to be fanned into still fiercer and more devouring fires.

If a writer or a playwright should in a book, newspaper or in a play libel a single, particular member of the colored race he would be liable at law. He could be sued under the libel law, and made to pay heavy damages.

But the same writer or playwright can safely libel in a book, play or newspaper a whole race because there is no law against it.

That there should be such a law this controversy now going on in Boston over "The Birth of a Nation" proves. It proves it for one reason because of the certainty that if there is no legal way for the colored people to refer to such a play they are prepared to resort to illegal ways to stop it.

Such ways are deplorable as they result in riots and bloodshed. But the history of the world has proved that resort to such illegal methods to have been justified on occasion.

The negro Gov. Walsh received but a small majority of the colored vote cast in Massachusetts a state at the last election it is all the more to his credit that he is broad minded enough, big hearted enough and courageous enough seeing enough to espouse the cause of the poor colored people in this case. Such a controversy.

This film's attitude not only will help the complaint against it but it will help the cause of Griffith's art and what is more it will help John B. Schoeffel, not [illegible] for lawful

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 20, 1915

ACTION TO STOP PHOTO-DRAMA IS TAKEN TO COURT

Lawyers Representing Objectors to "The Birth of a Nation" With Police Commissioner Representative in Complaint

Judge Dowd of the municipal court this afternoon is to hear arguments for and against the issuance of a summons into court of the manager of the photo drama, "The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith, and the manager of the Tremont theater, John B. Schoeffel, on a complaint that this play is immoral in tendency and tends to corrupt the morals of youth.

The complaint was filed by Sergeant John M. L. Anderson, representing Police Commissioner O'Meara, Butler R. Wilson, William H. Lewis and J. Mott Hallowell. The three men last named represent the citizen remonstrants to the film.

Upwards of 200 negroes thronged the courtroom corridor during the preliminary hearing. Counsel for the theater argued for a continuance, but Mr. Hallowell asserted that the preservation of public peace required immediate consideration of the case.

All the complainants are lawyers. Mr. Hallowell is white, and the grandson of Lucretia Mott, long an active abolitionist. The others are negroes. Before going before the court they said they were undecided whether to ask for a summons or a warrant, preferring to lay the case before the judge first and consider the technical process later. They have agreed that the complaint shall charge the photo-play with being immoral in effect, seeking a ruling under the state laws, chapter 367, acts of 1910.

The action of today grew out of a two-hour audience granted by Governor Walsh Monday to a committee of 6 representing a crowd of 1000 white and negro citizens who went to the State House to ask the Governor's intercession with the city authorities to the end that the show be stopped. They repeated their assertions that this film tends to impair the good repute of the negro race.

At the Boston Congregational ministers meeting Monday resolutions were adopted to the effect that while "The Birth of a Nation" film was artistically admirable, it was not good in its effect because of the face opposition it arouses and because of its implied justification of lynch law.

It was further resolved to ask the Governor to take such action as is necessary, in the "interests of true democracy, justice and morality, to discontinue this presentation."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR
: Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

PROTEST OF FILM GOES TO COURT

Application is to be made today in the Boston municipal court for a warrant of complaint against a photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," now being given in a local theater, entered jointly by a group of negro citizens and Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara.

The complaint is to charge that the attraction is immoral in tendency, and thus comes under the provision of chapter 367 of the acts of 1910.

This course was decided upon Monday following a two-hour conference at the State House with Governor Walsh, to whom the remonstrants appealed to intercede with the city authorities and require the closing of the show.

Upwards of 1000 white and negro citizens waited upon the Governor, and cheered his interest in their complaint that the film play in question tends to degrade the repute of the negro race.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 20, 1915

2 ARRESTS ASKED FOR FILM PLAY

First steps to bring the fight against the "Birth of a Nation" film before the courts were taken today when formal application was made to Judge Thomas Dowd in the Municipal Court for warrants to bring into court John B. Schoeffel, owner of the Tremont Theatre, and D. W. Griffith, producer of the film.

The application made today by the Boston police was the solution decided upon following the complaint of nearly 2,000 negroes to Governor Walsh that he stop the film. The Governor conferred with Police Commissioner O'Meara and Superintendent of Police Crowley and it was decided that the police could ask for warrants under the law which prohibits "suggestive" entertainments.

Police Sergeant Anderson is the third censor to visit the photoplay, one from the office of Police Commissioner O'Meara and one from the office of Mayor Curley having previously visited the house and ordered changes.

Attorney John Cusack and John B. Graham appeared for the theatre management and J. Mott Hallowell and Michael J. Jordan represented the petitioners.

URGE JUDGE TO SEE FILMS.

Judge Dowd put the hearing over until later in the day and announced to the attorneys for both sides that after hearing the witnesses he might visit the show before passing on the question of granting or refusing the complaints.

Attorney Cusack invited Judge Dowd to see the photo play before he heard the evidence, but counsel for the petitioners objected.

Several prominent ministers were in court to testify for the petitioners, and many leading members of the bar were also present. Mr. Cusack addressing Judge Dowd said:

"We started to produce the play a week ago last Saturday and I would prefer your honor see the show before hearing the evidence. I would like to have until Thursday to prepare my case."

"I think I had better hear the evidence first and then I may visit the show to see for myself," said Judge Dowd.

FAVOR EARLY DECISION.

"I think a hearing should be held at once before more fuel is added to the flame," said Judge Dowd after Attorney Cusack claimed the theatre management were operating a show under license and under the statutes.

"The hearing should also be held as soon as possible because of the public clamor," said Judge Dowd.

Among those in the courtroom ready to testify against the production of the show were the Rev. Horace Bumstead of Brookline, former president of Atlanta University; William L. Reed, messenger to Governor Walsh; Rev. Herbert Johnson; Acting Chief of State Police George C. Neil; Rev. D. O. Walker, Chelsea; Professor Allen W. Whaley, New York; former United States Assist-ay lewd, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure show or entertainment or in any show or entertainment suggestive of lewdness, obscenity, indecency, immorality or impurity, or in any show or entertainment manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $500 or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEVEN UNDER ARREST.

The eleven defendants arrested Saturday night and the charges against them, which were scheduled for hearing today, are:

MONROE TROTTER, the colored editor of the Guardian, who was severely rebuked by President Wilson at the White House last November, arrested on charge of disturbing the peace.

REV. AARON W. PULLER, colored, pastor of People's Baptist Church, charged with disturbing the peace.

FRED BANKS, colored, arrested with Pastor Puller on same charge.

JOHN HINES, colored, charged with vagrancy (under new ordinance).

JOSEPH GOULD, white, charged with assault on an officer in kicking Patrolman McGilvray of Eastern.

CHARLES P. RAY, colored, charged with hurling an egg at the screen of Tremont Theatre.

CLARA FOSKI, colored, charged with making a disturbance and resisting Patrolman Van Rannighas of the City Hall avenue station.

STEPHEN MARSET, colored, charged with attempting to rescue Miss Foski.

LUCENIA FOSTER, colored, arrested for trying to rescue Miss Foski.

JAMES L. DUNN, profanity.

JAMES T. RIVENS, colored, charged with attempted rescue of a prisoner.

DENOUNCED BY PASTORS.

The Boston Congregational ministers' meeting, at its Patriots' Day session in Pilgrim Hall, adopted a resolution asking the Governor to stop "The Birth of a Nation" in the interests of true democracy, justice and morality. The resolution in full is:

"Whereas, the photo-drama entitled 'The Birth of a Nation,' now being presented in the Tremont Theatre, has aroused the entire negro population of Boston and created a most unfavorable impression upon many fair-minded persons, irrespective of race or color;

"And, whereas, the committee appointed one week ago to investigate the play and report its findings at this meeting in the feeling that, although from the artistic standpoint it is a wonderful exhibition, its final effect is thoroughly evil and vicious, that it arouses and strengthens the race prejudice which is so serious a menace, both in the North and in the South; that it fans into flame the sectional feeling which all Americans are endeavoring to eliminate; and that its implied justification of the Ku Klux Klan is thoroughly against good morality and law;

"Therefore, be is resolved that we, the Boston Congregational Ministers' Meeting, hereby earnestly petition His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth, to take such action as is necessary, in the interests of true democracy, justice and morality, to discontinue its presentation."

Governor Walsh said, after receiving several delegations at the State House, that if the court should rule that the play is not unlawful, he would at once ask the Legislature for legislation which would specifically forbid spectacles which threaten to arouse racial animosity.

At a gathering of colored people at No. 1077 Tremont street William Monroe Trotter, a leader of the colored protestants, declared that the planning of demonstrations against the play was only a truce until the legislative battle was concluded.

Sun. Apr. 20 1915

MOVIE OPPOSED IN BAY STATE

Gov. Walsh Fights "The Birth of a Nation."

Boston, Mass., April 19—Several thousand negroes waited on the State House steps to-day while a delegation lodged a protest with Gov. Walsh against the movie show called "The Birth of a Nation."

The Governor will ask the Legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of this show and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice in case the courts decide that there is no law prohibiting such exhibitions.

A complaint will be filed and if the court finds that the law has been violated Commissioner O'Meara will report to Mayor Hurley and he may close the [illegible]

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

COURT TO PASS ON PLAY THAT ANGERS NEGROES

Warrant Will Be Asked Today for Promoters Under Statute Suggested by Moorfield Storey—If Effort Fails, Governor Has Promised Demand for Legislation That Will Solve Problem.

STATE HOUSE THRONG PLEADS FOR RELIEF

Walsh Moved by Tears of Men and Women Who Represent That Race Is Libelled in "The Birth of a Nation"—Thousands Sing Hymns in Street While Committees Meet Executive and Cheer When Decision Is Announced from Balcony.

By agreement of state officers and the representatives of the Negroes of Greater Boston who are protesting against the continued exhibition of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, the municipal court will be asked today to pass on the question of whether the play is immoral and obscene within the meaning of the law. This request will be made in the form of an application for warrants for the arrest of the promoters of the play.

The agreement for today's action resulted from a series of conferences in the executive chamber at the State House, in which participated Gov. Walsh, Police Commissioner O'Meara and representatives of the colored people. The plan was first suggested by Moorfield Storey, the distinguished attorney who often appears in behalf of the Negro, both at home and in national controversies. Commissioner O'Meara assented to the plan, by letter, last Saturday, and yesterday Butler R. Wilson, an attorney, and William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant attorney-general for the United States, agreed to it on behalf of their fellow-Negroes.

Although there were many Negroes among the 1000 or more persons who gathered on the Common opposite the Tremont Theatre yesterday afternoon, no trouble ensued. Eighty police officers, many of whom were in plain clothes, attended the afternoon performance, but there was no disturbance for them to quell. Not even a hiss disturbed their enjoyment of the show. An equal number of officers outside had only the task of keeping a very good natured crowd moving along the sidewalks or keeping clear the walks on the Common.

The evening performance passed off with even less of the unusual. The crowd was smaller than the holiday crowd of the afternoon, and the colored people were fewer.

Gov. Walsh said yesterday that if the court should rule that the play is not unlawful, he would at once ask the Legislature for legislation which would specifically forbid spectacles which threaten to arouse racial antagonism.

Three Appeals to Walsh.

Three bodies of protestants appealed to the Governor for immediate action, and he heard all of them before he had finished. Butler R. Wilson, William H. Lewis, C. Henry Robbins, the Rev. Samuel A. Brown and John W. Schenck made up the delegation which first visited him. William Dexter Brigham, with a dozen or more at his elbow, representing the Faneuil Hall meeting of Sunday, were in the second group, and William Monroe Trotter with 100 men and women picked from the gathering of more than 1000, which crowded upon the front steps of the State House, made the third.

An appeal to the courts was agreed on at a conference with the first group to which had been added Nelson Brown, an assistant attorney general of the commonwealth, and Judge Edward L. Logan, acting as special counsel for the Governor.

The Governor then announced his decision to the second and third groups which had been assembled in the executive council chamber under the direction of Mr. Trotter.

It was a tense day for all parties at interest. T... vised Sun... the long... was be... night... rive... 8...

street another thousand, chiefly made up of white people, watched and listened.

At one time some of the women started "America" and a number present began to hiss. Whether it was because the song was pitched too high or because of the hissing, the singers desisted. Later, however, they broke out with full fervor into a variation of the words of "John Brown's Body," which they had made over so as to run:

"We'll hang Tom Dixon to a sour apple tree,
We'll hang Tom Dixon to a sour apple tree,
We'll hang Tom Dixon to a sour apple tree,
As we go marching on."

All the while upstairs in the executive chamber the Governor and the Lewis-Wilson delegation were struggling over the law. Nelson Brown of the state law department was the first sent for, and then the Governor called Police Commissioner O'Meara, who brought Superintendent of Police Crowley with him.

Agreement Reached.

A little before 1 o'clock the agreement was reached on court procedure.

A warrant will be asked for on the grounds that the presentation is in violation of chap. 367 of the Acts of 1912, which provides: "Whoever, as owner, manager, director, agent or in any other capacity, prepares, advertises, gives, presents or participates in any lewd, obscene, indecent, immoral or impure show or entertainment or in any show or entertainment suggestive of lewdness, obscenity, indecency, immorality or impurity, or in any show or entertainment manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $500 or by both such fine and imprisonment."

(Continued on Page Four, Column 4.)

(Continued from Page One.)

The Governor was greeted with applause when he stepped into the council chamber to announce what had been done. The room was packed with men and women.

"I know the purpose of your visit," he said. "I want to tell you I am very much pleased that you have come here so peacefully and so orderly.

"You, of course, understand that at present this performance is now being carried on under legally licensed authority.

"Chapter 494 of the acts of 1908 clearly and unmistakably places upon the police commissioner and the mayor of the city of Boston the sole power of deciding what of a theatrical nature is immoral, obscene or tends to injure the morals of the community. These officials through their representatives have made findings which in substance mean that there is nothing in this performance, as it is now pre... moral or tending ... of the community.

"A suggestion ha... assented to that yo... the assistance of ... sioner of the city of ... to the municipal c... Boston for a warra... event that the cour... tion of the law the... will at once accep... court and report ... mayor of Boston.

"That is the fi... and in the mean... it may be desir... person censor the ... the day.

Expresse...

"I sympathize ... If there is anyt... destroy and unde... tutions and Ame... or religious preju... while I am Gov... allow any moves... nism to any ra... chusetts. If an... to be carried on in Massachusetts, they have got to be carried on under ground, where the sunlight does not shine.

"So I want to ask you now to be patient, and let us, in our own way, work out this problem, and if there is not any law, we will try to have some law enacted. I hope you will be patient and quiet and try to preserve peace and order.

"Try to use your good advice and say to your people that the Governor is interested in your welfare and that the sole reason he does not arbitrarily act forthwith is simply that he has not the authority or power; that he can act only through the legal agency which defines his authority.

"The calm and sincere way in which you have presented to me your just grievances is another proof of the fact, if proof be needed, that your people have a right to enjoy the same privileges and rights of any class of people in the community. Perhaps your present misfortune and sufferings, for you evidently are suffering, will do more for the community than you realize. Sometimes even greater prejudices than those which are raised by a situation like this are eliminated and removed for the benefit of other races and classes of people outside of your own, and this agitation may result in a better understanding between all in the community.

"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this witnessed in the State House in all its history. Men and women coming here with tears in their eyes, asking the Governor to protect them from race hatred! I hope to God it will never happen again."

White Sympathizers.

During the time the Governor was in the council chamber he was addressed by a dozen or more speakers, among whom were various white persons who sympathized with the colored people. Among those were William D. Brigham, secretary of Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, who introduced the speakers, and Mrs. Anna Phillips Williams, a niece of the famous abolitionist; Elizabeth C. Putnam, Mrs. A. Sparrow and Mrs. Agnes Adams. They urged the Governor to do all in his power to stop the production of the play on the grounds that it tends to incite racial prejudice and bigotry.

"The court settlement," the Governor explained, "is the result of a suggestion first made last Friday by Moorfield Storey in a letter to Police Commissioner O'Meara. Mr. Storey cited the chapter of the statute in question, and gave it as his opinion that there were grounds for action. Commissioner O'Meara, Gov. Walsh told the reporters, answered this letter Saturday noon, assenting to the court trial plan, but unfortunately his letter did not reach Mr. Storey until yesterday.

Cheers for Governor.

Shortly after 1 o'clock, at the conclusion of the conference between the Governor and committee, W. Munroe Trotter appeared on the balcony of the third floor of the State House, and, stepping outside the iron railing, addressed the crowd, which by this time numbered close to 1500 persons. He spoke of Gov. Walsh's attitude toward the photo-play and said that the executive had promised to do everything within his power to prohibit a further showing. Trotter was cheered, as was also the Governor.

The speaker renewed the warning given earlier in the day against any demonstration. A collection was taken up among the crowd which is to be used in paying the fines of the several women arrested in connection with the disturbance at the Tremont Theatre Saturday night, if they are found guilty and fined.

Acting Chief George C. Neal of the state police said yesterday: "It is my opinion that this play violates the law."

Interest attaches to Neal's opinion because it puts him on an opposite side to Mayor Curley and the Boston police authorities, who have decided that the play does not conflict with the law.

No Trouble at Theatre.

Supt. Crowley was in command of the officers at the theatre yesterday after-

[redacted] from 01/25

... outer and inner doors of ... called on everybody to "show you tickets, please," but people moved in rapidly and there was little confusion.

Crawford Is Doubtful.

At about 8 o'clock Joshua M. Crawford, colored Republican leader of ward 18, and bail commissioner, arrived at the theatre. After some conversation with a police sergeant he was escorted to the ticket window, but was assured that there was no gallery seat left for the evening. He then bought a ticket for tonight.

In reply to questions, he said: "I was at the State House and heard what Gov. Walsh proposed. While the colored people generally seem to be satisfied that something will be accomplished in the way of stopping the play, I confess that I feel mighty uncertain about it. The plan, as I understand it, is to apply to the court for a warrant and bring the managers of the play in court on the charge of giving an obscene production; then if the court decides it is not obscene the Governor will send a special message to the Legislature urging a law to prohibit the production of plays tending to incite race prejudice.

"But the trouble is that all this will take time. If the court should decide in our favor the theatre would take an appeal. By the time the matter would reached in the superior court it would be June, and the theatre would be ready to close anyway. The same is true of a new law. There is bound to be delay in its passage."

Manager J. B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre said:

"We welcome any appeal to the courts. This play has been censored by the legal authorities of the city and is now being produced with and under their approval."

Patrolman "Moves" O'Meara.

All the evening Gov. Walsh received abundant advertising by the strident cries of the newsboys—"Extra, Gov. Walsh's story of "The Birth of a Nation.'"

Police Commissioner O'Meara and Superintendent Crowley were on the scene several times during the evening. The commissioner made his first round just as the crowd poured out of the theatre, a few minutes before 10 o'clock, and the commissioner was met by who was requested by a patrolman to "Move along, please."

"All right," answered the commissioner, and promptly moved.

Expressions of surprise are heard that Moorfield Storey is not going to be in charge of the case in the court. The brunt of the proceeding, it is stated, will fall on Edgar Benjamin. If a warrant is obtained, and the prosecution is subsequently successful, there will be no such delay as was predicted by Commissioner Crawford, for Commissioner O'Meara on any ruling by the court that the play is improper will at once notify Mayor Curley that he ... commissioner) agrees with the ... and the issue will thus be placed squarely up to the mayor.

Union
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 20 1915

GOVERNOR ACTS ON FILM PROTEST

Conference at State House May Lead to Ban on Photoplay.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 19—"I don't suppose there was ever before a day like this witnessed in the State House in all its history. Men and women coming here with tears in their eyes, asking the Governor to protect them from race hatred. I hope to God it will never happen again." Statement by Gov. Walsh at the close of a conference today with Negro citizens, who protested to him against the further production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Tremont Theater.

Two thousand Negroes, excitable and demonstrative, accompanied by numerous white persons, had assembled at the State House by 9 o'clock this morning, acting on the exhortation of speakers at the Sunday afternoon Faneuil Hall massmeeting. In the crowd was a band of singers and when they started "America" there was hissing and the singing stopped. There was also hissing, though in smaller volume, when "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung. Somebody started the song, "We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree," and many in the gathering substituted the name of Tom Dixon, the author of the play, for that of Davis.

After a long wait 60 persons, constituting the protesting delegation to be received in the Governor's office, headed by William Monroe Trotter, were admitted. Meanwhile, the Governor had been in conference with George C. Neal, deputy chief of the State police; Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner; Michael H. Crowley, superintendent of police; William H. Lewis, Butler R. Wilson, Henry C. Robbins and Atty. Gen. Henry C. Attwill.

Informing the delegation that there had been a consultation on the statutes and the decisions of the courts to see what could be done, Gov. Walsh stated the wisest course would be to apply to the Boston Municipal Court for a warrant and that in event that the court should find a violation of the law the police commissioner will report the findings to the Mayor of Boston.

"This is the first step to be taken," the Governor said, "and in the meantime I think possibly it may be desirable to have another person censor the play some time during the day. I want you to know that the law ... give me any power in the premises except to consult with the police commissioner, by reason of his receiving his appointment from the State government."

While the conference was going on in the Governor's office the big crowd in front of the State House began a period of speechmaking and singing that kept the throng of 2000 or more interested. Gospel hymns were sung with fervor and all the speeches were wildly applauded. They seemed to be very nervous and highly excitable.

Shortly after 1 o'clock at the conclusion of the conference Trotter appeared on the balcony of the third floor of the State House and spoke to the crowd outside the iron railing, addressing the crowd. He spoke of Gov. Walsh's attitude and said that the Governor had promised to do everything in his power to end the exhibition of the photo-play. Trotter was cheered, as was also Governor.

Gov. Walsh made it plain that he was personally opposed to any further production of the picture-play in its present form, giving alleged scenes of the reconstruction period of the South, but whether the Governor has any authority to take action against it was the big question, finally settled by the agreement to have the case taken into the municipal court, which means its appeal to the higher courts, in any event.

The Governor also made the point that if there is not any law he sustains the court he will try to have some law enacted. He showed that chapter 494 of the acts of 1908 puts it up to the local authorities to determine what part of a theatrical nature is obscene, immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community.

If the court finds, after a hearing,

Review, Atlantic City, Apr 21, 1915

BOSTON, MASS.

Boston, Mass., April 19.—The GLOBE to-day says:—

Mayor Curley announces the benefactor of the unemployed as George A. Gardner, at dedication of "Gardner Way" South Boston.

New municipal building in ward 17 dedicated.

The 19th annual marathon run was won by Edouard Fabre, of Montreal, in 2 hours, 31 minutes and 4 11-5 seconds.

Jacob P. Bates, president of Cobb, Bates Yerxa Company is dead.

Governor Walsh promised negro delegation he will do anything possible to meet their demands for suppression of "The Birth of a Nation" film.

Galen C. Moses, business man and banker of Bath, Maine, is dead.

Hour
NORWALK, CONN.
APR 20 1915

WRITS AGAINST PICTURE MEN.

Boston, April 20.—William H. Lewis, former assistant United States district attorney and W. Monroe Trotter, the colored editor of the Guardian, applied at 10 o'clock this morning to Judge Dowd in the third session of Boston municipal criminal court for warrants against Proprietor Schoeffel of the Tremont theatre and D. W. Griffith, owner of the photo-film play "The Birth of a Nation" under the statute relating to immoral entertainments. Judge Dowd said he would hear the applications at 11 o'clock.

Union
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 20 1915

The worst feature of the agitation against the production of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," is that it affords a lot of free advertising for the book on which the objectionable scenes in the production are based. The colored people of Boston may succeed in having the play suppressed or the objectionable scenes expurgated in that city, but by doing so they are calling attention to the book and increasing its sales, and the impression created by reading the book is likely to be more h... prejudice ... to ... product... the Nation ... as many pa...

HERALD NEWS
TAUNTON, MASS.
APR 20 1915

ASK COURT WARRANT TO CLOSE UP MOVING PICTURE SPECTACLE

Effort to Stop Production of "Birth of a Nation"

NEGROES AT STATE HOUSE

Two Thousand Storm Capitol While Committee Confers With Governor, Who Says He Will Appeal to Legislature If Necessary to Prevent Photo-Play in Massachusetts Cities

Boston, April 20.—Following one of the most dramatic scenes the state house has ever witnessed, during which nearly 2000 negroes stormed the capitol in protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation," Governor Walsh announced his sympathy with the contention that the pictures tend to incite race prejudice ang bigotry, disturbing the equal rights guaranteed to citizens of all classes under the constitution, and promised to use all his power to stop the production of the play.

As the first step toward stopping the production a warrant is to be asked for in the municipal court under chapter 367 of the acts of 1910, relating to immoral entertainments, for the arrest of the promoters of the pictures against which the negroes protest.

If the court decides that the photoplay is not in violation of that act, Walsh says he will ask the legislature to pass a law which will end the production of the pictures in this state.

While the governor was considering the matter in the executive council chamber with a committee of fifty appointed by the protesting negroes, a throng of nearly 2000 waited on the front steps of the capitol. At various times the crowd sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and a version of "John Brown's Body," which voiced the resentment against the author of The Clansman.

When some one started "America" there was so much hissing that the song was abandoned. There was a like demonstration against the "Star Spangled Banner," but not sufficient to prevent its rendition by the crowd.

The crowd wanted the governor to come out and make a statement, but he refused on the ground that such an appearance by him might lead to demonstrations which would carry the situation beyond that of calm, sound judgment.

The scene presented when William M. Trotter, bearing the governor's message, stepped over the rail of the third floor balcony and began his address to the throng below him was extremely dramatic.

After eulogizing Walsh and urging the negroes to proceed in a calm and orderly manner, Trotter branched out into a further attack on the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" and spoke for twenty minutes. At the conclusion of his address, the crowd dispersed quietly.

CHELSEA (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 20, 1915

JOINED IN THE PROTEST

Local Pastor Among Those Who Opposed Presentation of "The Birth of a Nation"

The Rev. Ormonde D. Walker, pastor of the people's A. M. E. Church, this city, was among those who went to the Tremont Theatre on Saturday evening to protest against the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

REV. ORMONDE D. WALKER

Mr. Walker witnessed the arrests that were made and he is very indignant over the treatment received by the colored people. He says that the idea was to make a peaceful protest against the picture which, he declares is untrue to history and productive of evil results.

MOBILE (Ala.) REGISTER
APRIL 20, 1915

OBJECT TO FILMS ON RACE QUESTION

Massachusetts Authorities Seek Law to Prohibit Pictures That Cause Feeling

BOSTON, April 19.—Governor Walsh today discussed with Attorney General Attwill, Chief Neal of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, Boston police commissioner, and Superintendent Crowley of the Boston police the question whether he had authority to prohibit further exhibition here of picture films purporting to portray scenes of the Civil war. Resolutions protesting against the pictures were adopted by the New England Methodist conference, now in session here, but Mayor Curley decided he could not interfere, as it was not established that the pictures were obscene.

While the governor was closeted with the other officials, several hundred negroes, waiting to be heard in protest against the exhibition, occupied the steps of the state house. Among them were a number who were arrested after a demonstration at a local theater Saturday night.

The governor, after the conference, notified a delegation representing the protestants that he would ask the legislature to pass a law prohibiting plays or picture exhibitions that raised the race question.

Police Commissioner O'Meara said he thought a statute enacted in 1910 governing public exhibitions would authorize him to stop the one in question.

There was no intention to destroy the film or any other property. Mr. Walker says that the police were unduly zealous making arrests without provocation and interferring with the rights of other people. Mr. Walker states that clergymen, physicians, lawyers, officers of several churches and the best type of negro citizenship were represented in the crowd at the theatre. They feel that "The Birth of a Nation" does a great injustice to their race and in this feeling they are supported by a large number of white people.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 20 1915

NEGROES ASK WARRANT

In Endeavor to Prevent the Photoplay

Move Against Producer and Theatre Manager

Cases Arising from Saturday's Riot Heard

Black Men Again Denounce "Birth of Nation"

Negroes crowded almost to the point of suffocation the small poor-debtor room of the Municipal Court when Judge Thomas Dowd began the hearing this afternoon on the request, resulting from the production of "The Birth of a Nation," for a warrant for John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, and David W. Griffith, producer of the film. All seats in the room were taken, every bit of standing space was utilized and more than one hundred persons were gathered in the corridor round the door leading to the courtroom. Judge Dowd immediately ordered the room cleared, and all present, except the witnesses and those occupying seats were obliged to leave.

The court warned the spectators to remain quiet while the testimony was being given and not to express approval or disapproval. John F. Cusick appeared for the theatrical people and J. Mott Hallowell and Butler R. Wilson for the negroes. Sergeant Anderson of the La Grange-street station appeared for the Government and presented the complaint to the court. A long hearing appeared inevitable.

Mr. Cusick told the Court that Mr. Griffith was in California and asked whether Mr. Schoeffel was needed for the purposes of the case. Mr. Hallowell thought not. It was agreed to substitute for Griffith the name of James J. McCarthy, who is supposed to be closely identified with the film.

The first witness called was Rev. Horace Bumstead of Brookline. He had witnessed the play. Questions asked resulted in an almost continuous wrangle on the part of the attorneys as to the admission of the witness's testimony. The Court upheld many of the objections, saying he was trying to get an unprejudiced and unbiased opinion. The judge ruled that the witness must describe what he saw, and must not characterize the scenes. The witness had tried to describe his impression of one scene in which a negro is pursuing a white girl.

No Trouble at Theatre

Curious Gather Round Building, but There Is No Demonstration

Although crowds gathered last evening round the Tremont Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being presented, there was no demonstration, and the police had little difficulty in keeping the sidewalk clear. Only a few negroes were in the gathering.

The ticket office was crowded early, and every seat was sold before eight o'clock. There was no disturbance in the lobby and the people departed quietly when informed that there were no more seats.

Police Commissioner O'Meara strolled

NEGROES ASK WARRANT

CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE

by shortly before eight o'clock, gave the crowd, the theatre entrance and the policemen a careful scrutiny and then sauntered back to police headquarters.

The negroes have decided to keep away from the theatre until the court has acted on the case.

BATES BILL A SOLUTION

Measure Placing Motion-Picture Censorship in State Board May Meet Demands of Negroes

Senator Sanford Bates's bill to have the State Board of Labor and Industries license motion-picture films, which was heard by the Senate Committee on Ways and Means this morning, may prove the solution of the whole disturbance created by the "Birth of a Nation." The Bates bill says that the State Board of Labor and Industries shall license every film to be shown unless the film is "obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman or is of such character that its exhibition would tend to impair the health or corrupt the morals of children or of adults, or to incite to crime."

Senator Bates said today that no special message from the governor upon this subject would be necessary if the Legislature acted favorably upon this measure which was substituted by the Senate for an adverse committee report last week. He felt that this would meet the demands of the negroes who are opposed to the production of the film now being shown at the Tremont Theatre. Several of those who visited the governor yesterday were present at the hearing.

Whether this bill gives the State board any broader powers than those now held by the police commissioner of Boston in reference to the censorship of motion-picture films is somewhat questionable, but at any rate it places the whole question in the hands of the State rather than with the local authorities.

Those who spoke in favor of the measure were Senator Bates, Secretary Ralph S. Thompson of the Children's Welfare League, Mrs. Julius Andrews of the Federated Women's Clubs, Dr. John B. Hall of Roxbury, Rev. William McLane of Cambridge and Rev. T. A. Auten of Cambridge, the last three negroes. The sponsors for the bill stated that the Board of Labor had been chosen by a process of elimination, and because Pennsylvania and Ohio have similar provisions.

Mr. Thompson gave statistics to show the expenses necessary to carry on this work in the other States. Mr. McLane denounced "The Birth of a Nation" as not being true to history, and declared that it was a libel on the black people and a slap on the face of every white man in the North.

The measure was opposed by acting Chief Neal of the District Police, who said that the present law was even more strict than the one proposed. He said that no two persons agreed on questions of what was right for the child to see, and he felt that it was foolish to transfer the duties from the district police, who have a thorough knowledge of every theatre in the city. Former Senator John Gartland also opposed the bill, and asked for a continuation of the hearing until Thursday.

ADDITIONAL CHARGES AGAINST NEGRO LEADERS

TROTTER AND PULLER ACCUSED OF INCITING RIOT AS RESULT OF TREMONT THEATRE DISTURBANCE

Charges of inciting a riot, in addition to the original charge of disturbance, were placed against William Munroe Trotter and Rev. Aaron W. Puller when they, with eight other persons, were arraigned before Judge Sheehan in the Municipal Court this afternoon, as a result of the disturbance Saturday evening in front of the Tremont Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation," is being shown. Mr. Trotter was also charged with assault on patrolman John A. Connare, who was on duty at the theatre box office. The cases were continued until April 28.

MANCHESTER (N. H.) MIRROR
APRIL 20, 1915

Heard Complaint Against the Film

By The Associated Press.

Boston, April 20.—Governor Walsh summoned Attorney-General H. C. Attwill, Chief Geo. E. Neal of the state police, Stephen O'Meara, police commissioner of this city and Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley to a conference at the state house yesterday to determine whether he had authority to prohibit the further exhibition in this city of picture films purporting to be scenes of the civil war. Mayor Curley has decided that he cannot stop the production, inasmuch as it is not established that the pictures are obscene.

While the governor was closeted with the other officials several hundred negroes waiting to be heard in protest against the exhibition occupied the steps of the state house opposite the memorial to Col. Robert Gould Shaw, the white officer who lost his life while leading a negro regiment in the charge against Fort Wagner. Among them were a number who were arrested following a demonstration at the theatre Saturday.

In addition to the negro protestants there was a white representation also opposed to the pictures. These included Mrs. Joseph Williams, a niece of Wendell Phillips, William D. Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial association, and Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

During the wait for the hearing by the governor several speeches were made. The speakers declared that the exhibition was a travesty on history designed not only to discredit the negro race but to hold up to contempt and ridicule the abolitionists of Massachusetts and the Union soldiers. They asserted that, in addition to intensifying race prejudice, the pictures gave the younger generation a false impression of the war and served to revive the bitterness once existing between the North and South.

RUTLAND (Vt.) NEWS
APRIL 20, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Photo-Play Boston Theatre Denounced In Mass Meeting

Boston, April 19.—A crowd which packed Faneuil hall beyond its capacity and swarmed into the street, where an overflow meeting was conducted, cheered, applauded, hooted and hissed as speaker after speaker denounced the photo-play "Birth of a Nation," now running at the Tremont theatre, its promoters and the authorities who permit it to be continued.

The claim was made that Mayor Curley had been called upon repeatedly to halt the production of "The Birth of a Nation," but had dodged the issue.

The name of President Wilson, who was quoted as endorsing the play, was hissed repeatedly. The bitterest feeling was shown at the mention of the name of Curley, jeers and hisses mingling. About a third of the audience was composed of white persons, the rest being negroes.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 20, 1915

...d Films That Carry Racial Offense.

...w of the action of Mayor ... long ago in placing the ..., "The Nigger," on the ban, ... likely that any attempt will be ... produce the photoplay, "The ... a Nation," in this city and ... imbroglio in Boston over the ... spectacle we may well be spared ... effort to bring "The Birth of a Nation" to Springfield. It will be recalled that a previous mayor, Francke W. Dickinson, prohibited the presentation of "The Clansman," the drama upon which "The Birth of a Nation" is ... from being done here and the company was forced to go to Holyoke, where the colored population is so insignificant that no objections were raised against it.

The demonstration against "The Clansman" as a drama was rather spectacular. It was whispered that it was originally incited by the managers and press agents of the production which was commonplace as drama. The managers, it was hinted, hoped to create talk as the piece had little to ... it along on its own merits. They ... in their purpose, but did not ... bargain for the demonstrations that followed and which eventually put them to considerable monetary loss.

While passing no personal opinion upon "The Birth of a Nation" as a picture, it was inevitable that being ... upon "The Clansman" it would ... a storm of protest among the colored people. It is unfortunate, therefore, that so much labor and money should have been spent on such a subject, the film being generally admitted to be the most stupendous thing that has yet been undertaken by American film producers. In point of ... beauty of photography and picturesqueness of effects it has been said that "The Birth of a Nation" is the greatest motion picture yet produced by an American film manufacturer. It must be extraordinary when the managers are able to charge $2—and get it—to witness it. What a pity, then, that some other big, vital subject could not have been treated, or that the reconstruction period having been seized upon it could not be done in such a manner as to rob the film of flagrant offense against the colored race.

It is cheerfully admitted that riotous in order to voice racial protest is always to be condemned, and it is evident that some of the Boston rioters were led by a hot-head or two. But that does not alter the fact that theatrical performances of any kind that are violently offensive to any race should at least be kept out of communities where the race impugned is numerous. That will be one way to avoid such trouble as occurred in Boston Saturday night.

BEVERLY, MASS
TIMES
APR 20 1915

COLORED MEN ARRESTED.

...ged With Being in Plot to Destroy Films.

...ve men, four colored and one ... were arrested Saturday even... what was little short of a riot ... lobby of the Tremont theatre, ... where the Reconstruction ...play, "The Birth of a Nation," ...ing produced.

...me of the colored men arrested, ... Aaron W. Fuller, pastor of the ... Baptist church in the South ... and William Munroe Trotter, ...ary of the National Equal ... League, are leaders of the ... in Boston.

...he theatre management asserts ... plot to destroy the films and ...vent the production of the play was ... and was stopped only by the ... of nearly 200 police officers who, ...iform and plain clothes, guarded ...eatre outside and in.

Newspaper Cutting Bureau, 10 Ferry Hill STANDARD
NEW BEDFORD, MASS
APR 20 1915

WILL AID NEGROES.

GOVERNOR WILL ASK FOR LAW TO STOP PHOTO PLAY.

Throng Cheers Executive When Announcement is Made—Court Action to be Tried First—Crowd Hisses "America."

Boston, April 20.—Governor Walsh will ask the legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice. In the event the courts decide there is no law on the statute books prohibiting such exhibitions. His announcement to that effect, made in the state house yesterday before a committee of sixty Negroes and white persons, was met with cries of "God save our governor," cheering and weeping by many of the delegation which had assembled in the executive chamber.

Four or five thousand persons, who had stood on the state house steps for nearly four hours, awaiting the decision of the conference within, applauded and sang when William Munroe Trotter appeared on the balcony and announced the governor's decision. Throughout the morning they had waited on the steps, singing, cheering and listening to speeches. The demonstration was marred only by the hissing of "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner" when some of those in the crowd began to sing.

It is possible that legal proceedings will be begun tomorrow to prevent the production of the much-discussed film. Governor Walsh said that Commissioner O'Meara, who conferred with the governor this morning, proposes that the court could settle the question, under chapter 367 of the acts of 1910. He suggested, according to the governor, that representatives of the Negro race meet at his office tomorrow and apply for a complaint. If the court finds, after a hearing, that the law has been violated, Mr. O'Meara will make a finding that the play is immoral and obscene and will notify Mayor Curley to that effect. Governor Walsh said he thought this would be a happy solution of the entire problem. If the court should make an adverse ruling, then the governor will send a special message to the legislature asking for a new law.

The committee representing the Negro citizens of Boston was asked to assemble in the executive council chamber at 11:30 a. m., after waiting for nearly three hours in Doric hall to meet the governor. Shortly before the governor received the committee the newspaper men were asked to leave the council chamber. The governor intended to have a stenographer prepare the statement for the newspapers, but it was not ready at 2:30 p. m., because of changes which Mr. Walsh made in the original copy. After the governor had concluded his address the reporters were permitted to re-enter the council chamber, and hear the impassioned speeches of the committee members.

Elizabeth Putnam thought the play was decidedly immoral, saying she never saw anything quite "so low."

"The question has been whether the play is injurious or is liable to cause race hatred," said a Dr. Roberts. "The demonstration before the theatre Saturday night answers both questions. Some way must be found to stop the production of the film. The play is affecting 10,000,000 people in the United States. We ask you to use your influence in putting through some law to stop any play that will cause race hatred or riots."

Goddard Spofford said: "This play is an attack on the public and is a menace to the colored people. Men and boys shout at us on the streets as we pass by. I fear that the Boston police have not given the colored people proper protection since this play began here. The play is a menace to the public peace of Boston.

"This play is a studied political trick," shouted a Dr. McKay. "It is aimed at you, governor, just as much as it is aimed at us. I say it is a trick by certain southerners to capture the north."

A Rev. Mr. Horton of Cambridge declared that speakers had come to Cambridge schools and urged the pupils to see the film. He asserted that race prejudice should not be instilled in the hearts of school children.

Mr. Trotter said that almost all Negroes thought an outrage had been committed against the state by allowing the production of the play. "We ask you to stand up and protect the history, the name and the ideals of this commonwealth," he said. "We are glad that you are our governor at a time like this."

Another speaker alleged that the intent of the play was to arouse public sentiment so that all colored people would be deported from the country. C. H. Dickinson of Alabama, a school superintendent, said the respected people of the south derided all plays similar to that under discussion.

When the speaking had been concluded, Mr. Trotter asked the governor to appear on the state house steps and speak to the crowd. The governor declined, saying that such action might call forth criticism that he did so for sensational purposes. He authorized Mr. Trotter to speak for him.

While the conference was going on within the state house the throng of four or five thousand Negroes outside on the steps alternately listened to the exhortations and hanged Thomas Dixen, D. W. Griffith or Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree, to the tune of John Brown's body. For a while interest was intense, but, as the hours dragged along, oratory began to lag and even the stimulating music of "The Fight Is Won," led by a sister jammed against the state house door lost some of its effect.

The crowd was nervous and excitable. There was so much hissing when "America" was being sung that the leading singers stopped. There was also hissing, though in smaller volume, when "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung.

William Munroe Trotter presided at the speaking outside the state house, and Joseph A. Crawford, Rev. Ormond Walker, Rev. Benjamin W. Swain addressed the crowd, denouncing "The Birth of a Nation." Professor Allen W. Whaley of New York had the hardest task, for he attempted to talk until the governor's decision should be handed down. He did it, but he took the Negro race through history from the time it left Africa up to the present, and, through the throng occasionally preferred a little more "John Brown's body," to his oratory, he was not discouraged, and continued when the singing let up.

"We are engaged in the greatest work the Negro has undertaken since he came from chattel slavery," he said. "We are here to tell not only Governor Walsh, but the whole nation, that we want justice and that we have been downtrodden long enough, and will stand no more. The Negro has unsheathed his sword. We are here to tell Thomas Dixon and his damnable crowd that the American Negro is great enough and powerful and rich enough to scatter in 10,000 pieces such work as he has done. When we are through with him he will look like an infuriated, sheep-and rogue. We do not propose to ...lute blockhead, time-served, hypocrite ...stop until "The Birth of a Nation" is removed from the stage, not only of Massachusetts, but of the United States."

William D. Brigham spoke briefly, and William H. Lee made a vigorous plea against race prejudice. He was still talking when cheers from the Negroes on the steps announced the appearance in the balcony above of Mr. Trotter, who announced the governor's action on the protest. Cheers greeted this announcement and the assemblage broke up quietly.

The Negroes went to the state house by exhortation of the speakers at the Sunday afternoon Faneuil Hall mass meeting. At that meeting a committee of twenty was appointed to wait upon the governor. Today on the state house steps the original committee was somewhat ignored. W. Munroe Trotter read a list of sixty persons who would constitute the protesting delegation. Later W. D. Brigham, one of the committee named at Faneuil Hall, made a protest to the governor's office that he and his associates had been obliged to wait two hours while the governor was in conference with city and state officials.

This lack of harmony in arrangements was noticeable in the big crowd outside the state house. The conference with the governor was supposed to take place at nine o'clock. But at that time the governor was conferring with Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the state police, who has been acting chief since the death of Chief Whitney; Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara, Superintendent of Police Crowley, William H. Lewis, Butler R. Wilson, Henry C. Robbins and Attorney General Attwill. The Negroes' delegation of sixty was allowed to pass into the state house, and they stood in Doric hall for more than two hours waiting for the first conference to end.

In addressing the committee, Governor Walsh said that the sole reason why he did not act arbitrarily and forthwith to stop the exhibition was because he lacked authority. He instructed the committee to make a formal complaint against the exhibitors in the municipal court and said the police commissioner would accept the decision of the court. He said, in part:

"I sympathize with you tremendously. If there is anything tending to destroy and undermine American institutions and American liberty it is race or religious prejudice. I do not propose while I am governor to allow any movement arousing antagonism to any race of people in Massachusetts. If there is no law covering the subject we will try to have one enacted."

Sup. N. Y. Up to date Boston

MOVIE OPPOSED IN BAY STATE.

Gov. Walsh Fights "The Birth of a Nation."

BOSTON, Mass., April 19.—Several thousand negroes waited on the State House steps to-day while a delegation lodged a protest with Gov. Walsh against the movie show called "The Birth of a Nation."

The Governor will ask the Legislature to pass a law to prevent the production of this show and of all plays that tend to raise race or religious prejudice in case the courts decide that there is no law prohibiting such exhibitions.

A complaint will be filed and if the court finds that the law has been violated Commissioner O'Meara will report to Mayor Hurley and he can stop its production; otherwise the Governor will ask for a new law.

AMESBURY (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 20, 1915

NEGRO PROTEST ON RACE FILM

Plan to Decide It In Boston by a Court Test

Executive Thinks Photo-Play of "Birth of a Nation" Disturbs Equal Rights Guaranteed to Citizens of All Classes—Two Thousand Negroes Storm State House During Hearing

Boston, April 20.—Following one of the most dramatic scenes the state house has ever witnessed, during which nearly 2000 negroes stormed the capitol in protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation," Governor Walsh announced his sympathy with the contention that the pictures tend to incite race prejudice ang bigotry, disturbing the equal rights guaranteed to citizens of all classes under the constitution, and promised to use all his power to stop the production of the play.

As the first step toward stopping the production a warrant is to be asked for in the municipal court under chapter 367 of the acts of 1910, relating to immoral entertainments, for the arrest of the promoters of the pictures against which the negroes protest.

If the court decides that the photoplay is not in violation of that act, Walsh says he will ask the legislature to pass a law which will end the production of the pictures in this state.

While the governor was considering the matter in the executive council chamber with a committee of fifty appointed by the protesting negroes, a throng of nearly 2000 waited on the front steps of the capitol. At various times the crowd sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and a version of "John Brown's Body," which voiced the resentment against the author of The Clansman.

When some one started "America" there was so much hissing that the song was abandoned. There was a like demonstration against the "Star Spangled Banner," but not sufficient to prevent its rendition by the crowd.

The crowd wanted the governor to come out and make a statement, but he refused on the ground that such an appearance by him might lead to demonstrations which would carry the situation beyond that of calm, sound judgment.

The scene presented when William M. Trotter, bearing the governor's message, stepped over the rail of the third floor balcony and began his address to the throng below him was extremely dramatic.

After eulogizing Walsh and urging the negroes to proceed in a calm and orderly manner, Trotter branched out into a further attack on the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" and spoke for twenty minutes. At the conclusion of his address, the crowd dispersed quietly.

JOURNAL
Lewiston, Me
APR 20 1915

GREAT ADVERTISING.

The owners of a moving picture show, which is endorsed by President Wilson, are getting a lot of advertising gratis. It is only necessary to raise objections to a show to elicit large attendance. The more the censor threatens, the more the public swarm.

The fact that President Wilson endorses the picture show known as "The Birth of a Nation," leads a protesting and tumultuous crowd of 2000 colored men in Boston to swarm outside the theater and later at the State House. They claim the "Birth of a Nation" which reproduces one of Shakespeare's plays, exposes the colored race to contumely. Everybody is going to see the photoplay except the colored men. The 2000 negroes who stormed the State House, got assurance from Governor Walsh that he opposes the picture show which the colored men protest, if for nothing else—that it tends to excite race prejudice and bigotry. He will do all he can to prevent the further production of the show. The State police will not interfere with the daily performances. The case, it is thought, will probably go to the court. Meanti... everyone wants to kno... Birth of the Nation ... as many pa...

Boston Journal. April 19, 1915

...ncluding instalment of ...lary's Story
... printed on Page 4

PRICE ONE CENT

BIG NEGRO MASS MEETING DENOUNCES PHOTO-PLAY

F. B. Sanborn and J. C. Manning Condemn "Birth of Nation" in Faneuil Hall---Curley and Wilson Hissed.

THE FILM VILIFIES COLORED RACE, SAYS CONCORD'S SAGE

Delegation to Call on Governor Walsh Today to Urge Him to Stop Exhibition of the Picture.

"It is an assassination of history and a vilification of the colored race," were the words of Frank B. Sanborn, the Sage of Concord, in an address yesterday afternoon at the meeting in Faneuil Hall to protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

"If this play is not stopped it means the birth of hell and damnation in this country," said J. C. Manning of Alabama. "The picture is a wilful lie . . . . designed to support the hellish conditions in the South. If it leads to anarchy and lawlessness, the men who produced the photo-play are responsible. It is a desecration to the men of the North who fought for freedom."

The names of President Wilson and Mayor Curley were hissed.

WILL PROTEST TO GOVERNOR TODAY

...ces, both col...ored and white, attended yesterday's meeting, which was supplemented with an overflow meeting outside the hall, where more than 500 persons, unable to gain entrance, had gathered.

At both meetings enthusiasm ran high and a bitter feeling of protest was constantly manifest. Frank B. Sanborn, the only living "original" New England Abolitionist, and president of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association, under which name the meeting was held, presided. William M. Trot-

Calls It Un-American

"The danger of the picture is that the masses of people who see it do not read or hear about the other side of the case.
It is unfair and un-American as well as being a libel.

"Take it from me, there is more behind this picture than is apparent.
Those men responsible for the anti-negro agitation in the South have come to the North to [illegible]

Applaud Denunciations

The throng that filled the floor and galleries of Faneuil Hall applauded the men of the North who made it possible to preserve the Union. It is a desecration to every monument to the

Baseball Results
Sporting Bulletins

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Chicago 3, Pittsburg 1 (10 innings).
Cincinnati 6, St. Louis 2.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Detroit 8, Chicago 7.
Cleveland 6, St. Louis 1.

TY Cobb's throw from deep center field cutting off "Shano" Collins at plate, saves game for Detroit.

Manager Carrigan of Red Sox not pinch hitted over Manager Gleason's head on use of "emery" ball.

Applaud Denunciations

The throng that filled the floor and galleries of Faneuil Hall applauded every denunciation of the play made by the speakers.

The meeting in the hall was addressed by Mr. Ashborn, J. C. Manning of Alabama, former member of the Alabama Legislature; William D. Haywood, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association; Michael J. Jordan of the Irish Land League; William Trotter, Boito Colombo, associate editor of the Centralization; A. P. Russell, Jr., and the Rev. William M. Thornton.

The photoplay was characterized by Mr. Ashborn as "an assassination of history and a villification of the colored race." eit sharply scored those responsible for its production, saying that they "have the aim of an assassin and the instincts of a forger."

"Why do they call it 'The Birth of a Nation,' when this nation was born in the time of Washington, Franklin and Jefferson, all of whom detested slavery," he said.

Reform It Altogether

"They should be compelled by a united public sentiment to take Hamlet's advice—Reform it altogether." Pruning the play in parts will do no good. Take away this shooting iron, aimed at 16,000,000 good Americans; give it a new locle, stock and barrel and aim it at some of the flagrant national vices which exist in this country today.

"The men who are responsible for this picture despise the negro race and would restore slavery if they could. They are such disciples as Judas was—they value their 30 pieces of silver more than they do the Sermon on the Mount.

"I used to say before slavery was abolished that the last defender of slavery would be found in Boston, and this play seems to justify that prediction."

Mr. Ashborn asserted that if the Irish race was depicted as the negro race is in the photo-play there would be both-ering left of the theatre.

"I have seen the 'Birth of a Nation,' which, if it is not stopped, will mean the birth of hell and damnation in this country," said Mr. Manning. "The picture is an infamous, contemptible, will-

"We claim that any production which represents the men of one race assaulting the women of another should be forbidden in a country where all lives are supposed to be protected by the constitution will hover be as the Boston of old to the colored people that live here."

He asserted that the attitude of Mayor Curley has changed, and that the colored people of the city simply wanted to know why. He reiterated this again and again, each time greeted with applause.

The Rev. William M. Thornton told of his experience at the Tremont Theatre on Saturday night. He asserted that he secured a ticket for the performance, but that the door was shut in his face before he could gain entrance.

"The challenge is now down and men we must meet it," he concluded.

Tends to Immorality

"I witnessed this play and am impressed with the amount of vilification

Applaud Denunciations

The throng that filled the floor and galleries of Faneuil Hall applauded every denunciation of the play made by the speakers.

The meeting in the hall was addressed by Mr. Ashborn, J. C. Manning of Alabama, former member of the Alabama Legislature; William D. Haywood, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association; Michael J. Jordan of the Irish Land League; William Trotter, Boito Colombo, associate editor of the Centralization; A. P. Russell, Jr., and the Rev. William M. Thornton.

The photoplay was characterized by Mr. Ashborn as "an assassination of history and a villification of the colored race." eit sharply scored those responsible for its production, saying that they "have the aim of an assassin and the instincts of a forger."

"Why do they call it 'The Birth of a Nation,' when this nation was born in the time of Washington, Franklin and Jefferson, all of whom detested slavery," he said.

Reform It Altogether

"They should be compelled by a united public sentiment to take Hamlet's advice—Reform it altogether." Pruning the play in parts will do no good. Take away this shooting iron, aimed at 16,000,000 good Americans; give it a new locle, stock and barrel and aim it at some of the flagrant national vices which exist in this country today.

"The men who are responsible for this picture despise the negro race and would restore slavery if they could. They are such disciples as Judas was—they value their 30 pieces of silver more than they do the Sermon on the Mount.

"I used to say before slavery was abolished that the last defender of slavery would be found in Boston, and this play seems to justify that prediction."

Mr. Ashborn asserted that if the Irish race was depicted as the negro race is in the photo-play there would be both-ering left of the theatre.

"I have seen the 'Birth of a Nation,' which, if it is not stopped, will mean the birth of hell and damnation in this country," said Mr. Manning. "The picture is an infamous, contemptible, will-

"We claim that any production which represents the men of one race assaulting the women of another should be forbidden in a country where all lives are supposed to be protected by the constitution will hover be as the Boston of old to the colored people that live here."

He asserted that the attitude of Mayor Curley has changed, and that the colored people of the city simply wanted to know why. He reiterated this again and again, each time greeted with applause.

The Rev. William M. Thornton told of his experience at the Tremont Theatre on Saturday night. He asserted that he secured a ticket for the performance, but that the door was shut in his face before he could gain entrance.

"The challenge is now down and men we must meet it," he concluded.

Tends to Immorality

"I witnessed this play and am impressed with the amount of vilification

His Mayor's Name

At his first meeting of Mayor Curley's name the audience hissed.

"Don't hiss," Trotter said. "the mayor has yet a chance to stop the play. We have asked him to lay aside the technicalities of the law in this case and request that the play be stopped. He has stopped other plays without invoking the law.

Anything Can Happen

"If this picture can be presented in Boston, what can happen to America liberty. If you can be insulted to your face and your ideals destroyed, then, I say, anything can happen. Sometimes protest is permissible, as when our forefathers threw the tea into Boston harbor, and if all and see this picture people of this city at all be impossible for you to enjoy your due, the time will come when it will be as impossible for you to enjoy your rights in Massachusetts as it is in Mississippi."

He sharply criticised President Wilson for approving the film and urged the audience to show their feeling in this regard by voting against the President in 1916.

When he came from the meeting outside, W. M. Trotter, one of those who were arrested in the riot at Tremont Theatre Saturday night, was cheered by the audience in the hall.

"In endeavoring to have The Birth of a Nation suppressed, we are fighting for the fair name of Boston," he said. "We are fighting to keep unsullied the traditions of abolitionism and to maintain our own birthright."

EVENING RECORD
ress: Boston, Mass.
APR 30 1915

Describe Near Riot at Theatre

At "Birth of Nation" Trial

THEATRE MEN GIVE THEIR VERSION

One Claims Trotter Dared Police Officer to Knock Him on the Jaw

The trial of William Monroe Trotter, editor of a paper published in the interest of colored persons, and Rev. Aaron Puller, pastor of a church in the South End for colored persons, was resumed today at the special session of Municipal Court, Judge Brackett presiding, to hear cases resulting from the near riot at the Tremont Theatre April 17, growing out of the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

Henry L. MacMahon of New York, manager and press agent for the production, said that he arrived at the theatre about 5.30 p.m., and at that time immediately went into conference with Supt. Crowley of the Boston Police Department; Manager Schoeffel of the theatre; Atty. Cusick for the production, and Treas. Sheehan of the theatre. He then went home and took a nap, returning to the theatre about 7.25 p.m. As he arrived at the theatre he saw a large crowd about the street in the vicinity of the theatre, "the larger proportion blacks, the smaller proportion whites."

He said he saw "negroes hogging" the lobby, but Judge Brackett ordered this stricken out of the testimony. "Well, then," said the witness, "there were negroes sufficient to fill about seven-eighths of the lobby there were about 10 to 20, possibly 40 whites in the crowd. There was a sort of a line, but not a well-defined line; only one person in 10 or 20 was a white."

He said that a crowd was blocking the box office window, pushing, dodging and swarming around. He had to push his way through the crowd to get into the theatre, but he "rather enjoyed it."

Sale of Seats Stopped For All Performances

"The crowd was making a medium loud noise, but I heard no single remarks at that time that stamped themselves on my memory. In actions, and vocally, it was an unquiet crowd. When I saw the conditions I ordered the nearest subordinate to me to have the sale of all tickets, for all performances, to all persons stopped. I then went to the picture booth, looked all around, and put both police officers and attaches of the theatre on duty for the protection of the booth."

Returning to the lobby he saw and heard two men speaking. He recognized Trotter as one of these, as he had heard the man addressed as Trotter by Mayor Curley on a previous occasion. Trotter was saying repeatedly, "I'll have my rights,' with a certain amount of gestulations"—the witness demonstrating by waving his hands in the air. Trotter at this time was in close proximity to the box office. At times he was addressing his remarks to Sheehan and at other times to the crowd.

Some of the crowd, MacMahon said, had "a strangle-hold on the rail" near the box office. He saw no officers in uniform in the lobby at that time. He could not positively identify Rev. Puller as the other man who was talking in the lobby.

He said he heard Trotter say "I'll re any police officer to knock me on the e." He also heard some remark about "I be revenged, or avenged, or some- to that effect." He couldn't recall specific remarks which the other made at the time. He then went the theatre to look at the rear doors, was attracted to the lobby again in t three minutes by a loud noise, "an culate, aggregate loud number of s."

programme girls started to run and took up a station near the inner door of the lobby. The crowd had taken a movement toward the inner theatre and the officers were trying to get the crowd back toward the outer door. Trotter and several other persons pushed back the hands of the officers, and the crowd was "talking loudly, and looking blackly." There was an enormous loudness so one could not hear what his neighbor was saying without shouting.

Claimed Right to Buy Same as White Persons

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, said that he arrived at the theatre about 6:45 p.m. At that time the lobby was filling rapidly. He went into his office, near the box office, and opening a window between the offices looked at the condition of the ticket rack. It was nearly empty.

Treas. Sheehan was in the box office that time. In about five minutes, hoeffel went into the lobby, standing posite the door to his office. More sons had congregated by this time, there were some officers in the lobby. crowd was noisy in talk, and they e pushing each other toward the inner of the theatre. He saw Trotter at end of the rail, trying to get to the office window. Trotter was saying, ant to buy a ticket," and was facing crowd, telling them that they had a purchase tickets. He saw Rev. lobby at about the same "We have a right and sig[illegible]

(Continued from Page One.)

white people." He didn't pay any particular attention to Puller after that, but saw him taken away from in front of the box office by Sergt. King of the LaGrange st. station.

While standing in the lobby he said he saw an article come flying through the air in his direction, about two or three feet in his above the heads of the crowd. He thought it had come from about the center of the crowd in the lobby. He picked it up near his feet and took it into his office. It was a pepper box, and was shown in court as evidence.

He said that he requested Sergt. King to have the crowd removed from the lobby so that ticket buyers could come in. The crowd was not inclined to go, and were declaring, "we want our rights and we are going to have them. We want to buy tickets."

Under cross-examination he said he had no interest in the performance, accept that the theatre had been hired from him. He admitted it was a "drawing production," that the ticket rack was pretty well sold out, but denied that he expected people would be clamoring for tickets. He explained that when he said he wanted the lobby cleared so ticket buyers could come in, that he meant persons who had purchased tickets in advance, or who had tickets engaged at the box office, whether black or white. He declared that he never had an "all sold out," or a "standing room" sign in the theatre, that he did not believe in them.

REP. CROSS SCORES NEGROES FOR ASKING SOLONS NOT TO SEE "BIRTH OF NATION"

Rep. Fred W. Cross of the first Worcester district has sent an open letter to Butler R. Wilson of 34 School st., in which he takes issue with the colored persons who have opposed the production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Cross states that he believes the colored people of Boston are supersensitive, and not at all alive to the true import of the situation, because there is not a single reflection cast on the character of the colored people of the North.

He says further that the drama deals with an historic episode, and, although it may be as distasteful to the colored race as the persecution of the Quakers and witchcraft is to New Englanders, it is a matter of actual history and cannot be denied.

He takes the negroes to task for requesting the members of the Legislature not to inspect the film, and says that they might just as well request a jury not to visit the scene of a crime.

Lewis of Boston Asks About Films Shown to Wilson

WASHINGTON, April 30.—W. H. Lewis, a Boston negro, and former assistant attorney general of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of New Jersey called at the White House today to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his endorsement to a moving picture film depicting scenes during the reconstruction period in the South in a manner distasteful to negroes.

Sec. Tumulty showed them a letter to Rep. Thacher of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House as a courtesy to a former classmate of the President's, the President was unaware of its character.

He said the President had at no time expressed approbation for it.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 30, 1915

MAYOR, POLICE HEAD AND JUDGE TO PASS ON PLAYS

Legislative Committee to Report Bill Providing Triple Authority—Unanimous Vote Necessary to Kill Production.

The legislative committee on judiciary, after deliberating at length in executive session today on the various bills to prohibit the production of "The Birth of a Nation" or similar plays, voted to report a bill vesting the censorship of all plays in Boston with the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court and giving them unlimited power.

The bill provides, however, that before the new censorship triumvirate can stop the production of a play, its decision must be unanimous. No provision is made in the bill for an appeal from the decision of the censors.

At present, censorship of plays in Boston is vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner, but their authority is limited in that they cannot stop the production of a play unless it is obscene or immoral.

Representatives Abbott of Haverhill and Bowser of Wakefield will be recorded as dissenters to the bill.

Representative Burr of ward 11 was instructed to report the bill in the House.

The fact the new bill continues the police commissioner as a censor caused some surprise, as Police Commissioner O'Meara is reported to be desirous of being eliminated as a censor in Boston.

M. Sumner Coggan, counsel for the Tremont Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, declined to express an opinion on the bill until he had had an opportunity to study it.

Put Film Protest up to Curley Again Today

Once again the fight to bar the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," from further showing in Boston, will be put up to Mayor Curley. A committee of 100 citizens, led by the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, as chairman, today will call upon the executive, and urge him to stop the play at once, this action being the outcome of a mass meeting held last night in the Twelfth Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue, Roxbury.

Early today a sub-committee of the main body will call on the mayor and request him to fix a time when it will be convenient for him to receive the larger committee. The committeemen will invade the mayor's sanctum armed with a mass of protests and denunciations of the photoplay and will use every effort to induce him to put an immediate stop to further showing of the film in the Tremont Theatre.

More than 700 citizens attended the meeting in the Roxbury church last night. Emery F. Morris of Cambridge presided. Many of the speakers characterised as "an attempt at bribery," the invitation of the theatre and photoplay management to the members of the Legislature to witness a free private showing of the film on Monday morning. The Rev. Dr. Brown said it was evidently the purpose of the theatre management and the film producers, to influence the legislators to pass a law that should be favorable to the protested play, and that such influence was in the nature of a bribe.

What is believed by opponents of the photo-play will be one of the largest and most enthusiastic mass gatherings yet held in protest of "The Birth of a Nation" will take place at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Tremont Temple. The speakers have not as yet been decided upon, but it is announced they will be men of state and national prominence, whose support in the crusade against the film has been enlisted, and who will wax eloquent in their condemnation of the play.

The announcement late yesterday that the legislative committee on judiciary

(Continued from Page One.)

would take up the new Hallowell bill in executive session today was greeted as cheering news by the opponents to the play. The proposed measure would eliminate the commissioner of police from participating in the censorship of plays and photo-plays, vesting the mayor with entire authority, and also would give the state police, through its chief, power to exercise its censorship on week days as well as on Sundays.

J. Mott Hallowell, framer of the new bill, and many of his supporters look for favorable action on the part of the Judiciary committee. What is especially gratifying to them is that the committee has decided to take action without waiting for the private showing of the play which has been arranged for next Monday.

Individual protests against their viewing the film Monday as the guests of the management were entered last night with each member of the Legislature by Butler R. Wilson, attorney, who addressed to each of the legislators a letter in which he denounced the invitation as nothing more than an attempt to in[illegible]

EVENING RECORD
...ess: Boston, Mass.
APR 30 1915

Describe Near Riot at Theatre

At "Birth of Nation" Trial

THEATRE MEN GIVE THEIR VERSION

One Claims Trotter Dared Police Officer to Knock Him on the Jaw

The trial of William Monroe Trotter, editor of a paper published in the interest of colored persons, and Rev. Aaron Puller, pastor of a church in the South End for colored persons, was resumed today at the special session of Municipal Court, Judge Brackett presiding, to hear cases resulting from the near riot at the Tremont Theatre April 17, growing out of the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

Henry I. MacMahon of New York, manager and press agent for the production, said that he arrived at the theatre about 5.30 p.m., and at that time immediately went into conference with Supt. Crowley of the Boston Police Department; Manager Schoeffel of the theatre; Atty. Cusick for the production, and Treas. Sheehan of the theatre. He then went home and took a nap, returning to the theatre about 7.25 p.m. As he arrived at the theatre he saw a large crowd about the street in the vicinity of the theatre, "the larger proportion blacks, the smaller proportion whites."

He said he saw "negroes hogging" the lobby, but Judge Brackett ordered this stricken out of the testimony. "Well, then," said the witness, "there were negroes sufficient to fill about seven-eighths of the lobby there were about 10 to 30, possibly 40 whites in the crowd. There was a sort of a line, but not a well-defined line; only one person in 10 or 20 was a white."

He said that a crowd was blocking the box office window, pushing, dodging and swirming around. He had to push his way through the crowd to get into the theatre, but he "rather enjoyed it."

Sale of Seats Stopped For All Performances

"The crowd was making a medium loud noise, but I heard no single remarks at that time that stamped themselves on my memory. In actions, and vocally, it was an unquiet crowd. When I saw the conditions I ordered the nearest subordinate to me to have the sale of all tickets, for all performances, to all persons stopped. I then went to the picture booth, looked all around, and put both police officers and attaches of the theatre on duty for the protection of the booth."

Returning to the lobby he saw and heard two men speaking. He recognized Trotter as one of these, as he had heard the man addressed as Trotter by Mayor Curley on a previous occasion. Trotter was saying repeatedly, "'I'll have my rights,' with a certain amount of gestulations"—the witness demonstrating by waving his hands in the air. Trotter at this time was in close proximity to the box office. At times he was addressing his remarks to Sheehan and at other times to the crowd.

Some of the crowd, MacMahon said, had "a strangle-hold on the rail" near the box office. He saw no officers in uniform in the lobby at that time. He could not positively identify Rev. Puller as the other man who was talking in the lobby.

He said he heard Trotter say "I'll ...e any police officer to knock me on the ..." He also heard some remark about "I be revenged, or avenged, or some- ... to that effect." He couldn't recall specific remarks which the other made at the time. He then went the theatre to look at the rear doors, was attracted to the lobby again in t three minutes by a loud noise, "an ...culate, aggregate loud number of ..."

... programme girls started to run and e took up a station near the inner door of the lobby. The crowd had taken a movement toward the inner theatre and the officers were trying to get the crowd back toward the outer door. Trotter and several other persons pushed back the hands of the officers, and the crowd was "talking loudly, and looking blackly." There was an enormous loudness so one could not hear what his neighbor was saying without shouting.

Claimed Right to Buy Same as White Persons

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, said that he arrived at the theatre about 6:45 p.m. At that time the lobby was filling rapidly. He went into his office, near the box office, and opening a window between the offices looked at the condition of the ticket rack. It was nearly empty.

Treas. Sheehan was in the box office that time. In about five minutes ...hoeffel went into the lobby, standing ...posite the door to his office. More ...sons had congregated by this time, there were some officers in the lobby. crowd was noisy in talk, and they ...e pushing each other toward the inner of the theatre. He saw Trotter at end of the rail, trying to get to the office window. Trotter was saying, ...nt to buy a ticket," and was facing ...owd, telling them that they had a ...t purchase tickets. He saw Rev. ... ...ks at about the same ... "We have a right ... and sixty-nine ...

(Continued from Page One)

white people." He didn't pay any particular attention to Puller after that, but saw him taken away from in front of the box office by Sergt. King of the LaGrange st. station.

While standing in the lobby he said he saw an article come flying through the air in his direction, about two or three feet above the heads of the crowd. He thought it had come from about the center of the crowd in the lobby. He picked it up near his feet and took it into his office. It was a pepper box, and was shown in court as evidence.

He said that he requested Sergt. King to have the crowd removed from the lobby so that ticket buyers could come in. The crowd was not inclined to go, and were declaring, "we want our rights and we are going to have them. We want to buy tickets."

Under cross-examination he said he had no interest in the performance, accept that the theatre had been hired from him. He admitted it was a "drawing production," that the ticket rack was pretty well sold out, but denied that he expected people would be clamoring for tickets. He explained that when he said he wanted the lobby cleared so ticket buyers could come in, that he meant persons who had purchased tickets in advance, or who had tickets engaged at the box office, whether black or white. He declared that he never had an "all sold out," or a "standing room" sign in the theatre, that he did not believe in them.

REP. CROSS SCORES NEGROES FOR ASKING SOLONS NOT TO SEE "BIRTH OF NATION"

Rep. Fred W. Cross of the first Worcester district has sent an open letter to Butler R. Wilson of 34 School st., in which he takes issue with the colored persons who have opposed the production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Cross states that he believes the colored people of Boston are supersensitive, and not at all alive to the true import of the situation, because there is not a single reflection cast on the character of the colored people of the North.

He says further that the drama deals with an historic episode, and, although it may be as distasteful to the colored race as the persecution of the Quakers and witchcraft is to New Englanders, it is a matter of actual history and cannot be denied.

He takes the negroes to task for requesting the members of the Legislature not to inspect the film, and says that they might just as well request a jury not to visit the scene of a crime.

Lewis of Boston Asks About Films Shown to Wilson

WASHINGTON, April 30.—W. H. Lewis, a Boston negro, and former assistant attorney general of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of New Jersey called at the White House today to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his endorsement to a moving picture film depicting scenes during the reconstruction period in the South in a manner distasteful to negroes.

Sec. Tumulty showed them a letter to Rep. Thacher of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House as a courtesy to a former classmate of the President's, the President was unaware of its character.

He said the President had at no time expressed approbation for it.

BOSTON TRAVELER APRIL 30, 1915

MAYOR, POLICE HEAD AND JUDGE TO PASS ON PLAYS

Legislative Committee to Report Bill Providing Triple Authority—Unanimous Vote Necessary to Kill Production.

The legislative committee on judiciary, after deliberating at length in executive session today on the various bills to prohibit the production of "The Birth of a Nation" or similar plays, ... to report a bill vesting the censorship of all plays in Boston with the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court and giving them unlimited power.

The bill provides, however, that before the new censorship triumvirate can stop the production of a play, its decision must be unanimous. No provision is made in the bill for an appeal from the decision of the censors.

At present, censorship of plays in Boston is vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner, but their authority is limited in that they cannot stop the production of a play unless it is obscene or immoral.

Representatives Abbott of Haverhill and Bowser of Wakefield will be recorded as dissenters to the bill.

Representative Burr of ward 11 was instructed to report the bill in the House.

The fact the new bill continues the police commissioner as a censor caused some surprise, as Police Commissioner O'Meara is reported to be desirous of being eliminated as a censor in Boston.

M. Sumner Coggan, counsel for the Tremont Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, declined to express an opinion on the bill until he had had an opportunity to study it.

Put Film Protest up to Curley Again Today

Once again the fight to bar the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," from further showing in Boston, will be put up to Mayor Curley. A committee of 100 citizens, led by the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, as chairman, today will call upon the executive, and urge him to stop the play at once, this action being the outcome of a mass meeting held last night in the Twelfth Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue, Roxbury.

Early today a sub-committee of the main body will call on the mayor and request him to fix a time when it will be convenient for him to receive the larger committee. The committeemen will invade the mayor's sanctum armed with a mass of protests and denunciations of the photoplay and will use every effort to induce him to put an immediate stop to further showing of the film in the Tremont Theatre.

More than 700 citizens attended the meeting in the Roxbury church last night. Emery F. Morris of Cambridge presided. Many of the speakers characterized as "an attempt at bribery," the invitation of the theatre and photoplay management to the members of the Legislature to witness a free private showing of the film on Monday morning. The Rev. Dr. Brown said it was evidently the purpose of the theatre management and the film producers, to influence the legislators to pass a law that should be favorable to the protested play, and that such influence was in the nature of a bribe.

What is believed by opponents of the photo-play will be one of the largest and most enthusiastic mass gatherings yet held in protest of "The Birth of a Nation" will take place at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Tremont Temple. The speakers have not as yet been decided upon, but it is announced they will be men of state and national prominence, whose support in the crusade against the film has been enlisted, and who will wax eloquent in their condemnation of the play.

The announcement late yesterday that the legislative committee on judiciary

(Continued from Page One.)

would take up the new Hallowell bill in executive session today was greeted as cheering news by the opponents to the play. The proposed measure would eliminate the commissioner of police from participating in the censorship of plays and photo-plays, vesting the mayor with entire authority, and also would give the state police, through its chief, power to exercise its censorship on week days as well as on Sundays.

J. Mott Hallowell, framer of the new bill, and many of his supporters look for favorable action on the part of the Judiciary committee. What is especially gratifying to them is that the committee has decided to take action without waiting for the private showing of the play which has been arranged for next Monday.

Individual protests against their viewing the film Monday as the guests of the management were entered last night with each member of the Legislature by Butler R. Wilson, attorney, who addressed to each of the legislators a letter in which he denounced the exhibition as nothing more than an attempt to in-

ADVERTISER
Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

Church Federation Acts

At a meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches in Greater Boston, held yesterday afternoon in Trinity Parish House, the following vote was passed: "That the directors of the federation express in their strongest terms their disapproval of the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' considering it contrary to good public policy and, in any broad sense of the term, injurious to public morality, and they trust that some way will be found to prevent its further production."

Star - N.Y. apr 21, 1915

MAYOR CURLEY PERMITS

After eliminating several scenes which he regarded as being offensive Mayor Curley of Boston will permit D. W. Griffith's motion picture "The Birth of a Nation," to be shown to the Boston public. He does not however, say the picture is obscene or immoral.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

INTRODUCES BILL AIMED AT "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Representative Sullivan of Boston filed a bill in the House yesterday relative to the production of "The Birth of a Nation." His bill adds to the present statute, which is aimed wholly at immoral or obscene performances, the words "or any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice, or tends to a breach of the public peace." The measure was sent to the rules committee.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 21, 1915

EXPRESS DISAPPROVAL OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

At a meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches in Greater Boston, an organization of which the Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann is president, and the Rev. Christopher R. Eliot, secretary, in the Trinity parish house yesterday, the following resolution was passed unanimously: "Resolved, That the directors of the federation express in the strongest terms their disapproval of the photoplay, 'The Birth of a Nation,' considering it contrary to good public policy and in any broad sense of the term, injurious to public morality; and trust that some way will be found to prevent its further production."

ADVERTISER
Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

HOUSE READY TO ACT ON FILM LEGISLATION

That the House and he personally is ready to admit legislation that will make impossible the exhibition of such film plays as the "Birth of a Nation" is the statement of Speaker Channing Cox in a special interview on the subject.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 21, 1915

Bill Is Introduced

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation," Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the House a bill, which will add to chapter 467 of the Acts of 1910, governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the Committee on Rules.

By some members of the House the bill was considered too broad, and it was claimed that it would bar such a play as the "Merchant of Venice."

Journal Boston, Mass
Apr. 21, 1915

"CLANSMAN" STARTS RIOT

Negro Agitation in Boston Results in Riot Followed by Arrests

BOSTON (Special).—Agitation started by local negroes over "The Birth of a Nation" resulted in a row in the theater lobby Saturday evening which resulted in several arrests. W. Monroe Trotter, who had trouble at the White House recently, when President Wilson alleged that he insulted him, was among the twelve arrested. The lobby was quickly cleared and the performance went on without interruption.

The management of the picture say that they had received information that an attempt was going to be made to break up the show.

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 21, 1915

Church Federation Acts

At a meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches in Greater Boston held yesterday afternoon in Trinity Parish House, the following vote was passed: "That the directors of the federation express in their strongest terms their disapproval of the photoplay, 'The Birth of a Nation,' considering it contrary to good public policy and, in any broad sense of the term, injurious to public morality, and that some way will be found to prevent its further production."

FILES BILL AIMED AT PHOTO-PLAY

Sullivan's Measure Would Stop "Birth of Nation" If Passed.

A bill designed to stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and similar plays in the future was filed in the House yesterday by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston.

The measure as presented would add to the present statute, which prohibits the production of entertainments which tend to immorality, a prohibition of "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice, or tends to a breach of the public peace."

The bill was referred to the committee on rules on the question of suspending the rules for its consideration at this session.

That measures designed to prevent such productions will not be lacking in support in the Legislature is evidenced by a statement by Speaker Cox yesterday, in which he said:

"Several of the members of the House, some representatives of the colored race and others interested, have asked me what my position would be as to the admission of new legislation which would prohibit entertainments or plays which tend to excite race prejudice or which tend to injure the feelings of any particular race.

"So far as I have been able to learn, there is a general feeling of regret on the part of the members of the Legislature that a performance should be permitted in our city which is so objectionable to so large and responsible a class of our citizens, and the temper of the House, so far as I am able to ascertain, is such that any move to secure legislation to make such performances impossible will receive strong support.

"If it is true that there is being offered twice daily a great insult and a great injustice to a large number of our colored citizens within Massachusetts, I shall, for one, stand ready to aid any attempt to make such performances impossible."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 21, 1915

CHURCH FEDERATION OPPOSES PHOTO-PLAY

A protest against "The Birth of a Nation" as "contrary to good public policy and injurious to public morality," was unanimously voted yesterday afternoon by the directors of the Federation of Churches and Religious Organizations of Greater Boston, representing all the Protestant denominations. Rev. Alexander Mann is president and Rev. Christopher R. Elliot secretary of the federation. The vote is as follows:

"Voted, That the directors of the federation express in the strongest terms their disapproval of the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' considering it contrary to good public policy and, in any broad sense of the term, injurious to public morality, and they trust that some way will be found to prevent its further production."

NO DISTURBANCE AT THE TREMONT THEATRE

Although a throng of curious spectators gathered on the Common opposite the Tremont Theatre again last night, not the slightest disturbance occurred. A few groups that gathered in discussion early in the evening were quickly dispersed by the police, a large detail being still on duty at the theatre.

Judge Dowd, who is hearing the petition for a warrant against the producers of the photo-play, attended the performance last night. Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the Massachusetts District Police, and the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Baptist Church, who will testify today, also attended. Some officials of the State police were on duty at the theatre. A few negroes were present.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 21, 1915

CONGREGATIONAL CLERGY PROTEST PHOTO-PLAY

Pass Resolutions Asking Gov. Walsh to Stop Production

The Boston Congregational Ministers' Club has joined the ranks of the numerous organizations, and public spirited citizens, protesting the further allowance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," to be presented in Boston.

At a meeting of the club yesterday resolutions were passed denouncing the picture play, and it was voted to request Gov. Walsh to take every action within his power to stop the production in Boston and the State.

The resolutions set forth that:—

"Whereas, the photo-drama entitled 'The Birth of a Nation,' now being presented in Tremont Theatre, has aroused the entire negro population of Boston and created a most unfavorable impression upon many fair-minded persons irrespective of race or color;

"And, whereas, the committee appointed one week ago to investigate this play and report its findings is unanimous in the feeling that, although from the artistic standpoint it is a wonderful exhibition, its final effect is thoroughly evil and vicious; that it arouses and strengthens the race prejudice which is so serious a menace both in the North and in the South; that it fans into flame the sectional feeling which all loyal Americans are endeavoring to eliminate; and that its implied justification of the Ku Klux and of lynch law is thoroughly against good morality and law;

"Therefore, be it resolved that we, the Boston Congregational Ministers' Meeting, hereby earnestly petition his excellency the Governor of the Commonwealth, to take such action as is necessary, in the interests of true democracy, justice and ... to discontinue its ...

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

JUDGE DOWD VIEWS "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Opens Hearing on Application for Warrants for Theatrical Men, Decides to See Play

AMERICAN
ss Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

RESUME HEARING ON FILM PROTEST

The hearing before Judge Thomas H. Dowd, to whom a request for warrants for the producers of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," has been made, will be resumed today, following a visit of the judge to the theatre where the film objected to by the colored residents is being shown.

Among the witnesses expected to appear today are former Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Lewis, Deputy Neal of the State police and several colored pastors.

An interested spectator at the hearing was Superintendent of Police Crowley. The complaint is brought in the name of the Commonwealth, and the official complainants are the police.

Scenes of the play were described, and summonses were asked for the appearance of John B. Schoeffel, owner of the Tremont Theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, traveling manager of the film, on the allegation that they were giving an immoral performance.

BILL IN LEGISLATURE.

A bill bearing on the situation has been filed in the House by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston. It would add to the present statute, which prohibits the production of entertainments which tend to immorality, a prohibition of "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice, or tends to a breach of the public peace."

The management of the Tremont Theatre, in a statement, says, in part:

"The mere fact that 'The Birth of a Nation' happens to show a few members of one of the races of the United States in an unpleasant light is no argument whatever. If this factor is to be seriously considered, there is hardly any limit to which official regulation may not go. If Africans are to have their say and oppose the production of a play to which they object, why should not the Jews, Hungarians, Czechs, Teutons, French, Italians, Slavs, Scandinavians, Irish and Anglo-Saxons have the same privilege?

"If the film be suppressed, we shall be serving notice on the motion picture and theatrical managers that they may only produce plays that are absolutely and unquestionably offensive to nobody. The result will be a thoroughly colorless, innocuous mediocrity that will be the death of true stage art."

PROTESTS BY PASTORS.

At a meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston, of which the Rev. Alexander Mann is president, the following resolution was passed:

"Voted, that the directors of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston express in the strongest terms their disapproval of the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' considering it contrary to good public policy and, in every broad sense of the term, injurious to public morality, and they trust that some way will be found to prevent its further production."

D. W. GRIFFITH,
Producer of "The Birth of a Nation."

Judge Thomas H. Dowd, to whom a request for warrants for the producers of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," has been made, and who opened a hearing on the question yesterday, was in the audience at the Tremont Theatre last night, in order, as he said, "to become fully acquainted with the presentment upon which this court is taking evidence."

Among others in last night's audience were the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, who is expected to be a witness against the play; William D. Brigham, who condemned the play at the Faneuil Hall meeting Sunday, and Frank B. Sanborn, the "Sage of Concord," one of the few abolitionists now living.

There was no disorder at the theatre last night. Several hundred gathered, expecting trouble, but were disappointed. A few colored people attended the play, but made no demonstration.

LEGAL ACTION STARTED

Legal action was instituted yesterday against the management of the Tremont Theatre and the producers of the photo-play, to determine whether the play will be permitted to continue in Boston.

This action was taken by Sergeant Anderson of the Boston police, at the direction of Commissioner O'Meara and with the consent and advice of Governor Walsh, who advised that committees representing the colored population of Boston to act along legal lines in their efforts to stop the play when they waited upon him at the State House Monday.

Fourteen men and women, charged with offences growing out of the demonstration against the film Saturday night, were arraigned in the first and second sessions of the Central Municipal Court yesterday.

Charge Inciting Riot

Additional complaints of inciting a riot were preferred against William Monroe Trotter, editor and publisher of the Guardian, and the Rev. Aaron W. Fuller, pastor of the People's Baptist Church. The first complaints against them were of disturbing the peace.

WORCESTER (Mass.) POST
APRIL 21, 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" FILMS ARE O. K'D

Judge Dowd Rules in Boston Petition

BOSTON, April 21. — Municipal Court Judge Thomas H. Dowd, before whom a delegation of Negroes instituted legal proceedings to prohibit exhibition of moving pictures which they alleged were objectionable and tended to create race prejudice, declined today to issue summonses to the proprietors of the show and ruled that the pictures may be displayed if a certain scene is eliminated.

The judge heard evidence in the case yesterday and viewed the films last night. In announcing his decision today he said:

"The element of race does not enter into the controversy for the law knows no race nor creed in Mas...

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

NOT THE SPIRIT OF OLD

[From the Worcester Telegram]

The "Birth of a Nation" as it is played on the stage in Boston today is a good deal different from the real stuff which was started 139 years ago in the same section of the country. Then the patriots had something of importance to attend to. Today some of the people are presuming to remember the heroic deeds of the patriots who began the American fight for independence. They do it almost entirely at play and call it sport. But they have not forgotten how to ride an ...

(Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 21, 1915

SSES IN PLAY
T CASE HEARD

for Arrest of Manager of Tremont Theatre
Are Sought

WO MEN FREED OF THE CHARGE OF DISTURBANCE

Court Sessions Are Crowded During Three Sessions of Hearing rising over the Boston prothe "Birth of a Nation" took part of the time in three ses-Municipal Court yesterday, before Judge Dowd on the grant warrants for the arrest

John B. Schoeffel of the Trere and J. J. McCarthy of the Co. took up the entire after-on and will be continued at
.

, one white and one colored,
not guilty on the charge of ult and battery during the Saturday night at the Trere. The cases of 11 others ued by Judge Sheehan. The at two women who were ar-day night in connection with were also continued by Judge

before Judge Dowd on the granting a warrant was by far important. The hearing was the protest made to Gov. Walsh House Patriots' Day.
nor expected to make a solucase if warrants were issued theatrical men for running an ntertainment. If warrants were Governor said he should seek to prohibit plays that excited
.

esses were called to testify
e Dowd by Atty. Hallowell, earing for the complainants.
es were Rev. Horace Bumookline; Rev. Samuel A. Brown,
56 Columbus ave., Roxbury,
Marks Congregational Church or Harry Atkinson of Natick
Police, who saw the show unrection of Deputy Chief Neal.
clusion of yesterday's hearing, said that he intended to see last night.

n proved to be the star witness plainants. He gave a careful of the various reels and laid s on the parts which depicted of the white girl by "Gus," e Negro, which culminated in the girl from the cliff to the
. All the witnesses spent much careful description of this scene scene in which Silas Lynch is carrying a bound and struggling from his office to a bedroom.
n illustrated his description of in which the negresses in the the State Legislature deported by swinging their legs over the the court room.

earing in the afternoon was not out objection from Atty. Cusick, sentative of the film company.
ed a continuance when the case up, but Judge Dowd said that should be tried at once.

that if there was any legal ob-play should be stopped at once more fuel added to the flames of
He also said that if the play per production the theatre mand be freed from molestation.

noon's hearing was in the poor court room, which is a small hen Judge Dowd took the bench more than 100 persons packed small auditorium, and Judge
"I may say to all that this is portant hearing and I ask all to rom any expression of approba-disapprobation, as the testimony
ted. This court room is at the me packed beyond all endurance,
, therefore, ask all persons to court. Witnesses will be called are needed."

point the court was cleared of ding court officers, members of and witnesses.

beginning of the hearing Atty.
, for the complainants, stated
d not want the case to be against
He held a conference with Atty.
r the defendants, who said that than Griffith, the "producer."
by an agreement of attorneys, aint was made against McCarty Griffith, and was also made hn B. Schoeffel, manager of the Theatre.

witness called was Rev. Horace of Brookline, who said he had motion picture play.

rd this as brutal," Bumstead said.
Judge Dowd replied, "You can what you saw, but you must not say it was brutal or kind."

a negro pursuing a white girl," inister said. "She finally threw her-from a cliff. I saw also at the end of the figure of Jesus Christ brought a manner which I think—"

ject," said Atty. Cusick.

ver to a question from Butler Wil-colored attorney, the witness said uing negro on the screen was lust-Judge Dowd ordered the word "lust-ck out.

was the name of the negro?"
tty. Mallowell.

replied the witness.

witness described the white girl her house and her pursuit by the
The court warned him to be ac-n his description, and not to exersonal opinions, as Judge Dowd
t he himself would see the play.
witness told of the girl going to spot, and on being asked to de-said several times that he could out infringing on the court's in, which were for him not to his personal opinions.

d the scene culminated with th owing hands over the cliff, b witness remark

LEWISTON (Me.) JOURNAL
APRIL 21, 1915

MAY SHOW FILM IF ONE SCENE IS ELIMINARED

BOSTON, April 21.—Municipal Court Judge Thomas H. Dowd, before whom a delegation of Negroes began legal proceedings to prohibit the exhibition of picture films which they allege were objectionable and tended to create race prejudice, ruled today that the films may be shown if a certain scene is eliminated.

Judge Dowd heard evidence in the case yesterday, and last night attended the theater where the pictures were displayed.

In announcing his decision, the court said that the pictures were not forbidden under the law. "There may be things which incite the colored people to protest," he said, "but these things are not covered by statute. The element of race does not enter into the controversy at all for the laws knows no race nor creed in Massachusetts."

Traveler & Eve. Herald

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 21 1915

GRAND ARMY HEAD SCORES RACE FILM

Alfred H. Knowles.

JUDGE DOWD RULES RACE HATE ISSUE OUT OF COURT'S PROVINCE

Deplores Outburst of Racial Feeling, but Finds Rest of Film Not in Law's Scope

Judge Dowd, who yesterday heard witnesses at the opening of the fight to stop the showing of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," and last night attended the Tremont Theatre to see the picture play himself, today ordered the management to cut out one of the scenes to which the strongest objection was made. If this order is complied with no summons will be issued for Proprietor John B. Schoeffel of the theatre and Manager J. J. McCarthy of the film company.

The scene the judge has ordered eliminated is that in which the renegade Negro "Gus" pursues a young white girl until she hurls herself to death over a cliff.

In announcing his decision in court today, Judge Dowd said, "I am convinced there is one scene which is obscene and immoral. This is the scene in which the Negro "Gus" pursues the white girl.

"Lust Written on Face."

"Animal passion and lust are written all over his countenance and the scene leaves nothing to imagination but the visualization. The little girl, to escape him, makes the greatest sacrifice a woman can make—her destruction, to save her honor. He is actuated by the lowest passion."

Judge Dowd announced at noon today, when attorneys were ready to continue the hearing on the application for summonses, that he had reached his decision. He said that, except for the scene mentioned, he found nothing else in the production which needed legal pruning.

"I will give time for the elimination of that scene," he said," before I take any action on the summons application. I find nothing else in the play which comes under the law. There may be things which incite the colored people to protest, but these things are not covered by statute. Our stage has descended to filth, with productions such as 'Traffic in Souls' and other villainous things. This play, however, has been complained of. It is a splendid production—one of the best I have seen—but that doesn't alter the fact that this scene offends from the point of view of the law."

The colored protestors against the film, represented by Atty. J. Mott Hallowell, asked Judge Dowd to issue the summonses despite his statement that he proposed to give time for the elimination of this scene, and have the case tried on its merits.

Look Door to Bar Crowd.

The poor debtor session door to the corridor was locked today to keep the court room from being overrun by interested spectators, but the witnesses who expected to be heard were on hand, being conducted to the court room by another route. Among these was William E. Lewis, formerly a United States assistant attorney-general, and he provided the only tilt when he interrupted a statement Atty. Cusick, who represents the film producers, was making.

Atty. Cusick had stated he wanted the court and the public to understand there were three miles of film in the production, when Lewis, who was near him, called out quickly, "Three miles of film or of filth, Mr. Cusick?"

Cusick turned like a shot and answered quickly, "You are an able colored man, Mr. Lewis, and oughtn't to make a statement like that."

(Continued on Page Two, Column Two)

Notify Curley "Chase Scene" Will Be Cut Out

Atty. John F. Cusick, counsel for producers and managers of "The Birth of a Nation," today notified Mayor Curley that the scene that is objected to, known as the "chase scene," will be eliminated from the film. This is the result of several conferences between the mayor and the producers' managers.

G. A. R. Leader Flays Film

Declares He'll Condemn "Birth of Nation" at Every Gathering Where He Has Chance.

Alfred H. Knowles of Arlington, commander of the Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R., added his voice today to the volume of protest against "The Birth of a Nation."

While Commander Knowles spoke as an individual, his protest was particularly significant in that he said he proposed to condemn the photo-play in talks with his G. A. R. comrades, and this may result in official protests from G. A. R. bodies.

"I believe this play is a reflection on one of the great principles for which the Grand Army of the Republic fought," decladed Commander Knowles. "This principle was and is Liberty and equal rights for all.'

"I haven't seen this play myself, but from all that I have heard about it, and all it has stirred up, I want to be placed on record as opposed to it and as condemning it with all the force at my command.

"I am speaking as an individual, you understand; but I will say that wherever I go and am called upon to talk, I shall express my condemnation of this play.

"I also propose to inculcate in the hearts and minds of my Grand Army comrades opposition to this play, and I don't think I shall have very much trouble."

Commander Knowles is particularly interested in the matter, because after he enlisted in 1861 in the 24th Massachusetts regiment he was later commissioned a second lieutenant in Col. Robert Gould Shaw's 54th (Negro) regiment. Because of delay in receiving his commission Commander Knowles was not able to join this notable regiment until its arrival at Morris Island in South Carolina. Commander Knowles later became the first lieutenant and commander of company A of this regiment, and the records show he served with distinction and gallantry. He was wounded Dec. 3, 1864, at Gainsville, S. C., and was discharged as the result of his wounds. When he recovered he returned and served on the staff of the 9th army corps of Gen. Park until the close of the war.

ORDERS "CHASE SCENE" CUT FROM BIRTH OF NATION

(Continued from Page One.)

"You can cut out the 'colored,' answered Lewis quietly.

Praises Film.

Judge Dowd, speaking of his reasons for considering the pursuit scene the only one which came within the law, decried the racial disturbance which the photo-play has aroused and said it was a fine production, one of the finest he had ever seen. He declared the element of race doesn't enter into the question at all; that the law knows no color nor creed, and, that as a matter of fact, hundreds of plays and picture productions have been given in Boston in which white actors only appear which have been morally much worse than this play.

Judge Dowd's remarks in part were: "This is not a question of race at all. It is a question of the decency and morality of this play. The element of race doesn't enter into the controversy at all, for the law knows no race nor creed in Massachusetts. The only question is, 'Does the production of the play violate any statute, or rather the one upon which the applications for the summons are based?'

Atty. Cusick then stated that the question of the elimination of this particular scene, judicially objected to, had been a matter of discussion between the theatre management and Mayor Curley for four days, and that a satisfactory ending of the conference had been arrived at. He did not state what the result was, however. He said that the theatre management did not admit the conclusions of the court in regard to this scene, but that it wanted the court and the public to understand it meant to have nothing upon its screen which was not within, not only the purely legal law, but the ethical law as well.

Atty. J. Mott Hallowell, representing the Negro protesters, said that although Judge Dowd had heard a few witnesses, he wished it understood their testimony was a mere fragment of the evidence he was prepared to offer if the case came to trial. He said his clients believed the play violated the law in many other respects than the scene which the court stipulated should be eliminated, and asked that summons be issued and that the case be tried on its merits.

Judge Dowd answered that there was much feeling in the case which should not crop out in court. He did not make the remark as a rebuke, but to indicate that the judicial point of view was not one of color, but was purely legal. Hallowell then asked to be heard in argument and Judge Dowd granted his request.

Discharge 2 of 16 Held In Theatre Disturbance

Two of the 16 persons arrested Saturday night in and about the Tremont Theatre, during the disturbance precipitated by the showing of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," were discharged in court yesterday, after being tried on a charge of mutual assault. The defendants were Charles F. Sullivan, white, and Harris McDonald, colored. With one exception, all of the other cases were postponed until Wednesday of next week.

William M. Trotter, editor of the Guardian, and the Rev. Aaron Puller, both colored, who were among those arrested and who are charged with inciting a riot and disturbing the peace, were released from custody on their personal recognizance. The bail furnished for the other defendants following their arrest, was allowed to stand.

The case of James Gould, charged with assault and battery on a police officer, was set for a hearing this morning.

LEADING FIGHT ON "BIRTH OF A NATION"

The Rev. Aaron W. Puller.

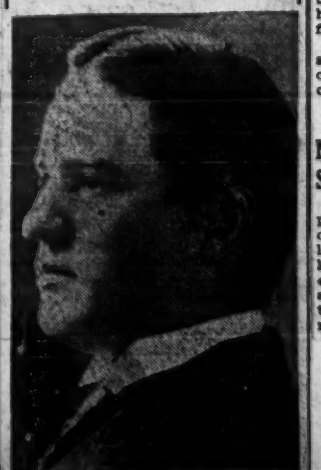
William M. Trotter.

CHARGE 15 HIRED TO EJECT NEGROES

NEW YORK, April 21—It was charged in the Jefferson Market police court yesterday that the Liberty Theatre, where the film "The Birth of a Nation" is being showed, had employed 15 private detectives to eject Negroes who do not like the picture play. The charge was made in the case of John Thompson against Howard Schaeffle, who said he came here from Boston.

Schaeffle is charged with throwing eggs at the screen while the film was being shown on the night of April 13. A part of the evidence was heard yesterday. Then the case was adjourned until Monday on motion of the defence, so as to allow former Congressman W. S. Bennet to be present to represent Schaeffle.

JUDGE WHO WENT TO SEE DISPUTED FILM



Judge Thomas H. Dowd, Hearing Protest Over "The Birth of a Nation."

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 2 1 1915

Must Cut One Scene From Film

Ruling In "Birth of Nation" Case

OTHERWISE WARRANTS WILL BE ISSUED

Court Holds Episode of Renegade Negro "Gus" Is Immoral

One of two things will happen to "The Birth of a Nation," the photo-picture play now being shown at the Tremont Theatre. Either the scene in which "Gus," a renegade negro, pursues a white girl, after which she hurls herself to death over a cliff, will be entirely eliminated or else warrants will be issued for the arrest of Manager John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre, and Joseph J. McCarthy, traveling manager of the film company.

The warrants, if issued, will be issued on the ground that Schoeffel and McCarthy are producing an immoral entertainment. This announcement was made this afternoon by Judge Dowd in the City Court. Judge Dowd has been hearing the case in which police authorities have sought warrants against the theatrical men on the ground that they are running an immoral entertainment.

The Court has heard the testimony of several witnesses who represent Boston negroes and those who sympathize with the negroes in their belief that the play is a libel on the colored race. Last evening Judge Dowd himself saw the play. He said, when court opened today, that he did not think it would be necessary for him to hear any more evidence.

"I am convinced," said Judge Dowd, "that there is one scene, at least, which is immoral. In this scene to which I refer, the pursuit of a 12-year-old white girl by the negro, Gus, nothing is left to the imagination. This negro chases the girl with lust and animal passion written on his face. There is no question from his acts and from his facial expressions as to the reason why he chases her.

"I will give the management 24 hours to remove this scene. If it is not done the warrants will be issued."

Three Miles of Films Or of Filth?

"The one scene is disgusting, nauseating and leaves a stench in the nostrils of the spectators," said the judge.

"The photo-play, however, is no worse than hundreds of others, such as 'Traffic in Souls,' which are corrupting the youth of the nation.

"As to the rest of the 'Birth of a Nation' (excepting the 'Gus' episode), I think it is magnificent, inspiring, the best photoplay, perhaps, I have ever seen.

"The management of the play," said Atty. Cusick, who represents the photoplay, "does not want to produce anything that will be disgusting to the people of this state. There are three miles of films."

"Three miles of filth," interjected former U. S. Dist. Atty. William H. Lewis.

"You are an educated colored man, Mr. Lewis," said Atty. Cusick, "I did not expect that from you."

Atty. J. M. Hallowell, who is appearing for the protestants, then stated that he wished to introduce evidence to have the entire play stopped.

In reply to Atty. Hallowell's request, Judge Dowd said that there were worse scenes portrayed on the stage where white people alone appear. He said that the matter of color or creed must not be taken into consideration but that the question of morality alone should be considered.

HOLYOKE (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 21, 1915

THE ORACLE.

In view of the action of Mayor Stagg not long ago in placing the photoplay, "The Nigger," on the ban, it is unlikely that any attempt will be made to produce the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," in this city and after the thorough [illegible] Boston over the latter spectacle we may well be spared any effort to bring "The Birth of a Nation" to Springfield. It will be recalled that a previous mayor, Francke W. Dickinson, prohibited the presentation of "The Clansman," the drama upon which "The Birth of a Nation" is based, from being done here and the company was forced to go to Holyoke, where the colored population is so insignificant that no objections were raised against it. —Springfield News.

WORCESTER (Mass.) POST
APRIL 21, 1915

Director David W. Griffith, whose big production, "The Birth of a Nation," is making such [illegible] in Boston and other cities, is said to be the highest-paid man in the movies. Yet picture-producing six or seven years ago when he, then a stranded actor, cast his lot with the movies, was [illegible] all beer and skittles. Director Griffith was put to it many times for [illegible] people—actors and actresses [illegible] but sometimes something else besides [illegible] actors to roll their eyes [illegible]

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 21 1915

STARTS HEARING WITHOUT DELAY

Judge Dowd Also Sees "Birth of a Nation."

Will Pass as Soon as Possible on Request for Warrant.

Dr Bumstead's Testimony Causes Verbal Clashes.

"I shall visit the play in person tonight," announced Judge Thomas H. Dowd as he arose from the bench at the adjournment of the Third Session of the Municipal Court yesterday afternoon.

All afternoon he had presided at a hearing on Sergt Anderson's request that a summons or warrant be issued for John B. Schoffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, and for David Griffith, producer of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation."

"May I suggest that Your Honor ask another member of the Municipal Bench to accompany you?" asked attorney Cusik, representing the management.

"I don't think that will be necessary, as I shall come to a decision without fear or favor," replied Judge Dowd.

Yesterday afternoon's session was entirely taken up with the direct and cross-examination of three witnesses for the Government, Rev Dr Horace Bumstead of Brookline, Rev Samuel A. Brown of St Mark's Congregational Church, Roxbury, and Harry Atkinson of Natick, employed in the State Police office.

This morning when court is convened Judge Dowd will hear Acting Chief Neal of the State Police and other witnesses for Sergt Anderson and witnesses for the management.

There were some verbal clashes during the hearing, but the order in the courtroom was excellent except for the crowding.

McCarthy in Griffith's Place.

Sergt Anderson of the Lagrange-st Police Station mentioned the names of Manager John B. Schoeffel and Producer David W. Griffith as possible defendants should the summons or warrants be granted.

Attorney Cusick asked that the name of J. J. McCarthy, another representative of the film owners, be substituted for that of Griffith, who is at present in California. J. Mott Hallowell, appearing as counsel for the Government, objected, but withdrew this objection when it was stated that McCarthy would be held fully accountable.

JUDGE THOMAS H. DOWD.

When Rev Dr Bumstead began to give testimony, the little Domestic Relations Session, where the hearing was being held, was pretty well filled, but when Dr Brown, the second witness, began, standing room was at a premium. There are but half a dozen settees and perhaps a dozen chairs in this little Third Session Courtroom, and these were filled with men and women, most of them colored.

An imposing array of counsel, colored and white, sat within the tiny bar inclosure. The door leading into the examination room of the Poor Debtors' Court was left open, and packed into this were half a hundred more spectators, mostly colored women.

Struggle for Places Near Door.

Outside in the main corridor hundreds of colored men and women crowded about the door of the little courtroom, each striving to get to a place near the door. The courtroom was so well filled that not another person could have been accommodated. Every now and then some adventurous person would push open the door and try to work his way in, but without success. At length Judge Dowd objected to the noise which court officers were making in trying to explain to the crowd outside that there was no room, and the little door was locked from the inside.

Supt of Police Michael Crowley, who arrived while Dr Bumstead was finishing his testimony, could not find a seat, and was forced to stand. Acting Chief Neal of the State Police, one of the witnesses who was not reached yesterday, first occupied a seat up against a radiator wall, and later sat on a crowded settee.

Butler Wilson sat inside the bar inclosure next to counsel Hallowell, while William H. Lewis and William Munroe Trotter occupied rear seats. Rev Herbert S. Johnson stood in a corner, an interested spectator.

Told He Is Witness, Not Judge.

Rev Dr Bumstead, ex-president of Atlanta University, was the first witness called by the Government, and his testimony resulted in several verbal clashes. Judge Dowd several times told Bumstead that he was a witness, not the judge of the case, and some of witness' testimony as to what he thought about the pictures was ruled out.

Rev Dr Bumstead's testimony dealt chiefly with the two scenes in the play, one where a negro pursues a white girl who throws herself from a high cliff, and the other where a picture of the Savior is thrown on the screen.

Rev Dr Bumstead said that in the picture the negro was meanly dressed, and characterized the expression on the negro's face as "brutal and fiendish," and by another term which was later stricken from the records. He twice told what he imagined was in the negro's mind, and twice was this ordered stricken from the records. He said that Jesus Christ was portrayed as giving benediction. Further testimony on this subject, which Rev Dr Bumstead gave, was ordered stricken out.

Dr Brown's Description Vivid.

Rev Dr Samuel A. Brown of St Mark's Congregational Church, Roxbury, the next witness, gave a vivid description of the whole of the second part of the "Birth of a Nation." So complete was Dr Brown's description of the sections of the photo-play to which objection has been made that Judge Dowd was moved to say, "After listening to this lucid description I hardly know as I need to attend a performance of the play."

Rev Dr Brown described the scene of the negro, "Gus," chasing the white girl who later jumps from the cliff; a scene in a legislature composed of colored men; and a scene in which a colored official forces his unwelcome attentions upon a white girl, who is saved from a hasty marriage with a negro by the arrival of the Ku Klux Klan.

Only two or three times in the dramatic recitation which Rev Dr Brown gave was he interrupted by objections from counsel.

Several times when attorney Hallowell asked him to characterize certain features he replied sharply that he couldn't tell that, which caused much amusement to the spectators.

The third witness of the day was Harry Atkinson of Natick, employed in the State Police office, who said he frequently censors films used for Sunday performances. He described the second part of the film, adding little to what the other two witnesses had said. At the conclusion of his cross examination Judge Dowd adjourned court until this morning.

Crowd on Hand Early.

Interest in the outcome of the case heard before Judge Dowd, and in the cases of those arrested last Saturday in connection with disturbances over the production of the "Birth of a Nation" caused hundreds of colored persons and their sympathizers to flock to the Courthouse in Pemberton sq early yesterday morning. Long before the courts opened there was a big gathering in Pemberton sq.

When, at 9 o'clock, the courts opened, the lower corridors about the three Municipal Courts were packed, so that it was difficult to get into that section of the building.

Shortly before noon Judge Dowd granted applications for warrants for those arrested during Saturday evening's disturbances.

A little later he was asked about the hearing on the granting of warrants against the manager of the theatre and the producer of the film. Attorney Cusic pleaded that Judge Dowd see the play before the hearing, but counsel for the petitioners objected to this.

"I think a hearing should be held at once, before more fuel is added to the flames," said His Honor, "this is a matter of emergency and exigency; a matter of much import to both sides, and I think it calls for immediate action. I think there should be a hearing on the matter today.

"Of course that does not mean that summones or warrants shall be granted immediately after the hearing. There should be a hearing, however, because of the public clamor, and either the alleged grievances should be alleviated or the show allowed to continue without interference."

After considerable argument on both sides Judge Dowd set the hearing for 2 o'clock.

Refuses to Hold Back Warrants.

Michael J. Jordan, National secretary of the United Irish League, counsel for some of the defendants arrested Saturday night, then asked that the cases of those arrested Saturday night be held up until after the hearing. Judge Dowd said that the two matters were in no way connected and had no bearing on each other. He had already granted the warrants, he said, and they were ready to serve.

On warrants granted by Judge Dowd, Rev A. W. Puller and William Monroe Trotter accordingly were arraigned before Judge Sheehan in the First Session of the Municipal Court. Counsel Jordan asked for a continuance until a week from Thursday, and urged that the men be let go on their personal recognizance.

Counsel Graham, representing the theatre management, and Sergt Martin King of the Lagrange-st Police Station objected, the former asking for immediate trial and the latter wanting the prisoners to be bonded. Judge Sheehan asked that the men promise to keep away from the Tremont Theatre.

After an argument all round Judge Sheehan continued the cases of the two defendants, and of nine other men and two women arrested in connection with the disturbance April 3. The case of Joseph Gould, a white man, charged with assaulting an officer, will be heard today by application of counsel.

In the first two cases tried before Judge Sheehan late yesterday afternoon, Charles F. Sullivan, a white man, and Harrison McDonald, a negro, were the defendants, charged with mutual assault and battery, were discharged.

McDonald's counsel wished his client's case continued, but Sullivan, who had no counsel, insisted upon immediate trial, as he is compelled to go away on a business trip. Judge Sheehan ruled that Sullivan was entitled to immediate trial if he wished.

JUDGE DOWD AT THEATRE.

Big Force of Police on Hand, but There Is No Disturbance Inside or Out Last Evening.

Judge Thomas H. Dowd attended the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre last evening.

At the performance were also present many lawyers and clergymen and people who have become interested in the production from either the standpoint of law or morals. Among the clergymen was Rev Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, who is to be called as a witness in the case today. With him were several of his parishioners.

A crowd of several hundred curious persons—practically all whites—stood on the mall of the Common opposite the theatre from about 7:30 until 8:30, but there was no excitement.

The entire house was "sold out" long before 8 o'clock, and 1000 or more persons were turned away. There was a large force of policemen both inside and outside the theatre, before and during the performance, and there were a number of plain clothes men on hand, also several State policemen with Chief Neal, who seemed to be very much interested in the performance. Other than an occasional burst of applause, nothing of moment happened in the theatre. Everything went off in a quiet, dignified way. And nothing happened when the audience left the theatre.

Rev Herbert S. Johnson said after the performance that as he was to be a witness he could not make any comparisons between last evening's performance and the performance he saw a week ago. He would say, however, "that the play has created a great deal of feeling among the colored people of Boston. I fear that unless this play is stopped in a week or 10 days there is grave danger of trouble in Boston."

NEW BILL INTRODUCED.

Legislators Declare Readiness to Prevent Performances Which Are Likely to Cause Race Hatred.

Representative Lewis R. Sullivan yesterday filed in the House of Representatives a bill to amend the existing law regarding public amusements by the addition of a clause to prohibit "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." The bill was referred to the Committee on Rules.

Speaker Cox gave out a statement yesterday declaring himself ready to aid any attempt to make impossible performances which stir up race hatred.

A bill which would transfer the censorship of the moral features of moving pictures from the Mayors of cities and the Licensing Boards of cities and towns to the State Board of Labor and Industries was given a hearing yesterday morning by the Senate Committee on Ways and Means.

Those who favored the measure were Senator Bates of Boston; Ralph A. Thompson, secretary of the Children's Welfare League; Mrs Julia Andrews, Legislative agent for the Federation of Women's Clubs; Dr John B. Hall of Roxbury, Rev William McLane of Cambridge and Rev T. A. Auten of Cambridge, the last three being colored men. John J. Gartland opposed the bill.

Acting Chief Neal of the District Police said that the present act was stronger than the bill proposed by the petitioners.

Action by Federation of Churches.

At a meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston, held yesterday afternoon in the parish house of Trinity Church, it was voted that the directors of the federation express, in the strongest terms, their disapproval of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation."

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 21, 1915

TWO PICTURES ARE FORBIDDEN

There will be no local production of "The Birth of a Nation" nor the Willard-Johnson fight. In order to save any unpleasantness over the matter, Mayor Fogg has caused local managers to be made aware of his wishes in the matter.

Telegram
Toronto, Can.
APR 21, 1915

The Governor of Massachusetts seeks to prohibit the moving pictures, "The Birth of a Nation" in the Bay St[illegible]

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 21, 1915

SCENE ORDERED CUT FROM FILM BY JUDGE DOWD

Pending Further Consideration of "Birth of a Nation" Omission Required

Pending further consideration [illegible] arguments of J. Mott Hallowell [illegible] the legal responsibility of the [illegible] ment of the photo-drama "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at a local theater, Judge Dowd [illegible] notified the management of [illegible] inary ruling that they must [illegible] an episode depicting a [illegible] a white woman.

J. Mott Hallowell began [illegible] in which he said he would [illegible] that the film play [illegible] sponsible under the revised [illegible] for presenting an entertainment [illegible] gestive of immorality.

Judge Dowd witnessed [illegible] evening. The Rev. Herbert [illegible] is expected to appear for the [illegible] ants, also attended, as did Paul [illegible] Born, one of the original [illegible] and William D. Bridges [illegible] speakers against the film at [illegible] hall meeting Sunday.

On complaint filed by [illegible] son of the Boston police [illegible] sons protesting the film [illegible] granted immediate hearing [illegible] afternoon. The session [illegible] with examination of witnesses [illegible] the government, the Rev. [illegible] Bumstead of Brookline, the Rev. [illegible] A. Brown of St. Mark's Congregational church, Roxbury, and Harry [illegible] of Natick, employed in the state police office.

A bill designed to stop [illegible] of "The Birth of a Nation" or [illegible] plays in the future was filed in the House yesterday by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston. [illegible] ure as presented would [illegible] ent statute, which prohibits [illegible] duction of entertainments [illegible] to immorality, a problem [illegible] show or entertainment which would excite racial or religious prejudices [illegible] finds to a breach of the public peace."

APRIL 21 1915

BOSTON AGREES WITH

In view of the [illegible] Boston [illegible] the city [illegible] the Tremont theater, [illegible] claimed that this film, which [illegible] opposed by the colored people [illegible] stage and by many [illegible] religious organizations, will be [illegible] ance of being shown in this city [illegible] per believes that the type of [illegible] uld be barred from local [illegible] y yesterday that the Boston [illegible] ation against "The Birth of a [illegible] as to his mind, a complete [illegible] his action in forbidding the [illegible] "The Nigger" here.

WORCESTER (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 21, 1915

[illegible] dge Dowd [illegible] Dowd, a Tremont [illegible] boy, [illegible] deciding over the [illegible] dons [illegible] Boston to determine [illegible] warrant shall be issued [illegible] est of man responsible for [illegible] duction of the showing [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation." He [illegible] ves up [illegible] his decision is [illegible] inister a little twilight [illegible] [illegible] the disturbance which [illegible] aused in Beacon[illegible]

[illegible] to secure the passage [illegible] islation aimed at the [illegible] Birth of a Nation" [illegible] have been introduced [illegible] Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester filed a bill in the [illegible] ibit "any show or [illegible] which tends to excite racial or [illegible] prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

LEGISLATIVE

...IAL
...ston, Mass.
APR 21 1915

PRODUCER OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

DAVID W. GRIFFITH
Who staged the great photo-play which is objected to by Boston negroes.

COURT TO RULE TODAY ON "BIRTH OF NATION"

Negroes Crowd Court House at Hearing on Request For Warrant Against Producers—Cases of Men Accused of Inciting Riot Continued for Week.

Judge Thomas Dowd today is expected to announce his decision, in a special session of the municipal criminal court, as to the granting of a warrant against the producers of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." A complaint was made yesterday by Detective Sergt. Anderson of the Lagrange street station, on behalf of the State, for negro citizens of Boston. Several witnesses were heard yesterday afternoon, and the hearing will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock.

Yesterday morning, 11 men, two of them white and the rest negroes, who were arrested Saturday night in the vicinity of the Tremont Theatre, where the motion picture is being produced, were arraigned at the first session, before Judge Sheehan. All but three of these cases were continued for one week from today. One of the defendants, Joseph H. Gould of Norwood, will be tried today, charged with assault on Officer Hartigan of the Lagrange street station, while placing a prisoner under arrest.

Before continuing the other cases for trial, Judge Sheehan had a long conference at the bench with the police, attorneys for the theatre and for the defense. At the end his decision was as follows:

"I will continue these cases for a week from this Wednesday on one consideration. That is that Trotter and Puller, the men charged with inciting a riot, and the other defendants, keep away from the theater. Colored people may go to the theatre to attend the performance, but they must not congregate outside this theatre, or in the immediate vicinity, so as to attract a crowd, or create a disturbance."

Court Room Crowded

The arraignment of the fourteen defendants arrested last Saturday night was the most spectacular ever witnessed in the Suffolk court, according to old attaches and police officers. Over 2000 negroes, men, women and even children, crowded the lower corridor and fought for admittance to the first session. All available court officers were posted at the gate which leads to the door of this court, and the crowd became so big and crushing that police officers, under sergeants who were present to try cases, were called upon to assist the court officers.

It was early in the afternoon when Clerk Lord called "William M. Trotter and Aaron W. Puller." They responded, as did Sergt. Martin King of the Lagrange street station, the prosecuting officer.

"Both of these men, your honor, are charged with being the cause of a riot, and additional warrants on other charges are on hand," said the clerk to Judge Sheehan. Attorney Benjamin and Attorney Michael Jordan, appearing for them, immediately entered a plea of "not guilty" and waived a reading of the complaint, saying they wished the cases tried after the finding of Judge Dowd on the warrant against the theatre.

Sergt. King and Attorney Graham, for the theatre, both fought against a long continuance, which was first asked. Sergt. King said: "In the first place this mob last Saturday night became so wild that they started to take the law into their own hands. They attempted to storm the theatre and assault anyone who attempted to stay their progress. In the second place the patrons of this theatre should have some consideration. You do not know how serious this thing will become or what offenses will be committed before next week. Last week we had to disperse the negroes gathered opposite the theatre."

Two Are Discharged

Charles F. Sullivan, a white man of Cambridge, insisted that his case be tried at once. He was charged, with Harrison McDonald, colored, of 21 Brunswick street, with assault and battery by Patrolman Newell of the LaGrange street station. Later this case was tried, Attorney John W. Schenck appearing for McDonald. After a long hearing both men were found not guilty and discharged.

The afternoon session before Judge Dowd proved to be more interesting than the arraignment of the alleged rioters. Before the case began court officers excluded those standing up, although they allowed a dozen or two to stand in a doorway of an adjoining ante-room.

Judge Dowd cautioned all that there should be no demonstration. He had to repeat this warning several times.

Detective-Sergeant Anderson of the LaGrange street station, representing the government, presented the complaint, which was brought under chapter 367 of the Acts of 1920, relating to immoral entertainments.

After Rev. Horace Bumstead had been called to the stand by Detective Anderson, M. M. Hallowell, a white lawyer, who was appearing against the photo-play, said he did not want the charge to be against one man. David Griffiths, the producer of the play, being in California, as eliminated, and J. J. McCarthy, his partner, together with John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, were named as the defendants. Attorneys John F. Cusick and Graham appeared for them.

...the court he had seen the play on the afternoon of its first public appearance in this city.

"I regard it as brutal," said Bumstead.

"You can say what you saw, but you must not say whether it was brutal or kind," interjected Judge Dowd.

"I saw a negro pursuing a white girl," continued the witness, "and she finally threw herself over a cliff. I saw also at the end of the play the figure of Jesus Christ brought in a manner I think—"

"I object," said Attorney Cusick.

Words Stricken Out

Judge Dowd had this stricken out, and said he was trying the case on evidence, not on the opinions of people who had seen the play. Butler R. Wilson, a negro attorney, asked the witness about the chase of the negro "Gus" after this white girl. Bumstead said that "Gus'" face was "lustful." Again Attorney Cusick objected, and Judge Dowd ordered this word struck out. Bumstead used the words "brutal" and "fiendish," but they were also treated in a like manner.

At last Judge Dowd said: "This witness wants to give his opinion and argue it out that way. I am here to listen to evidence, not to hear the opinions of any man who does not like the production and argues along that line."

Rev. Samuel A. Brown, colored, pastor of the St. Mark's Congregation Church, Columbus avenue said he had seen the play once. He admitted to Attorney Cusick that he was in the crowd last Saturday night at the Tremont Theatre. He told the lawyer he had been refused a ticket. Later he admitted that he did not reach the box office. Judge Dowd interposed and said, "The riot case is being tried in another court, you can go after that when this is over."

Brown told about every scene in the second part of the photo-play, describing it minutely with the help of the two lawyers, Butler R. Wilson and J. Mott Hallowell.

Censor on Stand

The last witness of the afternoon was Harry Atkinson of Natick, building inspector, attached to the office of the State police and who acted as censor of the play last Thursday night. He said that he was the regular censor for Sunday films, as well as being a building inspector.

"Your memory is pretty good, Mr. Atkinson?" asked Attorney Cusick.

"I've known it to fail," said the witness.

"You saw President Lincoln shot in the picture?" he was asked.

"Yes," said the building inspector-censor.

"Well, now suppose you tell the court about that," said Attorney Cusick.

This Atkinson did. He also admitted, on cross-examination by Cusick, that the negro "Gus," much referred to by the opponents of this production, was dressed as any man might be and in a regular street custom.

At 4 o'clock the hearing adjourned, with the complainants only producing three witnesses. They have several more who will be called today. In closing, Judge Dowd said:

"I am going to the Tremont Theatre tonight to see this play. I will see what you have been trying to explain to me. The hearing will commence about 10 o'clock tomorrow morning."

Statement of Management

The management of the Tremont Theatre issued the following statement last night:

"'The Birth of a Nation' was brought here in good faith. The judgment of the censors appointed by the mayor and police commissioner was asked before the firs tpublic performance. We have made all the changes they requested. We have added title material showing the progress of the negro since Reconstruction. Beginning this (Wednesday) afternoon, we shall show pictorial scenes further illustrating their progress.

"This play is not a commercial proposition in the sense of aggrandizing any stranger at the expense of Boston. Practically all the money being expended is turned back to the citizens of Boston, through our payroll of 127 local employes and other legitimate expenses. It would be a civic calamity to drive this play from Boston on unjust and prejudiced grounds.

"David W. Griffith, the author of this play, is not a sectionalist, but an artist. He cares not from what period he takes the source of his plays, so long as they afford strong drama. He found what he required for dramatic purposes in the story of the Lost Cause and of Reconstruction. Love of our great and glorious heritage of Union nationality breathes in every fiber of his being. Mr. Griffith thought no more of giving two of his five villains in the play black skins that he had thought previously of making the redskins or Indians the villains of his earlier plays. The sections of these aforesaid negro villains are no more and no less objectionable than the actions of the ordinary white villains in the conventional melodrama.

"We firmly and sincerely believe that those trying to stop the play on the alleged ground of immorality are badly advised. The charge, we think, is a pretext to excuse their dislike of another view of reconstruction to what they have been accustomed. There were many who disliked Sir Walter Scott's romance of the Highlanders and the Stuart kings in the Waverley novels. But we never heard that those were suppressed by order of official authorities.

"The mere fact that 'The Birth of a Nation' happens to show a few members of one of the races of the United States in an unpleasant light is no argument whatever. If this film be suppressed, we shall be serving notice upon all moving picture and theatrical managers that they may only produce plays that are absolutely and unquestionably offensive to nobody. The result will be a thoroughly colorless, innocuous mediocrity that will be the death of true stage art."

...to substitute a bill

CHURCH FEDERATION OPPOSES PHOTO-PLAY

A protest against "The Birth of a Nation" as "contrary to good public policy and injurious to public morality," was unanimously voted yesterday afternoon by the directors of the Federation of Churches and Religious Organizations of Greater Boston, representing all the Protestant denominations. Rev. Alexander Mann is president and Rev. Christopher R. Elliot secretary of the federation. The vote is as follows:

"Voted, That the directors of the federation express in the strongest terms their disapproval of the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' considering it contrary to good public policy and, in any broad sense of the term, injurious to public morality, and they trust that some way will be found to prevent its further production."

NO DISTURBANCE AT THE TREMONT THEATRE

Although a throng of curious spectators gathered on the Common opposite the Tremont Theatre again last night, not the slightest disturbance occurred. A few groups that gathered in discussion early in the evening were quickly dispersed by the police, a large detail being still on duty at the theatre.

Judge Dowd, who is hearing the petition for a warrant against the producers of the photo-play, attended the performance last night. Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the Massachusetts District Police, and the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Baptist Church, who will testify today, also attended. Some officials of the State police were on duty at the theatre. A few negroes were present.

ADVERTISER
s: Boston, Mass.
APR 21 1915

WITNESSES IN PLAY RIOT CASE HEARD

Warrants for Arrest of Manager Schoeffel of Tremont Theatre Are Sought

TWO MEN FREED OF THE CHARGE OF DISTURBANCE

Municipal Court Sessions Are Crowded During Three Sessions of Hearing

Trouble arising over the Boston production of the "Birth of a Nation" took the greater part of the time in three sessions of the Municipal Court yesterday. The hearing before Judge Dowd on the request to grant warrants for the arrest of Manager John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre and J. J. McCarthy of the Mutual Film Co. took up the entire afternoon session and will be continued at 11 a.m. today.

Two men, one white and one colored, were found not guilty on the charge of mutual assault and battery during the disturbance Saturday night at the Tremont Theatre. The cases of 11 others were continued by Judge Sheehan. The cases against two women who were arrested Saturday night in connection with the trouble were also continued by Judge Duff.

The hearing before Judge Dowd on the question of granting a warrant was by far the most important. The hearing was the result of a protest made to Gov. Walsh at the State House Patriots' Day.

The Governor expected to make a solution of the case if warrants were issued against the theatrical men for running an improper entertainment. If warrants were refused, the Governor said he should seek legislation to prohibit plays that excited race prejudice.

Three witnesses were called to testify before Judge Dowd by Atty. Hallowell, who is appearing for the complainants. The witnesses were Rev. Horace Bumpstead of Brookline; Rev. Samuel A. Brown, colored, of 856 Columbus ave., Roxbury, pastor of St. Marks Congregational Church and Inspector Harry Atkinson of Natick of the State Police, who saw the show under the direction of Deputy Chief Neal. At the conclusion of yesterday's hearing, Judge Dowdd said that he intended to see the show last night.

Rev. Brown proved to be the star witness for the complainants. He gave a careful discription of the various reels and laid great stress on the parts which depicted the pursuit of the white girl by "Gus," the renegade Negro, which culminated in the leap of the girl from the cliff to the rocks below. All the witnesses spent much time of a careful discription of this scene and of the scene in which Silas Lynch is shown as carrying a bound and struggling white girl from his office to a bedroom.

Rev. Brown illustrated his description of the manner in which the negresses in the gallery of the State Legislature deported themselves by swinging his legs over the railing in the court room.

The hearing in the afternoon was not called without objection from Atty. Cusick, the representative of the film company.

He wanted a continuance when the case first came up, but Judge Dowd said that the case should be tried at once.

He said that if there was any legal obstacle the play should be stopped at once and no more fuel added to the flames of discontent. He also said that if the play was a proper production the theatre manager should be freed from molestation.

This afternoon's hearing was in the poor debtors' court room, which is a small room. When Judge Dowd took the bench there were more than 100 persons packed into the "small auditorium" and Judge Dowd said "I may say to all that this is a most important hearing and I ask all to refrain from any expression of approbation or disapprobation, as the testimony is presented. This court room is at the present time packed beyond all endurance, and I must, therefore, ask all persons to leave the court. Witnesses will be called as they are needed."

At this point the court was cleared of all excepting court officers, members of the press and witnesses.

At the beginning of the hearing Atty. Hallowell, for the complainants, stated that he did not want the case to be against one man. He held a conference with Atty. Cusick, for the defendants, who said that the film" than Griffith, the "producer." Therefore by an agreement of attorneys, the complaint was made against McCarty instead of Griffith, and was also made against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre.

The first witness called was Rev. Horace Bumstead of Brookline, who said he had seen the motion picture play.

"I regard this as brutal," Bumstead said. To which Judge Dowd replied, "You can say what you saw, but you must not say whether it was brutal or kind."

"I saw a negro pursuing a white girl," the minister said. "She finally threw herself from a cliff. I saw also at the end of the play the figure of Jesus Christ brought in in a manner which I think—"

"I object," said Atty. Cusick.

In answer to a question from Butler Wilson, a colored attorney, the witness said the pursuing negro on the screen was lustful. Judge Dowd ordered the word "lustful" struck out.

"What was the name of the negro?" asked Atty. Mallowell.

"Gus," replied the witness.

The witness described the white girl leaving her house and her pursuit by the negro. The court warned him to be accurate in his description, and not to express personal opinions, as Judge Dowd said that he himself would see the play.

The witness told of the girl going to a lonely spot, and on being asked to describe it, said several times that he could not without infringing on the court's instructions, which ... express his perso...

He said the scene culminated with the girl throwing herself over the cliff, but as the witness could not remember what words were thrown on the screen before her act.

Rev. Bumpstead was followed to the stand by Rev. Brown. The witness told how the play showed the formation of the Ku Klux Klan and the punishment meted out to Gus when he was captured by a band under the leadership of the dead girl's brother.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 21 1911

JUDGE IS TOLD WHY NEGROES ARE OFFENDED

Scenes from Films of "The Birth of a Nation" Described in Hearing on Application for Warrants on Ground That the Production Is of Immoral Nature.

WILL PASS JUDGMENT AFTER SEEING THE SHOW

Eight hundred Negroes and their white supporters thronged the corridors of the municipal court yesterday, striving to gain admission to the hearing before Judge Dowd, at which leading men of the colored people and others began their legal fight to end the run of the photo-play of "The Birth of a Nation."

Scenes of the play were described, and summonses were asked for the appearance of John B. Schoeffel, owner of the Tremont Theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, traveling manager of the film, on the allegation that they were giving an immoral performance. After considerable evidence had been given, the case was continued until today.

Testimony centred around the Negro character "Gus," who pursues a white girl until she dashes over a cliff, and "Lynch," the Negro elected Lieutenant-Governor, who carries a white girl in his arms. Both scenes were declared to be depictions of immoral acts, such as the statute was intended to prohibit.

On Governor's Suggestion.

All efforts to suppress the play were based on this hearing, which resulted from the suggestion of Gov. Walsh and Commissioner O'Meara that legality of the picture should be passed upon by the courts. The complainants appeared ready for action at the opening of the court, but had to wait until the afternoon, partly that the cases of the 14 arrested in the disturbance at the Tremont Theatre on Saturday night might be considered.

Of those defendants two were dismissed. They were Charles F. Sullivan (white) and Harris McDonald (colored), who were charged with mutual assault. The others were held for hearing on various dates, but only after a sharp controversy between a number of lawyers and Sergt. King, the police complainant, who asked for immediate trial.

In the corridors, while these cases were on, the leaders in the fight against the film were formulating their campaign. Appearing for the applicants for the summonses against the theatrical managers, were Atty. E. P. Benjamin, Atty. J. M. Hallowell, former assistant attorney general, and Atty. Butler R. Wilson.

Atty. John F. Cusick appeared for the Tremont Theatre and the photoplay interests. On the side lines, championing the rights of the colored people, were a dozen or more colored lawyers, prominent among them former U. S. Dist.-Atty. William H. Lewis.

Postponement Asked.

An opening skirmish came at noon when Atty. Cusick went into Judge Dowd's chambers and asked that the hearing be postponed until Thursday. He wanted the court to go to the theatre and see the performance. Judge Dowd said he would rather hear the evidence first and then he might see the play, believing that it would help him.

"This hearing is of great importance to both sides," he said, "and should be held as soon as possible. It is a matter of exigency and should be settled before more fuel is added to the flames." He then ordered the hearing to proceed at 2 o'clock.

The courtroom was filled long before that hour, the greater number of spectators being colored people, although there was a large number of white men, among them those who have been identified with movements for the uplift of the Negro.

Among the interested persons on hand were the following: The Rev. Horace Bumstead, former president of Atlanta University; William L. Reed, messenger to Gov. Walsh; John Long, 92 years old, the oldest colored resident of Boston; C. Henry Robbins, a superior criminal court stenographer; Prof. Allen Whaley, a New York attorney; Michael J. Jordan, secretary of the United Irish League; Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Rev. D. D. Walker of Chelsea; Mrs. Susie Craig and Mrs. Jane Possey; William Brigham, secretary of the Wendell Phillips Association, and Mrs. Charles Moore.

Substitute Allowed.

The complaint asked for summonses for W. J. Griffiths, the owner of the film, and Manager Schoeffel, but Atty. Cusick, in opening, requested that J. J. McCarthy, the traveling manager, be allowed to substitute for Mr. Griffiths, as the latter was not in Boston, and this was assented to. Then testimony of the first witness, the Rev. Horace Bumstead, began.

In his examination, by E. P. Benjamin for the complainants, he was inclined to characterize the picture, and this brought several objections from Atty. Cusick and an order from the court, not to give his impressions, but to tell only what he saw and what he heard.

He began with the description of the pursuit of the white girl by "Gus," the Negro. On the screen was flashed the words, "Don't come near me or I'll jump," and, as the Negro followed her up a steep incline, she hurled herself off a cliff.

Later, he said, there was a scene in which a northern girl came to the office of "Lynch," elected Lieutenant-Governor. The latter approaches the girl, he said, with an offer of marriage. She refuses him with indignation, and is bound to a chair and carried into another room. At another point, there is a white woman carried in the arms of the Negro Lieutenant-Governor.

Calls Expression "Fiendish."

"What were the facial expressions?" asked Atty. Benjamin.

"Fiendish, brutal," he answered, and Atty. Cusick objected.

During the discussion between court and counsel, Judge Dowd told Dr. Bumstead to confine himself to the impression the picture produced upon him.

"We don't want what you thought. What was your impression?"

"My impression," replied Dr. Bumstead, "was that of a Negro trying to attack a white girl."

Judge Dowd—That is excluded. I think we had better narrow down to what was seen of that picture.

Dr. Bumstead proceeded to describe the pursuit of the girl by the Negro. He said it happened in a lonely spot where there were woods and trees and a spring of water, with no other animal near it except a chipmunk. The girl had gone for water. As she was drawing it, the Negro "Gus" appeared. As soon as she saw him she left the pail of water and started to run. The Negro pursued, and that pursuit was followed by a scene in which the girl threw herself from the cliff. Witnes saw another scene in which there was a senator and a colored woman, but could not remember what the colored woman did.

Colored Pastor a Witness.

A colored pastor, Samuel Albert Brown of Roxbury, was the next witness. He visited the play Saturday afternoon, April 10. Describing the pursuit by the Negro, he said: "The girl came to the spring, and there was no other living creature in sight. As she started to raise the pail the saw the face of the Negro 'Gus.' She turned and ran in an opposite direction. There was a thrilling chase."

"Thrilling chase" was objected to. The witness proceeded: "The woman ran and Gus ran and went through the strip of wood. He followed in her wake, she looking back and running. Finally, the girl was seen climbing from one stone to another, with 'Gus' at a respectful distance, still following, until at last she was seen on high stones at the top of the cliff. He goes near behind her, and then appear these words on the screen: 'Don't come near me or I'll jump.'

"Gus reached forward and then the girl took a plunge into the depths beneath. Afterwards her brother comes to the top of the cliff and looks down. Scenes had been shown before that to show that the men of the white race were planning some kind of an organization."

Judge Dowd here complimented the witness on his testimony, saying: "It is so lucid that I might not need to see the play for myself."

The witness went on to describe the preparation of the white garments for the Ku-Klux-Klan and the capture of "Gus" by masked men in white. On his calling a group on one of the scenes carpet-baggers, Judge Dowd remarked that they are not peculiar to any clime.

QUINCY (MASS.) LEDGER
APRIL 21, 1915

DISAPPROVE OF PICTURE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

John D. McKay Against Luring to Church With Smokers

John D. Mackay, chairman of the school committee, in discussing the purposes of men's clubs before the South Quincy Brotherhood at the First Presbyterian church Tuesday night said he believed attendance should be assured without the inducements of suppers and smoking because they tended to decrease the sacredness of an edifice.

Mr. Mackay's statement was made during his discussion of the changes in the world's social industrial and political aspects and of the greater opportunity in recent years for men in general, through clubs and other ways, to assist in the adjusting of matters.

No action was taken on the question as to whether or not the Brotherhood should protest against the continuance of the motion picture, "Birth of A Nation." Alexander Cowe who

JUDGE IS TOLD WHY THE NEGROES ARE OFFENDED

(Continued from Page One.)

Gaze Intense and Prolonged.

Speaking of Salla Lynch, the colored man elected Lieutenant-Governor, Stoneham the white man, and his daughter, witness said: "She would come and speak to her father when the two were in conference. The moment the white girl came in, Lynch ceased looking at the papers, but looked at the girl with a gaze so intense and prolonged that her father would look up to see why there was no response. Later when the girl had to see Lynch in his office he approached her in a somewhat hesitating way. She withdrew as if afraid. He approached her a little more, and she moved round the room until finally he did come near to her.

"The colored people were called in, and it was stated on the screen that a marriage was to be arranged. During the arrangements for the marriage Lynch continued to press his suit. The girl was running about the room, sometimes in fright, sometimes as if she were going to protect herself. She was seized at one time—tied in a chair—and about her were two or more attendants, colored people. A little late Lynch was seen taking her up and walking with her in his arms toward the door or through the door. The scene culminates in the rescue of both Stoneham and his daughter by the Ku-Klux Klan."

Typical Representative.

Witness recalled what he saw of the white senator and the mulatto woman. "I cannot describe her," he said, "except to say that she was a typical representative of the under world. When any one came into the room she acted as if she knew them. When the senator came to have a conference with Stoneham he was met by this mulatto woman. There were afterwards these words on the screen: "Stoneham's office, which his daughter never visits.'"

Cross-examined by Atty. Cusick, witness admitted that Lynch proposed marriage to the girl, telling her that he would build a black empire with her as its queen seated at his side. In reply to Atty. Hallowell, witness said that Lynch made advances before there was any proposal of marriage. The girl rejected the proposal and showed indignation from the beginning. It was after that rejection that she was bound and carried off. Witness had not seen the play since April 10.

As Seen by Censor.

Harry Atkinson of Natick, inspector of the district police department and censor of plays offered for exhibition on Sundays, testified that he saw "The Birth of a Nation" last Thursday. He described the scenes showing the pursuit of the girl by the Negro. "In the scene with Lynch," he said, "there are two rooms. In one there is the Lieutenant-Governor and a number of colored women. When the white girl makes her appeal to him he says he will do what he can to assist her and proposes marriage as one of the stipulations for his aid.

She is very much disgusted. He tries to approach the girl and she tries to evade him, making a rush for the outer door. He gets there before her and locks the door so that she cannot escape. He succeeds in getting hold of her, calls for assistance from the adjoining room, and dispatches them for someone to perform a forced marriage ceremony. She is gagged and taken to the next room, where she is attended to by several colored women."

Witness admitted in cross-examination that he went to censor the play, not in order to meet any demand for Sunday performances by the promoters of the play, but in the interest of the Elks.

The hearing was then adjourned until this morning. Judge Dowd intimating that he would see the play himself that evening. Atty. Cusick suggested that it might be well to have two of his associate judges accompany him. Judge Dowd said he must decline to accept the suggestion, adding: "I shall see the play myself and determine on the evidence presented."

The hearing will be resumed this morning. Among the witnesses who will appear are former Assistant U. S. Dist.-Atty. William H. Lewis, Deputy Neal of the state police and several colored pastors. An interested spectator at the hearing was Supt. M. H. Crowley. The complaint is brought in the name of the commonwealth, and the official complainants are the police, although they have practically no part in the proceedings. All preparation and gathering of witnesses is in the hands of the group of attorneys headed by Butler R. Wilson.

In the early proceedings where those arrested in Saturday's disturbance were taken into custody, William M. Trotter, editor of "The Guardian," and the Rev. Aaron W. Puller, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, were held for a hearing Thursday. They were released on their personal recognizance. The other cases were also continued, with the understanding that colored people keep away from the Tremont Theatre.

The management of the Tremont Theatre issued the following statement last night:

"'The Birth of a Nation' was brought here in good faith. The judgment of the censors appointed by the mayor and police commissioners was asked before the first public performance. We have made all the changes they requested. We have added little material showing the progress of the Negro since reconstruction. Beginning this (Wednesday) afternoon, we shall show pictorial scenes further illustrating their progress.

Not a Commercial Proposition.

"This play is not a commercial proposition in the sense of aggrandizing any stranger at the expense of Boston. Practically all the money being expended is turned back to the citizens of Boston, through our payroll of 127 local employes and other legitimate expenses. It would be a civic calamity to drive this play from Boston on unjust and prejudiced grounds.

"David W. Griffith, the author of this play, is not a sectionalist, but an artist. He cares not from what period he takes the source of his plays, so long as they afford strong drama. He found what he required for dramatic purposes in the story of the Lost Cause and of reconstruction. Love of our great and glorious heritage of Union nationality breathes in every fibre of his being. Mr. Griffith thought no more of giving two of his five villains in the play black skins than he had though previously of making the redskins of Indians the villains of his earlier plays. The actions of these aforesaid Negro villains are no more and no less objectionable than the actions of the ordinary white villains in the conventional melodrama.

"We firmly and sincerely believe that those trying to stop the play on the alleged ground of immorality are badly advised. The charge, we think, is a pretext to excuse their dislike of another view of reconstruction to what they have been accustomed. There were many who disliked Sir Walter Scott's romance of the Highlanders and the Stuart kings in the Waverley novels. But we never heard that these were suppressed by order of official authorities.

Free from Suggestion.

"There are no rape scenes depicted in 'The Birth of a Nation.' The scene of the villain detaining the girl, after having proposed marriage to her, is entirely conventional and free from lustful suggestion. A similar scene appears in 'The Story of the Rosary' and 'The Yellow Ticket' of this season's playsand from 'The Two Orphans' down. As to the situation of the girl being frightened into a leap to her death through the approach of the Negro Gus, there is an exact parallel in Scott's 'Ivanhoe,' where the Jewish girl Rebecca threatens to leap from the battlements of the castle on the approach of the Christian Knight Templar. If the one be allowed to be presented, why not the other? The chief difference is, in the one case an African villain against a white girl, and in the other case a Christian villain against a Jewish girl.

"The mere fact that 'The Birth of a Nation' happens to show a few members of one of the races of the United States in an unpleasant light is no argument whatever. If this factor is to be seriously considered, there is hardly any limit to which official regulation may not go. If Africans are to have their say and oppose the production of a play to which they object, why should not the Jews, Hungarians, Czechs, Teutons, French, Italians, Slavs, Scandinavians, Irish and Anglo-Saxons have the same privilege? If this film is suppressed, we shall be serving notice on all motion picture and theatrical managers that they may only produce plays that are absolutely and unquestionably offensive to nobody. The result will be a thoroughly colorless, innocuous mediocrity that will be the death of true stage art."

SPEAKER COX FAVORS RESTRICTIVE LEGISLATION

Says He Thinks the House Would Support Such Action.

Speaker Channing H. Cox is in favor of legislation which would regulate such performances as the "Birth of a Nation." He declares:

"Several of the members of the House, some representatives of the colored race and others interested, have asked me what my position would be as to the admission of new legislation which would prohibit entertainments or plays which tend to excite race prejudice or which tend to injure the feelings of any particular race. So far as I have been able to learn, there is a general feeling of regret on the part of the members of the Legislature that a performance which is so objectionable to so large and responsible a class of our citizens should be permitted in our city, and the member of the House, so far as I am able to ascertain, is such that any move to secure legislation to make such performances impossible will receive strong support.

"If it is true that there is being offered twice daily a great insult and a great injustice to a large number of our colored citizens within Massachusetts, I shall, for one, stand ready to aid any attempt to make such performances impossible.

"Of course, it has been said that the license could be revoked in five minutes by the proper authorities, but the mere statement of a possible remedy does not satisfy the feelings of outraged citizens."

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE
APR 21 1915

FEW COLORED PEOPLE AROUND COURTHOUSE

Although it is not to be expected that some time today the question of whether or not a summons or warrant will be granted against the manager of the Tremont Theatre, and the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," will be decided by Judge Thomas Dowd of the Municipal Court, there were comparatively few colored people around the Courthouse early this morning.

The corridors presented a striking contrast to conditions [illegible] from early morning until the afternoon session closed late [illegible] thronged with colored people. This morning [illegible] people were [illegible] when Judge Dowd [illegible] large [illegible] [illegible] natural, and while the [illegible] our colored brethren and may think [illegible] part of good sense and human decency [illegible] their feelings by such exhibitions.

ON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 21, 1915

WILL NOT CLOSE UP FILM PLAY

At the opening of the continued hearing on the southern photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," before Judge Thomas H. Dowd in the city criminal court today, Judge Dowd said that, if the scene where "Gus," a colored film character, chases a white girl to suicide over a cliff is eliminated, he would not issue warrants for the management of the film or theatre.

The police, on complaint of 2,000 or more Boston negroes, backed by several white sympathizers, asked for warrants for arrest of J. J. McCarthy, traveling manager of the film, and of Proprietor John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre, where the film is running.

When Judge Dowd made his conditional ruling on the film, counsel for the theatre said the management did not propose to show anything illegal.

The police application was based on the statute regarding immoral or suggestive entertainment.

Judge Dowd said that the film was "a magnificent production" and that there was no race question at issue but merely the morality of the scenes.

COURTROOM FILLED.

Today's session on the debated film began at 11:30. The attendance was much less than the jam of the day before, but the court room was well filled.

Mayor Curley announced today that he conferred with the management of the film, that the management has agreed to certain changes and that, so far as the Mayor's office goes, the film may continue.

At the opening court session yesterday Judge Dowd heard three witnesses for the negroes and the police, then adjourned court, saying he would see the film for himself at night. He attended the show last night. When the hearing began today Judge Dowd, addressing counsel for both sides, said:

"Gentlemen, I don't think I will hear any more evidence, as I have witnessed the film. The question of race is not involved. It is a question entirely of the decency and morality of the play.

"It is a magnificent production; one of the finest I have ever seen.

"If the management will eliminate the scene of the chase of the white girl by the character 'Gus,' where he chases her to a cliff where she jumps off and is killed, I will not issue a summons."

John P. Cusick, counsel for the theatre: "The scene referred to by Your Honor has been before Mayor Curley and the management for four days. The management wishes to say that they do not propose to show anything except what is within the law. In this picture there are over three miles of film——"

"Filth!" interjected William H. Lewis, colored, the former-Assistant United States District Attorney, who sat directly back of Cusick.

Cusick turned and said sharply: "You're an educated colored man, Mr. Lewis, and ought not to say that."

Judge Dowd: "I don't think there was any open attempt on the part of the management to violate the law."

WANT CASE TRIED.

J. Mott Hallowell, counsel for the petitioners: "We ask that summonses issue and that the case be tried on its merits as we believe that other scenes are as objectionable as those referred to by the court."

Judge Dowd: "There are over one thousand scenes where white people are portrayed, worse than appear in this play, and we should not allow the color question to arise. Owing to the amount of money involved the management should be given a chance to eliminate objectionable scenes."

Mr. Hallowell asked for ten minutes in which to argue. Judge Dowd allowed the request, cautioning Mr. Hallowell that the only question was that of the time to be allowed for elimination of the cliff scene.

BIDDEFORD (Me.) RECORD
APRIL 21, 1915

The photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," caused a riot in Boston upon its initial presentation there. Some of the colored ladies in the cast must have let their stockings slip

REPUBLICAN
Springfield, Mass.
APR 21 1915

LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS

COMING RUN TO SECOND

WORKING FOR HIGHWAY BILL

Sectarian Issue Over Public School Teachers—Senate Debate Milk Problem.

From Our Special Reporter.

BOSTON, Tuesday, April 20.

Carrying out the first illustration of the western highway bill as making a run of bases, the feature of the situation to-day is that of a runner at first making ready for a dash to second. His friends crowd up as close as possible and say everything they think wise and encouraging so as to land him safe on second. To-day's calendar in the House covered six pages, and this bill was in the middle of the last page. When the calendar was called the first time Speaker Cox said that the bill was in the hands of the committee on bills in the third reading, and hence it could not be called on the question of being passed to be engrossed. Mr Allen of Newton is the chairman of the third reading committee, and he is unusually broad in this view of his responsibilities and unusually active in the discharge of his duties. His faithfulness was the subject of good-natured bantering to-day by Mr Washburn of Worcester, for several others bills are held by the committee, as well as the western highway bill. Former Representatives Hardy of Huntington and Barry of Agawam have been here to-day looking over the ground and making sure that the bill makes a good run to second base. As far as can be seen, the bill has a strong position. Certainly its friends feel in a happy frame of mind and are awaiting the next move with confidence.

Quite a debate occurred over the bill to forbid the asking of questions of applicants for teachers' positions in the public schools regarding their religious belief. It was evident that the feelings which were stirred up by the debate over the sectarian amendment are still hot. The old issue of Catholic or Protestant was again brought into the open. No decision was reached, for the bill was put at the end of the calendar, on motion of Mr Lomasney of Boston.

The milk problem was debated in the Senate, and the milk producers were decisively defeated. So the fight will be transferred to the House.

THE SENATE.

Liquor Transportation Bill Passed — Hotel Registration Bill Accepted.

Mr Doyle of Bristol moved to put over until to-morrow the enacting of the bill to regulate the transportation of liquor, but it was defeated, 10 to 24, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs Bagley, Doyle, Fitzgerald, Green, Leonard, McGonagle, McLane, Sullivan, Tetler, Tinility—10.

Nays—Messrs Bartlett, Bates, Baxter, Beal, Bean, Cavanagh, Clark, Cummings, Eldridge, Ellis, Fay, Gorst, Gifford, Gordon, Haigis, Hobbs, Jackson, Martin, Mason, Norwood, Perley, Tufts, Wells—24.

The bill was then passed to be enacted.

On the bill to prohibit the sale or delivery of milk or cream produced under unhealthful conditions, Mr Cummings of Worcester opposed any further legislation as entirely unnecessary and as bearing too hardly upon the farmers. Such legislation would increase the cost of milk to the consumer. He criticized the association pushing this measure as spending much money for this legislation that might better have gone for pure milk for babies. This bill is also objectionable as opposed to home rule. His own town has inspectors that are doing their duty and more legislation is not needed. The producers of milk wish to be let alone for this year at least, and when legislation is had it should be by joint action of producers and consumers, and not along lines proposed only by a paid association. He favored the resolve of Mr Gordon of Hampden for an investigation of this subject, with a report to the next General Court.

Mr Gordon of Hampden withdrew his proposed substitute resolve for an investigation.

Mr Norwood of Essex spoke for the pending bill as giving the state board of health only such authority as is needed to protect the public.

Mr Cummings moved to amend by providing that milk shall not be handled except under permit, as provided by the law of 1914, stating that it is not produced or handled under insanitary, unclean or unhealthful methods.

Mr Clark of Plymouth opposed the bill and said it gave no authority for the state board to make investigation.

Mr Norwood said no defect in the bill has been pointed out, and that its sole purpose is to bring producers out of the state up to the standard required of Massachusetts producers.

Mr Kimball of Middlesex opposed any legislation this year.

Mr Ellis of Middlesex said the bill that bears hardest upon the farmer, by giving an advantage to the farmers living furthest from the consumers, was the "Saunders" milk bill which was passed at the demand of the farmers and of the master of the state grange. The pending bill is a step in the right direction, but does not go far enough. Producers and consumers should now work together, to get milk, the cheapest food, as cheap as possible. He sells milk with 5 per cent butter fat at 12 cents, but is not making a business profit. He is not supporting this bill from a financial standpoint, but for the advantage of the consumer as well as the producer.

Mr Gifford of the Cape opposed legislation as not in the interest of the farmers, who have to sell milk at 3½ cents a quart. The agitation against poor milk has about killed the whole business.

Mr Bates of Suffolk said that if injurious milk is being sold it is time to put a stop to it. He opposed any amendment to the pending bill. Mr Garst of Worcester feared the new bill would not give as good inspection as the present law. Mr Norwood said the new bill would not affect the local inspection provided under the present law.

Mr Cavanaugh of Middlesex favored the bill and all legislation to protect the public health, especially the infants.

Mr Tufts of Middlesex said he could get no proof that there is any real need of this legislation in this state, and that the bill has too drastic provisions. The state authorities can give no names of persons producing milk under unsanitary conditions.

Mr Ellis of Middlesex said there are plenty of dairies in this state with unsanitary conditions. Mr Cavanaugh of Middlesex quoted names of such dairies from a public health bulletin.

The amendment of Mr Cummings was rejected, 12 to 21.

Mr Cummings of Worcester then offered the substitute withdrawn by Mr Gordon. It was rejected, 12 to 21.

The bill was then ordered to a third reading without a count.

Mr Leonard of Suffolk then moved to substitute for an adverse report on a bill asked by Mayor Curley of Boston for the inspection of dairies and milk plants outside the state, but it was refused by this vote:—

Yeas—Messrs Bates, Cavanaugh, Ellis, Fay, Fitzgerald, Green, Hays, Jackson, Langeller, Leonard, Mason, McGonagle, Sullivan, Tetler, Tinility—15.

Nays—Messrs Bagley, Bartlett, Baxley, Beal, Bean, Clark, Cummings, Doyle, Eldridge, Farnsworth, Garst, Gifford, Gordon, Haigis, Hobbs, Kimball, Marchand, Martin, McLane, Norwood, Perley, Tufts, Wells—23.

The House bill on admission to the bar was favored by Mr Norwood of Essex and was opposed by Messrs Hobbs of Worcester and Bates of Suffolk.

All hotel guests in this state would be required to register under their own names under the provisions of a bill passed by the Senate to-day. The House already has passed the bill. Provision is made for a fine of $25 upon the hotel management for each violation discovered.

Mr Hobbs of Worcester had the orders put upon the table so that the Pittsfield sewerage bill could be enacted.

New Boston and Maine Bill Reported.

The committee on railroads then reported the new bill for the reorganization of the Boston and Maine railroad system. From this report, Mr Cowls of Amherst dissents and two senators, McLane and Timilty, and representatives Meuray and McLaughlin, reserve the right to dissent from any of its provisions.

The only important change for House bill 2048, already published, is in regard to the Hampden railroad. The new bill recognizes that corporation and provides that the Boston and Maine company may issue preferred stock, bonds and notes to equal the fair cost of the road as the public-service commission may determine, with accrued interest at not over 5 per cent. The bill goes into the calendar to-morrow.

A message from the governor was received on the subject of taxation, which was read in full and was then referred to the committee on taxation.

By a vote of 20 to 17, the House bill on admission to the bar was ordered to a third reading.

Mr Hobbs of Worcester made the point of order against the bill in relation to the intervention of the Southern New England railroad corporation in the abolishing of certain grade crossings in Southbridge that it had not been properly advertised, and had the matter put over until to-morrow, pending a ruling on the point of order.

The bill to provide supervision and regulation of innholders was passed to be engrossed, 29 to 6, on party lines.

The bill to regulate the manufacture of bread was put over until to-morrow with a couple of amendments pending.

Mr Gorst of Worcester spoke for making the cost of the new bridge over Lake Quinsigamond at $285,000, and it was put over until to-morrow by Mr Hobbs of Worcester.

THE HOUSE.

Education Bill Rejected, 128 to 79.

The recommitted resolve for an investigation relative to the expediency of taking Mount Holyoke as a state reservation came back again from the committee on ways and means reported by Mr Lyman of Easthampton, with the statement that it ought not to pass.

The committee on banks and banking, by Mr Wilson of Boston, with the dissent of Mr Mildram of Boston, reported favorably the recommitted bill for the erection of a building by the Fall River five cents savings bank for its own use.

Mr Belcher of Randolph for the committee on education, supported the appropriation for the benefit of poor towns and cities, which pay over $4 on $1000 for their public schools. He urged it as a matter of public policy, admitting that the rich places would have to pay what the poor ones do not. Mr L. R. Sullivan of Boston, against the bill, which the ways and means committee reported adversely, said it would cost Boston $783,000. Messrs Caro of Chelsea and Greenwood of Everett supported the bill as a sound measure of public policy. Mr Giblin of Boston, believed that the bill would cost Boston $1,000,000 a year. Mr Robinson of Chelsea said the bill ought to pass and incidentally mentioning Springfield among other places, he said it was the most beautiful city, in his opinion, in this state, or any other. Mr Smith of Provincetown was strongly for the bill and said that all parts of the state contribute to the wealth of Boston by sending young people to it to finish their education. After further debate, Mr Atwood of Boston, in charge of the adverse report of the ways and means committee, following Mr Belcher of Randolph, who had the five minute close for the education committee in favor of the bill, told of a long list of places which would lose money if the bill passed. On a rising vote on the rejection of the bill there were 87 yeas to 62 nays. On a roll-call there were 125 yeas to 79 nays.

A long debate on the Salisbury beach constitutional amendment resulted in a roll-call of 102 yeas to 108 nays.

Mr Dowse of Sherborn tried to get a bill substituted for an adverse report on his petition for an examination of water and water courses by the state department of health. Nobody spoke against him, but he failed by 48 yeas to 51 nays in his motion to substitute a bill.

Mr Quinn of Swampscott urged the House not to reject the bill to forbid school authorities to ask questions regarding the religious belief of applicants for positions as teacher in the public schools, as recommended by the third reading committee on the ground that the attorney-general had given an opinion that the bill was unconstitutional. Mr Quinn said that if the bill were not rejected he would move to amend it so as to remove any unconstitutionality. Mr Allen of Newton, who was in charge of the adverse report, read the opinion of Attorney-General Attwill against the bill, and opposed it still for the reason it would be bad policy to stir up any needless animosity over religious questions. Mr Armstrong of Somerville was against the bill as likely to stir up religious antipathy. Mr Caro of Chelsea was for the bill. Mr Lomasney of Boston made the point that religious questions were not permitted on civil-service blanks and he thought the bill ought to be adopted. Mr Allen of Newton, against the bill, said it was aimed first at teachers' agencies, and the attorney-general thought it was unconstitutional. He was opposed to any religious legislation. Mr Dowse of Sherborn, against the bill, thought it would fan the flames of bigotry. Finally, in order to give Mr Lomasney time to read the attorney-general's opinion, the bill was put at the end of the calendar.

Mr Mulveny of Boston had the jitney "bus license bill put at the end of the calendar.

"A nigger in the woodpile" was proclaimed to exist in the Senate bill to enlarge the powers of the public service commission relative to new railroads which shall cross existing railroads and the identity was affirmed to be that of the East Boston land company, of which Eugene N. Foss is a prominent member, which was said to have tried unsuccessfully several times in the open to get what it wants in way of crossing the narrow gauge road at grade, and now tried on the sly. The bill was attacked all along the line and was killed by a unanimous voice vote.

Mr Washburn of Worcester had the apple grading bill put at the end of the calendar in order to give time to read it.

Red flag legislation had the floor during the last part of the session, the Senate bill to permit the use of red flags under certain restrictions being under debate. The red flag was debated pro and con, in fun and in earnest. No vote was reached.

Just at the end of the session a bill was reported on the governor's message relating to boiler inspection, and L. R. Sullivan of Boston put in a petition for action on the case of "The birth of a nation" films.

DRAMATIC MIRROR
ss: New York City
APR 21 19

BOSTON

"Siegfried" at the Stadium in June—Whites and Blacks Hiss President's Book

BOSTON, April 20 (Special).—At the Majestic, April 19, Julia Dean began an engagement in "The Law of the Land," and Ethel Barrymore came to the Hollis for a fortnight in "The Shadow." Christie MacDonald began a single week's engagement at the Colonial in "Sweethearts," which was popular when heard here before. The Alcazar opera company sang "Tales of Hoffman" at the Boston.

Last Friday the English company at the Plymouth gave the first performance in Boston of Stanley Houghton's comedy of "The Younger Generation," and the next evening the Fay put on "The Duchess of Dublin," a musical play by M. Isong as Flattery. "A Pair of Sixes," at the Wilbur, is still filling the house, and "Common Clay," at the Castle Square, is continuing on the even tenor of its way. The special matinees that Mr. Craig announced some time ago are still eagerly awaited by Boston playgoers.

Columns could be written about the controversy over "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theater. Before the pictures were shown there were vigorous protests from the negroes, then came more vigorous protests from the whites, with letters in all the papers and discussions in halls and churches. Of course, the publicity man did not discourage this, but instead gave a private view of the pictures the night before the regular performance began. The city censors were there, and they reported that while there was nothing immoral in the pictures, yet there were certain scenes that might well be eliminated, so some of the pictures were cut out. Meanwhile meetings continue and the protests fill the newspapers.

The annual benefit for the Actors' Fund takes place on Friday afternoon at the Boston Theater. There is a long and varied bill in preparation, and Julia Arthur will return to the stage for this occasion and appear in the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet."

Hon. Archibald Clavering Gunter, the well-known writer and editor, has made a striking Greek play out of two of Browning's poems, "Balaustion's Adventure" and "Aristophanes' Apology," calling it "Balaustion's Adventure." The play is full of the spirit of Greek drama and abounds in possibilities for marvelous stage effects. It was produced at the Plymouth Theater April 20, a matinee. It was a benefit performance, under the auspices of the Boston Browning Society, the proceeds to be divided between the fund for the Emerson College of Boston and the fund for the Women's Peace Party.

Plans for the construction of the New Opera House, the estimated cost of $250,000 have been approved, and work will start at once.

On Saturday evening there was trouble at the Tremont. The Birth of a Nation. A large crowd of negroes stormed the box office of the Tremont Theater, and tried to get tickets, claiming discrimination, as they contended that white people were securing seats, while colored people had been refused. There was a call for the police, and 150 to 200 were required to keep the negroes away from the house. Men and women, white and colored, were among those arrested. A colored man was ejected from the theater for setting off an acid bomb in the balcony, and near the end of the play an ozz was thrown at the stage by another negro, who was arrested. The police handled a serious situation with tact and judgment.

At the cost of the new musical play of "A Modern Eve" bids fair to be a winner.

J. B. CLAPP.

"CLANSMAN" STARTS RIOT

Negro Agitation in Boston Results in Riot Followed by Arrests

BOSTON (Special).—Agitation started by local negroes over "The Birth of a Nation" resulted in a row in the theater lobby Saturday evening which resulted in several arrests. W. Monroe Trotter, who had trouble at the White House recently, when President Wilson alleged that he insulted him, was among the twelve arrested. The lobby was quickly cleared and the performance went on without interruption.

The managements of the picture say that they had received intimations that an attempt was going to be made to break up the show.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 21 1915

PHOTOPLAY MAY GO ON

No Warrant for "Birth of a Nation" Management

One Scene, However, Court Orders Eliminated

This Will Be Done by Theatre Interests

Judge Dowd Decides After Seeing Film

With the elimination of one scene, the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," that is being produced at the Tremont Theatre, will go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, representing the owner of the film, as asked by Boston negroes. This was the decision announced by Judge Thomas H. Dowd this afternoon, when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony, for he had himself viewed the film, last night.

Following the announcement of his decision Judge Dowd agreed to listen to arguments of counsel, and J. Mott Hallowell for the complainants and John F. Cusick spoke briefly, concluding their arguments when court adjourned. When court came in again at two o'clock the judge reiterated his previous decision, adding that the objectionable part of the film must be removed before 2.30 o'clock tomorrow, or a warrant will be issued.

It was subsequently announced at City Hall that the management would do as the court decreed, indeed it had already agreed to do this in response to objections raised by Mayor Curley. This scene was the final objection raised by the mayor. In place of the scene to be eliminated the management will introduce a new picture showing the accomplishment of the negro since the days of reconstruction.

There was a rumor, however, that in view of the attitude of the court the film management might change its plan and decline to remove the scene, permitting the issuance of a warrant, and the trial of the case on its merits. It was said that this attitude would be taken not only for the protection of "The Birth of a Nation" but for the benefit of future photoplays that may come to Boston.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a negro named Gus is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed Judge Dowd held that this scene comes within the prohibition of the statute upon immoral, obscene and lewd plays, and only that scene. While there are some other parts of the show that may be unpleasant to certain citizens, they do not in the opinion of the Court come within the prohibition of the statute.

When it became known that the court had declined to order the issuance of a warrant, the negro leaders and others went to the State House to seek special legislation on the subject. At the conference with Governor Walsh Monday he told the negroes first to seek a remedy in the courts, and if that failed he would send a special message to the Legislature.

On account of the routine work in his session, Judge Dowd was unable to reach "The Birth of a Nation" case until noon. All the forenoon long counsel waited about and the corridor outside was jammed with negroes anxious to attend the hearing. Spectators were not admitted, however, beyond the seating capacity of the little court room.

When he reached the case, Judge Dowd called counsel to the bench and made a statement in which he said:

"This is not a question of race, it is one of the decency and morality of the play; the element of race does not enter into its decision; there is no recognition of race or color in our laws. I am convinced that the statute covers this play. One scene is offensive and immoral, it leaves nothing to the imagination but actual passion. This scene shows the negro Gus pursuing a little white child of twelve years; every expression of his face delineates lust. The little girl to escape and preserve her honor has to bring about her own destruction. There is no question why the man is pursuing her, he is actuated by the lowest of human passions.

"I will give the defendants time to eliminate that scene. There is nothing else within the statute. While there are things that might excite the colored people, they do not come within the law. It is unfortunately true that in many cases our stage is descending to filth. This play is no worse than hundreds of others that corrupt the morals. It is a splendid production, though that does not condone the nauseating stench the objectionable scene leaves in the mind. I will allow the management to eliminate the scene or will issue the warrant."

CONTINUED ON PAGE TWO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE

John F. Cusick, counsel for the theatre interests, said that the matter of the scene objected to by the court had been up for four days between the film managers and the mayor, and he did not know what determination had been reached. While the management does not admit the conclusion reached by the court in regard to that scene, it does not purpose to put on anything except what is absolutely within the law and the ethical law. He said he would take up the matter immediately with the management and notify the court of its Judge Dowd said that he did not think there was in the play any deliberate, overt attempt to violate the law but the scene must be eliminated.

J. Mott Hallowell, of counsel for the petitioners for a warrant, said that he could prove the case on its merits if the Court would allow the trial on the merits. He had much evidence, he said, and he believes that the play violates the statute in many other respects than that found by the Court.

Judge Dowd replied hat he would not change his decision. He said he had considered the play as if written in a book. There are thousands of worse scenes in plays in which only white people appear. The element of color must not be allowed to enter here. In view of the large investment involved he thought the management ought to have a chance to meet the finding of the Court.

Mr. Hallowell requested an opportunity to argue, and the Court consented.

Mr. Hallowell held that other parts of the play come within the scope of the law, in that they are immoral, and he proceeded to attempt to prove that the word immoral should be construed in its broad sense as anything hostile to the welfare of the general public or contrary to good order and public welfare. He asserted also that the play is not historically accurate, and went at some length into the history of the period immediately following the close of the war. He characterized the play as an "abominable slander so far as it purports to be an historical representation of the era of reconstruction." He held, further, that the play does not represent the majesty of the law, but glorifies lynch law, which is not for the welfare of the public. The play, he said, teaches contempt of the coruts. The play also teaches forcible intimidation of voters. It suggests indecency.

Judge Dowd replied that many plays are suggestive, and cited "Otello" as an instance. Hundreds of plays in which only white people appear are worse.

That does not affect this issue, said Mr. Hallawell, for this play has been complained against; it reeks with suggestion all through.

Mr. Cusick said that in the statute it was not intended that the word "immoral" should be construed broadly; it should be construed in its narrow sense. He contended that Mr. Hallowell was wrong in his history, and said that the play had given no offence to the great majority of the people, but only to a small part, and they have incited the trouble. He exhibited a negro publication containing a poem entitled "The White Witch" and asked if counsel for the complainants wished him to read it. They did not object, but the Court said it was not material.

At this point adjournment was reached.

The cases of the men arrested Saturday night near the Tremont Theatre were called in another session of the Municipal Court. Charles F. Sullivan, white, and Harris McDonald, negro, charged with mutual assault, were dismissed. One case was continued until today and the rest went over until next Wednesday.

At a meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston, yesterday afternoon, in the parish house of Trinity Church, it was voted that the directors of the federation express, in the strongest terms, their disapproval of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

Another Photoplay Bill Filed

A bill designed to stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and similar plays has been filed in the House by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan. The measure would prohibit "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice, or tends to a breach of the public peace."

BROCKTON (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
APRIL 21, 1915

Judge Dowd Sits at Film Play Hearing

Sees "Birth of a Nation" on Which Protest Is Made.

Judge Thomas H. Dowd, formerly of Brockton, brother of Ex-City Solicitor James J. Dowd of this city, is presiding in the Third Session of the Municipal court of Boston in the hearing over the issuance of a summons or warrant for the arrest of those showing the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," on Monday night he attended the performance. Tuesday was taken up in court with hearing several witnesses for the government.

This morning Acting Chief Neal of the State police was a witness, and witnesses for Sergeant Anderson of the Boston police, who applies for a summons or warrant, were heard.

Representative Lewis R. Sullivan has filed in the House of Representatives a bill to amend the existing law regarding public amusements by the addition of a clause to prohibit "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

Speaker Cox gave out a statement declaring himself ready to aid any attempt to make impossible performances which stir up race hatred.

LYNN (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 21, 1915

If one may contemplate the agitation caused by the presentation of the picture of "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston, the wisdom of Deputy Chief Neal of the state police in refusing a license for the play in this city is well justified.

their [illegible] by each ex-

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE
APRIL 21, 1915

ONE SCENE MUST BE CUT OUT

It Is That of Negro's Pursuit Of Little Girl.

Judge Dowd Thinks He Need Not Hear Any Evidence.

Provided the scene in "The Birth of a Nation" wherein the negro Gus pursues a young girl, who finally throws herself from a high cliff, is eliminated, the film play may continue to be produced in Boston.

Judge Thomas Dowd announced this decision in the third session of the Municipal Court this morning. Atty Cusick then explained to Judge Dowd that this scene had been under consideration by the theatre management and Mayor Curley for some days, and that it was probable that by this time some decision has been reached. He also thanked the court.

"I don't think I shall hear any future evidence, gentlemen," said Judge Dowd when the case was called this morning; "I don't think the question of race is involved. It is a question entirely of the decency and the morality of the play. The element of race has not been considered in reaching a decision.

"I am convinced that the statute covers this play. There is one scene which is offensive and immoral. This is the scene where the renegade and degenerate negro, 'Gus,' pursues a child of 12 years, with an expression upon his face which leaves no doubt of his state of mind. There is not any question of his purpose in pursuing the white girl; he is plainly actuated by the lowest passions of mankind. This would be the same were be a white man.

"This is the only scene which in my mind is covered by the statutes. There is nothing else in the play covered by the statutes. I have no doubt that parts of it are more or less disgusting to colored people; but there is nothing in the statutes which covers them.

"No Worse Than Hundreds."

"It is unfortunate, in my opinion, that our stage has descended to dealing with filth. This play is no worse than hundreds of others, where things are portrayed, which corrupt our morals and our souls.

"This is a splendid production. I will say one of the most magnificent I have ever witnessed. This does not mean that I condone the nauseating scene I have mentioned. But I would say that with the exception of that scene the play is within the law. It must be remembered that in reaching this decision I have not taken into account any question of color.

"I think, therefore, that the management should be given a chance to eliminate the objectionable scene within a certain time."

Attorney Cusick then stated that the scene had been under consideration between Mayor Curley and the management. He stated that it was not the purpose of the management to present, here or elsewhere, anything that was not within the law. He stated that there are three miles of film in the play.

William H. Lewis, sitting directly behind Cusick, asked in an audible voice, "Three miles of filth?" This led to a short exchange of words between Lewis and Cusick and the court.

Judge Dowd then stated that he did not think there was any deliberate overt attempt to violate the law, on the part of the managment.

Attorney Hallowell then said: "We believe that the statutes are violated. We have additional witnesses, and I am going to ask Your Honor to issue summonses that we may have a more extended hearing."

"Not Letting Color Interfere."

Judge Dowd: "I don't think I will do that. There is a degree of feeling in this case not warranted by the evidence. I have considered the play as if it were a book, and each of the actors spoke certain lines. There have been scenes a thousand times worse enacted in plays on the local stage where only white people took part. I am not letting the element of color interfere in this case, regardless of the fact that it may incite certain elements of the population.

"The great amount of money expended by the management, although it should not be allowed to interfere with the law is nevertheless worthy of some consideration. I shall, therefore, give the management a certain time in which to eliminate the objectionable scene."

Atty Cusick then asked permission to be heard for 10 minutes.

Some Feeling Shown by Counsel.

J. Mott Hallowell, appearing on the Government side as attorney for the colored people interested, was granted the 10 minutes for which he asked, but spoke for nearly a half hour. He said that the film placed the colored race in a false light, and that it was not a play of the reconstruction period but a rank slander on history. He said it advocates lynch law.

Atty Cusick was then granted speech by the court. He denied the allegations of Atty Hallowell. Waving in his hand what he described as a publication of the National Society for the Advancement of Colored People, Atty Cusick said that in that publication was immoral matter which ought to prevent its passage through the mails.

Attorney Hallowell told him to read it to the court. Attorney Cusick said that that was impossible, but that he would give it to the court, that the court might read a piece called "The White Witch." He offered the paper to Butler Wilson, who sat next to attorney Hallowell, but the latter refused to take it.

Attorney Cusick then asked the court

if the latter wished it read. The court replied that it might only add fuel to the flame of feeling already in the case.

"It would add fuel, Your Honor," replied attorney Cusick, "and that's the reason I declined to read it."

When attorney Cusick had finished speaking, Judge Dowd said that he would make a final decision in the case at 2 p m.

Attorney Cusick asked the court if a decision had not already been rendered. Judge Dowd replied that after hearing arguments of counsel he wished to think the matter over, although these arguments might not affect the final decision.

Crowds of Colored People.

Just before noon time colored people began to reach the Courthouse in large numbers. The door leading to the little courtroom from the main corridor was locked from the inside, and court officers stood guard over the side door leading through the examination room, so that only those needed in the case could enter the courtroom.

The crowd in the corridor was orderly, and awaited quietly the result of the hearing. Supt Crowley, Rev Herbert Johnson, John M. Casey, official censor of Mayor Curley; Acting Chief Neal of the State police and a number of colored leaders were interested spectators in the courtroom.

...Bureau in the World

BUI...

Lawrence, Mass.

APR 21 1915

Have you cleaned up the backyard yet?

The "Birth of a Nation" has stirred up a "hornet's nest" in the Hub.

NEWS

Addres NEWBURYPORT, MASS.

ite APR 21 1915

TWO PICTURES ARE FORBIDDEN

There will be no local production of "The Birth of a Nation" nor the Willard-Johnson fight. In order to save any unpleasantness over the matter, Mayor Fogg has caused local managers to be made aware of his wishes in the matter.

Paper Cutting Bureau in the World
ION'S HERALD
BOSTON, MASS.
APR 2 1 1915

Exciting Race Prejudice

TON Negroes, joined by large numbers of white persons, have been protmost emphatically against the conexhibition of the photo-play, "The th of a Nation," which has been shown e days at one of the local theaters. erse demonstration that took place y evening came near being atby serious results. This was folon Sunday by a meeting in Faneuil which was held under the auspices of ndell Phillips Memorial Association, rank B. Sanborn, of Concord, pre- Mr. Sanborn is the last of the f New England abolitionists which William Lloyd Garrison and Wenillips. The New England Conferthe Methodist Episcopal Church resolutions on the subject during k, protesting against the exhibithese films anywhere in New Eng The play is said to represent some worst elements in human nature, make them typical of the colored us having the tendency to engender judice, than which there is nothing ontemptible. We join most emly in raising our voice against anyhich in any way will array class t class, or race against race. It is too te in the history of the American nation y one to do anything to raise prejagainst the Negro, and particularly is rue in New England, which has ly been called "freedom's birthplace." Anything which tends to bring this nefarious result is worthy of mnation, and should be abolished as ly as the law can be made to reach it.

EVENING
Boston

Boston Traveler April 22, 1915

EARS BOSTON LYNCHING
F FILM PLAY GOES ON

H. Lewis, Former U. S. Assistant Attorney-General, Says "Birth of Nation" Is Attempt to Justify Southern Hangings and "We May Have One on Common."

Colored citizens and many others disappointed at the refusal of the Boston city authorities and municipal court to prohibit the further showing of what they declare are scenes libeling the negro race in "The Birth of a Nation," are now resting their hopes of relief for speedy action by the Legislature.

Vigorous campaigns in behalf of two measures, the advocates of which believe will prevent the showing of such productions as "The Birth of a Nation" in this state in the future, were begun at the State House today.

The speedy enactment of such a law would, of course, probably halt the scheduled run of "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston.

A number of opponents of the photoplay appeared before the Senate ways and means committee today in favor of the Bates bill to transfer the committee of moving pictures from the state police to the state board of labor and industries. Advocates of the bill believe it will result in better and more strict regulation and censorship.

William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant United States attorney-general, declared the film was an attempt by the south to justify lynching of the Negro. "If this thing goes on we may have a lynching on Boston Common," declared Lewis, with emotion. "Who knows?" As the result of efforts made by members of the Legislature, who are opposed to the production of "The Birth of a Nation," the House and Senate today concurred today in admitting for consideration, as recommended by the House committee on rules the Sullivan bill. The purpose of this bill is to amend the present law forbidding the exhibition of plays of an immoral or obscene nature so the law will also apply to plays causing religious or racial prejudice.

The Sullivan bill was referred to the committee on judiciary, which will hold a public hearing on the matter at the State House tomorrow morning, beginning at 10:30.

Hope Special Message.

Opponents of the film objected to any appeal to Gov. Walsh will send to the Legislature a special message to the Legislature urging action on proposed remedial legislation.

Advocates of the Bates bill to appear in its favor before the Senate committee on ways and means today pointed out that the state police department at present has only the power to stop the production of objectionable films on Sundays. It can interfere with the production of such films on weekdays provided they conflict with the general laws. They felt that either the state police should be given more power, or else the Bates bill, which they felt would remedy the situation as far as weekdays are concerned, should be passed.

It was told how Acting Chief George F. Neal of the state police had branded "The Birth of a Nation" as unfit for Sunday production and had also declared that in his opinion its production was in violation of the state law prohibiting plays of an immoral or obscene nature. This opinion of Acting Chief Neal, it should be stated, was given before Judge Dowd of the municipal court ordered the scene showing a degenerate negro chasing a white girl cut out of the film. This decision, the protesters say, the film clique does not go far enough.

Butler R. Wilson, an attorney, said, in appearing before the Senate ways and means committee today:

"When we go to the mayor of Boston we are chloroformed by promises; when we go to the police commissioners, we are told he is lacking in authority. They do have censors, but they maintain that a censor's opinion is part of his very soul and cannot be moved by the laws of this state."

William H. Lewis, a former assistant attorney-general of the United States and one of the leaders in the fight to stop the production of the film, presented the case of his side against the play. "The Birth of a Nation," he declared, was really an attempt on the part of the South to justify lynching.

"This film is a libel on history and a villainy on the colored man," declared Mr. Lewis.

"In one scene it depicts Wendell Phillips with his arms thrown about a colored man's neck. It pictures Senator Sumner manifesting either an aversion for a colored woman or else trying to make goo-goo eyes at her. The film advertises to present history, but these events certainly never took place in recorded history. These scenes are a direct insult to Massachusetts and two of her notable sons.

Sees Lynching on Common.

"If this film goes on we may have a lynching on Boston Common. Who knows?"

"This picture is put out to justify lynching. It is to justify the southern program for future lynchings, and to incite the approval of the voters of the North. And there it is on us, and they continue, but we are not to be surprised to see the lynching of colored men on Boston Common.

"The South has opposed everything about the colored man. The prejudice is now, as conveyed in this picture film, in to make it appear to the people of the North that the negro men want to marry into the white race by marrying his daughter. It does not

---

DOVER (N. H.) DEMOCRAT
APRIL 23, 1915

PHOTO-PLAY TO CONTINUE

One Scene to Be Eliminated From "Birth of a Nation"

Boston, April 22.—With the elimination of one scene, the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," that is being produced at the Tremont theatre, will go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, representing the owner of the film, as asked by Boston negroes.

This was the decision announced by Judge Dowd when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony, for he had himself viewed the film.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a negro is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed.

Telegraph

EVENING

Sept 21 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" O. K.

(Special Dispatch to The Morning Telegraph.)

BOSTON, April 21.—The production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," may go on at the Tremont Theatre, acording to a decision by Judge Thomas H. Dowd, in the City Criminal Court to-day. When he made known his finding, Judge Dowd announced that he would not issue warrants for Proprietor John B. Schoeffel, of the Tremont Theatre, and Manager J. J. McCarthy, of the film company.

Judge Dowd made known his ruling to-day without taking any further evidence, as he had himself viewed the film last night. Previously, he spent nearly the whole day listening to evidence.

REPUBLICAN

s: Springfield, Mass.

APR 22 1915

COURT ORDERS ONE SCENE CUT

MOOT PHOTOPLAY MAY CONTINUE

Decision by Municipal Court Judge at Boston in Case of "Birth of a Nation."

Municipal Court Judge Thomas H. Dowd, before whom a delegation of Negroes instituted legal proceedings to prohibit an exhibition of moving pictures which they alleged were objectionable and tended to create race prejudice, decided at Boston yesterday to issue summonses for the proprietors of the show and ruled that the pictures may be displayed if a certain scene is eliminated. The judge heard evidence in the case Tuesday and viewed the films Tuesday night. In announcing his decision he said:—

"The element of race does not enter into the controversy, for the law knows no race nor creed in Massachusetts."

It was subsequently announced that the management would do as the court decreed, indeed it had already agreed to do this in response to objections raised by Mayor Curley. This scene was the final objection raised by the mayor. In place of the scene to be eliminated the management will introduce a new picture showing the accomplishment of the Negro since the days of reconstruction.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a Negro named Gus is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterward chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed. Judge Dowd held that this scene comes within the prohibition of the statute upon immoral, obscene and lewd plays, and only scene. While there are some other of the show that may be implicated certain citizens, they do not in the of the court come within the provisions of the statute.

count of the routine work in his Judge Dowd was unable to reach birth of a Nation" case until noon. afternoon long counsel waited about a corridor outside was jammed negroes anxious to attend the hear- Spectators were not admitted, however, beyond the seating capacity of the court-room. When he reached the case, Judge Dowd called counsel to the bench and made a statement in which he said:—

"This is not a question of race, it is one of the decency and morality of the play; the element of race does not enter into its decision; there is no recognition of race or color in our laws. I am convinced that the statute covers this play. One scene is offensive and immoral, it leaves nothing to the imagination but actual passion. This scene shows the Negro Gus pursuing a little white child of 12 years; every expression of his face delineates lust. The little girl to escape and preserve her honor has to bring about her own destruction. There is no question why the man is pursuing her, he is actuated by the lowest of human passions.

"I will give the defendants time to eliminate that scene. There is nothing else within the statute. While there are things that might excite the colored people, they do not come within the law. It is unfortunately true that in many cases our stage is descending to filth. This play is no worse than hundreds of others that corrupt the morals. It is a splendid production, though that does not condone the nauseating stench the objectionable scene leaves on the mind. I will allow the management whi to eliminate the scene, or will issue the sion warrant."

girl to bring no q he pa

HERALD

Boston, Mass.

APR 22 1915

The Herald begs leave to suggest to its readers that it cannot provide space in this column for further discussion of the "Birth of a Nation" episode, on either side. We have been inundated with letters on the subject. We feel that the dispute finds its proper handling in the news columns, and in that we have not been remiss.—Ed.

NEW YORK HERALD

APR 22 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Wins in Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Wednesday.—Municipal Court Judge Thomas H. Dowd, before whom a delegation of negroes instituted legal proceedings to prohibit an exhibition of moving pictures of "The Birth of a Nation," tended to arouse race prejudice, decided to-day to issue summonses for the proprietors and ruled that the pictures may be displayed if a certain scene is eliminated. The judge heard evidence in the case Tuesday and viewed the films Tuesday night. In announcing his decision he said:

"The element of race does not enter into the controversy, for the law knows no race nor creed in Massachusetts."

It was subsequently announced that the management would do as the court decreed, indeed it had already agreed to do this in response to objections raised by Mayor Curley. This scene was the final objection raised by the mayor. In place of the scene to be eliminated the management will introduce a new picture showing the accomplishment of the Negro since the days of reconstruction.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a Negro named Gus is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterward chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed. Judge Dowd held that this scene comes within the prohibition of the statute upon immoral, obscene and lewd plays, and only scene. While there are some other of the show that may be implicated certain citizens, they do not in the of the court come within the provisions of the statute.

AMERICAN

Boston, Mass.

APR 22 1915

THEATRE YIELDS ON FILM PROTEST

According to agreements with Mayor Curley and Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court, the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," to certain parts of which colored residents of Boston objected, will be presented this afternoon with the episode wherein the character "Gus" pursues a white girl until she dashes herself over a cliff eliminated.

The Tremont Theatre management, in a statement saying this matter has been under advisement for ten days, continues:

"Counsel has informed the management that the court, in the complaints against John B. Schoeffel and J. J. McCarthy, has made a finding, in substance, that after viewing the show and hearing the evidence he does not believe that any part of the show comes within the act of 1910 except that scene which represents the pursuit of the young girl by the negro and the court has made a finding that if the scene is eliminated the complaints will not be entertained by the court.

"Counsel advises the management that in his opinion no part of this show is within the meaning of that statute, including the scene which is going to be elimiated, but in view of the negotiations of the management with Mayor Curley and the striking coincidence of the opinion of the court with the Mayor's suggestion, the management has decided to eliminate it."

Mayor Curley declared:

"This will remove the only cause of complaint which has any semblance of justice, and it will not impair the value or attractiveness of the play in the slightest degree. This concession of the management is not required by law, as I am advised, and the fact that it is voluntary on the part of the management is creditable to them."

A large gathering of colored people appeared before the Legislative Committee on Rules and asked that the committee permit a late entry of the petition of Representative L. H. Sullivan of Dorchester. This petition would confer on authorities the right to stop any performance which tends to create religious or racial feeling. The present law provides only against objectionable scene.

Lieutenant-Governor Cushing appeared as its champion. "We must get speedy action on this matter," he said. "There is no reason why the proper bill cannot be put through within three or four days."

EVENING RECORD

Boston, Mass.

APR 22 1915

Movies Hearing on Friday

A hearing on the Sullivan "Birth of a Nation" bill will be given by the Committee on Judiciary in Room 249 of the State House Friday morning. The Sullivan bill amends the act of 1910 by adding that pictures that stir up race or religious prejudice shall be barred by the censor.

WALTHAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS

APRIL 22 1915

DANGEROUS LEGISLATION.

The House Committee on Rules of the Massachusetts Legislature yesterday afternoon voted to admit the bill directed at the "Birth of a Nation," which measure provides for an amendment to the existing statutes by the addition of the clause "or any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

We hope the General Court will give any such bill a large amount of consideration before passing it. It is a very serious and dangerous affair. It will be quite impossible to fairly determine what will or will not tend to excite racial or religious prejudice," and there is the opportunity for so much latitude and divergence of opinion that there will inevitably be trouble in enforcing such a statute. What might make trouble in one community would pass unnoticed in another. What might make a disturbance in some conditions of public mind would not ruffle it in the least under other circumstances. There are always, in every community, people whose sensibilities in some directions are abnormally developed; are they to be the judges of such alleged disturbing influences?

JOURNAL

Boston, Mass.

APR 22 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' CAN CONTINUE IS COURT'S RULING

Orders Scene of Chase by Negro Eliminated, However.

GIVES 24 HOURS TO MAKE CHANGE

Producers Agree and Will Cut Film to Comply With the Law.

The photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," will continue at the Tremont Theatre. This afternoon, by order of Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court, the management will eliminate that scene of the film which portrays the pursuit of the young white girl by the renegade negro, "Gus." This decision came after a two-day court hearing.

Judge Dowd viewed the pictures Tuesday night and when he continued the hearing yesterday morning informed both the defendant and complainants that he would render a decision in the afternoon, and on what he had seen only. Long before the doors of the courtroom were opened the corridors and anteroom were jammed with spectators, a large majority of whom were negroes. The courtroom was closed to all but lawyers and newspaper men. Even then these men practically had to fight their way through the immense throng around the courtroom doors. The exclusion of spectators caused some ill feeling in the crowd. At Tuesday's hearing colored women were even sitting on the floor about the judge's bench.

Praises Photo-Play

In his decision yesterday, Judge Dowd asserted that the proto-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was one of the best he had ever witnessed, save for the part where the negro chases the young white girl, and which he has ordered eliminated.

The court also cautioned the negroes against any demonstration. He said: "The place for redress is in the courts, not on the street, with your fists. If this occurs, we have police officers, vested with the proper authority by the courts."

Judge Dowd handed down his decision shortly after 2 o'clock. There was a short wait before Attorneys Graham and John F. Cusick, for the defense, arrived. Then Judge Dowd said:

"This is not a case where color or race is concerned. It is the question of the decency and morality of this play. The element of race does not enter into the controversy at all, for the law knows no race or creed in Massachusetts. The only question is, 'Does the production of the play violate any statute, or rather the one upon which the application is based?'

One Scene Immoral

"I am convinced that there is one scene at least that is immoral. In the scene to which I refer, the pursuit of a 12-year-old girl by the renegade negro "Gus," nothing is left to the immagination. This negro chases the girl with animal passion written on his face. There is no question from his acts and his facial expressions as to the reason why he chases her. This part is not only disgusting, but it is immoral.

(Continued on Page 5, Column 1.)

"This is the only scene which in my mind is covered by the statutes. I have no doubt that parts of it are more or less disgusting to colored people; but there is nothing in the statutes that covers them. I also grant that there might be a great deal to excite colored people. If it had been a white man who perpretated these deeds then there might have been no trouble. The colored people cannot avail themselves of this statute, for this State knows no color, creed nor race.

"It is unfortunate, in my opinion, that our stage has descended to dialing with filth. This play is no worse than hundreds of others, where things are portrayed, which corrupt the morals and souls.

"This is a splendid production. I will say one of the most magnificent I have ever seen. This does not mean I condone the nauseating scene I have mentioned. But I would say that with the exception of that scene the play is within the law. It must be remembered that in reaching this decision I have not taken into account any question of color. I think, therefore, that the management should be given a chace to eliminate the objectional scene within a certain time.

Under 24 Hours to Cut Scene

"I do not think this play was written with intent to harm anyone. I will give the management 24 hours to eliminate the objectionable scene wherein the negro pursues the white girl, who throws herself from the top of the cliff, and if this is not done, a summons will issue. That is the decision of this court, gentlemen."

"When does this 24 hours begin, your honor?" asked Attorney Cusick.

"It is now 2.30 o'clock," said Judge Dowd. "The scene must be eliminated by 2.30 tomorrow afternoon. The play after that will be liable to censorship."

There was some demonstration among the throng of negroes gathered outside the court room when they heard the decision. They were quickly hurried away from the doors, however, by the court officers.

Management to Comply

The management of the Tremont Theatre and "The Birth of a Nation" declared yesterday afternoon, just after the decision of Judge Dowd, that an arrangement had already been made between Mayor Curley and the management of the film company whereby the scene of the pursuit would be cut from the film. This matter had been under advisement of both parties for about ten days, so they asserted.

Yesterday a conference was held between the mayor and one of the company's New York managers, Martin W. Littleton, a former colleague of the mayor's in Washington, who came to Boston for the purpose. After going over this part of the story thoroughly it was found that dropping the pursuit episode would in no way interfere with the logical progress and development of the drama.

Mayor Curley issued the following statement last evening:

"I am pleased to announce that the management of the Tremont Theatre has agreed to comply with my original suggestion that the part of the film which depicts the negro, Gus, chasing a white girl, be eliminated. This will remove the only cause of complaint which has any semblance of justice, and it will not impair the value or attractiveness of the play in the slightest degree. This concession on the part of the management is not required by law, as I am advised, and the fact that it is voluntary on the part of the management is creditable to them.

"So much has been said in criticism of my action in this case, and so unjustly, that I request the press, in fairness to me, to emphasize the fact that the elimination, which has now been assented to, was suggested by me in the beginning. The law did not require me to suggest any elimination as the opinions of the censors of the mayor's office and the police commissioner established the legality of the play.

"I am glad to learn that the judge who has heard the evidence of both sides in the case has confirmed my view that only the scene in question could possibly be regarded as offensive in the eye of the law, and it would be well if all public officials like the judge in the case, would decline to decide important questions offhand on the ex-parte statements of witnesses who are laboring under the stress of violent emotions."

Police Commissioner O'Meara last night sent a letter to Mayor Curley, in which he asserted that the part of the photo-play objected to by Judge Dowd was "obscene or immoral, and tends to injure the morals of the community." In his communication, the commissioner tells of receiving a letter from Moorfield Storey, asking that he stop the play.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD

Boston, Mass.

APR 22 1915

FIGHT FOR NEW LAW IN WAR ON 'BIRTH OF NATION'

Colored citizens and many others, disappointed at the refusal of the Boston city authorities and municipal court to prohibit the further showing of what they declare are scenes libelling the Negro race in "The Birth of a Nation," are now resting their hopes of relief in speedy action by the Legislature.

Vigorous campaigns in behalf of two measures, the advocates of which believe will prevent the showing of such productions as "The Birth of a Nation" in this state in the future, were begun at the State House today.

The speedy enactment of such a law, would, of course, probably halt the scheduled rule of "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston.

A number of opponents of the photo-play appeared before the Senate ways and means committee today in favor of the Bates bill to transfer the censorship of moving pictures from the state police to the state board of labor and industries. Advocates of the bill believe it will result in better and more strict regulation and censorship.

William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant United States attorney-general, declared the film was an attempt by the South to justify its lynching of the Negro.

"If this thing goes on we may have a lynching on Boston Common," declared Mr. Lewis, with emotion. "Who knows?"

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 22 1915

SOLONS HUSTLE TO GAME

Hold Early Sessions to See Baseball Opening

Few Important Matters Acted Upon

House Admits "Birth of a Nation" Bill

Tinkham Trust Bill Will Become a Law

Baseball had its innings in the Legislature today, the House and Senate holding early sessions so the members could reach Fenway Park in time to witness the throwing of the first ball in the opening game of the American League season in Boston. There were few matters of importance on either calendar.

The House postponed action for one week on the "jitney bus" bill, after reconsidering its action of yesterday in passing the measure to be engrossed. It suspended the rule to admit for consideration the Sullivan bill to regulate public entertainments such as "The Birth of a Nation," and referred the matter to the Committee on Judiciary, which will hold a public hearing tomorrow at 10 A. M.

By a vote of 77 to 73, the House refused to reject the resolve authorizing the State forester to investigate the advisability of making Mount Holyoke as a State reservation. After some debate the assembly by a voice vote rejected the bill to make workmen's compensation compulsory upon all employers. The so-called Kearney amendment, prohibiting employers from carrying their own insurance, was defeated on a voice vote.

The bill authorizing the Fall River Five Cents Savings Bank to erect a building costing more than the statutory limit of $200,000 was ordered to a third reading, despite the opposition of Mr. Mildram of Boston, who contended that it was an entering wedge in the direction of permitting savings banks to go into the real estate business. Mr. Wilson of Boston said the directors of the bank have an opportunity, by enlarging the new building, to rent a part of it at an advantageous rate.

Mr. Frost of Somerville offered an amendment to the Wellington bridge bill providing that the cost should be apportioned upon all cities and towns which benefit from the bridge, while the bill limits the apportionment to communities in Middlesex County. Mr. Bothfeld said the purpose of the amendment was to include Boston in the apportionment. The amendment was rejected and the bill was passed to be engrossed.

The Tinkham bill relative to officers, directors and employees of trust companies was engrossed without debate. Mr. Sawyer of Ware moved to substitute for the report on the governor's inaugural recommendation on milk, a resolve authorizing the governor to appoint a commission of three to investigate the whole milk question. The matter was postponed to the end of the calendar. The bill extending the period for which the Metropolitan Park Commission may make contracts for lighting the reservations under its control was rejected.

Four Motions for Reconsideration

Motions for the reconsideration of four matters acted upon yesterday were made in the Senate today, and all were postponed for further consideration until Tuesday. Senator Perley made this motion in regard to the bill extending the time within which the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad may file its bond. Senator Sullivan moved reconsideration of the measure for the reappointment of the expenses of Suffolk County; Senator Garst moved reconsideration of the Quinsigamond bridge bill; and Senator Hays reconsideration of the Sunday bakers' bill.

An order was offered by Senator Hobbs calling for an opinion of the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the modified railroad "spotters" bill, and it was referred to the Committee on Rules. No action was taken on the bill changing the requirements for admission to the bar, as the measure is still in the hands of the Committee on Rules in the third reading.

A bill was substituted on the motion of Senator Fay for the measure making the compensation of minors working under the Compensation Act $10 weekly, to provide that, in computing the compensation, the natural increase of wages which his age would render probable shall be taken into account.

Quite a lengthy debate took place on the measure recommended by the special Committee on Legislative Precedure, which would require the filing of petitions on or before the third Wednesday preceding the convening of the Legislature. Senators Wells and Tufts spoke in favor, while Senators Cavanagh and Martin were opposed. On a rollcall vote of 20 to 16, the Senate refused to adopt the Cavanagh Amendment making the time the first Saturday following the meeting of the Legislature. The recommendations were then adopted.

The resolve for a constitutional amendment for an income tax was postponed until tomorrow on the motion of Senator Gifford.

The bill to change the harbor line in Boston Harbor on the southerly and easterly sides of East Boston was ordered to a third reading.

The rollcall vote on the Cavanagh amendment to the recommendations of the Committee on Legislative Procedure was:

Yes—Bartlett, Bates, Bassity, Beal, Bean, Cavanagh, Clark, Cummings, Eldridge, Gifford, Leonard, Martin, Mason, McGlaughlin, Sheehan, Sullivan—16.

No—Bagley, Doyle, Ellis, Farnsworth, Fay, Fitzgerald, Gordon, Halpin, Hays, Hobbs, Jackson, Kimball, Langeller, Marshall, McLane, Perley, Teller, Tinkham, Wells—16.

Paired For—Green, Tufts.

Voting—Garst, Coolidge, (President).

ANOTHER "MOVIE" HEARING

Senate Ways and Means Hears Three Speakers in Regard to the Bates Bill for Photoplay Censorship

Another brief hearing was given today by the Senate Committee on Ways and Means on the Bates bill to place the censorship of motion picture films in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries. As the time of the committee was limited, owing to the morning session of the Senate, only three speakers were heard—William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson, both negroes, in favor of the bill; and Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship, in opposition.

Mr. Lewis, who has been one of the leaders against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont theatre, declared that there was public necessity for such a bill. A motion picture, he said, is a thing manufactured by some film factories, and the only idea of producing it, is to get up something that will sell. It is nothing to the manufacturer whether the play is immoral or obscene, being purely a business proposition. The general public welfare requires that there should be some authority to pass upon the films before they are shown. Congress has passed a bill recently prohibiting the production of the recent fight films and simply on the grounds that it would tend to raise race prejudice.

Mr. Lewis said that he had in mind the moving picture show at the Tremont Theatre, which he declared was a "moving" picture—"It moves some people to admiration," he said, "and it moves others to shame. I come within the latter class." He claimed that no one had the right to exhibit anything which reflected upon every class of individuals, because it tended to create unhappiness. A mutual respect for the rights and interests of each other, he said, requires that decent respect be paid to every class of citizens in the United States where there is such a mixture of races and nationalities.

Mr. Lewis declared that "The Birth of a Nation" was a libel on history, a calumny on the negro race and an insult to Massachusetts. It was staged, he said, to make the North believe that the action of the South in segregating the negroes and lynching them was all right."

Mr. Wilson suggested that the censorship be placed in the hands of the district police rather than in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries, for the former was more familiar with such matters and had shown good judgment in refusing to allow the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at Lynn on Sunday. He declared that there never had been a fight for democracy in the United States when the negro was not on the right side.

Mr. Cox opposed the measure from the viewpoint of an expert censor, and told the committee of the work which his board was carrying on. He said that the question of censorship involved the possible criticism of 7000 or 8000 distinct subjects which must be considered from all sides, and especially from that of public opinion. He said that where the subjects touched upon the real things of life, it was inevitable that there should be some degree of contention, and that the board could not decide upon pictures from the standpoint of a personal whim. It is essential, he added, that there should be common sense criticism.

When asked how the Ohio and Pennsylvania laws work, he replied that it was impossible to view pictures day in and day out with a fresh mind, and that in those States, the films were not half censored.

BILL AIMED AT PHOTOPLAY

Committee Will Admit Measure Forbidding Plays Which Excite Racial Prejudice

Following a hearing yesterday afternoon, the House Committee on Rules of the Legislature voted to admit the bill, directed at "The Birth of a Nation," to amend the existing statutes by adding a clause to prohibit a show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace. Conspicuous among those supporting the proposition was Lieutenant Governor Cushing. Three hundred negroes attended the meeting.

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 22 1915

Denies Statement of Photo-Play Manager

To the Editor of the Post:

Sir—In your issue of April 17 an article signed by the manager of "The Birth of a Nation" company stated that I had called on him. The statement is not true, nor any other portion of it, when he states: "Among those who called on me and said they thought 'The Birth of a Nation' presentation was historical and would have good effect."

Last week I wrote both the Mayor and Censor Casey condemning the drama. I trust you will give this denial the largest possible publicity, as I am bitterly opposed to any movement which stirs up strife and race hatred as Manager Henry MacMahone is doing here in this play. Respectfully yours, PHILIP J. ALLSTON.

Boston.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 22 1915

FIGHT IS TAKEN TO STATE HOUSE

Court Will Not Stop "Birth of Nation."

Requirement That a Scene Be Cut Out Will Be Obeyed.

Opponents of Photo-Play Seeking Legislation.

Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court said yesterday afternoon that the most objectionable feature of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was the scene in which the white girl jumps from a rocky cliff to escape her colored pursuer, and unless this scene were eliminated within 24 hours he would issue the warrants requested for the arrest of those concerned in the production.

Judge Dowd had seen the production the previous evening in the Tremont Theatre and this particular scene appeared to him to be an offense against the existing law. Otherwise he regarded the production as within the law.

The management agreed to cut the scene from the film in the time specified by Judge Dowd. In fact, the management had already agreed, on suggestion of Mayor Curley, to cut this scene from the film.

The committee that sought to have the play stopped through Judge Dowd lost no time in making another effort along a different line. They went directly to the State House and were given a hearing by the Committee on Rules, which has under consideration a bill, the enactment of which would stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in this State.

After Judge Dowd's decision Police Commissioner O'Meara informed Mayor Curley that if the objectionable scene was not cut out in this afternoon's performance he would have the play stopped.

Then it transpired through a communication to the press that Martin Littleton of New York, a legal representative of the corporation, which is producing the film, had come over to consult with Mayor Curley Tuesday afternoon and that on request of the Mayor, it had been decided to eliminate the very scene objected to by Judge Dowd.

Meantime the afternoon performance at the Tremont Theatre went on as it has been going to a crowded house and without disturbance. The same was true of the evening performance. The house was sold out for the evening performance 15 minutes before the curtain went up.

A number of policemen were present both inside and outside the theatre, but those outside returned to the station before 9 o'clock, as there were not a half dozen persons in front of the theatre.

Manager J. J. McCarthy said: "Judge Dowd's mandate will be obeyed to the letter."

FOR ADMISSION OF BILL.

House Committee on Rules Votes on Measure to Forbid Plays Exciting Racial Prejudice.

The House Committee on Rules of the Massachusetts Legislature yesterday afternoon voted to admit the bill directed at the "Birth of a Nation," which measure provides for an amendment to the existing statutes by the addition of the clause "or any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

Filled with dissatisfaction at the decision of Judge Dowd in the Municipal Court, fully 200 colored men and women made their way up to the State House about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon where they waited until the Rules Committee could convene and give a hearing on the bill filed yesterday by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan and which has been described above.

Conspicuous among those who urged the admission of the Sullivan bill or one of similar purport was Lieut Gov Grafton D. Cushing.

Lieut Gov Cushing put it squarely up to the committee to act. "I am familiar with Legislature procedure," he said, "and I know that it ought not to take more than two or three days to pass a measure which will give the proper authority to the proper officials.

"I have not been to see the play because my curiosity does not run along that line, but I am certainly opposed to the production of anything that tends to stir up race hatred and prejudice. You can readily see from the numbers gathered here today that there is necessity for some action."

Representative Sullivan, Representative Fred P. Greenwood, Rolfe Cobleigh, Sherwin L. Cook, Clement G. Morgan, William H. Lewis, Joseph C. Manning, an ex-member of the Alabama Legislature; Butler R. Wilson, William D. Brigham, William Monroe Trotter and Rev Benjamin W. Swain were among those who favored the bill. Several of the speakers came under the auspices of the National Independence Equal Rights League and were introduced by Joshua A. Crawford, treasurer of the Boston branch of that organization.

Only one opponent appeared. He was a young man who gave the name of Richard A. Callahan. Mr Callahan, in a brief speech, said: "I think this is more the outcome of the Willard-Johnson fight than anything else. I know the night after the fight a bunch of negroes tackled me on Shawmut av and beat me up. I think they're just looking for trouble." Several attempts were made to interrupt Callahan with questions, so he cut short what he had to say and took his seat.

Prior to the hearing Mr Trotter led a delegation in to see Gov Walsh. The Governor advised them to appear before the Committee on Rules and, if the Sullivan bill was admitted, to ask for such an amendment as seemed necessary to accomplish the desired end. At the conclusion of the hearing the delegation returned to the Governor again.

Mr Trotter stated later that the delegation had told the Governor that the appeal to the court had not resulted satisfactorily to them. That the Governor again promised them to use his influence in behalf of a new bill governing the censorship of plays.

SCENE WILL BE CUT OUT.

Mayor Says This Will Remove Only Cause of Complaint With "Any Semblance of Justice."

Mayor Curley announced last night in relation to "The Birth of a Nation" that the management of the Tremont Theatre had agreed to comply with his original suggestion, namely, that the part of the film which depicts the negro, Gus, chasing a white girl, be eliminated.

Said the Mayor: "This will remove the only cause of complaint which has any semblance of justice, and it will not impair the value or attractiveness of the play in the slighest degree. This concession on the part of the management is not required by law, as I am advised, and the fact that it is voluntary on the part of the management is creditable to them.

"So much has been said in criticism of my action in this case, and so unjustly, that I request the press, in fairness to me, to emphasize the fact that the elimination, which has now been assented to, was suggested by me in the beginning. The law did not require me to suggest any elimination, as the opinions of the censors of the Mayor's office and the Police Commissioner established the legality of the play.

"I am glad to learn that the judge who has heard the evidence of both sides in the case has confirmed my view that only the scene in question could possibly be regarded as offensive in the eye of the law and it would be well if all public officials, like the judge in the case, would decline to decide important questions onhand on the exparte statements of witnesses who are laboring under the stress of violent emotions."

O'MEARA WRITES TO CURLEY.

Gives Notice That Section of the Production Is Considered Injurious to Morals.

Soon after Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court announced that if within 24 hours the scene in the "Birth of a Nation" which he thought was a violation of the statutes was not eliminated from that production a summons would issue for the management of the Tremont Theatre and of the production, Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara prepared a letter to Mayor Curley.

This letter says that "guided by the finding of the court," and as authorized by the statutes, he states that the section of the production mentioned is "obscene, or immoral, or tends to injure the morals of the community."

This formal communication that the part of the performance meant is covered by the statutes placed the Mayor in a position to order the theatre closed if the part of the film to which objection is made is not eliminated.

The commissioner in his letter says he received a letter April 17, signed by Moorfield Storey, rejecting the tests of immorality usually applied to stage performances and protesting that the play "shown as it is multitudes of children and young people who know nothing of the truth will exercise a baneful influence upon them and make them hate their neighbors."

The commissioner says he offered to have an officer apply for a warrant if Mr Storey or other counsel would state the case and cause the necessary evidence to be presented. He said Mr Storey declined in writing to proceed with the matter personally, but other lawyers accepted the proposal and the plan was carried out.

GIVES 24 HOURS TO DO IT.

Judge Dowd Announces as Soon as Court Opens That Photo-Play Must Be Cut.

The matter of granting warrants against the producers of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," came up on continuance before Judge Thomas Dowd in a special session of the Municipal Criminal Court yesterday morning, but without hearing additional evidence beyond that presented Monday he declared:

"I will give the management 24 hours to eliminate the objectionable scene wherein the degenerate negro pursues the white girl, who throws herself from the top of a cliff, and if this is not done a summons will issue. I have rendered my decision and will not change it. If it is not satisfactory to you you must take it to a higher authority.

"I don't think the question of race is involved," he continued. "It is a question entirely of the decency and the morality of the play. The element of race has not been considered in reaching a decision. I am convinced that the statute covers this play. There is one scene which is offensive and immoral. This is the scene where the renegade and degenerate negro 'Gus' pursues a child of 12 years, with an expression upon his face which leaves no doubt of his state of mind. There is not any question of his purpose in pursuing the white girl. He is plainly actuated by the lowest passions of mankind. This would be the same were he a white man."

With the exception of that scene he said the play was within the law.

Judge Dowd said the objectionable scene must be removed from the film by 2:30 this afternoon or he would issue a summons.

Arguments in the matter were heard, in spite of the judge's previous declaration, attorney Hallowell pleading for the granting of warrants, saying that the play placed the colored race in a false light and that it was not a play of the reconstruction period, but a rank slander on history. Attorney Cusick for the company denied the allegations made by Mr Hallowell.

After hearing the arguments Judge Dowd announced that he would make a final decision in the matter at 2 o'clock.

When court opened in the afternoon Judge Dowd confirmed his decision given earlier in the day. A crowd gathered about the Courthouse and anxiously awaited the judge's decision in the afternoon but remained order[illegible]

WALTHAM (Mass.) NEWS
April 22 1915

To stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" will be a difficult task. Only by the most drastic stretch of the imagination can any of its scenes be called obscene or suggestive, and in however poor taste it may be, in that it is calculated, and apparently deliberately calculated, to arouse the passions of the Negroes, there is no law regulating taste except the law of public opinion. It is probably impossible for the average white man to appreciate the intensity of the feeling aroused. It may be reprehensible but it is natural, and while the majority race may not be in full sympathy with their colored brethren, and may think they are over-sensitive, it is the part of good sense and human decency to avoid injuring [illegible] by such exhibitions.

EVENING RECORD
ss: Boston, Mass.
APR 22 1915

New Movies Board Not Practical

Cox Points Out the Difficulties

If the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," is allowed to continue, there may yet be a lynching on Boston Common, said ex-Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. William H. Lewis, before the Senate Ways and Means Committee, at the hearing on the Carstens bill transferring the censorship of moving pictures to the State Board of Labor and Industries.

The hearing was a continued one, but was very short because the Senate had a morning session. Mr. Lewis declared that he did not believe any theatre management has the right to produce anywhere a photo play that reflects injuriously on the character of any individual for the reason that the production of such a film leads to a disturbance of the peace, order and happiness of the whole community.

A decent respect, he said, should be paid to all the classes that make up American citizenship.

Referring to the film now being shown of the "Birth of a Nation," Lewis declared that it was a libel on American history, a vile calumny of the colored race and reflects seriously on the commonwealth of Massachusetts and its ideals.

"It is calculated," he said, "to arouse sympathy with the 'lynch law' of the South.

"If this thing keeps on," said Mr. Lewis, "we may have a lynching on Boston Common, who knows?"

Mr. Lewis said that the scenes depicted in the film never happened and characterized the whole production as a villainous lie.

Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the national board of censorship, submitted testimony showing that the proposed law is unwise.

Cox Points Out Some Practical Difficulties

Mr. Cox questioned whether the government could properly step in as the supervising agent in a matter having to do with the public morals and cited numerous obstacles that would confront a small board of three men appointed to censor all the films shown in a state as large as Massachusetts.

The censoring of moving pictures, Mr. Cox said, is attended with enormous eye strain and a tired person would be unable to decide nice questions of morality that would be continually cropping up in the pictures. A person would be unable to detect, he said, the fine moral points in two pictures shown simultaneously, and he doubted if one individual could pass on more than three reels an hour if the proper attention were to be given to the moral side of the subjects.

Mr. Cox said he believed there should be a large amount of freedom in the moving pictures as there is in the press and speech and declared that it is inevitable that sects and classes will sometimes be dissatisfied with the production of certain films.

To delegate to three persons, Mr. Cox said, with their personal whims and idiosyncrasies the business of passing upon moral questions for 3,500,000 inhabitants of the state is embarking on a programme dangerous from the standpoint of democracy.

Mr. Cox in the course of questions put by Senator Sheehan of Holyoke said the film referred to had been passed by the National Board of Censorship after it had been revised to meet certain specific objections.

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 22 1915

JUDGE DOWD'S DECISION

The management of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," takes the correct action in promptly accepting the decision of Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court without attempting any appeal to a higher court. That portion of the film which the court denounces, and which has been the chief cause of the indignant protests, is to be eliminated.

This settlement of the matter may not be entirely satisfactory to the extremists among the critics of the production, but it apparently meets the actual requirements of the law.

As the Post has heretofore remarked, it was very unfortunate that so notable a development of the moving picture art should have been marred by ill-advised and unjust reflections upon the negro race. But the incident serves to demonstrate that in this city the colored element of the population, in its steady and commendable upward progress, has attained a position and influence that command respect.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 22 1915

Wants Probe Of Cost of Boston Gas

Sullivan Would See If Company Is Controlled by a Voluntary Assn.

Another move for cheaper gas in Boston was made by Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan in the House this morning. He offered an order for an investigation by the gas and electric light commissioners of the cost of producing gas for Boston, particularly as to whether it has been increased or reduced since 1906, when the sliding scale went into effect. It also inquired if the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. is controlled by a voluntary association and relative to the financial relations of the company with such association. The order was referred to the committee on rules.

The Sullivan amendment to Chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910, which would allow the authorities to bar the "Birth of a Nation" photoplay was allowed entrance by the Committee on Rules, and was then referred to the Committee on Judiciary. The bill now goes to the Senate for concurrence on the suspension of the rules permitting its entrance into the Legislature and also for concurrence in the reference to the committee.

Both the Senate and House adjourned at 2 p.m. by special vote in order to attend the ball game as guests of the management.

The vote passing the "jitney bus" bill to engrossment was reconsidered in order that the opinion of the attorney-general may be received. The bill to make workmen's compensation compulsory upon all employers was rejected.

CHELSEA (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 22, 1915

COURT ORDERS ONE SCENE ELIMINATED

No Warrant For Producers of "Birth of a Nation."

Boston, April 22.—With the elimination of one scene, the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," that is being produced at the Tremont theatre, will go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, representing the owner of the film, as asked by Boston negroes.

This was the decision announced by Judge Dowd when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony, for he had himself viewed the film.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a negro is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a hill and is killed.

REVIEW
ATLANTIC CITY, N J
APR 22 191

BOSTON, MASS.

Boston, Mass., April 21.—The GLOBE says:—

Judge Dowd to-day gave producers of "The Birth of a Nation" until 2.30 to-morrow to eliminate one objectionable scene, failure to do which will result in a warrant of arrest.

The bill for seventy-cent gas in Boston was beaten in the House to-day, 92 to 35.

R. W. Emmons, 2d, announced to-day that the cup defender yacht Resolute and Vanitie will have four weeks of racing in July and August.

The 130th annual session of the Massachusetts Episcopal Diocese Convention opened to-day, with an address by Bishop Lawrence, reports and matter of administration occupied the balance of the day.

Action toward a monument to Ex-Governor Curtis Guild will be taken at a meeting to-morrow.

Captain Walter I. Rrand was thought found guilty of fraud in selling thousands of "lucky stones" at $1 each.

SUN
Lawrence, Mass
APR 22 1915

The "Birth of a Nation" which brought forth a "near riot" in Boston Saturday night still hold the boards at the Tremont theatre and for a time at least S. R. O. signs may be expected daily. What a lot of free advertising has come to the Tremont.

NORTHAMPTON (Mass.) HERALD
APRIL 22, 1915

THEATER MEN TO ELIMINATE PART OF PHOTO-PLAY

"Birth of a Nation" Controversy in Boston Seems to be Practically Brought to an End

BOSTON, April 22.—"The Birth of a Nation" will be given without interference, but with a single scene cut out—that showing the negro, Gus, pursuing a 12-year-old white child till she jumps over a cliff to escape his attack.

Judge Thomas H. Dowd has decided that he would not issue the summonses for John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont theater or for J. J. McCarthy, representing the film owner, provided they agree to eliminat this scene.

The scene was not cut out at last night's performance. Judge Dowd has given the management till 2.30 today in which to do so. That the management intends to comply fully is shown by a statement issued from the theater.

The following statement was issued by the management of "The Birth of a Nation:"

"In full accordance with the decision of Judge Thomas H. Dowd of the Municipal court, an arrangement has been reached between Mayor Curley and the management of 'The Birth of a Nation' company, whereby the scene of the girl, Flora, being pursued by a negro, will be cut out of the film.

"This matter has been under advisement between the parties for about 10 days.

"After going over this part of the story thoroughly, it was found that dropping the pursuit episode would in no way interfere with the logical progress and development of the drama."

William Munroe Trotter, a leader of the Boston colored people, said, referring to Judge Dowd's demand and the play:

"This is the less objectionable of two scenes. The worst one is retained—that showing a colored man forcing a white woman into marriage. We might excuse the brutality of the uneducated negro in the excised scene, but the one showing the educatd negro full of the same instincts is a libel and a vilification.

"The scene that is to be cut out is only one in a mass of injurious perversion scattered through two hours and a half."

NORTHAMPTON (Mass.) HERALD
APRIL 22, 1915

TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT

It looks now as if the trouble that has arisen over the big photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," will subside, and that the films can be shown in Boston without any interference on the part of any body of people of any particular race. It is well that any further controversy over this subject should come to an end.

Mayor Curley of Boston, however, probably for the sake of offering a slur at Gov. Walsh, does not seem to be wholly reconciled to the practical agreement reached between the court and the management of the theater, and it really looks as if he would like to see more trouble. He says that the people who have objected to the picture-play are inclined to look upon the elimination of the single scene as merely a palliative, and not a justification of their complaints. However, under the law prohibiting improper pictures, Judge Dowd explained that only this scene could be objected to, and he therefore ordered its elimination. This is not the proper attitude for the executive of a city to assume. He should rather congratulate all concerned that a way has ben found to eliminate friction.

The cutting out of a scene, which, in the opinion of the court is offensive to some people, shows that the theater management is willing to do the right thing. As a matter of it is hardly probable that any part of the film can come within the provision of the statute, but in deference to public opinion certain concessions are willingly made. Now let the unpleasant incident be closed.

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 22, 1915

PROTESTED FILM SCENE CUT AFTER COURT WARNING

Legislative Committee Takes Up Bill Aimed to Censor Plays Arousing Race Prejudice or Disturbing Peace

Complying with a warning given by Judge Thomas H. Dowd Wednesday, the management of the photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now being presented in a local theater, today announced that the episode showing the pursuit of a white girl by a negro has been cut out. According to Judge Dowd's ruling of yesterday, this action will result in the dismissal of an application for court summons of the management on a charge of offering a theatrical entertainment immoral in tendency.

In making his ruling yesterday, Judge Dowd said that under the statute invoked by the complainants against the film only moral phases of the situation could be considered, since the statute makes no mention of the arousal of race prejudice or religious prejudice by a theatrical performance as being actionable.

Propose Amendment

The Lewis J. Sullivan bill, filed Tuesday at the State House, aims to provide an amendment to cover just such complaints as those entered against "The Birth of a Nation," by the addition to the existing statute, which prohibits all entertainments of immoral tendency, the clause "or any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

The committee on rules gave a hearing yesterday afternoon on the question of the admission of this amendment for consideration at the present session. Fully 300 persons, mostly negroes, attended.

Lieutenant-Governor Cushing was prominent among those who argued for the admission of the amendment, saying that appropriate legislation could be put through in three or four days under suspension of the rules. He said: "I have not been to see the play because my curiosity does not run along that line, but I am certainly opposed to the production of anything that tends to stir up race prejudice. You can readily see from the numbers gathered here today that there is necessity for some action."

Representative Sullivan, Representative Fred P. Greenwood, Rolfe Cobleigh, Sherwin L. Cook, Clement G. Morgan, William H. Lewis, Joseph C. Manning, an ex-member of the Alabama Legislature; Butler R. Wilson, William D. Brigham, William Munroe Trotter and the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain were among those who favored the bill. Several of the speakers came under the auspices of the National Independence Equal Rights League, and were introduced by Joshua A. Crawford, treasurer of the Boston branch of that organization.

A delegation of negroes then waited on the Governor, and were assured by him that he would use every influence to secure state laws aimed at broader regulation and censorship of plays.

Mayor Asked Cut

It has developed that Mayor Curley 10 days ago requested the film play management to eliminate the scene that has now been finally cut, but that the management postponed action by keeping up "negotiations" with the mayor's office.

In commenting up the case before making his ruling, Judge Dowd said that complaints against "The Birth of the Nation" would have to be considered under the law purely in their moral aspects, without consideration of race distinctions.

He continued to the effect that there should be a more inclusive censorship of motion picture plays and other theatrical entertainments, because of the too frequent portrayal of disgusting, and shocking episodes.

In his opinion no person under 18 should be permitted to see "The Birth of a Nation" or any of numerous theatrical offerings that are steadily current in local places of amusement. Despite the frequent performance of photo plays of commendable ethical quality, this form of entertainment has almost forfeited its claim to educational value because of the numerous motion pictures that portray incidents of plunder and other sensational scenes of violence, he said.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
APRIL 22, 1915

Municipal Court Judge ... of Boston voiced a ... and ... ple yesterday when, in an ... his decision on the applica... ing his decision on the applica... tion for summons for the proprie... tors of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," he declared that "the law knows no race nor creed in Massachusetts." In other words the law is the same for all men, of whatever race, color, condition or religious belief. It cannot be invoked especially and exclusively in behalf of one class and to the detriment or injury of another. His decision in regard to the play itself was also sound and sensible. He refused to entertain a complaint against the proprietors and ruled that the pictures may be displayed if one objectionable scene is eliminated. It was this scene alone that cause the violent protest of the colored people of Boston and their white sympathizers; the rest of the play is not only unobjectionable but really instructive, artistic and inspiring. With the elimination of the offending portion of the production the people of Boston, white or colored will have no further cause for complaint, and what is good in the play will continue to be shown for the entertainment and edification of all persons that care to see it.

Call. N.Y. Apr 22/15

,000 Demand Close Of Anti-Negro Film

18

From The Call's Boston Bureau.

BOSTON, April 21.—"The Birth of a Nation" photo play premiered with ... tense ... ...

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 22, 1915

The photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," will continue at the Tremont Theatre, this afternoon, following the decision of Judge Dowd in the Municipal Court. The management will eliminate that scene of the film which portrays the pursuit of the young white girl by the renegade negro, "Gus." This the producers had previously decided to do upon the suggestion of Mayor Curley.

Judge Dowd viewed the pictures Tuesday night and when he continued the hearing yesterday morning informed both the defendant and complainants that he would render a decision in the afternoon, and on what he had seen only. Long before the doors of the courtroom were opened the corridors and anteroom were jammed with spectators, a large majority of whom were negroes. The courtroom was closed to all but lawyers and newspaper men. Even then these men practically had to fight their way through the immense throng around the courtroom doors. The exclusion of spectators caused some ill feeling in the crowd. At Tuesday's hearing colored women were even sitting on the floor about the judge's bench.

Praises Photo-Play

In his decision yesterday, Judge Dowd asserted that the proto-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was one of the best he had ever witnessed, save for the part where the negro chases the young white girl, and which he has decided should be eliminated.

The court also cautioned the negroes against any demonstration. He said: "The place for redress is in the courts not on the street, with your fists. If this occurs, we have police officers, vested with the proper authority by the courts."

Judge Dowd handed down his decision shortly after 2 o'clock. There was a short wait before Attorneys Graham and John F. Cusick, for the defense, arrived. Then Judge Dowd said:

"This is not a case where color or race is concerned. It is the question of the decency and morality of this play. The element of race does not enter into the controversy at all, for the law knows no race or creed in Massachusetts. The only question is, 'Does the production of the play violate the law?' I have seen the play and I am of the opinion that it does violate the law. The only objectionable scene is that in which the negro pursues the white girl, who throws herself from the top of the cliff, and if this is not done, a summons will issue. That is the decision of this court, gentlemen."

"When does this 24 hours begin, your honor?" asked Attorney Cusick.

"It is now 2.30 o'clock," said Judge Dowd. "The scene must be eliminated by 2.30 tomorrow afternoon. The play after that will be liable to censorship.'

There was some demonstration among the throng of negroes gathered outside the court room when they heard the decision. They were quickly hurried away from the doors, however, by the court officers.

Management to Comply

The management of the Tremont Theatre and "The Birth of a Nation" declared yesterday afternoon, just after the decision of Judge Dowd, that an arrangement had already been made between Mayor Curley and the management of the film company whereby the scene of the pursuit would be cut from the film. This matter had been under advisement of both parties for about ten days, so they asserted.

Yesterday a conference was held between the mayor and one of the company's New York managers, Martin W. Littleton, a former colleague of the mayor's in Washington, who came to Boston for the purpose. After going over this part of the story thoroughly it was found that dropping the pursuit episode would in no way interfere with the logical progress and development of the drama.

Mayor Curley issued the following statement last evening:

"I am pleased to announce that the management of the Tremont Theatre has agreed to comply with my original suggestion that the part of the film which depicts the negro, Gus, chasing a white girl, be eliminated. This will remove the only cause of complaint which has any semblance of justice, and it will not impair the value or attractiveness of the play in the slightest degree. This concession on the part of the management is not required by law, as I am advised, and the fact that it is voluntary on the part of the management is creditable to them.

"So much has been said in criticism of my action in this case, and so unjustly, that I request the press, in fairness to me, to emphasize the fact that the elimination, which has now been assented to, was suggested by me in the beginning. The law did not require me to suggest any elimination as the opinions of the censors of the mayor's office and the police commissioner established the legality of the play.

"I am glad to learn that the judge who has heard the evidence of both sides in the case has confirmed my view that only the scene in question could possibly be regarded as offensive in the eye of the law, and it would be well if all public officials, like the judge in the case, would decline to decide important questions offhand on the ex-parte statements of witnesses who are laboring under the stress of violent emotions."

Police Commissioner O'Meara last night sent a letter to Mayor Curley, in which he asserted that the part of the photo-play objected to by Judge Dowd was "obscene or immoral, and tends to injure the morals of the community." In his communication, the commissioner tells of receiving a letter from Moorfield Storey, asking him to stop the play.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 22, 1915

THEATRE TO OBEY COURT

Pursuit Scene to Be Eliminated—Mayor Takes Rap at Governor for Attitude Toward Photoplay

"The Birth of a Nation" will be given without interference, but with a single scene cut out—that showing the negro, Gus, pursuing a 12-year-old white child till she jumps over a cliff to escape his attack.

Judge Thomas H. Dowd yesterday decided that he would not issue the summonses for John B. Schoeffel, manger of the Tremont Theatre, or for J. J. McCarthy, representing the film owner, provided they agree to eliminate this scene.

The scene was not cut out at last night's performance. Judge Dowd has given the management till 2:30 today in which to do so. That the management intends to comply fully is shown by a statement issued last night from the theatre.

RAP AT GOVERNOR

The excitement of the day was occasioned by the lively hearing at the State House on the bill proposed by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan, and intended to prohibit the showing of "inciting" or offensive pictures or plays.

A statement issued by Mayor Curley—in which was concealed what some regard as a rap at Governor Walsh—added to the tenseness of the situation.

The colored people who have objected to the picture-play are inclined to look upon the elimination of the single scene as merely a palliative, and not a justification of their complaints. However, under the law prohibiting obscene pictures, Judge Dowd explained that only this scene could be objected to, and he therefore ordered its elimination.

The following statement was issued yesterday afternoon by the management of "The Birth of a Nation":

Theatre's Statement

"In full accordance with the decision of Judge Thomas H. Dowd of the Municipal Court, an arrangement has been reached between Mayor Curley and the management of 'The Birth of a Nation' Company, whereby the scene of the girl, Flora, being pursued by an negro, will be cut out of the film. This matter has been under advisement between the parties for about 10 days.

"Yesterday a conference was held between the Mayor and one of the company's New York managers, the Hon. Martin W. Littleton, a former colleague of the Mayor in Congress, who came up for that purpose. After going over this part of the story thoroughly, it was found that dropping the pursuit episode would in no way interfere with the logical progress and development of the drama. The Mayor congratulated the management on the voluntary agreement made. He thought the story would be more closely knit together by omitting this somewhat time-worn 'movie' motif of a chase, while, at the same time, the removal of the episode is in deference to the wishes of several persons who have written the Mayor and pointed out that the play would be far more meritorious and, to their thinking, more seemly without it.

Will Eliminate Scene

"Counsel has just informed the management that the court in the complaints against John B. Schoeffel and J. J. McCarthy has made a finding in substance that after viewing the show and hearing the evidence he does not believe that any part of the show comes within the Act of 1910, except that scene which represents the pursuit of the young girl by the negro, and the court has made a finding that if that scene is eliminated the complaints will not be entertained by the court. Counsel advises the management that in his opinion no part of this show is within the meaning of that statute, including this scene which is going to be eliminated, but in view of the negotiations of the management with Mayor Curley and the striking coincidence of the opinion of the court with the Mayor's suggestion, the management has decided to eliminate it."

There was no excitement last night at the theatre. The number of policemen was cut down and the crowd loitering outside consisted entirely of white persons. The audience numbered comparatively few negroes.

The cutting out of the one scene leaves the play, declare many of the leading colored people, practically where it was in atmosphere and flavor. They therefore are pinning all their hopes on the passage of Sullivan's bill, or one similar to it, which would prohibit any plays or movies that are offensive to any race or portion of the citizenship.

Play Still Objectionable

William Munroe Trotter, a leader of the Boston colored people, last night said, referring to Judge Dowd's demand and the play:

"This is the less objectionable of two scenes. The worst one is retained—that showing a colored man forcing a white woman into marriage. We might excuse the brutality of the uneducated negro in the excised scene, but the one showing the educated negro full of the same instincts is a libel and a vilification. The scene that is to be cut out is only one in a mass of infamous perversion scattered through two hours and a half."

With this in mind, a committee, Joshua Crawford, Clement G. Morgan and W. Munroe Trotter, called on Governor Walsh yesterday and asked him to send a special message to the Legislature in support of some such measure as the Sullivan bill.

Governor Walsh replied that he could take the matter under consideration. He informed the committee that he was heartily in favor of putting the censorship of plays and moving pictures wholly into the hands of the mayor, as it is done in most other cities in the Commonwealth. He said he doubted the value of dividing responsibility, as Boston does, between the Mayor and the police. He believed, he said, in giving the Mayor the widest latitude in such matters.

Hearing at State House

The interview with Governor Walsh preceded the hearing, which began at 2 o'clock, before the legislative committee on rules. A big crowd was unable to gain admittance to the hearing, which was conducted at the request of the Boston branch of the National Independent Equal Rights League.

As a result of the hearing, the committee voted unanimously to admit the petition.

Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing was present at the hearing, and declared his willingness to assist the colored people in drafting a bill which will cover the desired ground if the petition were admitted. He said:

"I have not seen the play because my curiosity does not run along that line, but I am certainly opposed to the production of anything that tends to stir up race hatred and prejudice. You can readily see, from the numbers here today, that there is necessity for some action."

Representative Sullivan's petition is designated to prevent the exhibition of theatrical performances or moving picture plays that would tend to "incite racial or religious prejudices" or disturb the public peace. Appearing in favor of the petition were Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston, the petitioner; Sherwin L. Cook, Clement G. Morgan, Representative Fred P. Greenwood, William H. Lewis, Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature; Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing, Butler R. Wilson, William D. Brigham, William Munroe Trotter, the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, and others.

Want Authority Changed

The colored people were not wholly satisfied with the Sullivan petition, for it simply provided for court redress. While provision was thus made for the interference with exhibitions through more or less lengthy legal processes, there was no provision made for the immediate suppression of such plays by some authorized person, and it left the authority where it now rests, in the hands of the Mayor and police. The colored people are anxious to make one man responsible, with power to act, and it was to gain the Governor's support in this matter that they called upon him and asked his views.

When Richard A. Callahan—the only objector to the bill, and who said that negroes had beaten him up after the Willard-Johnson fight—said that he thought the "negroes were looking for trouble," and added—sotto voce—that "he thought they were likely to get it!" Several colored men rose to their feet, hisses were audible, and it looked as though there might be trouble.

Sherwin Cook, an attorney, demanded that this remark be included in the records of the hearing, but the chairman ruled that it should not be, and ordered it stricken out.

Callahan declared that all the trouble was being caused, not so much by the play, "The Birth of a Nation," as by the activities of the negroes themselves. He then made the remark that furnished the thrill of the hearing.

Quotes Author of Novel

Rolfe Cobley, a speaker, declared he had talked with Thomas Dixon, author of the novel, "The Clansman," from which the play was dramatized, and that Dixon had actually informed him that the purpose of the play was to exterminate the colored race in America.

William H. Lewis, former Harvard football star, declared before the committee that his race is patient and long suffering as a rule, but are aroused today as they have never been before in Boston. He said the producers of the play are the real disturbers of the peace, and that the colored people would not be worthy of consideration

Not Compelled to Act

"So much has been said in criticism of my action in this case, and so unjustly, that I request the press, in fairness to me, to emphasize the fact that the elimination which has now been assented to was suggested by me in the beginning. The law did not require me to suggest any elimination as the opinions of the censors of the Mayor's office and the police commissioner established the legality of the play.

"I am glad to learn that the judge who has heard the evidence of both sides in the case has confirmed my view that only the scene in question could possibly be regarded as offensive in the eye of the law, and it would be well if all public officials, like the judge in the case, would decline to decide important questions offhand on the ex-parte statements of witnesses who are laboring under the stress of violent emotions."

In a letter to Mayor Curley, made public last night, Police Commissioner O'Meara tells of his part in the matter at length. The letter is written to the Mayor voluntarily, in order that he may be familiar with what transpired.

O'Meara Reviews Case

Commissioner O'Meara says that on April 9, Mr. Casey, the Mayor's secretary, asked him to send someone to see the play, but the commissioner informed him that as the play was said to be a "public exhibition," as defined by Chapter 264, Acts of 1913, he would not act officially, but agreed to let his secretary to see the play if he wished, and report privately to Mr. Casey. This was done.

On April 17 the commissioner received a letter from Moorfield Storey, in which Mr. Storey rejected the ordinary interpretation of the word "immoral" as applied to stage performances, and quoted to the commissioner a much broader dictionary meaning.

Mr. O'Meara, in reply, to make sure of the actual meaning of the word in law, offered to meet Mr. Storey before the courts and apply for a warrant for the theatre manager's arrest on a charge of using the "immorality" code. Mr. Storey replied that he would not go any further in the matter, but, with others, for years, the proposal was carried out, with the decision of Judge Dowd follows.

THEATRE BILL IS ADMITTED TO HOUSE

The protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" was made more emphatic yesterday when the House committee on rules, after a hearing, voted unanimously to admit the Sullivan bill to prohibit entertainments tending to produce racial or religious prejudice for consideration by the Legislature.

Lieut. Gov. Cushing appeared before the committee in advocacy of the admission of the bill.

"I have not seen the play," he said, "because my curiosity does not run along that line, but I am certainly opposed to the production of anything that tends to stir up race hatred and prejudice. You can readily see from the numbers gathered here today that there is necessity for some action."

The lieutenant governor emphasized the importance of admitting the Sullivan petition and bill and the quick passage of legislation to stop the production.

Following the hearing before the rules committee, several colored men conferred with the governor again, informed him of their appearance before the committee, the action of Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court, and asked him to send a special message to the Legislature urging the passage of a bill to stop the production.

The governor read the Sullivan bill and remarked:

"This measure is all right as far as it goes, but you should also see to it that legislation is passed which will make the laws now in force in the other cities of the State applicable in Boston.

Regarding the special message, the governor said:

"I think you had better leave it to me to decide when a special message is necessary. I have found that many times the special message is more effective when opposition develops to the passage of any particular measure. Leave that matter with me, now that your proposition is to come before the Legislature under the form of a bill."

The delegation present was unanimous in its agreement with the governor and there were further expressions of gratitude to him for the assistance he has rendered.

At the hearing before the rules committee, the largest hearing room in the State House was packed with negroes and their supporters.

Ralph Cobleigh, white, said he had a talk with Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," in which the latter admitted his motive was definitely to create race prejudice.

William H. Lewis, former assistant United States district attorney, reviewed the incidents in the play as tending to arouse race prejudice, and emphasized the contemptuous manner in which the colored soldiery is depicted.

"If those pictures suggest the colored soldier," he said, "tear down the Shaw monument at once. It is but a mockery."

LEOMINSTER (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
APRIL 22, 1915

PHOTO-PLAY TO CONTINUE

One Scene to Be Eliminated From "Birth of a Nation"

Boston, April 22.—With the elimination of one scene, the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," that is being produced at the Tremont theatre, will go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, representing the owner of the film, as asked by Boston negroes.

This was the decision announced by Judge Dowd when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony, for he had himself viewed the film.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a negro is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed.

Telegram
PORTLAND, OREGON
APR 2[illegible] 191[illegible]

Pictures Barred on Sunday.

The state police of Massachusetts have decided there must be no Sunday exhibitions of the film, "The Birth of a Nation." Mayor Curley, of Boston, has been appealed to, but has announced he has no jurisdiction. The state police have authority only over Sunday exhibitions. Protests had been filed with the state police by negroes who object to the film.

TON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD 1702
APRIL 22, 1915

CHASE SCENE IS CUT FROM FILM AS IMMORAL

Negroes Still Incensed at "The Birth of a Nation" Exhibits and Are Working to Have Law Amended Quickly so That the Entire Play May Be Prohibited.

A statement was sent out from the Tremont Theatre last night, saying that the managers of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," in their agreements with Mayor Curley and Judge Dowd of the municipal court, and will eliminate the episode wherein the Negro character "Gus" pursues a white girl until she dashes herself over a cliff.

This was the scene Judge Dowd earlier in the day declared "immoral and obscene." He said that if it were eliminated, no summonses would be issued against the producers. He based his finding on his view of the picture at the Tremont Theatre Tuesday night. While other parts, he said, might be of a nature to incite the colored people to protest, they do not come within the scope of the Massachusetts law, which knows neither race nor creed.

Before the ruling was given, an attempt to amend the law in this respect was begun before the legislative committee on rules at the State House. A large gathering of colored people appeared in room 240 and asked that the committee permit a late entry of the petition of Representative L. H. Sullivan of Dorchester. This petition would confer on authorities the right to stop any performance which tends to create religious or racial feeling. The present law provides only against indecency.

Favored by Cushing.

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing appeared as its champion. "We must get speedy action on this matter," he said. "From my own experiences, I know that there is no reason why the proper bill cannot be put through within three or four days."

The committee room was thronged throughout the hearing and several speeches were made. Mrs. Alice W. Kane, a colored woman, said:

"Forget that I am a Negress, forget that I am black; consider me a Jewish woman, an Irish woman, or of any race that you will, but listen to me in my plea for justice. For 300 years the colored men have been loyal, and now I ask you to come forward and give them the protection from insult that they desire."

Among those present who spoke were Sherwin L. Cook, Clement G. Morgan, Representative Fred P. Greenwood, William H. Lewis, Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature; Butler Wilson, William D. Brigham, William Munroe Trotter, the Rev. Benjamin Swain.

Lays Trouble to Willard.

The only opponent was Richard A. Callahan, who said he had been beaten up by Negroes the night after the Willard-Johnson fight and he said he thought the fight had more to do with the activities of the Negroes than the "Birth of a Nation."

The speakers, most of whom had seen the performance, declared that the play is cleverly designed to stir up racial hatred against the colored people. They objected, perhaps most of all, to the scene in which the brother of the girl, who has cast herself over the cliff, dips a stick in the girl's blood and dashes it before the Ku Klux Klan, to inflame them into seeking revenge against the renegade "Gus."

"As a result the Klan rushes madly after the Negro, and nothing in the photo-play excites more applause than that scene. It is patently a glorification of the lynch law and can have no other effect than to create a favorable impression for mob law. We hold, I believe rightly, that it is immoral within the meaning of the statute, to glorify mob rule, that it is subversive to our theories of government by law.

"I have heard that Thomas Dixon, Jr., author of 'The Clansman,' on which the photoplay is based, declared in Boston within two weeks, that if the piece was permitted to continue in Boston, it could be shown in any city in the country. He said, according to my informant, that he did not care whether the photoplay made money here or not. All he wanted was to see it passed here.

"I therefore contend that the attempt to present that play here is an attempt to gather money at the expense of the feelings of thousands of citizens of this state."

Negroes Throng Corridors.

Judge Dowd's decision came at the resumption of the hearing begun Tuesday afternoon. Hundreds of Negroes and white people thronged the corridors, eager to obtain admission to the proceedings, and to prevent the courtroom being overcrowded, the doors were locked and witnesses and other interested persons were admitted through a side entrance. To this gathering Judge Dowd announced that he had seen the photoplay on Tuesday evening, and that he considered the taking of further testimony unnecessary. He said:

"This is not a question of race or creed. It deals solely with the morality of the play, for the laws of Massachusetts know no race or creed. The question is: Does this play violate a statute?

"I am convinced that there is one scene that is obscene and immoral. That is the scene in which 'Gus,' the renegade Negro pursues the white girl up the cliff. Animal passion is written all over his face, and it is patent that he is actuated by the lowest motives. Nothing is left to the imagination, and in the climax the girl makes the supreme sacrifice of self destruction to save her honor.

"I will give 24 hours for the elimination of that scene before issuing summonses for the appearance of Messrs. Schoeffel and McCarthy.

"Otherwise I find nothing in that film that comes under the law. There may be things which incite the colored people to protest, but these things are not covered by statute. Our stage has descended to filth with productions such as 'Traffic in Souls' and others. This play, however, in a splendid thing, one of the best I have ever seen, but that doesn't alter the fact that it offends from the standpoint of law in one scene."

Obscenity Not Prerequisite.

Atty. J. Mott Hallowell for the complainants argued that the court did not have to find that a photo-play was obscene in order to declare it immoral. He read from an authority to show that the legal definition of immoral was "hostile to the welfare of the general public," and from another authority that the definition was "contrary to good order or public welfare; inimical to the rights or common interests of others."

Under these definitions, he argued, the court could justly say that the play was immoral and contrary to the statute in that there was an attempt to glorify the deeds of the Ku Klux Klan, and the operation of the lynch law.

Atty. John F. Cusick, who appeared for the theatre and photo-play interests, assented to the ruling of the court, without admitting that the episode in question was immoral.

"We want the court and the public to understand," he said, "that we do not intend to show on the screen, anything that is not within the common law, or the ethical law as well."

He went on to explain the magnitude of the film. He said: "There are three miles of film—"

"Three miles of film, or filth?" interjected Atty. William H. Lewis.

Cusick flushed. "Mr. Lewis," he said, "you are an educated colored man; you should not talk like that."

"You can cut out the 'colored'," answered Lewis, and the incident passed off.

Letter from O'Meara.

Later Commissioner O'Meara issued a statement in the form of a letter to Mayor Curley. It went on to say that he had received a request from Censor Casey to send a man to see the film, and gave permission to his secretary to see the photo-play and communicate with Mr. Casey. This was followed by protests from Butler R. Wilson and Moorfield Storey, declaring the performance immoral. He wrote them that he would arrange to send a police officer with them to the municipal court, that they might make a complaint against the management for conducting an illegal performance. Those gentlemen did not accept his offer, but other lawyers did, and as a result of the complaint, there was a finding against the episode concerning the Negro "Gus." On this point the commissioner officially advises the mayor of the court decision.

CONGREGATIONALIST
BOSTON, MASS.
APR 22 1915

EDITORIAL

The Birth of a Nation

The moving picture play, The Birth of a Nation, to which we referred in an editorial note in our issue of April 8, has been met by a storm of protests in Boston. Before the run in Boston began the Boston Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, headed by Butler R. Wilson, was granted a hearing by Mayor Curley, and the aldermanic chamber was crowded with those who opposed the exhibition of the film in Boston. Among those present were clergymen, lawyers and other leaders of the colored people and many prominent white citizens. A delegation from the National Independent Equal Rights League, headed by W. M. Trotter, joined in the protest. Several who had seen the play in New York were present and expressed their condemnation of it. Many letters and several affidavits were included in the evidence. One of the strongest letters condemning the play was from Dr. Macfarland, secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Mr. Griffith, the motion-picture producer, was present with legal counsel representing his own interests and those of the local theater.

Mayor Curley expressed doubt as to being able to find legal grounds for action against the play. After he had seen it he suggested several omissions, but the police commissioner and city censor passed it as within the law. At a later protest hearing the Mayor said that he considered The Birth of a Nation an outrage against the Negro race, and said that if a law could be found under which he could stop it, he would do so. Police Commissioner O'Meara is quoted as having made a similar statement. Governor Walsh has become interested in the case, and while he has no authority to act officially, is trying to find a way to suppress the play in Massachusetts.

In the meantime, some of the Boston newspapers are publishing letters of protest pouring in from the citizens, who are up in arms against this appeal to race prejudice. A deplorable fact in connection with the presentation of The Birth of a Nation in Boston is the approval or editorial silence of most of the Boston newspapers. It seems significant that broadsides of advertising of the play have appeared in these papers. Before it came to Boston the Boston Post denounced it, but not since then. Both before and since it came the Boston Traveler has expressed its editorial disapproval. A danger is that the general public might be favorably influenced by favorable newspaper comment in Boston and New York and by letters of commendation which have been secured from some prominent people, including Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst of New York; and although not at liberty to quote President Wilson, Mr. Griffith and others declare that The Birth of a Nation was exhibited in the East Room of the White House before the President and his Cabinet, and that Mr. Wilson indicated his complete approval. Unsuccessful attempts have been made to stop the play in New York and Los Angeles. Thomas Dixon, whose play, The Clansman, is the basis of The Birth of a Nation, states that, if the protests are kept up his opponents will succeed in making him a millionaire; nevertheless such protests should be continued, and no stone should be left unturned to check the course of this pernicious play.

The Birth of a Nation is one of the most costly and elaborate motion picture plays that has ever been produced. The first act is chiefly devoted to the Civil War from the Southern point of view. It includes many battle scenes and attempts to reproduce the assassination of President Lincoln. The second act is devoted to the Reconstruction Period in the South. It represents the emancipated Negroes in political control, disfranchising the whites and indulging in continual orgies of dissipation, abuse of white people, destruction of property and bent on intermarriage with the whites. Assaults and attempted assaults on white girls by colored men are given long and startling prominence, and throughout the play the colored people shown are vicious and disgusting.

The only good Negroes are of the most servile type, and spectacular and harrowing scenes are presented at great length showing colored people in the worst possible light, grossly misrepresenting as well as exaggerating the history of the period, which the play pretends faithfully to represent. Meantime, the white people of the South are represented by the finest, most attractive men, women and children. The Ku Klux Klan appears to have been organized by the chivalric flower of Southern manhood to rescue and avenge the white girl victims of black brutes, to quell Negro riots, to disarm the blacks and to restore the government to white citizenship. Incidentally, lynching is glorified and the Ku Klux Klan appears in impossible legions of semi-religious crusaders with the emblem of the Cross.

The chief villain of the play, Stoneman, boss of Congress, is really intended to represent Thaddeus Stevens, according to Thomas Dixon; and he is made to appear as wicked and disgusting as possible, inciting the Negroes to their alleged reign of terror. His own immorality is repeatedly emphasized by the appearance of his colored mistress, whose conduct is disgustingly suggestive. The solution of the race problem appears to be complete white supremacy and ultimately the deportation of colored Americans.

The alleged purpose of the authors of this production is to present with historical accuracy the facts of the Reconstruction Period and to stop the mixing of white and colored blood, which they represent is sought by colored people generally through intermarriage. It is also claimed that the play teaches peace, removes sectionalism and honors Lincoln. As a matter of fact, the play distorts, exaggerates and grossly misrepresents the historical facts of the Reconstruction Period, bad as they were in some respects; encourages mob law and lynching, causes sectional feeling, brings out the influences of base immorality and causes race prejudice against the American Negro in its most vicious and wicked form. It is untruthful, un-American, un-Democratic and un-Christian.

Transcript Apr 22, 15

ANOTHER "MOVIE" HEARING

Transcript Apr 22

Senate Ways and Means Hears Three Speakers in Regard to the Bates Bill for Photoplay Censorship

Another brief hearing was given today by the Senate Committee on Ways and Means on the Bates bill to place the censorship of motion picture films in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries. As the time of the committee was limited, owing to the morning session of the Senate, only three speakers were heard—William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson, both negroes, in favor of the bill; and Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship, in opposition.

Mr. Lewis, who has been one of the leaders against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont theatre, declared that there was public necessity for such a bill. A motion picture, he said, is a thing manufactured by some film factories, and the only idea of producing it, is to get up something that will sell. It is nothing to the manufacturer whether the play is immoral or obscene, being purely a business proposition. The general public welfare requires that there should be some authority to pass upon the films before they are shown. Congress has passed a bill recently prohibiting the production of the recent fight films and simply on the grounds that it would tend to raise race prejudice.

Mr. Lewis said that he had in mind the moving picture show at the Tremont Theatre, which he declared was a "moving" picture—"It moves some people to admiration," he said, "and it moves others to shame. I come within the latter class." He claimed that no one had the right to exhibit anything which reflected upon every class of individuals, because it tended to create unhappiness. A mutual respect for the rights and interests of each other, he said, requires that decent respect be paid to every class of citizens in the United States where there is such a mixture of races and nationalities.

Mr. Lewis declared that "The Birth of a Nation" was a libel on history, a calumny on the negro race and an insult to Massachusetts. It was staged, he said, to make the North believe that the action of the South in segregating the negroes and lynching them was all right."

Mr. Wilson suggested that the censorship be placed in the hands of the district police rather than in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries, for the former was more familiar with such matters and had shown good judgment in refusing to allow the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at Lynn on Sunday. He declared that there never had been a fight for democracy in the United States when the negro was not on the right side.

Mr. Cox opposed the measure from the viewpoint of an expert censor, and told the committee of the work which his board was carrying on. He said that the question of censorship involved the possible criticism of 7000 or 8000 distinct subjects which must be considered from all sides, and especially from that of public opinion. He said that with the subjects touched upon the real things of life, it was inevitable that there should be some degree of contention, and that the board could not decide upon pictures from the standpoint of a personal whim. It is essential, he added, that there should be common sense criticism.

When asked how the Ohio and Pennsylvania laws work, he replied that it was impossible to view pictures day in and day out with a fresh mind, and that in those States, the films were not half censored.

BILL AIMED AT PHOTOPLAY

Committee Will Admit Measure Forbidding Plays Which Excite Racial Prejudice

Following a hearing yesterday afternoon, the House Committee on Rules of the Legislature voted to admit the bill, directed at "The Birth of a Nation," to amend the existing statutes by adding a clause to prohibit a show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace. Conspicuous among those supporting the proposition was Lieutenant Governor Cushing. Three hundred negroes attended the meeting.

POST
WORCESTER MASS.
APR 22 1915

That Is True Americanism, Judge Dowd!

"The law knows no race, nor creed in Massachusetts," well said Judge Thomas H. Dowd of the Boston Municipal Court in ruling yesterday on the case of the "Birth of a Nation" moving pictures, whose suppression was demanded because they were claimed to be insulting to Negroes and tending to create race prejudice.

It may be a mere truism that this former Worcester boy uttered from the bench, but it was a timely and needed truism, besides following the statute that gives no power of censorship except against obscene representations.

On the fundamental principle involved, Judge Dowd is right, and Governor Walsh erred, as The Post has pointed out, in his promise to seek amendment of the law in case of judicial finding that it is now insufficient to prevent incitement of race antagonism.

We may properly sympathize with Negroes who are misrepresented in such shows. So we should also sympathize with an Irishman, German, Jew, Protestant or Catholic, or anybody else who can truthfully make a like complaint. The law of libel is already sufficient for the protection of anybody injured. To go further and allow any public authority to say what shall be seen or heard or read, would be a policy that would have no definite limit, and would practically operate to increase the very evil aimed at. Wholesome public opinion is the only thing to rely on in such matters, and it will be sufficient in the long run.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) SUNAMERICAN
APRIL 22, 1915

The "Birth of a Nation" which brought forth a "near riot" in Boston Saturday night still hold the boards at the Tremont theatre and for a time at least S. R. O. signs may be expected daily. What a lot of free advertising has come to the Tremont.

REPUBLICAN Weekly
Springfield, Mass.
APR 22 1915

If any proof were needed of the undesirability of permitting the exhibition in Boston of the "Birth of a Nation" photoplay, to which Negroes have made strong objection, the disturbance of Saturday night at the Tremont theater has furnished it. The form of the protest may be open to criticism, but the fact that it seemed a last resort should not be lost sight of. Mayor Curley exercised all the authority that he had in procuring the excision of objectionable features, but how limited his authority is will appear in Mr Sanborn's letter, elsewhere printed, which was written before the outbreak had added another chapter to the entanglement. The theater people had made ample preparations to meet trouble, and as always in such cases there is much divergence in the stories told by the two parties to the fracas—but the most effective way to check the threatened discord would have been to withdraw the offending display. Mr Sanborn writes with all the heat of an early abolitionist, and Mr Trotter is not the most discreet of leaders, but the root of the trouble lies back of them in the insistence upon going on with that which gave such bitter cause for offense. It is not good public policy deliberately to invite breaches of the peace. The desirable end was to be served by giving further vogue to the partisan and misleading Dixon play, whose bias cannot be discounted and allowed for by the average audience.

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) CHRONICLE
APRIL 22, 1915

PHOTO PLAY MAY BE CONTINUED

JUDGE DOWD ORDERS ONE SCENE ONLY CUT FROM FILM

Boston April 21—If the management of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" that is being produced at the Tremont Theatre will eliminate one scene the play will be allowed to go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel manager of the theatre and J. J. McCarthy representing the owner of the film as asked by Boston negroes. This was the decision announced by Judge Thomas H. Dowd this afternoon when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony for he had himself viewed the film last night.

The scene which the judge ordered eliminated is that in which a negro named Gus is depicted as spying upon a young white girl and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed. Judge Dowd held that this scene comes within the prohibition of the statute upon immoral obscene and lewd plays and only that scene. While there are some other parts of the show that may be unpleasant to certain citizens they do not in the opinion of the Court come within the prohibition of the statute. The representative of the photoplay agreed to take up the matter with the management immediately.

The cases of the men arrested Saturday night near the Tremont Theatre were called in another session of the Municipal Court. Charles F. Sullivan, white, and Harris McDonald, negro, charged with mutual assault were dismissed. One case was continued until today and the rest went over until next Wednesday.

At meeting of the directors of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston, yesterday afternoon, in the parish house of Trinity Church, it was voted that the directors of the federation express, in the strongest terms, their disapproval of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation."

HOLYOKE (Mass.) TELEGRAM
APRIL 22, 1915 40

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

Judge Dowd of the municipal court in Boston gave the producers of the picture film, "The Birth of a Nation," 24 hours in which to eliminate the first scene, showing the pursuit of a young white girl by a colored man and her suicide by leaping off a cliff. The hearing was on the question of issuing warrants for the arrest of the producers of the film and the manager of the theater.

The showing of the film at Boston came near causing a race riot. It finally resulted only in giving a fellow named Trotter, of Washington notoriety, and a few others a chance to "shoot off their mouths."

We believe the court did well to have the scene eliminated, and no harm would befall if the entire photo-play was cut out, and Boston would doubtless be pleased if Trotter and his ilk were squelched.

HOLYOKE (Mass.) TELEGRAM
APRIL 22, 1915

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation," Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the House a bill, which will add to chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the committee on rules. By some members of the House the bill was considered too broad.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) MERCURY
APRIL 22, 1915

Governor Walsh, his friends maintain, has made a fortunate political stroke in his attitude over the "The Birth of a Nation" film. The colored voters, who have not supported Governor Walsh heretofore, will do all in their power to help him this fall.

Record April 22
BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT 170
APRIL 22, 1915

New Movies Board Not Practical

Cox Points Out the Difficulties

If the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," is allowed to continue, there may yet be a lynching on Boston Common, said ex-Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. William H. Lewis, before the Senate Ways and Means Committee, at the hearing on the Carstens bill transferring the censorship of moving pictures to the State Board of Labor and Industries.

The hearing was a continued one, but was very short because the Senate had a morning session. Mr. Lewis declared that he did not believe any theatre management has the right to produce anywhere a photo play that reflects injuriously on the character of any individual for the reason that the production of such a film leads to a disturbance of the peace, order and happiness of the whole community.

A decent respect, he said, should be paid to all the classes that make up American citizenship.

Referring to the film now being shown of the "Birth of a Nation," Lewis declared that it was a libel on American history, a vile calumny of the colored race and reflects seriously on the commonwealth of Massachusetts and its ideals.

"It is calculated," he said, "to arouse sympathy with the 'lynch law' of the South.

"If this thing keeps on," said Mr. Lewis, "we may have a lynching on Boston Common, who knows?"

Mr. Lewis said that the scenes depicted in the film never happened and characterized the whole production as a villainous lie.

Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the national board of censorship, submitted testimony showing that the proposed law is unwise.

Cox Points Out Some Practical Difficulties

Mr. Cox questioned whether the government could properly step in as the supervising agent in a matter having to do with the public morals and cited numerous obstacles that would confront a small board of three men appointed to censor all the films shown in a state as large as Massachusetts.

The censoring of moving pictures, Mr. Cox said, is attended with enormous eye strain and a tired person would be unable to decide nice questions of morality that would be continually cropping up in the pictures. A person would be unable to detect, he said, the fine moral points in two pictures shown simultaneously, and he doubted if one individual could pass on more than three reels an hour if the proper attention were to be given to the moral side of the subjects.

Mr. Cox said he believed there should be a large amount of freedom in the moving pictures as there is in the press and speech and declared that it is inevitable that sects and classes will sometimes be dissatisfied with the production of certain films.

To delegate to three persons, Mr. Cox said, with their personal whims and idiosyncrasies the business of passing upon moral questions for 3,500,000 inhabitants of the state is embarking on a programme dangerous from the standpoint of democracy.

Mr. Cox in the course of questions put by Senator Sheehan of Holyoke said the film referred to had been passed by the National Board of Censorship after it had been revised to meet certain specific objections.

Protested Photo Play Shown With Chase Scene Out

The photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which has aroused a storm of protest among the colored residents of Boston, was shown this afternoon at the Tremont Theatre with the scenes showing the chase of a white girl by the negro "Gus" cut out.

This action on the part of the theatre managers was the result of an agreement with Mayor Curley and Judge Dowd of the municipal court, from whom a warrant was sought for the arrest of two of the theatrical men.

A statement was given out at the Tremont Theatre saying that the question of deleting the parts of the picture which were classed as objectionable had been under advisement for 10 days.

Telegram
Holyoke, Mass.
NOV 22 1915

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation," Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the House a bill, which will add to chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the committee on rules. By some members of the House the bill was considered too broad.

ANOTHER "MOVIE" HEARING

Senate Ways and Means Hears Three Speakers in Regard to the Bates Bill for Photoplay Censorship

Another brief hearing was given today by the Senate Committee on Ways and Means on the Bates bill to place the censorship of motion picture films in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries. As the time of the committee was limited, owing to the morning session of the Senate, only three speakers were heard—William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson, both negroes, in favor of the bill and Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship, in opposition.

Mr. Lewis, who has been one of the leaders against the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont theatre, declared that there was public necessity for such a bill. A motion picture, he said, is a thing manufactured by some film factories, and the only idea of producing it, is to get up something that will sell. It is nothing to the manufacturer whether the play is immoral or obscene, being purely a business proposition. The general public welfare requires that there should be some authority to pass upon the films before they are shown. Congress has passed a bill recently prohibiting the production of the recent fight films and simply on the grounds that it would tend to raise race prejudice.

Mr. Lewis said that he had in mind the moving picture show at the Tremont Theatre, which he declared was a "moving" picture—"It moves some people to admiration," he said, "and it moves others to shame. I come within the latter class." He claimed that no one had the right to exhibit anything which reflected upon every class of individuals, because it tended to create unhappiness. A mutual respect for the rights and interests of each other, he said, requires that decent respect be paid to every class of citizens in the United States where there is such a mixture of races and nationalities.

Mr. Lewis declared that "The Birth of a Nation" was a libel on history, a calumny on the negro race and an insult to Massachusetts. It was staged, he said, to make the North believe that the action of the South in segregating the negroes and lynching them was all right."

Mr. Wilson suggested that the censorship be placed in the hands of the district police rather than in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries, for the former was more familiar with such matters and had shown good judgment in refusing to allow the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at Lynn on Sunday. He declared that there never had been a fight for democracy in the United States when the negro was not on the right side.

Mr. Cox opposed the measure from the viewpoint of an expert censor, and told the committee of the work which his board was carrying on. He said that the question of censorship involved the possible criticism of 7000 or 8000 distinct subjects which must be considered from all sides, and especially from that of public opinion. He said that where the subjects touched upon the real things of life, it was inevitable that there should be some degree of contention, and that the board could not decide upon pictures from the standpoint of a personal whim. It is essential, he added, that there should be common sense criticism.

When asked how the Ohio and Pennsylvania laws work, he replied that it was impossible to view pictures day in and day out with a fresh mind, and that in those States, the films were not half censored.

BILL AIMED AT PHOTOPLAY

Committee Will Admit Measure Forbidding Plays Which Excite Racial Prejudice

Following a hearing yesterday afternoon, the House Committee on Rules of the Legislature voted to admit the bill directed at "The Birth of a Nation," to amend the existing statutes by adding a clause to prohibit a show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace. Conspicuous among those supporting the proposition was Lieutenant Governor Cushing. Three hundred negroes attended the meeting.

Telegram, Holyoke, Mass. Apr. 22, 1915.

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

Judge Dowd of the municipal court in Boston gave the producers of the picture film, "The Birth of a Nation," 24 hours in which to eliminate the first scene, showing the pursuit of a young white girl by a colored man and her suicide by leaping off a cliff. The hearing was on the question of issuing warrants for the arrest of the producers of the film and the manager of the theater.

The showing of the film at Boston came near causing a race riot. It finally resulted only in giving a fellow named Trotter, of Washington notoriety, and a few others a chance to "shoot off their mouths."

We believe the court did well to have the scene eliminated, and no harm would befall if the entire photo-play was cut out, and Boston would doubtless be pleased if Trotter and his ilk were squelched.

Journal Pittsfield Mass.
Apr 22 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" BILL IS TOO BROAD

Boston, April 22.—As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation," Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the House a bill, which will add to chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the Committee on Rules, and it was claimed that it would bar such a play as the "Merchant of Venice."

Cutting Burgess the Wors
NEWS
Fitchburg.
APR 22 1915

Refused Warrants For Picture Men

BOSTON, April 21.—Judge Dowd of the municipal court today gave the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" twenty-four hours in which to eliminate the first scene, showing the pursuit of a young white girl by a colored man and her suicide by leaping off a cliff. The hearing was in the question of issuing warrants for the arrest of the producers of the film and the managers of the theatre.

The showing of the film here came near causing a race riot.

News.

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation," Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the house a bill, which will add to Chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the committee on rules. By some members of the house the bill was considered too broad, and it was claimed that it would bar such a play as the "Merchant of Venice."

LYNN (Mass.) ITEM
APRIL 22, 1915

Protest Meeting Called Off.

There is to be no protest meeting of the Lynn colony of the colored race against the motion picture film, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now playing at a Boston theatre. An effort was made on the part of a Lynn colored citizen, the latter part of the past week, to create interest for such a meeting in Lynn. This party had even gone so far as to announce that the protest meeting would be held on Wednesday evening, in the Malley Street A. M. E. church. Several persons called at the church last evening, only to find the place in darkness. As far as could be learned, no such meeting was held in this city and even the pastor of this church, Rev. James Henry Gordon, D. D., did not know of any intention on the part of Lynn members of his race to hold any such meeting.

FITCHBURG (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 22, 1915

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation," Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the house a bill, which will add to Chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the committee on rules. By some members of the house the bill was considered too broad, and it was claimed that it would bar such a play as the "Merchant of Venice."

Governor Walsh showed on Patriots' Day a wonderful example of what a public official can do with a crowd with a just grievance and a habit of asking embarrassing questions. His ability, as demonstrated on Monday with the Negroes, to find some way out of the difficulty that other officials had pronounced insoluble is liable to make him the target for other delegations. His speech to the delegation was also of a nature to attract many persons to him with their troubles. It was placid, soothing and assuring without committing the governor very definitely to anything.

Union
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 22 1915

ORDERS SCENE OUT OF MOTION PICTURES

Boston Municipal Court Judge Acts on Protest Against Photoplay.

(Special to The Union.)

BOSTON, April 21—With the elimination of one objectionable scene that leaves a "nauseating stench" in the mind, the production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," may go on at the Tremont Theater, according to a decision by Judge Thomas H. Dowd in the Municipal Court today.

When he made known his finding Judge Dowd announced that he would not issue warrants for Proprietor John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theater and Manager J. J. McCarthy of the film company. The police, on complaint of 2000 or more Boston Negroes, applied for summonses on the statute regarding immoral or sugestive entertainment.

Judge Dowd made known his ruling today without taking any further evidence, as he had himself viewed the film last night. Previously he spent nearly the whole day listening to evidence condemning it.

The scene which he ordered cut out is that in which a Negro named Gus is depicted as spying on a young white girl and afterward chasing her with evident evil intent, until she hurls herself from the top of a cliff and is killed. That scene, the court held, came within the prohibition of the statute upon immoral, obscene and lewd plays.

Following the court's decree, the theater management announced that it will comply with the judge's order. Counsel stated that the management did not propose to do anything illegal and that it had already agreed to eliminate this scene on suggestion of Mayor Curley.

Another great rush of Negroes anxious to attend the court hearing occurred today, but spectators were not admited beyond the seating capacity The corridors of the Pemberton Square Court House, consequently, were jammed all day.

When Judge Dowd had disposed of routine business and reached the case he called counsel to the bench and made this statement:

"This is not a question of race, it is one of the decency and morality of the play; the element of race does not enter into its decision; there is no recognition of race or color in our laws. I am convinced that the statute covers this play. One scene is offensive and immoral; it leaves nothing to the imagination but actual passion. This scene shows the Negro, Gus, pursuing a little white child of 12 years; every expression of his face delineates lust. The little girl to escape and preserve her honor has to bring about her own destruction. There is no question why the man is pursuing her; he is actuated by the lowest human passion.

"I will give the defendants time to eliminate that scene. There is nothing else, within the statute. While there are things that might excite the colored people, they do not come within the law. It is unfortunately true that in many cases our stage is descending to filth. This play is no worse than hundreds of others that corrupt the morals. It is a splendid production, though that does not condone the nauseating stench the objectionable scene leaves in the mind. I will allow the management to eliminate the scene or will issue the warrant."

BEVERLY (Mass.) TIMES
APRIL 22, 1915

"Birth Of Nation" May Be Continued

The photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," will continue at the Tremont Theater, Boston. This afternoon, by order of Judge Dowd of the Municipal Court at Boston, the management will eliminate that scene of the film which portrays the pursuit of the young white girl by the renegade negro "Gus." This decision came after a two-day hearing.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) SUN-AMERICAN 460
APRIL 22, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

Spectacular Picture Play Founded on Rev. Thomas Dixon's Story, "The Clansman", Has Stirred Up Much Race Bitterness in Boston and Other Cities of the Country.

NOT SINCE MODERN PICTURE PLAYS BECAME POPULAR WITH THE PUBLIC has a "movie" stirred up such resentment and CREATED SUCH VIOLENT OPPOSITION to its presentation as has been manifested toward the photo-play called "The Birth of a Nation."

The stupendous spectacle—for that is just what it is—has been staged recently in Boston, and the colored people of that city, together with many of their white friends, have asked that the play be stopped.

The making of the films for this famous picture drama represents A STAGGERING AMOUNT OF TIME AND MONEY. It reproduces entire battle scenes and complex historic events.

It is founded on Rev. Thomas Dixon's story "The Clansman." The play is an interpretation of the RELATIONS OF THE NORTH AND SOUTH AND THEIR BEARING ON THE NEGRO.

The judge before whom the question was heard of stopping further presentation of the play in Boston, on the ground that it tended to create race prejudice, ruled yesterday that with the elimination of one scene the play may be shown.

"There may be things which incite the colored people to protest," he said, "but these things are not covered by statute. The element of race does not enter into the controversy at all for THE LAW KNOWS NO RACE NOR CREED IN MASSACHUSETTS."

"In 'The Birth of a Nation' Mr. Dixon protests that his drama 'is not meant to reflect in any way on any race or people of today,' says a critic in reviewing the drama. "And then he proceeds to give to the negro a kind of malignity that is really a revelation of his own malignity.

"Passing over the initial gibe at the negro's smell, we early come to a negrophile senator whose mistress is a mulatto. As conceived by Mr. Dixon and as acted in the film, this mulatto is not only a minister to the senator's lust but a woman of inordinate passion, pride and savagery. Gloating as she does over the promise of 'negro equality,' she is soon partnered by a male mulatto of similar brute characteristics.

"Having established this triple alliance between the 'uncrowned king,' his diabolic colored mistress and his diabolic colored ally, Mr. Dixon shows the revolting processes by which the white South is crushed 'under the heel of the black South.' 'Sowing the wind,' he calls it.

"On the one hand we have 'the poor bruised heart' of the white South, on the other 'the new citizens inflamed by the growing sense of power.'

"We see negroes shoving white men off the sidewalk, negroes quitting work to dance, negroes beating a crippled old white patriarch, negroes slinging up 'faithful colored servants' and flogging them till they drop, negro courtesans guzzling champagne with the would-be head of the Black Empire, negroes 'DRUNK WITH WINE AND POWER,' negroes mocking their white master in chains, negroes 'crazy with joy' and terrorizing all the whites in South Carolina.

"We see the blacks flaunting placards demanding 'equal marriage.'

"We see the black leader demanding a 'forced marriage' with an imprisoned and gagged white girl.

"And we see continually in the background the white Southerner in 'AGONY OF SOUL OVER THE DEGRADATION AND RUIN OF HIS PEOPLE.'

"Encouraged by the black leader, we see Gus the renegade hover about another young white girl's home. To hoochy-cooohy music we see the long pursuit of the innocent white girl by this lust-maddened negro, and we see her fling herself to death from a precipice, carrying her honor through 'the opal gates of death.'

"Having painted this insanely apprehensive picture of an unbridled, bestial, horrible race, relieved only by a few touches of low comedy, 'the grim reaping begins.' We see the operations of the Ku Klux Klan, 'the organization that saved the South from the anarchy of black rule.' We see Federals and Confederates uniting in a Holy War 'in defence of their Aryan birthright,' whatever that is. We see the negroes driven back, beaten, killed. The drama winds up with a suggestion of 'Lincoln's solution'—back to Liberia—and then, if you please, with a film representing Jesus Christ in 'the halls of brotherly love.'

Union
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 22 1915

Municipal Court Judge Thomas H. Dowd of Boston, voiced a sound and just principle yesterday when, in announcing his decision on the application for a summons for the proprietors of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," he declared that "the law is the same for all men, of whatever race, color, condition, or religious belief. It cannot be invoked especially and exclusively in behalf of one class and to the detriment or injury of another, His decision in regard to the play itself was also kind and sensible. He refused to entertain a complaint against the proprietors and ruled that the pictures may be displayed if one objectionable scene is eliminated. It was this scene alone that caused the violent protest of the colored people of Boston and their white sympathizers; the rest of the play is not only unobjectionable but really instructive, artistic and inspiring. With the elimination of the offending portion of the production the people of Boston, white or colored, will have no further cause for complaint, and what is good in the play will continue to be shown for the entertainment and education of all persons that care to see it.

DEMOCRAT
APR 22 1915

Stirring Up Race Troubles.

It is difficult to understand how a man who makes any pretense to decency and intelligence, and as an American citizen must be presumed to have the welfare of his country at heart, can bring himself to the point of deliberately stirring up race prejudices. Here, Thomas H. Dixon's moving-picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," supposed to deal with events in the South's period of reconstruction following the Civil war, has caused trouble wherever it has been shown. Its production in the Boston hall to riots in which some of the most respectable members of the colored population were involved. Boston's negro colony has stood very high in intelligence and culture, and has been law-abiding and orderly. But Mr. Dixon's play brought latent race hatred to the surface, and brought bitterness, humiliation on respectable colored people. Love of notoriety and greed for money may excuse some things, but they do not escape this kind of mischief. Mr. Dixon would be less of a menace if he were to juggle dynamite on Boston's

Gazette

TAUNTON, MASS

APR 22 1915

WANT "MOVIE" LAW

To Prohibit Photo Plays Tending to Create Race Feeling.

(By United Press.).

BOSTON, April 22.—A law that would prohibit the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," being shown in Massachusetts, and to prevent the production of similar plays tending to create race or religious feeling, will be demanded of the legislature by those who have united in an attempt to stop the showing of the photo-play at the Tremont theatre.

The negroes of Boston and those in sympathy with them are not satisfied with the action of Judge Dowd in ordering a single scene removed from the play.

The so-called Sullivan bill, it was said by William H. Lewis, former assistant attorney general of the United States, serves the purpose.

The Sullivan bill is to amend the present state law prohibiting the production of plays of an immoral or obscene nature so that the law will also prohibit plays causing religious or racial prejudice.

The hearings on the so-called Bates bill for the transfer of censorship of moving pictures and stage productions from the state police to the state board of labor and industries, was attended today by a delegation representing the opposition to "The Birth of a Nation.

(N.Y.) Buffalo. News Apr 22, 1915

STOPPING A FILM BY LAW.

Governor Walsh has stopped the showing of a movi[illegible] in Massachusetts until the court has decided at his request whether or not the picture is to be excluded under a law covering incitement to riot. The picture is one that stirred up the negroes of New York city. It is based upon one of Thomas Dixon's books and is decidedly offensive to the colored people.

Governor Walsh believes the law covers the case but is prepared in the ovent the decision is adverse to ask the Legislature to pass a measure to meet the situation.

The bulletin just issued by the government on negro statistics is very gratifying to friends of the colored race. It shows increasing tendency to home ownership, a marked increase in the percentage of schools, an increase in church membership, a decided decrease in illiteracy and a decrease in the mortality record.

Those interested in the advancement of the race point to the home buying tendency. In 1910 there were in the Southern States 1,917,391 negro homes of which 430,449, or 22.4, were owned by negroes. In Virginia the percentage rises to 41 per cent. It is a very hopeful sign.

Newspaper Clipping Bureau in the World

Item

LYNN, MASS.

APR 22 1915

Urge Bill Against Certain Movies

BOSTON, April 22, 1915.—A large delegation of colored citizens appeared before the legislative committee on rules yesterday afternoon to urge the admission of the Sullivan petition designed to prevent the production in Massachusetts of theatrical performances or photo plays that would tend to "incite racial or religious prejudice" or disturb the public peace. Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston, the petitioner, Sherwin L. Cook, Clement G. Morgan, Rep. Fred P. Greenwood, William H. Lewis, Joseph C. Manning, a former member of the Alabama Legislature, Lieutenant Governor Grafton D. Cushing, Butler R. Wilson, William D. Brigham, William Munroe Trotter, Rev. Benjamin W. Swain and others appeared in favor of legislation that would stop the performance of the "Birth of a Nation" or any similar performances.

The only opponent was Richard A. Callahan, who said that he had been beaten by negroes the night after the Willard-Johnson fight and he said he thought the fight had more to do with the activities of the negroes than the "Birth of a Nation." He said he thought the negroes were looking for trouble and added in an "aside" that they were likely to get it. An ominous stir among the colored men present was apparent, several rose to their feet and many hissed Callahan, but the chairman obtained order by a few lusty strokes of his gavel.

Rolfe Cobley said that he had talked with Thomas Dixon, the author of the "Clansman," on which the "Birth of a Nation" is founded, and had been definitely informed that the purpose of the play was to exterminate the colored race in America.

The speakers, most of whom had seen the performance, declared that the play is cleverly designed to stir up racial hatred against the colored people. They stated that certain portions of it are detrimental to the public morals and dangerous to the public peace.

Union
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 23 1915

SAYS FILM MIGHT INCITE LYNCHINGS

Lewis Bitterly Refers to Photoplay in Supporting Carstens Bill.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, April 22—William H. Lewis of Cambridge, former assistant United States attorney general, speaking today before the Senate Ways and Means Committee on the Carstens bill to give the State Board of Labor and Industries jurisdiction over motion picture films in Massachusetts, made a bitter reference to the photoplay, "Birth of a Nation," now being shown in a Boston theater.

Speaking of the objection to this film on the part of the colored people, Mr. Lewis affirmed that it is a libel of American history, a vile calumny on the colored race and reflects seriously on the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and its ideals.

Mr. Lewis declared this film is calculated to arouse sympathy in the North with the "lynch law" of the South.

"If this thing goes on," said Mr. Lewis, "we may have a lynching on Boston Common. Who knows?"

Mr. Lewis said that the scenes depicted in the objectionable film never happened and characterized the whole production as a villainous lie.

Butler R. Wilson said that he believed the bill should be amended so as to make the censoring agent the district police rather than the Board of Labor and Industries. The district police, he said, now have the machinery to censor motion pictures.

Speaker Cox questioned whether the Government could properly step in as the supervising agent in a matter having to do with the public morals and cited numerous obstacles that would confront a small board of three men appointed to censor all the films shown in a State as large as Massachusetts.

The censoring of motion pictures, Mr. Cox said, is attended by enormous eye strain and a tired person would be unable to decide nice questions of morality that would be continually cropping up in the pictures. A person would be unable to detect, he said, the fine moral points in two pictures shown simultaneously, and he doubted if one individual could pass on more than three reels an hour if the proper attention were to be given to the moral side of the subjects.

Mr. Cox said he believed there should be a large amount of freedom in the motion pictures as there is in the press and speech, and declared that it is inevitable that sects and classes will sometimes be dissatisfied with the production of certain films.

To delegate to three persons, Mr. Cox said, with their personal whims and idiosyncrasies the business of passing upon moral questions for 2,500,000 inhabitants of the State is embarking on a program dangerous from the standpoint of democracy.

Mr. Cox in the course of questions put by Senator John F. Sheehan of Holyoke, said the film referred to had been passed by the national board of censorship after it had been revised to meet certain specific objections.

EUGENE W. MASON.

PITTSFIELD (Mass.) EAGLE
APRIL 23, 1915

LEWIS WELL KNOWN HERE

William H. Lewis, who made the protest at Boston yesterday against "The Birth of a Nation," is well known in Pittsfield, has spoken here on at least three occasions. He was here for a Lincoln observance, and gave his address on "Lincoln" at a Y. M. C. A. meeting and he spoke at street rallies one Saturday night in the Wilson-Roosevelt-Taft campaign. In his Harvard days he was famous as 'varsity football center, and in after years was appointed an assistant United States attorney general. He is an orator of ability. In his Boston speech yesterday he said that the toleration of the photo play might mean that there would be a lynching on Boston common.

LYNN (Mass.) ITEM
APRIL 23, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

The moving picture show has come to stay. The photoplay has achieved a popularity that insures its permanency. The censorship of these plays and, in fact, all of the productions of the movies is essential to the best interests of the community. The photoplay entitled "The Birth of a Nation," now on exhibition in a Boston theatre, has been found to contain several pictures that give offence to a body of people whose feelings should be considered the same as those of any of the races that make up American audiences, and any entertainment should be discontinued if found to be calculated to arouse race prejudice or weaken the morals of the community.

Courier
LOWELL, MASS.
APR 2 3 1915

THE OWL THEATRE.

A show with a punch is the Owl's specialty. Three extra big features are shown today. "The Radium Thieves," a Broadway Star feature—Vitagraph is to be shown in three parts. Henry B. Walthal, the famous lead in Griffith's big spectacular production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen in "Rods of Wrath," a three-part feature. These two alone would make up

NEWS
NEWBURYPORT, MASS.
APR 23 1915

Gov. Walsh Taking Right Course.

In granting the appeals of the thousands of colored people of this state who went to the State House yesterday and requested that something be done towards putting an end to the presentation of the play "The Birth of a Nation," Gov. Walsh is taking the right course, a course dictated by consideration for the rights of a great race.—Lawrence Telegram.

DOVER (N. H.) DEMOCRAT
APRIL 23, 1915

PHOTO-PLAY TO CONTINUE

One Scene to Be Eliminated From "Birth of a Nation"

Boston, April 22.—With the elimination of one scene, the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," that is being produced at the Tremont theatre, will go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, representing the owner of the film, as asked by Boston negroes.

This was the decision announced by Judge Dowd when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony, for he had himself viewed the film.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a negro is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed.

LOWELL (Mass.) SUN
APRIL 23, 1915

FIGHT ON FILMS

The need for some adequate system of moving picture censorship is once again emphasized by the agitation in Boston. There, a large and most successful production, described as a great example of the art which it represents, is being strongly opposed by the members of a race who feel themselves insulted and misrepresented in the presentation. On this point, the opinion of the public is not unanimous, for some of the leading men of the country have expressed their approval of the films. Even official Boston seems divided, as some political notables appear to be deeply shocked, while others, including Mayor Curley, seem to regard the opposition as unjustifiable.

This point is indeed a delicate one, and it is difficult to draw the line beyond which writers and play producers may not go. Anything that is meant to offend the susceptibilities of any race should certainly be eliminated, but on the other hand a point of view may be cultivated with which any racial group would see evil where no evil was meant. We can have no art of the theatre without types of villainy to contrast with the virtuous, and no race has a monopoly on either vice or virtue. Thus, for the future of literature, the stage and the race, it is well that the extremities of vulgarity, realism, and false idealism be avoided alike in play presentations.

Altogether aside from the merits of the case, it is evident that the complaints of any large group cannot be satisfactorily answered while there is no adequate system of censorship. Were there some central body such as that which now exists in name, Boston, Lowell and other cities would be relieved of a weight of responsibility which now occasionally troubles their officials. That there is something radically wrong with the present arrangement is eloquently proved by the recent protest of the Middlesex Women's club in this city and the more recent protest in Boston.

WALTHAM (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 23, 1915

WOULD PUT STOP TO EVIL FILMS

An amendment of the law so that productions such as "The Birth of a Nation" may be stopped in Massachusetts on the ground that they tend to racial or religious prejudice was under consideration before the committee on the judiciary this morning, when the bill of Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston was heard.

The bill was admitted in the Legislature yesterday under the suspension of the rules and in anticipation of a large attendance the committee hearing today will be in Room 240, the largest in the State House.

Negroes Attend.

Yesterday a delegation of negroes appeared before the Senate committee on ways and means in favor of the bill for State censorship of moving pictures. William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson were the only speakers, and the bill was opposed by Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship.

Mr. Lewis said he didn't believe any theatre management has the right to produce anywhere a photo play that reflects injuriously on the character of any individual for the reason that the production of such a film leads to a disturbance of the peace, order and happiness of the whole community. A decent respect, he said, should be paid to all classes that make up American citizenship.

Mr. Lewis declared this film is calculated to arouse sympathy in the North with the "lynch law" of the South.

"If this thing goes on," he said, "we may have a lynching on Boston Common. Who knows?"

Wants State Police Censors.

Mr. Wilson suggested that the censorship be placed in the hands of the district police rather than in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries, for the former was more familiar with such matters and had shown good judgment in refusing to allow the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at Lynn on Sunday. He declared that there never has been a fight for democracy in the United States when the negro was not on the right side.

Mr. Cox opposed the measure from the viewpoint of an expert censor, and told the committee of the work which his board was carrying on. He said that the question of censorship involved the possible criticism of 7000 or 8000 distinct subjects which must be considered from all sides, and especially from that of public opinion. He said that where the subjects touched upon the real things of life, it was inevitable that there should be some degree of contention, and that the board could not decide upon pictures from the standpoint of a personal whim. It is essential, he added, that there should be common sense criticism.

When asked how the Ohio and Pennsylvania laws work, he replied that it was impossible to view pictures day in and day out with a fresh mind, and that in those States, the films were not half censored.

BROCKTON, MASS.
APR 23 1915

Judge Dowd's order to cut out the legally objectionable scene from the films of "The Birth of a Nation" was carried out to the letter Thursday in Boston and the afternoon and evening performances of the photo-play were held without interruptions or disturbance.

DEMOCRAT
Dover N. Hamp
APR 23 1915

PHOTO-PLAY TO CONTINUE

One Scene to Be Eliminated From "Birth of a Nation"

Boston, April 22.—With the elimination of one scene, the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," that is being produced at the Tremont theatre, will go on and no warrant will be issued against John B. Schoeffel, manager of the theatre, and J. J. McCarthy, representing the owner of the film, as asked by Boston negroes.

This was the decision announced by Judge Dowd when he resumed the hearing on the petition for a warrant or summons. He made known his finding without taking further testimony, for he had himself viewed the film.

The scene which the judge orders eliminated is that in which a negro is depicted as spying upon a young white girl, and afterwards chasing her with evident evil intent, until she throws herself from the top of a cliff and is killed.

WORCESTER, MASS.
APR 23 1915

The Birth of a Nation" film has ...ered several amputations so that it ...kept in motion. Usually an ...on works the other way.

NORTHAMPTON (Mass.) HERALD
APRIL 23, 1915

As a result of the agitation over ...e film play, the "Birth of a Na...n," Representative Lewis R. Sulli...n of Dorchester has introduced in ... House a bill, which will add to ... chapter governing censorship, the ...rds: "any show or entertainment ...ich tends to excite racial or re...ous prejudice or tends to a breach ...the public peace," people may ... their own opinions as to the ne...ity for such an addition to the ...

WORCESTER (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 23, 1915

...Birth of a Nation" film has ...several amputations so that it ...kept in motion. Usually an ...on works the other way.

SUN
LOWELL, MASS.
APR 23 1915

BILL AIMED AT FILM

BOSTON, April 22.—Without a dissenting vote the house and senate yesterday voted to suspend the rules and permit a late entry of Representative L. R. Sullivan's bill to prohibit theatrical performances that tend to create religious or racial feeling. This is the measure asked for by the negroes and others who sought to suppress "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont theatre, and found that the present statute did not cover their cause.

After the favorable action in both branches, the committee on judiciary voted to hold a hearing on the bill at 10 o'clock this morning in room 240, the largest committee room at the state house.

Negroes appeared before the senate ways and means committee to renew their demand for proper censoring laws for motion pictures. The committee had before it the Bates bill which was filed some time ago on the initiative of the Federation of Women's clubs. This seeks to transfer the business of censoring motion picture films from the state police to the state board of labor and industries.

William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant United States attorney general, with Butler H. Wilson, has also been interested in the fight against "The Birth of a Nation" appeared before the committee to advocate the strengthening of the law

LAWRENCE (Mass.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 23, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION LAWFUL

Boston, April 22—Municipal Court Judge Thomas H. Dowd, before whom a delegation of negroes began legal proceedings to prohibit the exhibition of picture films which they alleged were objectionable and tended to create race prejudice ruled today that the films may be shown if a certain scene is eliminated.

Judge Dowd heard evidence in the case yesterday and last night attended the theatre where the pictures were displayed. In announcing his decision the court said that the pictures were not forbidden under the law.

"There may be things which incite the colored people to protest," he said, "but these things are not covered by statute. The element of race does not enter into the controversy at all for the law knows no race nor creed in Massachusetts."

WORCESTER (Mass.) TELEGRAM
APRIL 23, 1915

Without opposition the house suspended its rules to admit the petition of L. R. Sullivan of Boston [illegible] such productions as "The birth of a nation."

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 23, 1915

MOVIE HEARING PACKED

"The Birth of a Nation" Is Bitterly Denounced

The Negroes Not Alone in Their Opposition

Hon. Samuel W. McCall Also Against Photoplay

Mr. Storey and Lieut. Gov. Cushing Speak

Perhaps even more enthusiasm was expressed this morning at the hearing before the Joint Committee on Judiciary in reference to the Sullivan and Hallowell bills which have been presented to put an end to the production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," than at the hearing on the sectarian amendment. Room 240 was packed to its capacity with negroes and whites alike, and the hand-clapping and cheers following the address of William H. Lewis, former assistant attorney general of the United States, expressed the sentiment of those present. The negroes were not alone in their protest against the photoplay, for Lieutenant Governor Grafton D. Cushing, Moorfield Storey, J. Mott Hallowell, Dr. Rowley of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Joseph Lee and Rev. Herbert A. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church were among those who appeared in favor of some legislation which would remedy the situation.

Butler R. Winslow, of Boston, who conducted the hearing, pointed out the defects in the law of 1908 and declared that he objected to the dual authority now placed in the mayor and police commissioner of Boston. Both the governor and lieutenant governor have decried "The Birth of a Nation," he said, in unmeasured terms, and many other authorities have expressed their opposition to it. He, therefore, asked for an amendment to that law so as to cover the situation.

J. Mott Hallowell outlined the existing acts and explained the change which he offered. There are two laws, he said, applicable to the production of films, one for Boston and another for other communities, besides the police law in putting an end to obscene productions. The law applying to outside communities permits the mayor or selectmen to revoke a license at pleasure.

The Hallowell Amendment

The law applying to Boston, however, is different. For revocation of a license, the mayor and police commissioner must act jointly, and then only when the production is immoral, obscene or tending to injure the morals of the community. The proposed amendment would affect section 2 of 1908, and would give the mayor the right to suspend a theatre's license if the production tends to create disturbance, incite riots or cause public disquiet, after the producers refuse to comply with the request of the mayor or chief of the district police. Boston attracts many people from outside districts and, therefore, he said, there should be some person who is interested more than locally and who should have authority to revoke licenses.

Lieutenant Governor Cushing said that the situation which has arisen shows that there is no authority upon which to place any responsibility. The protest, he declared, did not come from the negro alone, but from many persons whom he formerly represented in the Legislature, and, although he had not seen the production, he felt that it should be stopped. He said that it was for the committee to give some one that authority which the law does not provide. If the motion pictures are not good for the morals—in many cases in his charitable work he has found that they were not—they should be stopped. The interpretation of immorality should be something broader than sexual immorality, he thought. After somewhat lengthy questioning as to what changes he might suggest, the lieutenant governor said that he would submit a bill to the committee for its consideration.

Moorfield Storey declared that the present law covered only cases of obscenity, and yet the chief of police has failed to consider the crime of rape immoral. He quoted Rabbi Wise of New York, who was greatly opposed to the production, and declared that the white people owed more to the negro than to any other race, and yet they were doing everything in their power to degrade and ridicule him. Here in Boston, he said, the play is intended to instill into the young man the idea that the negro was all right when he was a slave, but that when he was freed he showed his desires in a lust for white women. Furthermore, he said, the pictures of the Ku Klux Clan are not true, for that organization had spent its force before the negroes came into power at all.

He thought that there should be the same law in Boston in reference to productions as in the rest of the State, and that a power should be vested in some board to put an end to the outrage. He declared that there was an enormous mass of financial power behind the producers which influenced the press to keep silent, and that those people who had the power could care for themselves, while the negro who was being libelled was forced to suffer. He said that the best thing which the Legislature could do would be to teach the producers that they could not make money by ridiculing a race.

If he were the mayor of he would stop the play. I that he most certainly then read a letter from V. McCall protesting uction of the play, in

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have not seen The Birth of a Nation' film but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and revives a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be ehibited. As to the Ku-Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes let him read the reports of theh trials in the U. S. Circuit Court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offence against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light: As to the negro race after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship after generations of slavery he should do his reviling in some other State than Massachusetts whose chief glory it is that she was the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

Dr. Rowley of the S. P. C. A., said that the excitement in the audience when he saw the play was proof of the feeling which it aroused. nI answer to questions by Chairman Kennard, he said that any pictures which tended towards cruelty to animals were objectionable.

Joseph Lee questioned the advisability of placing the crime of lynching in such an exalted light. He, therefore, asked for a law which would adequately cover the situation.

Miss Adeline Moffatt said that of all the plays she has seen, she had never seen anything so insidiously immoral. She cited two instances of reaction which she had heard. As a Southerner, she said that every family had some pride, but that there as not one which was willing to acknowledge an ancestor who was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, which has been pictured in an absolutely untruthful light.

William H. Lewis said that an attempt is being made to degrade and belittle the negro in the eyes of his friends. The play has been brought to Boston that Massachusetts may put its stamp of approval upon it. It is a pretty strong personality which can go to that play and come out feeling more friendly towards the negro, he said. The play was written out of race hatred and by the most notorious "negro fobist" living, Thomas Dixon.

"We are not satisfied," he said, "by what has been cutout by order of the court in the deletion of the "Gus" scene. The place to cut off a snake's tail is at his neck. You have scenes, disgusting and degrading, in the play which never hapepned. Not only that but New England is held up to ridicule, by the depiction of Thaddeus Stevens and Charles Sumner. We object to this play for the propaganda which it presents and which tends to raise prejudice against the negro. The bill which may be drawn makes no difference, so long as we get relief. Massachusetts has a history to sustain and it lies with the Legislature as to whether it will sustain that history, or whether it will allow those illustrious men who have represented Massachusetts to be held up to ridicule. We do not mind the minstrel or the fun-loving negro, but we shall protest forever against such a calumny as this upon the colored race."

Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Bar Association, said that the present law left the licensing to the discretion of the authorities, and he thought that it might be better to make the laws so specific that there would be no room for such discretion.

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson suggested that all those interested in the question might get together and draw up a satisfactory bill. As to race prejudice, he said that not all of the indignation has come from the negro and that as much harm has been done to the morals of the white man as injustice to the negro. If this was a fight between Catholics and Protestants, that play would not be on the stage one week, he declared.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 23, 1915
1707

NOTABLE SPEAKERS TO FIGHT ANTI-RACE FILM

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, Joseph Lee of the Boston School Board, Mrs. Susan FitzGerald, Ministers and Lawyers Urge Law to Bar Plays Rousing Race Feeling.

The protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was vigorously voiced before the legislative committee on judiciary today at the State House by a [illegible] of speakers, who urged the passage of legislation to prohibit [illegible] the production of such plays in this State.

Among the speakers who appeared before the committee today to urge the proposed legislation to put an end to plays causing religious or racial trouble were Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, J. Mott Hallowell, Joseph Lee of the Boston school committee, Miss Adelene Moffatt, Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; William H. Lewis, former assistant attorney-general of the United States; Christopher R. Elliot, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Boston Bar Association; the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, Atty. Edgar P. Benjamin, the Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald, R. S. Thompson, the Rev. George L. Cady and the Rev. P. W. Swain and Moorfield Storey.

Cheer McCall's Letter.

A letter from Samuel W. McCall of Winchester, written to J. Mott Hallowell, was read by Mr. Hallowell, amid applause. Mr. McCall's letter is as follows:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow, but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have never seen the "Birth of a Nation" film, but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited. As to the Ku Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders burnigs and other detestable crimes let him read the reports of the trials in the United States Circuit Court at Columbia at he November term of 1871. It is a gross offense against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any faverable light. As to the Negro race, after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship, after generations of slavery he should do this reviling in some other state than Massachusetts, whose chief glory it is that she was in the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

The committee's hearing was relative to the Sullivan bill to amend the present state law prohibiting obscene or immoral plays so as to make the law apply to plays causing religious or racial strife. There were various other suggested changes in the law to bring about a remedy of existing conditions suggested by speakers, however.

The case for the petitioners was conducted by Butler R. Wilson, a Boston attorney. He indorsed the principle contained in the Sullivan bill, as did other speakers, but suggested a different route of arriving at a remedy.

He believed, he said, that the 1908 law giving to the mayor and police commissioner in Boston joint authority to regulate plays should be amended so as to eliminate the police commissioner. The latter had told himd Wilson said, that he did not believe the police department should be made the judge of what is moral or ethical in a play; the police department should execute the law, not interpret it.

More Power for Mayor.

In addition to making the mayor the sole authority in Boston, Wilson said, he would give the mayor broader powers which would enable him to stop plays like "The Birth of a Nation." Wilson further suggested that the state police be given authority to stop the production of a film play on any day in the week. At present the state police can forbid the production of motion pictures on Sundays, but cannot interfere with their production on weekdays, unless they conflict with the general laws.

The room, the largest committee room in the State House, was packed when Wilson opened the case. Many members of the Legislature, including Speaker Cox, were present. John F. Cusick, attorney for the Tremont Theatre, had a seat at a press table, and John A. Sullivan, the Boston corporation counsel, came in later. Atty. Wilson, in opening the case for the petitioners, said:

"We favor legislation—

"Because the authority which it provides is joint, being lodged in both the mayor and police commissioner. This joint authority makes the law ineffective. Experience under this law has taught us joint action is difficult to get.

"Because the construction put upon the law by both the Mayor and police commissioner of Boston is so narrow that it destroys the effectiveness of the law. The obscenity and immorality mentioned in the law here have been uniformly construed to mean sexual immorality.

"Under this law an exhibiton owned by non-residents, which perverts history, or which incites to public disorder, or which twice a day vilifies, slanders and holds up to detestation thousands of Boston citizens, or which by the lavish expenditure of large sums of money for advertising has chloroformed the Boston press, with three exceptions, into a conspiracy of silence, or which glorifies mob law and snaps its fingers at the public authorities.

"Because this law is without teeth and is ineffective the city of Boston and the commonwealth are in a humiliating position. The 'Birth of a Nation,' now being exhibited at the Tremont Theatre, is the play I have described. It has been fitly described as the assassination of a race; it has been condemned by the Governor and the Lieutenant-Governor of the commonwealth, by the mayor of Boston and the chief of the Massachusetts district police, who has refused to allow it to be shown on Sunday. It has been condemned by 20,000 colored citizens of Greater Boston; it has been denounced in scathing language by three Boston papers beyond the reach of 'hush money,' the Congregationalist, The Traveler and the Post."

"The mayor of Boston has told various delegations that if he had the power he would drive this play from the stage. We want him to have that power."

J. Mott Hallowell, a former assistant attorney-general and the lawyer who had charge of the court proceedings against the play, was the next speaker. He went into the legal aspects of the situation, stating that while there was divided authority in Boston, the mayors in other cities of the state or the selectmen in the Bay state towns had the power to revoke theatre licenses at their pleasure. Hallowell said the mayor of Boston should have similar authority; but that in any event the law should be made clear so that it would state which plays were illegal and which were legal. The speaker said that at present there was a "feeble condition of law."

Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, the next speaker, urged speedy remedial action. He said his experience as a member of the Legislature and as speaker of the House enabled him to say that the committee on judiciary, composed, as it is, entirely of lawyers, could draft legislation to correct matters. The Lieutenant-Governor said it was his belief that public sentiment demanded a correction.

Allston Denies Indorsing Film

Philip J. Allston, colored, today registered a denial of assertions made in a statement published this morning, in which Henry MacMahon, general representative for the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," asserted that Allston, when questioned by him, had voiced approval of the photo-play, and that Allston, together with Dr. W. Alpheus Cox, also colored, had indorsed [illegible] tested spectacle.

Allston today said: "In an article printed in one of the morning papers today, Henry MacMahon says that I talked with him and approved the play. This is false. I never saw MacMahon or Carthy and never indorsed 'The Birth of a Nation.' I wrote Mr. Cronin on April 14 to the effect that the play should be taken off.

"I never went into the presence of the Tremont Theatre; Mr. [illegible] never asked me about the play and only a few words with him [illegible] about a half-dozen at the most."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 23, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

NOW that the last valid objection to the production of "The Birth of a Nation" has been removed, it is in order to remark that the picture drama is remarkably effective, because exceptionally inspiring, from the standpoint of broad and true Americanism. It represents an outlay of a fortune in preparation, but it represents something more important to the public, and that is its careful and coherent attempt to tell the story of the nation's upbuilding in a manner that will appeal most effectively to the average human.

Indeed, on its constructive side, it is easily one of the most remarkable achievements that the people of Boston have ever seen. Unfortunately, a serious diversion caused by the opposition of colored leaders in this city to certain phases of "The Birth of a Nation" has obscured temporarily—except for those who witnessed the production with open minds and responsive hearts—the strength, beauty and inspiration of the whole.

"The Birth of a Nation" goes further in genuine constructive work by means of photographic films that any of its predecessors have gone or tried to go. It deserves the unqualified support of those who seek something better and more satisfactory than a few hours of enjoyment and who can appreciate the zeal and energy, the intelligence and patriotism that are so happily blended in Mr. Griffith's masterpiece. No man or woman can see "The Birth of a Nation" without rejoicing that he or she is part of that vast and a sharer in a glorious heritage.

BANGOR (Me.) COMMERCIAL
APRIL 24, 1915

The controversy over the production of the photo play, The Birth of a Nation, which has so stirred Boston of late, because of the objection of colored residents to certain scenes that do not represent the negro in an attractive light, is drawing to a close. The management having agreed to eliminate the particularly objectionable scenes. The management and local boys have taken this position for some time except that it realized the great advertising that the film was obtaining throughout especially. One of the chief backers to campaign against local showing plays of doubtful propriety that attract attention thereby draw large audiences, a far greater success than the production is registered.

WORCESTER (Mass.) TELEGRAM
APRIL 23, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" MUST NOT COME TO WORCESTER

Representative Colored Citizens Express Their Views and Say Exhibition of the Film Will Be Strenuously Opposed

Colored citizens of Worcester will do everything possible, even going to the extent of having a mass meeting if necessary, to oppose the exhibition of the moving picture, "The birth of a new nation," in Worcester, should the producers decide to make an attempt to obtain a permit, according to the pastors of the churches in statements given to The Telegram yesterday. The ministers were emphatic in denouncing the film, and gave strong arguments in favor of prohibiting it, not only in Worcester, but Boston and all other cities.

Rev. William B. Perry, pastor of the Bethel M. E. church, has been in Boston for the past 10 days attending the New England Methodist Episcopal conference, and has mingled with the colored people who have risen against the picture. He has studied the situation and has seen the picture. He was not present the night of the near-riot, but says this exhibition of hot-headedness is what is prejudicing the public against stopping the film.

He said: "Of course, I am in hearty sympathy with the colored people of Boston. I do not tolerate hotheadedness on the part of anyone, and I heartily disapprove of the scandalous exhibition in Boston, recently, but I do approve of the manner in which the more conventional people have taken hold of the matter. While I am conservative and believe the drama has great value in giving moral and educational training, I never believe that it is wise in its accordance with justice to show demoralizing pictures. My opinion is especially strong regarding the oppression of the negro.

"The negro population of the United States is in the minimum and is overwhelmed by the white people more than 10 to one. I do not believe it is right to oppress the negro race through the motion picture or stage because we have so much to put up with. The present moral, intellectual and financial condition of the negro of the United States was made possible by service of the white and colored after the war ended, with the aid of the church. If any of the things depicted in this picture have ever existed, the race in its present condition is so far removed, in the main, that such a thing is an insult

and is demoralizing and will have a tendency to belittle the colored race in the opinion of right thinking people.

"There are so many people who never have a serious thought that they would accept this picture as being true in the present. In view of this I think we should condemn and oppose the exhibition of this film. I was in Boston during the recent conference of the Methodist Episcopal church of New England, during which time I kept in touch with the movements of the white and colored people both, in seeking to suppress the picture. The members of the conference showed their sympathy is with the negro because they accepted a resolution offered by Rev. Willis J. King, pastor of the Fourth Methodist Episcopal church of Boston, against the exhibition of this film.

"I have made a thorough study of the negro race, and I am a student in anthropology. Recently, in preparing for my M. A. degree from Clark university, I wrote a thesis on the "Status of the negro race." The thesis was accepted, and hence my authorities must have been good. Now, my point is to say that in all the studying necessary for this thesis, I failed to discover authority for the things which this picture reveals.

The colored people have made wonderful progress since the days the picture describes. I fail to see what is accomplished by the exhibition of the film, other than fattening the purses of the producers and degrading the minds of the younger set who witness the production.

"I am rather surprised at the stand the municipal government of Boston and the state officials have taken regarding prohibiting the exhibition, but I feel sure that the officials of Worcester will stand by the statements already issued, saying the film will not be allowed in this city. Believe me, if an attempt is made to bring it into the Heart of the commonwealth, they will meet with considerable opposition from us, and it will not be of the slam-bang style, which some of the Boston people have used."

Rev. Mr. Perry will preach on the subject in his church Sunday night. He will place the matter before his parishioners in the true light, and explain clearly what the picture shows, and what the truth really is. He speaks from authority, as he has witnessed the film and has also made a thorough study of negro life in the present time and in the days which the film shows.

Rev. J. C. Ayler, pastor of the Bethel A. M. E. church, was also very emphatic in denouncing the picture. He has not seen it produced, but has read enough on the subject to speak. He said: "Upon my information and belief, I learn that the 'Birth of a new nation' is a modified substitute for 'The clansman,' which caused such an uproar some time ago. While it may be first the motive of the producer to make money for the reason of its sensational character, and while I am not in a position to charge racial motive, I am under the opinion that the exhibition of such a picture, if continued, would have the effect (incidentally, at least) of stirring race feeling.

"This opinion is axiomatic and since it has already given offense and stirred race feeling, its discontinuance would be justified by divine suggestion, to the effect that 'if eating meat offend thy brethren, eat no more.

"It may be argued on the one hand, that the negro race is a little sensitive, admitted by the negro himself to be true, but his sensitiveness could be but the result of friction with historic reality.

The negro sensitiveness argues quite strongly his humanitarian character and as such he would naturally flinch and take remedial steps toward the elimination of whatever may seem to have a tendency to aggravate his condition.

"The justification in the Boston negroes in asking the courts to discontinue the exhibition of the film may be seen not only by the negro himself, but also by the descendants of that abolitionist period, the blood of which still runs warm in the veins of a host of people in the United States. In fact it seems to me this abolitionist spirit among the white people of the North has been, is and will be the saving grace of the negroes in this country. Without such potent friends as the negro race has, I could see nothing short of the extermination of the black man in this country.

"My reason for this observance is that his continuance would be unmathematical for can 10,000,00 negroes survive against the criticisms of 90,000,000 white people. Furthermore, the sensitive negro is naturally apprehensive, as he is wide awake to two things; first, that, regardless of color there still remains sectional feeling between the second, the negro is wide awake to the fact that his privileges and rights of elective franchise are in force in the North (as they are not in the South) and is therefore apprehensive, of whatever may be said or done to disturb his social and political rights north of the Mason-Dixon line.

North and South;

"I do not believe in threatening or hinting at a threat, but I will say the colored people will not sit still and let the film come into this city without offering stiff opposition. I know that the city officials have said they would not allow the film to be shown in this city, but if any strong attempt should be made by the producers we will get together and endeavor to quash all attempts to come to Worcester. I think the colored people of Worcester are in sympathy with those in Boston, but I can say that few residents of Worcester believe in the sort of actions as were shown in the near-riot.

"Violence will never make the city officials of Boston

stop the picture, and it is my firm opinion that they have been greatly prejudiced by these outrageous actions in not preventing the further exhibition of the film. The only plausible method to be used in the Boston situation is verbal persuasion and the [illegible] of numbers. If the [illegible] of Boston were approached in a [illegible] manner and pleaded with [illegible] of being demanded to stop the film, I am sure a different result would be shown. Of course, there are many people in Boston who are using the correct method, but they are in the minority. If the other people would combine efforts with these the result would show a marked difference."

Rev. Hiram Conway, pastor of the John-street Baptist church, gave his opinion in a sermon he preached Sunday night, and which appeared in the Monday issue of The Telegram. He is emphatic in denouncing the film, and no amount of persuasion will move him in his opinion.

Rev. Sidney L. Smith, pastor of Zion A. M. E. church, Belmont street, said:—

"That the photoplay, 'The birth of a nation,' which is now being shown in Boston, if allowed to continue, will result in serious trouble, is not to be doubted. The protest of the colored residents of the city of Boston is voiced by 10,000,000 of the negro race, nor are they alone.

"Why should Massachusetts allow such play or pictures of such a nature to say nothing of their false representation, depicting the negro as vicious as a brute and barbarous as a savage chasing white women and girls?

"This is enough to cause a desire for bloodshed.

"While it is true that the negro has his faults, he is not alone. Why did the man of the South, when leaving his home, commit his wife and daughters to the care of his slave, if he was so bad?

"The negro race feels that it a gross insult that such pictures should be shown as regards them.

"Those who have never been to the South are very often led to a false conception of the man of color, if they listen to the tales of those who depict the negro as being dangerous; the negro is not dangerous, only when he is maltreated.

"The negro asks only for fair play, and it is not justice to him to allow such pictures as those exhibited in 'The birth of a nation' to be shown.

"He should be shown as he is today and not as he was in the days of slavery, nor can I ever believe that he was as portrayed in the 'Birth of a nation,' even then.

"He is not so lewd or immodest as he is portrayed.

"The picture, if allowed to continue, in my opinion, will lead to more race hatred, if not race riots.

"I cannot believe the people of Worcester would stand for the exhibition of the 'Birth of a nation,' in this city, nor the state at large allow its continuation."

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 23, 1915

Hundreds Hear Plea For Negro

On Bill to Bar Race Plays

Legislation that will vest in the district police the power to stop such motion picture dramas as "The Birth of a Nation" instead of the police commissioner of Boston, was urged at the public hearing this morning on the Sullivan motion picture censorship bill before the Committee on Judiciary.

Hundreds of persons, black and white, were in the large committee room to listen to Moorfield Storey, Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, Dr. Francis H. Rowley, J. M. Hallowell and others denounce "The Birth of a Nation" as a villification of the negro race, and urge a change in the law so that competent authorities may be given power to stop the performance.

The Sullivan bill adds to the statute of 1910 a clause that will permit the barring of plays that tend to rouse race or religious prejudice. This is not entirely satisfactory to the negroes, and through Butler R. Wilson, their attorney, they submitted a redraft.

Not all Agreed on Form The Law Should Take

The redraft would take the power from the police commissioner and give it to the chief of the district police, although power would also be left with the mayor of Boston to stop the offending plays immediately. They claimed that the present law for joint action by the mayor and police commissioner had the effect of making the law inoperative.

They also charged that the construction put upon the law by both the police commissioner and the mayor is so narrow that it also destroys the effectiveness of the law. Obscenity and immorality named in the law, they said, was uniformly construed by these officials as meaning sexual immorality.

However, the proponents of the legislation were not all agreed on just what form the law should take. Moorfield Storey was in favor of a state-wide law that would permit the Mayor to revoke the license and stop plays immediately, but at the same time protecting the property and capital of the men producing the play. However, he would not allow them to go to court on the question of stopping the play.

McCall Scores Teachings By the Ku Klux Clan

A letter was read from ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall, who was unable to be present. The letter dwelt on the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," rather than any law. It read:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow, but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have not seen the "Birth of a Nation" film, but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 100,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited.

"As to the Ku Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes, let him read the reports of the trials in the U. S. Circuit court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offense against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light.

"As to the Negro race after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship after generations of slavery, he should do his chief glory it is that she was in the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

Cushing Says Such Plays Ought to be Stopped

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing based his plea for legislation on the ground of public morals, and called attention to the fact that every day insidious plays are being produced that corrupt the morals of the youth. Asked if he would favor the "racial and religious" law proposed, he said he did not know, that he would have to think it over.

Asked just what he would add to the present statute governing productions of this sort, he also said that he was not prepared to answer, but would supply the committee later with his opinion.

"A situation has developed, however," said Cushing, "where there is no authority anywhere to stop a play that is offending a large portion of the population. The protest is not from the negroes alone, by any means, for I have received telephone calls from the district which I represented for years in the Legislature protesting against this play and against such a situation.

"There ought to be authority placed in the hands of competent authorities to stop such plays. I am not in favor of any particular bill, but it is manifesting possible to draft some legislation. Th eMayor told me personally that he would like to stop this play, but did not have the authority. There is a situation where there is no authority and where authority should be provided."

Moorfield Storey pleaded for the negroes as a race brought here against their will, kept, in slavery, barred from trains, hotels, restaurants, labor unions and before whom avenue after avenue to employment is being closed.

"It is not logical," he said, "that they will submit year after year to this."

The photoplay itself Storey declared to be historically incorrect. The Ku Klux Clan, he said, was formed to stop the negro from voting, not as depicted in the play to stop rape. He thought that the film was an attempt to rehabilitate the clan.

He wanted a uniform law throughout the state whereby the mayors or other authorities could close up a show of this sort immediately. He thought that this a more important than censorship.

Record. Boston Mass. Apr. 23, 1915.

Storey Would Stop Play If he Was Mayor

It was stated by Storey that obscenity should not be the only cause for stopping a show in Boston. The "Birth of a Nation," he said, was a deliberate attempt to deepen instinctive prejudices and to commercialize the most unholy instincts of man. In answer to a question, he stated that he had not seen the play but had heard about it from friends of his whom he considered reliable.

Rep. Burr asked Storey if under the present law, he would not stop the play if he was the Mayor of Boston. Storey replied that he would. There ensued a lengthy discussion, the meaning of which was appreciated only by the lawyers present, as to the proper means of framing a legislative remedy for this and similar situations.

Dr. Francis R. Rowley, president of the S. P. C. A., objected to the play from the standpoint of general race prejudice. Joseph Lee of the Boston School Committee said he had not seen the play, but declared the present law was not strong enough. He declared a law should be passed prohibiting the exultation or glorification of lynching, which, he said, was one of the greatest sins of this country.

Play Insidiously Immoral, Says Adeline Moffett

Miss Adeline Moffett stated she never saw a play so insidiously immoral, so hypocritically clever or so dangerous to the country. She said she came from the South and that no good Southerner ever boasted of Ku-Klux ancestry. She also declared that the question before the committee was something which affected far more than Boston.

William H. Lewis, former assistant U. S. Attorney-General, said that it was a good thing that the General Court of Massachusetts met yearly for the correction of grievances. He declared that an attempt was being made by "that three miles of filth film at the Tremont Theatre" to blacken and degrade our people in Boston, the birthplace of American freedom." He declared that one of the main purposes of the film was to justify the lynching of negroes in the South.

Griffith's Artistic Touch

D. W. Griffith, the Mutual's $100,000 director, with the production of his masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," has exemplified in one mighty twelve-reel motion picture those matured abilities which have made so many releases in the Mutual program, and particularly several of the new Mutual Masterpicture made under his general direction, so remarkable from an artistic point of view and so appealing from the standpoint of popularity.

A few of these pictures which show Griffith's perfecting touch, unmistakable to those who are familiar with pictures, are "The Lost House," by Richard Harding Davis; "The Outcast," by Thomas Nelson Page; "Enoch Arden," by Lord Tennyson, and "The Outlaw's Revenge in the Birth of a New Republic."

These are all masterpictures, as is "Captain Macklin." This last is the latest production sent out from the Griffith studios at Hollywood, and is founded on the story by Richard Harding Davis.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 23, 1915

HEARING TODAY ON BILL TO STOP OFFENDING PLAYS

Sullivan's Measure Is Calculated to Halt Productions Tending to Create Racial or Religious Prejudice—Admitted to Legislature.

LEGISLATIVE

Amendment of the law so that productions such as "The Birth of a Nation" may be stopped in Massachusetts on the ground that they tend to racial or religious prejudice will be under consideration by the committee on the judiciary this morning, when the bill of Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston will be heard.

The bill was admitted in the Legislature yesterday under suspension of the rules and in anticipation of a large attendance the committee hearing today will be in Room 240, the largest in the State House.

Negroes Attend

Yesterday a delegation of negroes appeared before the Senate committee on ways and means in favor of the bill for State censorship of moving pictures. William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson were the only speakers, and the bill was opposed by Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship.

Mr. Lewis said he didn't believe any theatre management has the right to produce anywhere a photo play that reflects injuriously on the character of any individual for the reason that the production of such a film leads to a disturbance of the peace, order and happiness of the whole community. A decent respect, he said, should be paid to all classes that make up American citizenship.

Mr. Lewis declared that a film is calculated to arouse sympathy in the North with the "lynch law" of the South.

"If this thing goes on," he said, "we may have a lynching on Boston Common. Who knows?"

Wants State Police Censors

Mr. Wilson suggested that the censorship be placed in the hands of the district police rather than in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries, for the former was more familiar with such matters and had shown good judgment in refusing to allow the production of "The Birth of a Nation" at Lynn on Sunday. He declared that there never has been a fight for democracy in the United States when the negro was not on the right side.

Mr. Cox opposed the measure from the viewpoint of an expert censor, and told the committee of the work which his board was carrying on. He said that the question of censorship involved the possible criticism of 7000 or 8000 distinct subjects which must be considered from all sides, and especially from that of public opinion. He said that where the subjects touched upon the real things of life, it was inevitable that there should be some degree of contention, and that the board could not decide upon pictures from the standpoint of a personal whim. It is essential, he added, that there should be common sense criticism.

When asked how the Ohio and Pennsylvania laws work, he replied that it was impossible to view pictures day in and day out with a fresh mind, and that in those States, the films were not half censored.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 23, 1915

KEEP UP FIGHT ON PHOTOPLAY

Colored People Want all "Gus Scenes" Cut Out

The scene in which "Gus" chases a young white girl until she jumps from a cliff to her death was missing from the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," as shown at the Tremont Theatre yesterday afternoon and last night.

"GUS" STILL IN THE PLAY

This elimination took place within the 24 hours allowed the picture management by Judge Thomas H. Dowd, who declared that scene to be obscene and immoral.

"Gus" still remains a character in the photo-play, and just previous to the eliminated part he is seen skulking about the neighborhood where the white girl lives. The girl starts for [illegible] and then the picture [illegible] and shifts to the scene where the [illegible] and the Ku-Klux Klan [illegible] the hunt for "Gus," who is [illegible] apprehended and given a trial. [illegible] trial he is whisked away to the [illegible] fate. The break in the plot [illegible] shows the wielding of the [illegible] pruning knife.

[illegible] fact that the film retains any [illegible] of "Gus" is displeasing to Attorney William H. Lewis, one of the most prominent colored lawyers in the country, who said yesterday afternoon: 'I don't consider that the management has acted in good faith in not entirely eliminating the character of 'Gus.'"

Colored People Not Satisfied

Though a partial victory has been won by the colored people, they do not intend to stop their opposition to the photo-play and will work hard to obtain the enactment of legislation that they believe will cause the removal of the play.

Henry MacMahon, general press representative of "The Birth of a Nation" company, gave out the following statement last night, in reference to a communication by Philip J. Allston, which was recently published, and another communication from William Monroe [illegible] concerning it:

"[illegible] Allston and Dr. W. Alexander attended the first public performance of 'The Birth of a Nation' Saturday, April 10. At the end of the show a group in the lobby discussing the play included Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy, myself and several colored people, Mr. Allston and Dr. Cox withdrew from the group and began to talk in another part of the lobby with Mr. McCarthy and myself.

"It was then we asked them whether they had any objections to the presentation of the play, whereupon they replied that they did not have objections and expressed in a general way the idea that such a story might wield a beneficial effect. I think Mr. Griffith was a party to a portion of this talk. Mr. Allston in particular invited Mr. Griffith to his chemical shop and both men expressed themselves as highly pleased with meeting us. Subsequently these two visitors went with me to the press room and there was further amiable conversation at the farthest removed from any expressed dislike of the play.

"Consequently I was very much surprised to read a note to the Post from Mr. Allston recently denying the substance of his statements. My only conclusion is that in the interval Mr. Allston must have been won over to the protestants against the play, and that his present feeling in the matter is not what he expressed to us on Saturday, April 10.

"William Munroe Trotter's letter, being an inquiry concerning the above incident, calls for no further comment. Having witnesses to what happened I do not believe there need be further entry into personalities between Mr. Trotter and myself, although we possess facts at our command tending to stamp him as not an altogether spotless interrogator."

LOWELL (Mass.) SUN
APRIL 23, 1915

"The Radium Thieves," a Vitagraph Broadway Star feature in three parts is also seen on the program today and tomorrow. And not satisfied with this, the management in order to assure a big dime's worth, went and booked "Rods of Wrath," a four-reel drama, with Henry B. Walthall, famous leads in "The Birth of a Nation," in the principal role. [illegible] are, guess that will surely fill the bill. Other pictures will be shown, however.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 23, 1915

PLAY SHOWN WITH CHASE SCENE OUT

The photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," [illegible] has aroused a storm of protest among the colored residents of Boston, was shown yesterday at the Tremont Theatre with the scenes showing the chase of a white girl by the negro "Gus" cut out.

This action on the part of the theatre managers was the result of an agreement with Mayor Curley and Judge Dowd of the municipal court, from whom a warrant was sought for the arrest of two of the theatrical men.

A statement was given out at the Tremont Theatre saying that the question of deleting the parts of the picture which were classed as objectionable had been under advisement [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 23, 1915

MARRYING TALK WORRIES WALSH

He Will Do Something Desperate if It Goes on, He Tells Arcanum.

If people don't stop teasing Gov. Walsh about his getting married, one of the handsomest bachelors in the state may drop out of the ranks. Speaking to the Grand council of the Royal Arcanum at the American House last night, the Governor let it be known that the practice of picking brides for him had "got on his nerves."

"I am afraid," he said, with one of his winsome smiles, "that if this clamor doesn't stop soon I'll have to do something desperate."

As he arose to speak he was greeted with the strains of "Sweet Adeline."

"Your quartet is entirely wrong," he said, "my song is 'Oh, Promise Me.'

"You know a man has only to enter politics to get publicity, and if he is a bachelor he gets a double dose. Everyone seems to be engaged in picking a charming helpmate for him. It's getting to be a common occurrence for me to pick up the newspaper in the morning to find that I have become engaged.

Growing Serious.

"Only a few days ago a newspaperman approached me and said: 'Is it really true, Governor, that you are going to be married?' You see the situation is growing quite serious for me."

The Governor then launched into a serious discussion of the meeting at the State House last Monday when hundreds of Negroes besought him to end the run of "The Birth of a Nation."

"Massachusetts [illegible] never tolerated any aspersion of any race or creed, and I am happy to say that when my visitors left the State House, they appeared fairly happy with the assurance that I would do everything in my power to secure for them the freedom and happiness which this government stands for, and which is rightly theirs."

Other speakers at the dinner, which was under the auspices of the Royal Arcanum Club of Massachusetts, and which, although it was an annual banquet, marked the first time women were invited to a session of the Grand council, included: S. M. Brinson, supreme guide, R. A., of New Bern, N. C.; C. Edgar Searing, G. R., of Massachusetts; David F. Dillon, O. V. R., Massachusetts, and Mrs. Minnie J. Bromley, S. R., Loyal Ladies' Royal Arcanum.

More Than 200 Attend.

The two-day session opened yesterday morning with C. Edgar Searing in the chair. More than 200 representatives, with a large number of past regents and supervising deputies, are in attendance. Guests here include: George Martin, first grand treasurer and one of the organizers of the Royal Arcanum, and Dr. E. O. Parker, grand orator, of Connecticut.

A feature of the first day's session was the nominating of officers, and important standing committees, who will be installed in office this evening, by Supreme Guide S. M. Brinson. The nominees include: Judge David F. Dillon of Palmer, grand regent; Fred A. Goodwin of Dorchester, grand vice-regent; Herbert A. Billings of Weymouth, grand orator; William L. Kelt of Allston, grand secretary; Horace G. Williams of Roxbury, grand treasurer; Frederick E. Jones of Lowell, grand chaplain; Henry G. Wells of Haverhill, grand guide; John T. Friary of Roslindale, grand warden, and H. L. Hines of Springfield, grand sentry. A spirited contest is promised in the election of a number of the standing committees, supreme representatives and alternates, which election, as well as that of the officers, will take place after the noon recess, today.

Herald Apr 23, 1915

LEGISLATURE ADMITS BILL AIMED AT FILM

Opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" Will Be Heard by Committee at 10 A. M.

Without a dissenting vote the House and Senate yesterday voted to suspend the rules and permit a late entry of Representative L. R. Sullivan's bill to prohibit theatrical performances that tend to create religious or racial feeling. This is the measure asked for by the Negroes and others who sought to suppress "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, and found that the present statute did not cover their cause.

After the favorable action in both branches, the committee on judiciary voted to hold a hearing on the bill at 10 o'clock this morning in room 240, the largest committee room at the State House.

Negroes appeared before the Senate ways and means committee to renew their demand for proper censoring laws for motion pictures. The committee had before it the Bates bill which was filed some time ago on the initiative of the Federation of Women's Clubs. This seeks to transfer the business of censoring motion picture films from the state police to the state board of labor and industries.

William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant United States attorney-general, with Butler R. Wilson, who has also been interested in the contest against "The Birth of a Nation" film, appeared before the committee to advocate the strengthening of the law.

Advocates of the bill pointed out that the state police department at present has only the power to stop [illegible] of objectionable films [illegible] days. It can interfere with the [illegible] of such films on weekdays provided they conflict with the general laws. They felt that either the state police should be given more power, or else the Bates bill, which they felt would remedy the situation as far as weekdays are concerned, should be passed.

Butler R. Wilson, an attorney, said: "When we go to the mayor of Boston we are chloroformed by promises; when we go to the police commissioner, we are told he is lacking in authority. They do have censors, but they maintain that a censor's opinion is part of his very soul, and cannot be moved by the laws of this state."

William H. Lewis declared "The Birth of a Nation" was really an attempt on the part of the South to justify lynching.

"This film is a libel on history and a vile calumny on the colored race," he said.

"If this film goes on we may have a lynching on Boston Common. Who knows?"

Orrin G. Cox of New York, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship, which had "passed" the film, "The Birth of a Nation" appeared before the committee at the direction, he said, of the national board.

He said films were made showing "weaknesses" of the Jews, the Irish, the Dutch and others, and that, although there were protests, on occasions, he did not think the showing of such "weaknesses" should be prohibited when there was no attempt to deliberately attack a race. Cox, whose remarks were of a general nature, did not think the bill under discussion was a good one.

Wants Yankees Also Kept Out of Movies

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

Sir—As the descendant of a Massachusetts immigrant who arrived here in a slower boat than the Mayflower, but who got here before 1640, I desire to protest to the extent of my vocal and other powers against the presentation on any stage of any play, photo or otherwise, which contains any one of these characters:

Hard-fisted New Englander who grinds his neighbors and forecloses the mortgage on his own brother's farm.

Crabbed church deacon who turns his daughter out into the cold and snow-swept night because she went to spelling school and did not get home until 9.45, or thereabouts.

Stereotyped Yankee old maid who wants a husband, can't get one and chases every man in sight.

Rounder son of crabbed church deacon who goes to big city, becomes a gambler and frequenter of horse races and marries a woman who can change the color of her hair as easily as she changes her mind.

Prominent lawyer of village who publicly reads the Declaration of Independence every Fourth of July, and gets drunk on hard cider or other stuff as soon as possible.

But possibly you haven't room for any more specifications, but my [illegible] a blanket one and is intended to prevent the presentation or publication of anything which might tend to remind me that we "Yankees" are not perfect and are not all descended from saints. I trust that I am not too late to join the members of other races who are now on the protest firing line.

NODDY THE NEUTRAL.

Journal Apr 23

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 23, 1915

JUDGE DOWD'S ORDER OBEYED

Scene Is Taken Out of "Birth of Nation."

Opponents of the Photo-Play Are Busy on Beacon Hill

Wish Censorship Put in Hands of State Police

Judge Dowd's order to cut out the [illegible] gally objectionable scene from the [illegible] of "The Birth of a Nation" was [illegible] out to the letter yesterday and the [illegible] arnoon and evening performances of the photo-play were held without [illegible] tions or disturbance of any kind.

During the evening there were [illegible] of the idly curious class of [illegible] front of the theatre than of [illegible] during the week and by 8 o'clock [illegible] was absolutely not a person in the lobby of the theatre, on the street, on the mall of the Common—not [illegible] a policeman. Inside the theatre were a number of policemen who had nothing to do but watch the moving picture. The house was sold out [illegible] 8 o'clock.

But those who are opposed to the production were not idle during the day. A committee headed by Butler Wilson, William H. Lewis, ex-assistant United States district attorney, appeared before the Senate Committee on Ways and Means and urged the passage of the Carstens bill, which seeks to place state censorship over all moving picture films used in the licensed places of amusement in the Commonwealth. The bill was introduced, before "The Birth of a Nation" came to this city, by Representative Carstens, secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

As the bill stands in committee it seeks to put the censorship of films in the hands of the State Board of Labor and Industries, but Messrs Lewis and Wilson urged that this authority be vested in the State Police.

There is another bill, however, for the regulation of public entertainments which is aimed at "The Birth of a Nation" and which will come up for hearing at 10 o'clock this forenoon before the Committee on Judiciary. The House yesterday referred the bill, which was introduced by Representative Sullivan, to the Committee on Judiciary and the bill was sent on to the Senate for concurrence in suspension of rules and committee reference.

At the hearing on the Carstens bill William H. Lewis said: "The city of Boston at this time is almost solely responsible for the film known as "The Birth of a Nation." That film is a libel on history and a vile calumny on the colored race.

"The picture is put out to incite lynching. It is to justify the Ku Klux Klan program for future lynchings and to incite the approval of the white people of the North. Let them go on and [illegible] continue let us not be surprised to see the lynching of colored men on Boston Common."

Butler Wilson said: "When we go to the Mayor of Boston we are chloroformed by promises. When we go to the Police Commissioner we are told he is lacking in authority. They do have censors, but they maintain that a censor's opinion is part of his very soul, and cannot be moved by the laws of the Commonwealth."

Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censors, spoke in opposition to the bill. He said that the question of censorship involved the possible criticism of 7000 or 8000 distinct subjects which must be considered from all sides, and especially from that of public opinion. He said that where the subjects touched upon the real things of life it was inevitable that there should be some degree of conference of opinion and that the board could not decide upon pictures from the standpoint of a personal whim. It is essential, he added, that there should be common sense criticism.

BOSTON (Mass.) GLOBE
APR 23

LAWRENCE (Mass.) EVENING TRIBUNE
APR 23

NOT THE SPIRIT OF OLD

Worcester Telegram: The "Birth of a Nation" as it is played in the stage in Boston today is a good deal different from the real stuff which was started 139 years ago in the same section of the country. Then the patriots had something of importance to tend to. Today some of the people are presuming to remember the heroic deeds of the patriots who began the American fight for independence. They do it almost entirely at play and call it sport. But they have almost forgotten how to ride as Paul Revere did, out through the countryside.

When asked Boston when Mr. Storey would.

Mr. Hallowell Howe Samuel against the prod which he says

2 23 191

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 23, 1915

LM MIGHT LEAD TO LYNCHING

TY. LEWIS ARGUES AT STATE HOUSE HEARING

fficulties in Way of Practical Legislation Pointed Out

f the p... The Birth of a Na..." is allowed to continue, there may be a lynching on Boston Common, d ex-Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. William H. wis, before the Senate Ways and Means mmittee at the hearing on the Carstens transferring the censorship of moving tures from the State Board of Labor and dustries.

aring on the Sullivan "Birth of a ation" bill will be given by the Committee on Judiciary in Room 240 of the State ouse this morning. The Sullivan bill mends the act of 1909 by adding that pictures that stir up race or religious prejudice shall be barred by the censor.

The hearing yesterday was a continued one, but short, as the Senate had a morning session. Mr. Lewis declared that he did not believe any theatre manager ent has the right to produce anywhere a photo play that reflects injuriously on the character of any individual for the reason that the production of such a film leads to a disturbance of the peace, order and happiness of the whole community.

A decent respect, he said, should be paid by all the classes that make up American citizenship.

Referring to the film now being shown at the "Birth of a Nation," Lewis declared that it was a libel on American history, a vile calumny of the colored race and reflects seriously on the commonwealth of Massachusetts and its ideals.

"It is calculated," he said, "to arouse sympathy with the 'lynch law' of the south.

"If this thing keeps on," said Mr. Lewis, "we may have a lynching on Boston Common, who knows?"

Mr. Lewis said that the scenes depicted in the film never happened and characterized the whole production as a villainous lie.

Orrin G. Cox, advisory secretary of the national board of censorship, submitted testimony showing that the proposed law is unwise.

Points Out Difficulties

Mr. Cox questioned whether the government could properly step in as the supervising agent in a matter having to do with the public morals and cited numerous obstacles that would confront a small board of three men appointed to censor all the films shown in a state as large as Massachusetts.

The censoring of moving pictures, Mr. Cox said, is attended with enormous eye strain and a tired person would be unable to decide nice questions of morality that would be continually cropping up in the pictures. A person would be unable to detect, he said, the fine moral points in two pictures shown simultaneously, and he doubted if one individual could pass on more than three reels an hour if the proper attention were to be given to the moral side of the subjects.

Mr. Cox said he believed there should be a large amount of freedom in the moving pictures as there is in the press and speech and declared that it is inevitable that sects and classes will sometimes be dissatisfied with the production of certain films.

To delegate to three persons, Mr. Cox said, with their personal whims and idiosyncrasies the business of passing upon moral questions for 2,500,000 inhabitants of the state is embarking on a programme dangerous from the standpoint of democracy.

Mr. Cox in the course of questions put by Senator Sheehan of Holyoke said the film referred to had been passed by the National Board of Censorship after it had been revised to meet certain specific objections.

PLAY SHOWN WITH CHASE SCENE OUT

The photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which has aroused a storm of protest among the colored residents of Boston, was shown yesterday at the Tremont Theatre with the scenes showing the chase of a white girl by the negro "Gus" cut out.

This action on the part of the theatre managers was the result of an agreement with Mayor Curley and Judge Dowd of the municipal court, from whom a warrant was sought for the arrest of two of the theatrical men.

A statement was given out at the Tremont Theatre saying that the question of deleting the parts of the picture which were classed as objectionable had been under advisement for 10 days.

ROCKLAND (Mass.) STANDARD
APRIL [illegible] 1915

We don't know but that the colored people have just cause in objecting to the production of a certain moving picture show which has been exhibiting in Boston. Judging from what has been heard about it from those who have seen it, the colored race have been depicted in the most brutal fashion in some of the pictures. No doubt there have been such happenings in the country in years gone by but it must be remembered that there are also some white fiends as well as negroes and there is no reason why a white race should be held up for ridicule when no possible good can come of it.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
APR 23 1915

FILM BILL GIVEN HEARING TODAY

The legislative Committee on Judiciary holds a hearing today on Representative L. R. Sullivan's bill to prohibit theatrical performances that tend to create religious or racial feeling. This is the measure asked for by negroes and others who sought to suppress "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, and found that the present statute did not cover their cause.

Negroes appeared before the Senate Ways and Means Committee to renew their demand for censoring laws for motion pictures. The committee had before it the Bates bill, filed on the initiative of the Federation of Women's Clubs. This seeks to transfer the business of censoring motion picture films from the State police to the State Board of Labor and Industries.

Orrin G. Cox of New York, advisory secretary of the National Board of Censorship, which had "passed" the film, "The Birth of a Nation," appeared before the committee at the direction, he said, of the National Board.

He said films were made showing "weaknesses" of various races, and that, although there were protests, on occasions, he did not think the showing of such "weaknesses" should be prohibited when there was no attempt to deliberately attack a race.

Senator Sheehan of Holyoke, a member of the committee, asked:

"Do you believe Massachusetts should take its moral culture from New York?"

"I do not," answered Cox.

"I should hope you didn't," commented Sheehan.

"We insist our press should be free," declared Cox, "and it is my opinion that our motion pictures should be as free as possible."

WEYMOUTH (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 23, 1915

The foreign war and base ball interest is very much divided this week with the "Birth of a Nation" question. From the earliest days in other countrys the colored man has been a greater or less factor in private and public affairs and like the white race there are good and bad men among them.

This being the fact is it to be wondered at that the better element of the colored race remonstrate against being carricatured and pictured to the world in a way that place a stigma upon the entire race

If the matter now goes to the courts and possibly to the Legislature of the state and nation why not make a clean thing of the matter and enact laws which prohibit either in prose, poetry, picture the publishing of anything of a burlesque nature. For instance the usefulness of many of our most able statesmen and developers of valuable industries are hampered and belittled by writers and artists who place them before the world in a way and manner which makes them subjects of ridicul.

There is many a man both white and black who is not a perfect beauty but it does not enhance his usefulness by being rudely carricatured.

Item
LYNN, MASS.
APR 23 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

The moving picture show has come to stay. The photoplay has achieved a popularity that insures its permanency. The censorship of these plays and, in fact, all of the productions of the movies is essential to the best interests of the community. The photoplay entitled "The Birth of a Nation," now on exhibition in a Boston theatre has been found to contain several pictures that give offence to a body of people whose feelings should be considered the same as those of any of the races that make up American audiences, and any entertainment should be discontinued if found to be calculated to arouse race prejudice or weaken the morals of the community.

Boston Traveler
Apr 23, 1915

M'CALL AND CUSHING JOIN ANTI RACE FILM FIGHT

Former Congressman Declares Massachusetts Is Last State Where Play Like "Birth of Nation" Should Be Shown—Can Draft Law Barring It, Says Lt.-Gov.

The protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was vigorously voiced before the legislative committee on judiciary today at the State House by a notable array of speakers, who urged the passage of legislation to prohibit in this state the production of such plays in the future.

Among the speakers who appeared before the committee today to urge the proposed legislation to put an end to plays causing religious or racial trouble were Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, J. Mott Hallowell, Joseph Lee of the Boston school committee, Miss Adalene Moffatt, Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; William H. Lewis, former assistant attorney-general of the United States; Christopher R. Elliot, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Boston Bar Association; the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, Atty. Edgar P. Benjamin, the Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald, R. S. Thompson, the Rev. George L. Cady and the Rev. P. W. Swain and Moorfield Storey.

Cheer McCall's Letter.

A letter from Samuel W. McCall of Winchester, written to J. Mott Hallowell, was read by Mr. Hallowell, amid applause. Mr. McCall's letter is as follows:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow, but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have never seen the "Birth of a Nation" film, but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited. As to the Ku-Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes let him read the reports of the trials in the United States Circuit Court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offence against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light. As to the Negro race, after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship, after generations of slavery, he should do this reviling in some other state than Massachusetts, whose chief glory it is that she was in the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

The committee's hearing was relative to the Sullivan bill to amend the present state law prohibiting obscene or immoral plays so as to make the law apply to plays causing religious or racial strife. There were various other suggested changes in the law to bring about a remedy of existing conditions suggested by speakers, however.

The case for the petitioners was conducted by Butler R. Wilson, a Boston attorney. He indorsed the principle contained in the Sullivan bill, as did other speakers, but suggested a different route of arriving at a remedy.

He believed, he said, that the 1908 law giving to the mayor and police commissioner in Boston joint authority to regulate plays should be amended so as to eliminate the police commissioner. The latter had told him, Wilson said, that he did not believe the police department should be made the judge of what is moral or ethical in a play; the police department should execute the law, not interpret it.

More Power for Mayor.

In addition to making the mayor the sole authority in Boston, Wilson said, he would give the mayor broader powers which would enable him to stop plays like "The Birth of a Nation." Wilson further suggested that the state police be given authority to stop the production of a film play on any day in the week. At present the state police can forbid the production of motion pictures on Sundays, but cannot interfere with their production on weekdays, unless they conflict with the general laws.

The room, the largest committee room in the State House, was packed when Wilson opened the case. Many members of the Legislature, including Speaker Cox, were present. John F. Cusick, attorney for the Tremont Theatre, had a seat at a press table, and John A. Sullivan, the Boston corporation counsel, came in later. Atty. Wilson, in opening the case for the petitioners, said:

"We favor legislation—

"Because the authority which it provides is joint, being lodged in both the mayor and police commissioner. This joint authority makes the law ineffective. Experience under this law has taught us joint action is difficult to get.

"Because the construction put upon the law by both the Mayor and police commissioner of Boston is so narrow that it destroys the effectiveness of the law. The obscenity and immorality mentioned in the law here have been uniformly construed to mean sexual immorality.

"Under this law an exhibiton owned by non-residents, which perverts history, or which incites to public disorder, or which twice a day vilifies, slanders and holds up to detestation thousands of Boston citizens, or which by the lavish expenditure of large sums of money for advertising has chloroformed the Boston press, with three exceptions, into a conspiracy of silence, or which glorifies mob law and snaps its fingers at the public authorities.

"Because this law is without teeth and is ineffective the city of Boston and the commonwealth are in a humiliating position. The 'Birth of a Nation,' now being exhibited at the Tremont Theatre, is the play I have described. It has been fitly described as the assassination of a race; it has been condemned by the Governor and the Lieutenant-Governor of the commonwealth, by the mayor of Boston and the chief of the Massachusetts district police, who has refused to allow it to be shown on Sunday. It has been condemned by 20,000 colored citizens of Greater Boston; it has been denounced in scathing language by three Boston papers beyond the reach of 'hush money,' the Congregationalist, The Traveler and the Post."

"The mayor of Boston has told various delegations that if he had the power he would drive this play from the stage. We want him to have that power."

J. Mott Hallowell, a former assistant attorney-general and the lawyer who had charge of the court proceedings against the play, was the next speaker. He went into the legal aspects of the situation, stating that while there was divided authority in Boston, the mayors in other cities of the state or the selectmen in the Bay state towns had the power to revoke theatre licenses at their pleasure. Hallowell said the mayor of Boston should have similar authority; but that in any event the law should be made clear so that it would state which plays were illegal and which were legal. The speaker said that at present there was a "feeble condition of law."

Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, the next speaker, urged speedy remedial action. He said his experience as a member of the Legislature and as speaker of the House enabled him to say that the committee on judiciary, composed, as it is, entirely of lawyers, could draft legislation to correct matters. The Lieutenant-Governor said it was his belief that public sentiment demanded a correction.

Allston Denies Indorsing Film

Philip J. Allston, colored, today registered a denial of assertions made in a statement published this morning, in which Henry MacMahon, general press representative for the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," asserted that Allston, when questioned by him, had voiced his approval of the photo-play, and that Allston, together with Dr. W. Alexander Cox, also colored, had indorsed the pro-

...play said: "In an article ...e of the morning news... Henry MacMahon states ... with him and Mr. McCar... ...ide. I never saw Mr. McCarthy ... ever indorsed 'The Birth of a Nati... ...rote Mr. Grosier on April 14 to the effect that the play should be taken off.

"I never went into the press room of the Tremont Theatre; Mr. MacMahon never asked me about the play. I had only a few words with him in the lobby —not a half-dozen at the most."

...N (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 23, 1915

THE CURSE OF A NATION

The framers of the organic law of the Commonwealth considered their contribution to human happiness with the purposeful phrase: "To the end it may be a government of laws and not of men." Upon Massachusetts therefore rests a peculiar obligation to oppose the tendency of the times to change by class legislation and executive censorship a government of laws to a government of men. The passion to limit by legislation or executive order the freedom of the individual is today the curse of the nation. Unless the Republicans can demonstrate their determination to end this tyranny of the "new freedom" they will not deserve, either this year or next, a return to power, and we doubt whether they will achieve it.

It is therefore to be expected of our Legislature, overwhelmingly Republican in both Houses, that all proposals pending or to come which can be classified as class legislation, or of grants of authority for additional executive censorship, particularly in the offensive form proposed in the petition of Representative Sullivan, will be rejected by a decisive vote. Many people have found objectionable a film now exhibited in Boston which in its expurgated form the courts have held violates no existing law. The objectors, at the instance of that sturdy champion of "home rule," Governor Walsh, are now, with Mr. Sullivan's aid, seeking to amend the present law by penalizing those responsible for "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

The Sullivan petition would deliver a blow at religious freedom, the rights of the individual, and the liberty of the press. It puts a premium on violence by making it possible for any two men who engage in a fisticuff in the lobby of a theatre to force the authorities to stop the show or entertainment over which the fisticuff occurred. Were such a statute in operation today our citizens of German sympathies could prevent by resolutions of protest or threats of violence the exhibition of any film showing the devastation in Belgium; our ...tholic citizens could shut down any ...eatre whose entertainment failed to ...eive the approval of the cardinal; our ...wish citizens could prohibit a per...rmance of "The Merchant of Venice"; ...ur Christian Science citizens could ...lace their veto upon any film whose ...ortrayal of pain or of the efficacy of medical aid they found conflicted with the tenets of their creed; our Protestant citizens could end the exhibition of any film extolling the usefulness of the parochial school system or portraying the awful persecution of the priests and nuns in Mexico; our mill owners could drive off the stage any play or from the screen any film portraying the horrors of child labor; our saloon keepers could ...ce the Prohibitionists to give up the ... of the film in their crusade; our ...itizens of Southern origin could have the license of any theatre revoked where a picture was exhibited in illustration of the hideous conditions to which helpless negro prisoners are today subjected in some of the Southern States. In short, the usefulness of the theatre either as a place of amusement or of education would be reduced to a ridiculous minimum were the law enforced as Mr. Sullivan would write it.

No city or town officials in Massachu...tts today lack power under existing law ... revoke the license of any theatre giving ... exhibition which, in the opinion of the ...horities, is obscure or immoral or tends ... injure the morals of the community. Where the decision of the mayor or, in the case of Boston, of the mayor and the head of the police jointly, is not satisfactory, an appeal can be taken to the courts. Such an appeal has just been made in this city and the court decision was promptly complied with by the theatre management and acquiesced in by the city officials. No further legislation is necessary to protect the public morals of any community, and no further legislation is warranted which would set up over any community a ra...ial or religious censorship. If it be found ...at the city authorities are not enforcing ...ting laws with respect to motion pic...es, it may well be that the responsibility ... such enforcement will sooner or later ... transferred either to the State Board ... ...ucation, or better still to a national ... under the direction of the Secretary ... ...terior, which is provided for in a ... ...ply reported to the House at ... ...at the last session of Con...

Kross. But we think keep in mind that to license a theatre is no more to sanction its exhibitions than to license a book store is to approve the contents of the books now over its counters. Any sort of censorship is irritating to the spirit of our people, and only that regulation which is in the essential interest of public decency and public morals should ever be tolerated, if we are to preserve the handiwork of the fathers in the form they wrought—"a government of laws and not of men."

CLIPPER
New York City
APR 24 1915

GOVERNOR WALSH has now taken a hand in the official investigation of the production, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now being put on at the Tremont. The Governor, as the result of many complaints that have been filed at his office, requested Police Commissioner O'Meara to meet him in conference at the State House. The conference lasted for over an hour, during which the production and the offense it has given many people was discussed from its various angles. Commissioner O'Meara was asked by the Governor if there was any legal way in which the commissioner might act to prohibit the production. The commissioner replied there is not. While the Governor has no power to act in the matter, it is known that he is deeply concerned over the production.

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 24, 1915

Not the Spirit of Old.

The "Birth of a Nation" as it is played on the stage in Boston today is a good deal different from the real stuff which was started 139 years ago in the same section of the country. Then the patriots had something of importance to attend to. Today some of the people are presuming to remember the heroic deeds of the patriots who began the American fight for independence.—Worcester Telegram.

MARLBORO (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
APRIL 24, 1915

Several friends who have attended the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," tell me that it is a wonderful production, being almost beyond conception in its magnitude. They tell me that no sensible person would have any feeling against the colored people of today through anything depicted in the play.

BANGOR (Me.) COMMERCIAL
APRIL 24, 1915

FEARS BOSTON LYNCHING IF FILM PLAY GOES ON

W. H. Lewis, Former U. S. Assist. Att'y Gen., Charges Birth of Nation Attempt to Justify Southern Hanging and "We May Have One On Common."

Colored citizens and many others, disappointed at the refusal of the Boston city authorities and municipal court to prohibit the further showing of what they declare are scenes libelling the negro race in The Birth of a Nation, are now resting their hopes of relief in speedy action by the legislature.

Vigorous campaigns in behalf of two measures, the advocates of which believe will prevent the showing of such productions as The Birth of a Nation in this state in the future, have been begun at the State House.

The speedy enactment of such a law, would, of course, probably halt the scheduled run of The Birth of a Nation in Boston.

A number of opponents of the photoplay appeared before the Senate ways and means committee Thursday in favor of the Bates bill to transfer the censorship of moving pictures from the state police to the state board of labor and industries. Advocates of the bill believe it will result in better and more strict regulation of censorship.

William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant United States attorney-general, declared the film was an attempt by the South to justify its lynching of the negro.

"If this thing goes on we may have a lynching on Boston Common," declared Mr. Lewis, with emotion. "Who knows?"

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 24 1915

NEGROES PLAN TWO MEETINGS

Will Gather Twice Tomorrow to Protest Against "The Birth of a Nation"

Two mass meetings have been called by the negro citizens of Boston for tomorrow to protest against the further production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," the elimination of a few scenes decogatory to the negroes has failed to satisfy their desire to have the film stopped, and their purpose is as determined as ever.

The Women's Auxiliary Protective League will hold its indignation meeting at 3 P.M., at the Twelfth Baptist Church, corner of Shawmut avenue and Madison street, and in the evening the National Independent Equal Rights League will hold a meeting at the A. M. E. Zion Church, corner of Columbus avenue and Northampton street at the close of the regular church service.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) TIMES
APRIL 24, 1915

HEARING ON BIRTH OF NATION HELD AT STATE HOUSE

Many Prominent Men Attend and Enter Their Protests

STATE HOUSE, Boston, April 24.—Perhaps even more enthusiasm was expressed yesterday at the hearing before the joint committee on judiciary in regard to the Sullivan and Hallowell bills which have been presented to put an end to the production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," than at the hearing on the sectarian amendment.

Room 240 was packed to its capacity with Negroes and whites alike, and the handclapping and cheers following the address of William H. Lewis, former assistant attorney general of the United States, expressed the sentiment of those present.

The Negroes were not alone in their protest against the photoplay, for Lieutenant Governor Grafton D. Cushing, Moorfield Storey, J. Mott Hallowell, Dr. Rowley of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Joseph Le[illegible] and the Rev. Herbert A. Johnson of the Warren avenue Baptist church were among those who appeared in favor of some legislation which would remedy the situation.

Butler R. Wilson of Boston, who conducted the hearing, pointed out the defects in the law of 1909 and declared that he objected to the dual authority now placed in the mayor and police commissioner of Boston. Both the governor and lieutenant governor have decried "The Birth of a Nation," he said, in unmeasured terms, any many other authorities have expressed their opposition to it. He, therefore, asked for an amendment to that law so as to cover the situation.

J. Mott Hallowell outlined the existing acts and explained the change which he offered. There are two laws, he said, applicable to the production of films, one for Boston and another for other communities, besides the police law in putting an end to obscene productions. The law applying to outside communities permits the mayor or selectmen to revoke a license at pleasure.

The law applying to Boston, however, is different. For revocation of license, the mayor and police commissioner must act jointly, and then only when the production is immoral, obscene or tending to injure the morals of the community. The proposed amendment would affect section 2 of 1909, and would give the mayor the right to suspend a theatre's license if the production tends to create disturbance, incite riots or cause public disquiet, after the producers refuse to comply with the request of the mayor or chief of the district police. Boston attracts many people from outside districts and, therefore, he said, there should be some person who is interested more than locally and who should have authority to revoke licenses.

BROCKTON (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
APRIL 24, 1915

PROTEST FILM PLAY.

Bill to Prohibit Pictures Inciting Race Hatred Is Upheld.

State House, Boston, April 24.—Those who spoke were all strongly against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," yesterday at a hearing before the house committee on judiciary, in regard to a proposed amendment to existing law in this State that would hereafter prohibit any show that incites race or religious antagonism. The opposition to the proposed amendment was heard to-day.

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing favored an amendment and, while approving the measure presented by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan, he agreed, upon being requested to do so, to submit a bill of his own drafting.

Telegram
Worcester Mass
4-27-15

WITH GRIPPING SCENES.

"A Man and His Mate," Production by D. W. Griffith, at the Royal.

A four-reel Mutual masterpiece, "A man and his mate," produced by D. W. Griffith whose name has been much before the public in connection with the display of "The birth of a nation," was shown at the Roy[illegible], yesterday afternoon, and was well received. Henry

BROCKTON (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
APRIL 24, 1915

Bill Against Film Play Is Admitted

Protest by Colored People Goes to a Hearing.

The bill offered by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston designed to prevent the showing of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation" which provides for prohibition of theatrical performances that tend to create religious or racial feeling, was admitted under suspension of the rules in both branches of the legislature Thursday. A hearing was held Friday morning.

The committee on judiciary considered Thursday the bill to transfer censorship of films from the State police to the State board of labor and industries. A number of prominent colored men urged better censorship. "The Birth of a Nation," it was claimed, simply upholds southern lynchings and it was said that it might cause a lynching in Boston.

Orrin G. Cox of New York, advisory secretary of the national board of censorship, which had passed the film, said that many films depict shortcomings of races, but do not necessarily attack these races.

The legally objectionable scene in the play was cut out at the direction of Judge Thomas H. Dowd.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 24, 1915

ANTI-FILM BILL HEARING

The controversy over the film "The Birth of a Nation" which has been the cause of so much dissension in Boston and which is being widely discussed in this city, is being considered by the House Committee on Judiciary preparatory to action in the House itself. Proponents of a bill which would eliminate such films presented their case at a hearing before the committee yesterday and the committee later in the day attended a performance of the show in which the pictures were included so that they might see them for themselves. Monday at 10 o'clock the opposition will be given a chance to state its case.

News
Boston Mass
4-24-15

Tremont Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre ente[illegible] its third week Monday. There is no diminution in the tremendous interest that has existed for this wonderful photo-play at its initial performance. The capacity of the theatre has been taxed during the past week as it was during the first week of the exhibition.

As an example of the new art of the camera this particular film play has attained a prominence and an interest never before reached by anything of its kind. It enjoys the distinction of being presented in a theatre of the first class and at prices of admission that only the most famous of dramatic favorites can ask.

The producer, David W. Griffith, has drawn on the material of most every phase of drama in the unfoldment of the story. Exciting episodes follow each other in such rapid succession that the spectator is bewildered and held spellbound.

There is enough material in "The Birth of a Nation" to furnish half a dozen plays. Turbulent scenes of terrific strife during the Civil War, shown in settings of rare natural beauty and peopled with immense throngs that stretch into deep vistas of the landscapes, are among the interesting and exciting features of the play. These are relieved by domestic phases of life charming with their love scenes and full of romantic flavor. The music especially arranged for voices and orchestra is charmingly adapted to every emotion of the play. Afternoon and evening performances will continue

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) CHRONICLE
APRIL 24, 1915

Boston Letter

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation" Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the House a bill, which will add to chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the Committee on Rules. By some members of the House the bill was considered too broad, and it was claimed that it would bar such a play as the "Merchant of Venice."

BOSTON (Mass.) REPUBLIC
apr. 24, 1915

Governor Walsh took a splendid stand on the moving picture film incident and his conduct was not only to the liking of the colored people but every citizen as well. Mayor Curley fell down badly on the matter. With his pretended sympathy for all classes, why did he permit this picture with many revolting scenes to enter the city? He missed a splendid chance to earn the gratitude of the colored race.

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) CHRONICLE
APRIL 24, 1915

Boston Letter

In a very forceful manner.

As a result of the agitation over the film play, the "Birth of a Nation" Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester has introduced in the House a bill, which will add to chapter 367 of the Acts of 1910 governing censorship, the words "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace." It was referred to the Committee on Rules. By some members of the House the bill was considered too broad, and it was claimed that it would bar such a play as the "Merchant of Venice."

Transcript
Boston Mass
4-24-15

Tremont—The Birth of a Nation

A filmed spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle.

Gazette
Worcester Mass
4-24-15

Pictures and Vaudeville

For his vigorous treatment of modern problems David Griffith has taken a front rank in the production of motion pictures. It is but lately that his work has received great public comment among his productions is "Birth of a Nation."

Post
Worcester Mass
4-24-15

Plaza Theater

The motion picture field has brought into public light entirely different kind of producers, some of whom have risen to the heights of fame. Such a one is D. W. Griffith, whose "Birth of a Nation" is now the talk of the country. But Mr. Griffith has produced other pictures which bear the stamp of his genius. One of them comes to

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE
APRIL 24, 1915

COLORED PEOPLE PROTEST.

Two Meetings Tomorrow in Opposition to "Birth of a Nation."

The purpose of the colored population of Greater Boston to oppose the continuation of the photo-play "Birth of a Nation" has not apparently aboted. Two organizations have called public mass meetings for tomorrow. The Women's Auxiliary Protective League will meet at 3 p m at the 12th Baptist Church, Shawmuut av and Madison st.

After the close of the regular evening church services the National Independent Equal Rights League will have a public meeting at the A. M. E. Zion Church, Columbus av[illegible]

om EVENING TRANSCRIPT
dress: Boston, Mass.
te APR 24 1915

WHO DREW THIS COLOR LINE?

[From the New Bedford Standard]

The Boston negroes who are protesting against "The Birth of a Nation" as an insult to and a misrepresentation of the colored race should be careful to deserve the respect which they believe is due them. Hissing "America" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" is not the way to win sympathy for their cause.

WORCESTER (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 24, 1915

FILM MAY BE A FACTOR IN MASS. POLITICS

Walsh, Cushing, McCall Against Pictures Arousing Racial Prejudice

LEGISLATION TO GO THROUGH, BELIEF

(Special Dispatch to THE GAZETTE)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, April 24.—With Gov Walsh, Lieut-Gov Cushing and Samuel W. McCall already on the line in favor of legislation to stop the production in Massachusetts of pictures tending to arouse racial prejudice, it looks as if "The Birth of a Nation" butted into Boston just in time to be a real factor in state politics.

Mr McCall and Lieut-Gov Cushing protested yesterday at the State House against the presentation of the photo-play, and spoke in favor of some legislation which would bar similar productions in the future.

Mr Cushing made a personal appearance and Mr McCall sent a letter which J. Mott Hallowell read to the committee.

"I do not appear in behalf of any particular bill," said Mr Cushing. He said he had received many protests against the photo-play, and that he personally believed there has not yet been developed a proper consorship of motion pictures.

Addressing the committee, the Lieutenant-Governor urged speedy remedial action.

"You can't make me believe it will be impossible to frame a perfectly legitimate bill, which will put in the hands of some proper authority the right to remove the license of a play tending to lower public morals.

"I want to tell you this protest is not only coming from the negroes; it is coming from a large body of our other citizens. I know that personally."

Eugene Noble Foss has so far failed to take a stand publicly on the matter, but his entry any day now is to be expected.

Councillor Ham, Col Goetting and other aspirants for the second place nomination have stayed away from the hearings before the rules committee and the committee on the judiciary, and it is a question whether they are not jeopardizing their chances with their political futures by so doing.

At any rate, with the line-up mentioned, with the speaker of the House on record in a public statement in favor of some legislation looking to the limiting of productions of a character similar to that based on Thomas Dixon's book, it looks at this writing as if he would be a rash member of the Legislature who would take a stand against the passage of a bill.

The feeling at the State House at the present is that some legislation will go through which will give to the Mayor of Boston the same power to prevent the production of any play which other mayors of cities have. The effect of such legislation would undoubtedly be to stop the present Boston production, in view of the public statement of Mayor Curley that the thing is outrageous and ought to be stopped.

DRAMATIC NEWS
New York City
APR 24 1915

BOSTON HAS A HOLIDAY.

Christie MacDonald, Ethel Barrymore and Julia Dean Appear—The Birth of a Nation Causes Trouble.

Boston.—The Griffith feature film, The Birth of a Nation, which has been turning them away nightly at a $2.50 top because of the howl raised by the various negro and abolitionist associations of this city, caused a race riot Saturday night in which a dozen negroes and whites were arrested, including W. Munroe Trotter, the negro attorney and publisher who leaped into fame a year ago because of a clash with President Wilson. It had one immediate effect, it guaranteed capacity for a long time to come and the publicity is rolling in. Every Sunday paper balloned the riot on the front page, and the court hearing that will follow later will give a lot more free advertising. Stink pots, rotten eggs and epithets figured in the Saturday night riot, in which an alleged conspiracy to wreck the booth, manhandle the operator and destroy the film were frustrated by the presence of several squads of police who finally lined along Tremont street and refused to let any person, white or black, enter the lobby to buy advance seats which are selling through May.

WORCESTER (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 24, 1915

re-established [illegible]

A NEW DAMNATION

One of the damnations of our legislative system is that too many of the laws turned out are prompted and put through as the result of momentary hysteria. A glaring example of this tendency is found in the amendment, proposed by Representative Sullivan of Boston and championed by Governor Walsh, to the law regulating the nature of public entertainments. This movement for new legislation is an outgrowth of the commotion raised over the presentment of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." The amendment would penalize those responsible for "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

The proposed amendment is couched in terms of such generality that a law reading in that fashion could be made the source of no end of mischief. It would establish a censorship that could be made to drive from the stage most any representation that had the least to do with race or religious aspects. What tends to excite racial or religious prejudice must necessarily be a matter of personal opinion and that opinion will vary with localities and with races. A play tolerated, and deemed tame even, in Worcester, might raise a real or manufactured commotion in Boston, and vice versa. The theatre and show house is a quarter where the rights of free speech and action must be protected as much as in the tribunes of the people or in the press.

When that freedom breaks its bounds and becomes unbridled license, it should be restrained. Law enough already exists to place all the restraint necessary. It exists in the authority given local licensing boards and in the state law governing such productions What happened to "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston stands in proof.

How many riots or near riots has Boston had in the past because the stage overstepped its bounds? How many riots or near riots has any other city in the country had for the same reason? How many plays are written calculated to stir race and religious privilege? When they do appear, the public itself is the best force in disposing of them. "The Drummer Boy of Shiloh" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" have been esteemed for decades in the North. They would not last ten minutes in the South. Adverse public opinion and lack of patronage would kill them.

In short, we have all the regulation needed for these matters. If the little wave of hysteria now in Boston is made to result in the proposed amendment, it will put into our laws a thing bound to do more harm than good.

ddress Gazette HAVERHILL, MASS
ate APR 24 1915

OPPOSE PICTURE SHOW.

McCall and Cushing Against "Birth of a Nation"

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and Samuel W. McCall joined hands with the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation," before the committee on judiciary at the hearing on the Sullivan bill to amend the law so that such productions may be stopped.

The lieutenant-governor appeared in person to say that the films are objectionable not only to the negroes, but to a large number of other citizens.

Mr. McCall sent a letter to J. Mott Hallowell, who appeared as attorney for the protestants against the films, in which he deplored the portrayal of the Ku Klux Klan as undesirable and unnecessary and also opposed the films on the grounds that they tend to arouse racial prejudice.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 24 1915

Two performances of "The Birth of a Nation" are announced today at the Tremont Theatre.

HAVERHILL (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 24, 1915

OPPOSE PICTURE SHOW.

McCall and Cushing Against "Birth of a Nation"

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and Samuel W. McCall joined hands with the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation," before the committee on judiciary at the hearing on the Sullivan bill to amend the law so that such productions may be stopped.

The lieutenant-governor appeared in person to say that the films are objectionable not only to the negroes, but to a large number of other citizens.

Mr. McCall sent a letter to J. Mott Hallowell, who appeared as attorney for the protestants against the films, in which he deplored the portrayal of the Ku Klux Klan as undesirable and unnecessary and also opposed the films on the grounds that they tend to arouse racial prejudice.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 24, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

HEARING ON SULLIVAN BILL

Cushing and McCall Approve Effort to Suppress Film—Storey Thinks Present Law Would Do It.

Representative L. R. Sullivan's bill to prohibit theatrical performances that tend to create religious or racial feeling was given a hearing in Boston yesterday before the legislative committee on judiciary. The recent finding that present statutes did not cover the point desired by those who sought to have "The birth of a nation" at the Tremont theater suppressed is the reason given for the bill.

Lieut-Gov Grafton D. Cushing, J. Mott Hallowell, Moorefield Storey, Dr Francis Rowley and others appeared in favor of any legislation that would permit the stopping of "The birth of a nation" and any other plays that tend to injure the public morals or jeopardize the public peace. Samuel B. McCall sent a letter approving the proposed legislation and denouncing the offending photoplay.

Representative Burt asked Storey if under the present law, he would not stop the play if he was the mayor of Boston. Storey replied that he would. There ensued a long discussion, the meaning of which was appreciated only by the lawyers present, as to the proper means of framing a legislative remedy for this and similar situations.

The following letter from Samuel W. McCall was read:—

I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing to-morrow, but I have speaking engagements at Yale university to-day and to-morrow and cannot break them. I have not yet seen the "Birth of a Nation" film, but is as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population, it should not be permitted to be exhibited. As to the Ku-Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes, let him read the reports of the trials in the United States circuit court at Columbia at the November term in 1871. It is a gross offense against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented to-day in any part of the country in any favorable light. As to the Negro race after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship after generations of slavery, he should do his reviling in some other state than Massachusetts, whose chief glory it is that she was in the forefront of those who led that race o[illegible]

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 24 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" FILLING THE TREMONT

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, enters its third week Monday. There is no diminution in the tremendous interest taken in this remarkable photo-play since its initial performance. The capacity of the theatre has been taxed during the past week, as it was during the first week of the exhibition.

As an example of the new art of the camera this particular film play has attained a prominence and an interest never before reached by anything of its kind. It enjoys the distinction of being presented in a theatre of the first class and at prices of admission that only the most famous of dramatic favorites can ask. The producer, David W. Griffith, has drawn on the material of most every phase of drama in the presentation of the story. Exciting episodes follow each other in rapid succession. There is enough material in "The Birth of a Nation" to furnish half a dozen plays.

The war scenes are relieved by love scenes. The assassination of President Lincoln, and the surrender of Lee are realistic scenes.

The music, arranged for voices and orchestra, is cleverly adapted to every emotion of the play. Afternoon and evening performances will continue.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 24, 1915

CUSHING PROPOSES TO DRAFT NEW BILL

Will Be Aimed at Shows Causing Race Hatred.

Speakers at State House Hearing All Against "Birth of Nation."

Those who spoke were all strongly against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," yesterday at a hearing before the House Committee on Judiciary, in regard to a proposed amendment to existing law in this State that would hereafter prohibit any show that excites race or religious antagonism. The opposition to the proposed amendment will be heard at the hearing today, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Lieut Gov Grafton D. Cushing favors an amendment and, while approving the measure presented by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan, he agreed, upon being requested to do so, to submit a bill of his own drafting. Others who spoke for an amendment were Dr Francis H. Rowley of the S. P. C. A., Moorfield Storey, who was associated with Senator Sumner at Washington during the reconstruction period covered by "The Birth of a Nation"; Butler R. Wilson and William H. Lewis, prominent colored lawyers; J. Mott Hallowell and Miss Adeline Moffett.

Hon Samuel W. McCall, who was unable to be present, sent a letter which was read. In it he declared that if, as he had heard it stated, "The Birth of a Nation" palliates the acts of the Ku-Klux Klan and reviles a race of 10,000,000 in this country, its exhibition should be stopped.

Joseph Lee said the present law as regards plays is not stringent enough, and that the glorification of lynching should not be allowed.

Miss Adeline Moffatt, who said she belonged in the South, declared she had never seen a play so insidiously immoral, so hypocritically clever and dangerous, as "The Birth of a Nation." No good Southerner ever boasts of descent from a member of the Ku-Klux, she added.

William H. Lewis said that the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation" is worse than 100 riots in its influence on public sentiment. New England is ridiculed and Charles Sumner represented as a disgusting libertine, he claimed.

Butler R. Wilson said the play is offensive to 8,000 citizens of Boston.

Frank Hammond of the Bar Association, read excerpts from the trial of members of the Ku-Klux Klan in 1870 to show the difference between its actual character and that given it in "The Birth of a Nation."

Rev Herbert S. Johnson said that if the present question were one between Protestants and Catholics or Jews and Gentiles the theatre would be torn to pieces if the play were not stopped.

Rev Francis Henry Smith, Congregationalist, and Rev Christopher Eliot, Unitarian, read reports from clerical gatherings condemning the play.

J. Mott Hallowell submitted a draft of an amendment to the law governing the revocation of theatrical licenses. He said the Mayor ought to be relieved of the duty, as 85 percent of photo-plays in this State are given in Boston, and their supervision is too great a burden for the Mayor.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 24 1915

MASS MEETING NEXT MOVE IN RACE FILM FIGHT

A mass protest meeting against further exhibition of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Tremont Theatre, or any other theatre in the state, will take place at 9 tomorrow evening in the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Zion Church. It was at first planned to conduct a protest meeting on the Common, but following a conference this morning, it was decided to have the meeting in Zion church.

The speakers will include W. H. Lewis, formerly an assistant attorney-general of the United States; Butler R. Wilson attorney; W. M. Trotter, editor of The Guardian; the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, the Rev. B. W. Swain, pastor of the Columbus Avenue Zion Church, and others.

Mr. Swain, who is in charge of the meeting, said today that aside from the decision to have the protest meeting, no plans had been perfected as to what would follow. It is expected resolutions will be adopted, which will be submitted to the state and city officials, urging that the photo-play be barred from further exhibition, both in the city and state, with another attempt to invoke the aid of the law, if possible.

Women Call Indignation meeting

The Women's Auxiliary Protective League has called an indignation meeting for 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Shawmut Avenue Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue and Madison street, to protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of the Nation." At this meeting it will be insisted that the pruning of the film, cutting out of the so-called "chase" scene, does not cover the insult to the colored people, nor bring the photo-play up to the [illegible] standard of

MORN. HERALD
APRIL 24, 1915

The Herald will not be responsible for lotted manuscript unless accompanied by stage for return.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1915

HYSTERICAL LEGISLATION

The petition of Representative Sullivan for a large increase in the censorship power of the city executive ought to be heeded by an overwhelming vote in the Legislature. It bears all the marks of a shrewd device for which just now there is much popular demand, but which, once in operation, would do far more to limit the freedom of the individual, of the theatre and of the church and the press than any citizen devoted to the best interests of the whole people could possibly desire. The agitation over a film play now showing at a Boston theatre has induced hysterical conditions in many minds, one of the symptoms of which is this petition offered in all seriousness by Mr. Sullivan. An amendment is far too radical which seeks to change the existing law by penalizing those responsible for "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

This petition would enable any group of persons, held together by sympathies of race or creed, or even by professional or merely selfish considerations, to produce the conditions which would warrant the application of the censorship. It would only be necessary for them to meet and pass protesting resolutions, or to agitate and assume threatening attitude, or to put themselves in the position of violating the public peace. It is easy to legislate in haste, and hasty legislation is usually followed by prolonged and costly penitence. Along with vehement protest against admitted wrong must be joined calm consideration of the means of cure. Officials now have the power, under the laws as they are, to revoke the license of any theatre whose exhibitions tend to damage public morals. Recourse may be had from the decisions of these officials to the courts. The people are impatient of any censorship which limits that freedom which they hold as a priceless heritage. They want exact fairness and justice for all races and creeds. The only limitations of personal freedom which they are disposed to tolerate must be in the interest of general decency and moral welfare.

With due respect for social fair play, it must be remembered that besides freedom of speech and freedom of the press, we need the same sort of freedom of the stage.

JAMAICA PLAIN (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 24, 1915

Instead of being The Birth of A Nation, the moving picture production of that name shown in Boston of late came near being the birth of a race riot, owing to the opposition of the colored people of Boston to the films. Whether the pictures are true to history or not, whether they do an injustice to the Negro or not, few who are living today are qualified to determine, but one safe assumption is that it is a mistake to offer entertainment to the public which arouses old animosities and such rare prejudices as this production does, especially when the libeled race has tried as effectively as has the Negro of America since his slavery to win respect, education and good citizenship. As for these pictures being justified as an argument against war, every one knows that war is barbarous and hellish without harrowing up the horrors of the past to prove it. It is too costly and too unworthy a form of public entertainment that would make money out of an appeal to past wrongs, prejudices and race hatreds.

COLUMBUS (Ga.) ENQUIRER-SUN
APRIL 24, 1915

FILM FANCIES

D. W. Griffith's production, "The Birth of a Nation," continues the sensation of the season in New York. With the matinee of April 11th, this motion picture began its seventh week in the Liberty theatre. The weekly receptions averaged $14000, which is the absolute capacity of the theatre.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 24, 1915

ASK LAW TO END "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Bill Preventing Shows Exciting Prejudice Favored

The passage of the bill petitioned for by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan that is designed to prohibit the performance of "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace" was strongly urged before the joint committee on judiciary of the Legislature yesterday forenoon.

The bill is particularly aimed to stop the run of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Tremont Theatre.

CUSHING FAVORS BILL

The proponents of the bill, both white and colored, crowded beyond its capacity the largest hearing room at the State House, many being forced to stand around the sides of the room and in the corridors. Many prominent people were present advocating the passage of the Sullivan bill, which is an amendment to the existing statutes.

Continued From First Page

The photo-play was bitterly attacked by several speakers. Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing was present and favored the passage of the bill, saying that the law should give some one person the authority to prevent objectionable plays.

Moorfield Storey and Dr. Francis H. Rowley, J. Mott Hallowell, Joseph Lee and Miss Adeline Moffett were among those who advocated the passage of the Sullivan bill or some other measure to effectively prevent such exhibitions, particularly the much-discussed photo-play.

Says Film "Insults"

The Hon. Samuel W. McCall, in a letter read to the committee, said that the play "insults and reviles" the colored race.

"As to the Ku Klux Klan," Mr. McCall wrote, "if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes, let him read the reports of the trials in the U. S. Circuit Court at Columbia at the November term in 1871. It is a gross offence against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light."

Offensive to 20,000 Citizens

Attorney Butler R. Wilson conducted the hearing for the proponents of the bill. He said that the photo-play is offensive to 20,000 citizens of Boston, and that the Governor, Mayor, chief of the district police and others believe it should be stopped, but have not the adequate authority to stop it.

Mr. Storey said that the play is a deliberate attempt to deepen instinctive prejudices and to commercialize the most unholy instincts of man.

Glorifies Lynching

Dr. Rowley, head of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, stated his objection as based on the stirring up of race prejudice. He said that on general principles he objects to a play which depicts the killing of animals or cruelty to animals, but said that the killing of animals as shown in "The Birth of a Nation" he would not consider as sufficient reason to stop the play.

Joseph Lee said the law should be sufficiently strong to prohibit the exultation or glorification of lynching, which he termed one of the most reprehensible sins of this country.

Insidiously Immoral

Miss Moffett said she never saw a play so insidiously immoral, so hypocritically clever or so dangerous to the country. She said she is a Southern woman, and that no good Southerner ever boasts of Klu Klux ancestry. She said the question affects far more than Boston.

Attorney William H. Lewis said the play is worse than 100 riots in any part of the country in its effect upon the people. He said that the play still reeks with vice and race prejudice, and that the elimination of one scene does not wipe out the element of race prejudice. "The only way to kill a snake is to cut off its tail close to the neck," he remarked. He declared the photo-play untrue to history and a crime against the colored race.

Ku Klux Trial Records

Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Bar Association, quoted from the records of the trial of Ku Klux Klan leaders in 1871 to show that the organization committed awful crimes without provocation and mainly to gain political power.

The Rev. Herbert S. Johnson said that the photo-play is as great a crime against the white people as the colored, and asserted that if the show was as offensive to Jews, Gentiles, Catholics or Protestants as it is to the colored people, the theatre would be torn down by an angry mob if the play were not stopped.

Mr. Johnson said that he had heard it said that some colored men were ready to sacrifice their lives, if necessary, to stop it. This statement was enthusiastically applauded.

Considered Highly Injurious

The Rev. Henry Francis Smith read a report from a committee of five Congregational clergymen to the effect that the play is an evil and a menace.

The Rev. Christopher R. Eliot of the Federation of Churches said that the federation considers it highly injurious to public morality.

A show of hands was called for to determine how many of the 400 in the hearing room were in favor of passing the legislation necessary to stop the play, and nearly everyone signified they want the Sullivan bill passed.

The opposition to the bill will be heard at 10:30 o'clock Monday forenoon.

THE SURVEY, NEW YORK
APR 24 1915

MURDER

TO THE EDITOR: Is lynching Negroes immoral? That seems to be the question raised by the approval of the Ku-Klux and anti-Negro features of the Birth of a Nation film. Appealing to the strongest race prejudice in the most vivid possible way at the precise point where it has led to wholesale murder in the South is, of course, an incitement to continued murder. One only possible point of doubt is whether murder is wrong. Or no—that is not the only point. Safe, cold-blooded incitement to murder is a meaner and more cowardly offense.

JOSEPH LEE.

Boston.

Philip J. Allston Sends Denial From Sick Bed

To the Editor of the Post:

Sir—I am confined to the bed under the care of a doctor, and am sending this denial to you in behalf of the future of family in answer to an article in this morning's Post. Mr. Henry McMahone will have a chance of legal proceedings if he again attempts to refute my word when I say I never called on him, for the only time I spoke to him was when Mr. Grimth introduced me to him, and did not then pass half a dozen words.

He never asked me about the play, and he don't have to think about Mr. Griffith being a party at the time.

As to his conclusion in this matter when he says "Mr. Allston must have been won over to the protestants against the play, and that his present feeling in the matter is not what he expressed to us on Saturday, April 10," to take the rest of his story except meeting them for a few moments in the lobby in the presence of three others who composed this group, for I have not had a word with a single protestant, not even the pastor of the church of which I have been a member for 28 years. At this time I have nothing to say about Mr. Trotter—his attitude should speak for itself as one seeking justice. Yours earnestly,

PHILIP J. ALLSTON.

April 22, 1915.

POST
WORCESTER, MASS.
APR 24 1915

Plaza Theater

The motion picture field has brought into public light entirely different kind of producers, some of whom have risen to the heights of fame. Such a one is D. W. Griffith, whose "Birth of a Nation" is now the talk of the country. But Mr. Griffith has produced other pictures which bear the stamp of his genius. One of them comes to the Plaza on Monday, "The Escape," in whose seven reels he is said to treat in masterly fashion one of the social problems that modern society must face.

LEWISTON (Me.) JOURNAL
APRIL 24, 1915

The much advertised film play, "The Birth of a Nation," has been taken before the courts in Massachusetts. The judge decided that the exhibition might go on provided one objectionable film was cut out. This film, with the one showing the chasing of a white girl by a negro, has been cut out. A Boston paper says: "'The Birth of a Nation' goes further in genuine constructive work by means of photographic films that any of its predecessors have gone or tried to go. It deserves the unqualified support of those who seek something better and more satisfactory than a few hours of enjoyment and who can appreciate the zeal and energy, the intelligence and patriotism, that are so happily blended in Mr. Griffith's masterpiece. No man or woman can see 'The Birth of a Nation' without rejoicing that he or she is part of that nation and a sharer in a glorious heritage."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 24 1915

STRONG PROTESTS ON FILM SHOWING

McCall and Cushing Register Objections to Exhibition of Photoplay.

BOSTON, April 23—Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing took a hand in the fight to stop further presentation in Boston of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," when he appeared before the legislative Committee on Judiciary in the State House today to urge that "something be done to remedy what appears to be a situation where there is apparently no authority anywhere to stop a production which is offensive to a large part of our population."

The Lieutenant-Governor was one of a notable array of speakers who urged passage of legislation to prohibit in this State the production of such plays as "The Birth of a Nation." "I do not appear in behalf of any particular bill," said Mr. Cushing. He said he had received many protests against the photoplay, and that he personally believed there has not yet been developed a proper censorship of motion pictures.

Among the speakers before the Committee on Judiciary today were J. Mott Hallowell, Joseph Lee of the Boston School Committee, Miss Adelene Moffatt, Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant attorney general of the United States; Christopher R. Elliot, Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Boston Bar Association; Rev. Samuel A. Brown, Atty. Edgar P. Benjamin, Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald, R. S. Thompson, Rev. George L. Cady, Rev. P. W. Swain and Moorfield Storey.

Addressing the committee, the Lieutenant-Governor urged speedy remedial action. He said his experience as a member of the Legislature and as speaker of the House enabled him to say that the Committee on Judiciary, composed, as it is, entirely of lawyers, could draft legislation to correct matters. He said it was his belief that public sentiment demanded a correction. Continuing, he said:

"You can't make me believe it will be impossible for you to frame a perfectly legitimate bill, which will put in the hands of some proper authority the right to revoke the license of a play tending to lower public morals.

"I want to tell you this protest is not only coming from the Negroes; it is coming from a large body of our other citizens. I know that personally."

"It's manifestly possible," said Cushing later, "to do something to correct this matter, and it should be done. It's perfectly absurd to have authorities saying it ought to be stopped, but they can't stop it. The authorities, as I understand it, want to stop it, but can't. The Mayor told me himself, personally. I talked with him about it."

Mr. Cushing became involved in arguments with members of the committee as to whether the present Boston law was not aimed against plays tending to lower public morals. The Lieutenant-Governor's reply to a number of questions dealing with this point was, in effect, that the law should be made clear with regard to its application to cases like the one under discussion, and that he would be very glad to assist the committee in drafting remedial legislation.

A letter from Samuel W. McCall of Winchester, written to J. Mott Hallowell, was read by Mr. Hallowell, amid applause. Mr. McCall's letter is as follows:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow, but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have never seen the 'Birth of a Nation' film, but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited. As to the Ku-Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes let him read the reports of the trials in the United States Circuit Court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offense against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light. As to the Negro race, after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship, after generations of slavery, he should do this reviling in some other State than Massachusetts, whose chief glory it is that it was in the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

[Continued on Second Page.]

[Continued from First Page.]

'THE BIRTH OF A NATION' BITTERLY DENOUNCED

Movie Hearing Packed—Negroes Not Alone in Their Opposition—Samuel W. McCall and Others Against Photoplay.

Boston, April 23.—Perhaps even more enthusiasm was expressed this morning at the hearing before the joint committee on judiciary in reference to the Sullivan and Hallowell bills which have been presented to put an end to the production of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," than at the hearing on the sectarian amendment. Room 240 was packed to its capacity with Negroes and whites alike, and the handclapping and cheers following the address of William H. Lewis, former assistant attorney general of the United States, expressed the sentiment of those present. The Negroes were not alone in their protest against the photoplay, for Lieutenant Governor Grafton D. Cushing, Moorfield Storey, J. Mott Hallowell, Dr. Rowley of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Joseph Lee and Rev. Herbert A. Johnson of the Warren avenue Baptist church were among those who appeared in favor of some legislation which would remedy the situation.

Butler R. Wilson of Boston, who conducted the hearing, pointed out the defects in the law of 1908 and declared that he objected to the dual authority now placed in the mayor and police commissioner of Boston. Both the governor and lieutenant governor have decried "The Birth of a Nation," he said, in unmeasured terms, and many other authorities have expressed their opposition to it. He, therefore, asked for an amendment to that law so as to cover the situation.

J. Mott Hallowell outlined the existing acts and explained the change which he offered. There are two laws, he said, applicable to the production of films, one for Boston and another for other communities, besides the police law in putting an end to obscene productions. The law applying to outside communities permits the mayor or selectmen to revoke a license at pleasure.

The law applying to Boston, however, is different. For revocation of a license, the mayor and police commissioner must act jointly, and then only when the production is immoral, obscene or tending to injure the morals of the community. The proposed amendment would affect section 2 of 1908, and would give the mayor the right to suspend a theatre's license if the production tends to create disturbance, incite riots or cause public disquet, after the producers refuse to comply with the request of the mayor or chief of the district police. Boston attracts many people from outside districts and, therefore, he said, there should be some person who is interested more than locally and who should have authority to revoke licenses.

Lieutenant Governor Cushing said that the situation which has arisen shows that there is no authority upon which to place any responsibility. The protest, he declared, did not come from the Negro alone, but from many persons whom he formerly represented in the legislature, and, although he had not seen the production, he felt that it should be stopped. He said that it was for the committee to give some one that authority which the law does not provide. If the motion pictures are not good for the morals—in many cases in his charitable work he has found that they were not—they should be stopped. The interpretation of immorality should be something broader than sexual immorality, he thought. After somewhat lengthy questioning as to what changes he might suggest, the lieutenant governor said that he would submit a bill to the committee for its consideration.

Moorfield Storey declared that the present law covered only cases of obcenity, and yet the chief of police has failed to consider the crime of rape immoral. He quoted Rabbi Wise of New York, who was greatly opposed to the production, and declared that the white people owed more to the Negro than to any other race, and yet they were doing everything in their power to degrade and ridicule him. Here in Boston, he said, the play is intended to instill into the young man the idea that the Negro was all right when he was a slave, but that when he was freed he showed his desires in a lust for white women. Furthermore, he said, the pictures of the Ku Klux Clan are [illegible] true, for that organization had [illegible] its force before the Negroes [illegible] into power at all.

[illegible] destroy the film were fr[illegible] presence of [illegible] veral squads o[illegible] finally lin[illegible] along Tremont [illegible] refused to let any person, white [illegible] enter the lobby to buy advan[illegible] which are selling through May[illegible]

He thought that there should be the same law in Boston in reference to productions as in the rest of the state, and that a power should be vested in some board to put an end to the outrage. He declared that there was an enormous mass of financial power behind the producers which influenced the press to keep silent, and that those people who had the power could care for themselves, while the Negro who was being libelled was forced to suffer. He said that the best thing which the legislature could do would be to teach the producers that they could not make money by ridiculing a race.

When asked if he were the mayor of Boston whether he would stop the play, Mr. Storey said that he most certainly would.

Mr. Hallowell then read a letter from Samuel W. McCall protesting against the production of the play, in which he says:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow but I have speaking engagements at Yale university today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have not seen 'The Birth of a Nation' film but if as reported to me on excellent authority, it palliates the Ku Klux clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited. As to the Ku Klux clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes let him read the reports of the trials in the United States circuit court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offence against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light. As to the Negro race after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship after generations of slavery he should do his reviling in some other state than Massachusetts whose chief glory it is that she was in the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

Dr. Rowley of the S. P. C. A., said that the excitement in the audience when he saw the play was proof of the feeling which it aroused. In answer to questions by Chairman Kennard, he said that any pictures which tended towards cruelty to animals were objectionable.

Joseph Lee questioned the advisability of placing the crime of lynching in such an exalted light. He, therefore, asked for a law which would adequately cover the situation.

Miss Adeline Moffatt said that of all the plays she has seen, she had never seen anything so insidiously immoral. She cited two instances of reaction which she had heard. As a southerner, she said that every family had some pride, but that there was not one which was willing to acknowledge an ancestor who was a member of the Ku Klux clan, which has been pictured in an absolutely untruthful light.

William H. Lewis said that an attempt is being made to degrade and belittle the Negro in the eyes of his friends. The play has been brought to Boston that Massachusetts may put its stamp of approval upon it. It is a pretty strong personality which can go to that play and come out feeling more friendly towards the Negro, he said. The play was written out of race hatred and by the most notorious "Negrophobist" living, Thomas Dixon.

"We are not satisfied," he said, "by what has been cut out by order of the court in the deletion of the "Gus" scene. The place to cut off a snake's tail is at his neck. You have scenes, disgusting and degrading, in the play which never happened. Not only that but New England is held up to ridicule, by the depiction of Thaddeus Stevens and Charles Sumner. We object to this play for the propaganda which it presents and which tends to raise prejudice against the Negro. The bill which may be drawn makes no difference, so long as we get relief. Massachusetts has a history to sustain and it lies with the legislature as to whether it will sustain that history, or whether it will allow those illustrious men who have represented Massachusetts to be held up to ridicule. We do not mind the minstrel or the fun-loving Negro, but we shall protest forever against such a calumny as this upon the colored race."

Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Bar association, said that the present law left the licensing to the discretion of the authorities, and he thought that it might be better to make the laws so specific that there would be no room for such discretion.

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson suggested that all those interested in the question might get together and draw up a satisfactory bill. As to race prejudice, he said that not all of the indignation has come from the Negro and that as much harm has been done to the morals of the white man as injustice to the Negro. If this was a fight between Catholics and Protestants that play would not be [illegible] one week, he declared.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 24, 1915

[illegible] Boston has been much agitated for a fortnight past by the attempt of the boys of "Birth of a Nation" to pervert the opinions [illegible] multitudes by deception and [illegible] show. Why this name was given by Dixon to his burlesque on political history, nobody knows. The American nation was not born [illegible] Lincoln's administration; it would have died if [illegible] masters could have had their way. And the men and women who did as much as any to preserve it were these very Negroes whom Dixon spends his life in slandering. They had a double part to play, to serve and protect the whites in their midst, and to aid the Union soldiers in putting down the rebellion of slavemasters and slave-traders. The Negroes were true to both parts of this divided duty; they kept the white families alive, and they kept their masters from killing the Union soldiers, to the extent of their power. And when peace came, they conducted themselves better than their conquered masters did.

This whole drama of Dixon was well described by Manning of Alabama in a speech at Faneuil hall, as in effect "an Alabama democratic speech for political effect." As an illumination of political history it is a fraud. Taking advantage of the unmanly desertion of the colored voters by the northern republicans, who had given them that invidious privilege, the unreconciled South has been trying to "segregate" and disfranchise the Negroes; and Dixon's fraud is an attempt to excuse that iniquity. A reaction is now setting in, which, if the president is not discreet, will neutralize much of the good he has done by his general policies. He has given in too much to this hateful spirit of caste and color; and it is taking from him the support he will need for re-election. Gov Walsh, on the other hand, sees his duty in the matter, and means to do it; and by calling the attention of the Legislature to the present state of the law, as shown in my letter of last week to The Republican, can have new legislation applied where it will do the most good. I take it a republican Legislature will find it needful to follow the initiative of a democratic governor in such a matter.

The decision of the court on the photoplay really condemns the whole performance, and will probably lead to legislation that will put censorship on the only reasonable basis and keep theater managers in future from such vulgarities as this affair of Dixon and Griffith truly is. Apart from the attack on Negroes, it is only one long glorification of the rebellion of Davis, Mason and the Negro traders of South Carolina. As a drama it is devoid of art, and bespeaks the crudest conception of playwriting; it is the merest provincial melodrama. The moving pictures are of the wiggliest and most tumble-down-the-bank description. The same person is seen seven feet high in the foreground and presently only four feet tall as he wiggles off in the distance. The only good scenes are those of the nightly cannonading and conflagrations, which are worked with much effect; the human scenes are grotesque and often ridiculous, more kissing to the square acre than is usually witnessed in genteel society goes on continuously, and the political history of the United States is turned topsy turvy, with no regard to dates and actual facts. The only applause while I was present was for Abraham Lincoln and Gen Sherman's march to the sea,—showing that the audience were not in favor of the rebellion, as the authors are. Their theory seems to be that there was no "nation" until Lincoln called out an army and conquered the slaveholders,—nothing but individual states. What then did the Maryland poet mean in 1814 when he blest:—

The power that has made and preserves us a nation.

What did Jefferson, Franklin, Adams and Sherman mean when they proposed that the recent colonies should "assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them"? A station equal to France, Spain and Great Britain could be nothing less than a national station, and it was a nation that Jackson defended against England at New Orleans, and against South Carolina at Charleston. Lincoln found a nation and restored the missing fragment of it when he reoccupied Fort Sumter. When he cut Virginia in two he was exercising the same old authority which had annexed Louisiana and Texas to the established nation.

This scheme of Dixon's is one of several that adroit southern democrats have sprung on innocent northerners of late years at meetings of the Grand Army, the Loyal Legion, etc., at which an effusive confederate soldier would accidentally be found present, more than ready to embrace his ancient foeman, but never willing to praise his Negro fellow-citizen, either as a soldier, professional man, or desirable member of the human family. The southern politician was an adept in such maneuvers, and his obvious purpose was as carefully masked as his skill would allow.

GREENFIELD (Mass.) COURIER-GAZETTE
APRIL 24, 1915

The action of the colored people of Boston in making so emphatic a protest against the production of the picture play "The birth of a nation" may not show wise leadership. The negroes are putting themselves in an attitude of opposition to free discussion of a social question. That attitude is not one that wins friends in this country. If the play is unfair to the negroes, and a great many fair-minded people say it is very biassed and prejudiced against them, it must react in the favor of the race thus unjustly assailed. The practical result of attempts at forcible suppression of a play or a book are usually to whet public curiosity to see or read it. Thus the objectors defeat their own end by spreading the influence of the thing they are trying to put out of sight. However, the colored people are entitled to a lot of sympathy in their hard fight for recognition. The kind and friendly thing would be for the theatre people to drop the play, on the ground that it creates race friction that can do no [illegible]

HERALD
Press: Boston, Mass.
APR 24 1915

M'CALL AND CUSHING BAN PHOTO PLAY

Both Protest Production of 'The Birth of a Nation,' at State House Hearing.

Samuel W. McCall and Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing protested yesterday at the State House against the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," and in favor of some legislation which would bar similar productions in the future.

Mr. Cushing made a personal appearance and Mr. McCall sent a letter which J. Mott Hallowell read to the committee.

"I do not appear in behalf of any particular bill," said Mr. Cushing. He said he had received many protests against the photo-play, and that he personally believed there has not yet been developed a proper censorship of motion pictures.

Addressing the committee, the Lieutenant-Governor urged speedy remedial action.

"You can't make me believe it will be impossible to frame a perfectly legitimate bill, which will put in the hands of some proper authority the right to revoke the license of a play tending to lower public morals.

"I want to tell you this protest is not only coming from the Negroes; it is coming from a large body of our other citizens. I know that personally."

Moorfield Storey.

Moorfield Storey, who followed Mr. Cushing, enlivened the hearing with witty sallies. He began his address, however, with an earnest declaration that obscenity was not the only cause for stopping "The Birth of a Nation." He declared the photoplay was an attempt to commercialize the unholy instincts of man and to "coin bitterness into money." He declared the play reflected upon 12,000,000 of our citizens, and said that the white race owed a great deal to the Negro.

"This play," declared Mr. Storey, "is an attempt to prove that the Negro is all right as a slave, but that when freed he becomes a creature with animal passions and lust for white women. The play glorifies the Ku Klux Klan.

"But it is not historically true, as the power of the Ku Klux Klan had declined before the Negro had attained his power. The Ku Klux Klan was formed to keep the Negro from voting and to return him to slavery; that's what it was formed for."

Atty. Storey asserted there should not be one law for Worcester, where the mayor could stop such a play at his pleasure, and another for Boston, where divided authority between the mayor and police commissioner existed. He added there was a large amount of capital behind the film play; that its promoters were able to look out for themselves, but that the Negroes need protection. He stated he would offer no objections to a law providing for the suspension of the production of such a play pending a decision as to its legality by a tribunal. Other statements by Mr. Storey were:

That a play maligning any race "was the most injurious thing that can be done in any community in the United States."

That "people ought not to be allowed to make money by inciting passion against any of our own citizens."

That the National board of censorship had once refused to O. K. the play, but had later "passed" it by a divided vote.

"The Birth of a Nation" could have been and should have been stopped under the present Boston law.

Others Protest.

Dr. Francis H. Rowley, head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, declared the play "violated the highest laws of religion and social ethics."

Joseph Lee of the Boston school committee asserted that the photo-play "glorified" criminals and "mob murder."

Miss Adelene Moffatt, a prominent social worker, made one of the most interesting speeches of the hearing.

"I will tell you about two reactions from that play," she continued. "A friend of mine, a Wellesley graduate well educated, saw this play and told me she never realized how necessary the Ku Klux were.

"Then the colored maid, who attends my room. She feels that the play is a degradation and outrage upon her race. But she says that the white girls in the kitchen tell her these things must be true, or their production would not be allowed.

Mr. McCall's letter was as follows:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have never seen the "Birth of a Nation" film, but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 10,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited. As to the Ku-Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes let him read the reports of the trials in the United States Circuit Court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offence against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light. As to the Negro race after the

FARMAVEN (Mass.) STAR
APRIL 24, 1915

noted in the Special Information going to the Oxford Board.

Weekly State House Letter.

[From the Star's Correspondent.]

Ex-Governor Foss has then all going as to just how he intends to run governor this fall.

The pensioning of Mr. Allston many years parliamentarian of the senate was well deserved. He has the nearest approach to a bill-drafting bureau that the Legislature has had, and it is safe to say that if he had been consulted, the enemies of the Governor would have drawn the cattle-ordinance ment resolve so as to be effective, and thus would have not given the Governor an opportunity to veto the resolve, call attention to the tactics of his opponents and then put through an effective resolve of his own.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Leo Frank case was much discussed in the State House corridors, the consensus of opinion being that the Massachusetts member of the Court, Justice Holmes, had done credit to Bay State standards of justice in his strong descent in favor of Frank.

The Negroes have a true friend in Governor Walsh. He intends to veto the "Birth of a Nation," and many

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) ADVOCATE
APRIL 24, 1915

MACMAHON'S REPLY TO ALLSTON'S NOTE

Henry MacMahon general press representative of "The Birth of a Nation" company, gave out the following statement Thursday night, in reference to a communication by Philip J. Allston, which was recently published:

"Phillip J. Allston and Dr. W. Alexander Cox attended the first public performance of 'The Birth of a Nation' Saturday, April 10. At the end of the show a group in th lobby discussing th play included Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy, myself and several colored people, Mr. Allston and Dr. Cox withdrew from the group and began to talk in another part of the lobby with Mr. McCarthy and myself.

"It was then we asked them whether they had any objection to the presentation of the play, whereupon they replied that they did not have objections and expressed in a general way the idea that such a story might yield a beneficial effect. I think Mr. Griffith was a party to a portion of this talk. Mr. Allston in particular invited Mr. Griffith to his chemical shop and both men expressed themselves as highly pleased with meeting us. Subsequently these two visitors went with me to the press room and there was further amiable conversation at the farthest removed from any expressed dislike of the play.

Editor's Note—Oh, that Press Room, we know what followed. No comment.

"Consequently I was very much surprised to read a note to the Post from Mr. Allston recently denying the substance of his statements. My only conclusion is that in the interval Mr. Allston must have been over to the protestants against the play, and that his present feeling in the matter is not what he expressed to us at [illegible]

Boston Journal APR 24 1915

PLAYS CONGRESSMAN'S DAUGHTER

Lillian Gish, who takes one of the leading parts in "The Birth of a Nation," the big film play at the Tremont, appearing as the daughter of the Hon. Austin Stoneman.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" FILLING THE TREMONT

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, enters its third week Monday. There is no diminution in the tremendous interest taken in this remarkable photo-play since its initial performance. The capacity of the theatre has been taxed during the past week, as it was during the first week of the exhibition.

As an example of the new art of the camera this particular film play has attained a prominence and an interest never before reached by anything of its kind. It enjoys the distinction of being presented in a theatre of the first class and at prices of admission that only the most famous of dramatic favorites can ask. The producer, David W. Griffith, has drawn on the material of most every phase of drama in the presentation of the story. Exciting episodes follow each other in rapid succession. There is enough material in "The Birth of a Nation" to furnish half a dozen plays.

The war scenes are relieved by love scenes. The assassination of President Lincoln, and the surrender of Lee are realistic scenes.

The music, arranged for voices and orchestra, is cleverly adapted to every emotion of the play. Afternoon and evening performances will continue.

M'CALL SCORES PORTRAYAL OF KU KLUX KLAN

Letter of Protest Against "Birth of a Nation" Read at Hearing.

CUSHING IS ALSO OPPONENT OF FILM

Many Argue in Favor of Sullivan Bill to Stop Objectionable Productions.

Lieut. Gov. Cushing and Samuel W. McCall joined hands with the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" before the committee on judiciary at the hearing on the Sullivan bill to amend the law so that such productions may be stopped.

The lieutenant governor appeared in person to say that the films are objectionable not only to the negroes, but to a large number of other citizens.

Mr. McCall sent a letter to J. Mott Hallowell, who appeared as attorney for the protestants against the films, in which he deplored the portrayal of the Ku Klux Klan as undesirable and unnecessary and also opposed the films on the grounds that they tend to arous racial prejudice.

Others who appeared in favor of the Sullivan bill were Joseph Lee of the Boston School Committee, Miss Adelene Moffatt, Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; William H. Lewis, formerly an assistant attorney general of the United States; Rev. Christopher R. Elliot, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Boston Bar Association; the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, Attorney Edgar P. Benjamin, the Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Mrs. Susan W. Fitz-Gerald, R. S. Thompson, the Rev. George L. Cady, the Rev. P. W. Swain and Moorfield Storey.

To Hear Opponents Later

John F. Cusick, attorney for the Tremont Theatre, attended the hearing yesterday, but the opponents of the Sullivan bill will be heard next Monday.

Lieut. Gov. Cushing urged speedy action by the Legislature and said it is easily possible to frame a law which will provide for the stopping of such productions.

The reading of the McCall letter by Attorney Hallowell brought forth loud applause.

Moorfield Storey said that obscenity is not the only reason for stopping the photo-play. He styled the production as an attempt to "coin bitterness into money" and said it reflects on 10,000 citizens.

Negroes Want Bill

William H. Lewis, former assistant United States attorney general, said: "The people behind this film are asking Boston and the State of Massachusetts to stand sponsor for a vile and contemptible calumny upon the negro race."

He said that the negroes want some kind of a bill to prohibit the continuance of such a performance and that they do not care what kind of a bill it is so lang as it accomplishes the purpose.

n PUBLIC LEDGER
ress Philadelphia
e APR 24 1915

RACE QUESTION MOVES BOSTON

Massachusetts Republicans Fear Results of Film-play Controversy

"BIRTH OF A NATION" CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE

Agitation by Negroes Likely to Result in Law for Strict Censorship

By a Staff Correspondent

BOSTON, April 22.—When a Southern man brought a moving-picture show of the reconstruction era to Tremont street a couple of weeks ago, he set in motion a chain of incidents that have stirred New England as nothing along racial lines has stirred it since Civil War days. "The Birth of a Nation" has suddenly been injected into the campaign as a political issue that has frightened the Republican leaders and threatens to throw the solid negro vote of Massachusetts to Mr. Walsh, the Democratic Governor, if he should be a candidate at the next election.

Contrary to what might naturally have been expected in view of the traditional part this State and city have played in the history of the negro race, Mr. Dixon's novel, as produced on the screen, scored an instantaneous hit in Boston. Mr. Griffith, the producer, wept while making his curtain speech on the opening night, when he tried to express the happiness he said he felt at hearing a Boston audience cheering "Dixie" and applauding the Ku Klux Klan. The proof of the popularity of the play as a spectacle is shown by the fact that, although regular prices of the theatre are charged, the house is filled to the doors each night and seats are sold for four weeks in advance—and this at the birthplace of the abolition movement.

* * *

This popularity is due, in part, perhaps, to the advertising the show has received throughout New England as a result of the fight the negroes have been waging against it, but the Civil War battle scenes probably have had their effect also. Opposition to the play culminated a week ago in a riot when a negro mob stormed the theatre and was only prevented by the police reserves from stopping the play and destroying the films. Several of the leaders, including William Munroe Trotter, who will be remembered in connection with a recent White House incident, were arrested. A mass-meeting of protest in Faneuil Hall on the day following the riot further stirred up the feelings of the colored people.

On Patriots' Day, this week, a negro delegation which gathered at the State House to ask Governor Walsh to stop the production, hissed a band playing "America," and conspicuous headlines to this effect on the front pages of the Boston newspapers did not help the cause of the colored people. Governor Walsh was sympathetic, and, although he could not stop the play under the law, his attitude has pleased the negroes hugely.

An attempt was then made in the Municipal Court to prohibit the production, Judge Dowd, after visiting the play, ordered eliminated one scene in which a white child throws herself from a cliff to escape a degenerate negro.

This came within the provisions of the law relating to immorality and obscenity.

The play continuing in censored form, the negroes are now asking a new law of such sweeping provisions that it is being denounced even by the Republican press in this State as being so drastic that under its terms "The Merchant of Venice," films depicting the devastation of Belgium, or pictures showing the evils of child labor or drunkenness could not be produced in Massachusetts if objections were made to them by a minority of its citizens.

* * *

Meanwhile, Lieutenant Governor Cushing, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor this year, sensing the danger of the negro vote going to Walsh in a year when the Republicans will need every ballot they can poll, came out in favor of some law that would prevent the exhibition of such plays as "The Birth of a Nation." His opponent for the Republican nomination, Samuel W. McCall, whose chances were thus doubly affected, today denounced the play, which he admits he has not seen, in a vigorous letter which was read at a hearing at the State House on the pending bill.

So acute has the political situation become and so worried are some of the Republican leaders, that this bill, as things stand now, has an excellent chance of enactment. That it would place art and literature in Massachusetts under a strict censorship which would inevitably be exercised by a few men has been lost sight of in the general hue and cry.

G. R. B.

In connection with several other pictures that will fill two or three hours, there will be offered at the Colonial Monday and Tuesday "The Outcast," a four-reel masterpiece, produced by the Reliance Motion Picture Corps. Mae Marsh, who is starred in this picture, is the actress who is thrown over the cliff in a big scene in "The Birth of a Nation." "The Outcast" was written by Thomas Nelson Page, the present United States ambassador to Italy. It is a story of human efforts, temptations and redemption and offers every emotion that may be most effectively transcribed to films. The picture is a new service secured by Manager Ripley of the Colonial and is expected to arouse great interest in this house.

HERALD
Am Lists Pa
APR 24 191

* * *

When a Southern man brought a moving-picture show of the reconstruction era to Tremont street, Boston, a couple of weeks ago, he set in motion a chain of incidents that have stirred New England as nothing al racial lines has stirred it since Civil War days. "The Birth of a Nation" has suddenly been injected into the campaign as a political issue that has frightened the Republican leaders and threatens to throw the solid negro vote of Massachusetts to Mr. Walsh the Democratic Governor, if he should be a candidate at the next election

BROOKLINE (Mass.) TOWNSMAN
APRIL 24, 1915

D. W. Grimth's wonderful spectacle of war and peace, "The Birth of a Nation," is playing to capacity audiences twice daily at the Tremont theatre. Everybody who can do so should see the spectacle this week.

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) ADVOCATE
APRIL 24, 1915

WHAT COX SAYS OF US

There are many people in the city of Boston and otherwise who have such a base opinion of me that they will always believe that I could be so contemptible as to give my endorsement to "The Birth of a Nation." It is because they know me by the reputation which John T. Harrison of the Advocate has bestowed upon me rather thn by my true character. However, it will be necessary for the benefit of he men and women who are associatd with me in business to clear myself in the minds of all sensible and reasonable people of these slanderous charges. At a proper time I shall do so. At present the people are in the height of too much excitement to be reasonable.

W. ALEXANDER COX.

NOTE—

If John T. Harrison has misrepresented Cox's reputation there is a remedy in the Courts, and Cox, as a lawyer, knows this. Why not apply to the Courts?

In our interview with the Press Agent's secretary this Friday morning in the Tremont Theatre Building, we were informed that Mr. Philip J. Allston and Dr. "Willie" Cox did, in the presence of five other persons, indorse "The Birth of a Nation" and saw no reason of complaint from any person. Mr. Allston then extended an invitation to Mr. Griffith to visit his chemical laboratory and his home. Dr. Cox together with Mr. Allston left their cards, both of which we saw. Dr. Cox was careful to write the words "Boston Reliance" on the front of his card. It is also said that Mr. Allston invited Mr. Griffith and Mr. Schofield, manager of Tremont Theatre, to be among the invited guests of the Negro Business Leaue. We trust that Cox will tell in his next issue of the unreliable "Boston Reliance" just what John T. Harrison said to him this Friday A. M. We dare not write it and it would be contrary to postal regluations for him to print it. The whole story next week.

ADVERTISER

ress: Boston, Mass.

APR 24 1916

HUNDREDS HEAR PLEA FOR NEGRO

HEARING ON BILL TO BAR RACE PLAYS

"The Birth of a Nation" Scored, but Speakers Disagree as to Law

Legislation that will vest in the district police the power to stop such motion picture dramas as "The Birth of a Nation" instead of the police commissioner of Boston, was urged at the public hearing yesterday on the Sullivan motion picture censorship bill before the Committee on Judiciary.

Hundreds of persons, black and white, were in the large committee room to listen to Moorfield Storey, Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, Dr. Francis H. Rowley, J. M. Hallowell and others denounce "The Birth of a Nation" as a vilification of the negro race, and urge a change in the law so that competent authorities may be given power to stop the performance.

The Sullivan bill adds to the statute of 1910 a clause that will permit the barring of plays that tend to rouse race or religious prejudice. This is not entirely satisfactory to the negroes, and through Butler R. Wilson, their attorney, they submitted a redraft.

Not All Agreed on Form

The redraft would take the power from the police commissioner and give it to the chief of the district police, although power would also be left with the mayor of Boston to stop the offending plays immediately. They claimed that the present law for joint action by the mayor and police commissioner had the effect of making the law inoperative.

They also charged that the construction put upon the law by both the police commissioner and the mayor is so narrow that it also destroys the effectiveness of the law. Obscenity and immorality named in the law, they said, was uniformly construed by these officials as meaning sexual immorality.

However, the proponents of the legislation were not all agreed on just what form the law should take. Moorfield Storey was in favor of a state-wide law that would permit the Mayor to revoke the license and stop plays immediately, but at the same time protecting the property and capital of the men producing the play. However, he would not allow them to go to court on the question of stopping the play.

McCall Scores Teachings

A letter was read from ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall, who was unable to be present. The letter dwelt on the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," rather than any law. It read:

"I very much regret that I cannot be at the hearing tomorrow, but I have speaking engagements at Yale University today and tomorrow and cannot break them. I have not seen the "Birth of a Nation" film, but if as reported to me on excellent authority it palliates the Ku-Klux Clan and insults and reviles a race comprising 100,000,000 of our population it should not be permitted to be exhibited.

"As to the Ku-Klux Clan, if one is ignorant of its criminal character and of its murders, burnings and other detestable crimes, let him read the reports of the trials in the U. S. Circuit court at Columbia at the November term of 1871. It is a gross offense against the idea of government by law that the order responsible for them should be glorified or represented today in any part of the country in any favorable light.

"As to the Negro race after the wrongs it has suffered, if there is anyone in the country who can revile it and especially in connection with its struggle into citizenship after generations of slavery, he should do his reviling in some other state than Massachusetts, where chief glory it is that she was in the forefront of those who led that race out of bondage."

Ought to Be Stopped

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing based his plea for legislation on the ground of public morals, and called attention to the fact that every day insidious plays are being produced that corrupt the morals of the youth. Asked if he would favor the "race and religious" law proposed, he said he did not know; that he would have to think it over.

Asked just what he would add to the present statute governing productions of this sort, he also said that he was not prepared to answer, but would supply the committee later with his opinion.

"A situation has developed, however," said Cushing, "where there is no authority anywhere to stop a play that is offending a large portion of the population. The protest is not from the negroes alone, by any means, for I have received telephone calls from the district which I represented for years in the Legislature protesting against this play and against such a situation.

"There ought to be authority placed in the hands of competent authorities to stop such plays. I am not in favor of any particular bill, but it is manifestly possible to draft some legislation. The Mayor told me personally that he would like to stop this play, but did not have the authority. Where a situation [illegible] there is no authority, it is true, somewhere authority should be provided, [illegible] for the negroes to [illegible] into power to kill, [illegible] and destroy the film were just their will, [illegible] the presence of several squadrons of police, before whom [illegible] finally lined along Tremont street, [illegible] refused to let any person, [illegible] enter the lobby to buy [illegible] which are selling through [illegible]

[illegible] to play or stop the film was an attempt to [illegible] the film was an attempt to create class.

He wanted a uniform law throughout the state whereby the mayors or other authorities could close up a show of this sort immediately. He thought that this was more important than censorship.

Would Stop Play

It was stated by Storey that obscenity should not be the only cause for stopping a show in Boston. The "Birth of a Nation," he said, was a deliberate attempt to deepen instinctive prejudices and to commercialize the most unholy instincts of man. In answer to a question, he stated that he had not seen the play but had heard about it from friends of his whom he considered reliable.

Rep. Burr asked Storey if under the present law, he would not stop the play if he was the Mayor of Boston. Storey replied that he would. There ensued a lengthy discussion, the meaning of which was appreciated only by the lawyers present, as to the proper means of framing a legislative remedy for this and similar situations.

Dr. Francis R. Rowley, president of the S. P. C. A., objected to the play from the standpoint of general race prejudice. Joseph Lee of the Boston School Committee said he had not seen the play, but declared the present law was not strong enough. He declared a law should be passed prohibiting the exultation or glorification of lynching, which, he said, was one of the greatest sins of this country.

Play Insidiously Immoral

Miss Adeline Moffett stated she never saw a play so insidiously immoral, so hypocritically clever or so dangerous to the country. She said she came from the South and that no good Southerner ever boasted of Ku-Klux ancestry. She also declared that the question before the committee was something which affected far more than Boston.

William H. Lewis, former assistant U. S. Attorney-General, said that it was a good thing that the General Court of Massachusetts met yearly for the correction of grievances. He declared that an attempt was being made by "that three miles of filth film at the Tremont Theatre" to blacken and degrade our people in Boston, the birthplace of American freedom." He declared that one of the main purposes of the film was to justify the lynching of negroes in the South.

Monday Morning

Mr. Lewis said the elimination of one or two scenes did not wipe out the element of race prejudice and said the only way to kill a snake was to cut of its tail close to its neck.

The "Birth of a Nation," he said, was worse than 100 riots in any part of the United States in its effect upon public sentiment.

The former assistant Attorney-General said that the negroes wanted some kind of a bill to prohibit the continuance of such a performance and that they did not care what kind of a bill it was as long as it accomplished the purpose.

Frank Hammond, secretary of the executive committee of the Bar Association, read excerpts of the testimony given at the trial of the Ku-Klux Clan in Columbia, S. C., in 1870 to show the difference between the real Ku-Klux outfit and the one depicted in the "Birth of a Nation."

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson said the photoplay was more dangerous to the white people than the negroes. He said if it was an issue between the Jews and Gentiles or the Catholics and Protestants the theatre would be torn apart if the play was not stopped. He said he had heard some negroes say they were willing to sacrifice their lives if the production was continued.

Rev. Francis Henry Smith read a report of a committee of five Congregational clergymen condemning the play and the Rev. Christopher R. Eliot of the Federation of Churches of Greater Boston read a report of the directors of that organization also protesting against the film. The opposition will be heard Monday at 10.30 a.m.

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) ADVOCATE
APRIL 24, 1915

RACE TRAITORS

"I am glad to say that our efforts are appreciated by some of the colored people. Among those who have called on me and said they thought "The Birth of a Nation" presentation was historical and would have a good effect are Dr. W. Alexander Cox, the Cambridge dentist, and Philip J. Allston of this city, an expert chemist."—Henry MacMahon, Manager "Birth of a Nation" Co.

We have thought that in view of the known character of the man, that he would be careful of what statements he would make, concerning, at least, the morals of our people. For, of all the men we know who are somewhat in the public eye, this man is the very last whom we expected would rush into print on any great question, effecting the morals of his people.

But, like his friends in Boston, he is troubled with egoism. We would have thought that Dr. Cox, in view of his immoral standing among us, and his attempts to rehabilitate himself in the community, would do everything consistent with rightenousness to regain his once good name. We can not help but view with alarm, here in our community, that attempts of a man, who have accomplished something, to coincide with white men who defame our homes, and our women. The fact that he has defamed his own home, the fact that he has defamed our own young women, and has been dragged through the courts for so doing, should make him hesitate in his uttrances, especially when his career is so well known.

He has not had the grace, and if there is any merit in it, we must give him the credit of standing by what he said. Philip J. Allston, of Boston, has repudiated his interview. This man evidently stands by it.

We have stated in a previous article on Philip J. Allston, that he should be let alone. We trust that no violence will be done Dr. Cox, though the people are in a dangerous mood, our women especially, and if he can subsist on his white patrons, let him do it. Hereafter let no Colored man, woman or child darken his office for professional service or speak to him on the street or elsewhere.

PHILIP J. ALLSTON.

From what we know of the antecedants of Philip J. Allston, of Boston, of the death of his father, his selfishness, his utter disregard of what constitutes a true man, his seeking to be prized by white men, his always wanting to be in the press, and his cowardice, led us to suspect that when h found out that h's now famous interview in the "Boston Post" would lead to the utter condemnation of his own people, he would deny it. Here is what he says in the "Post" of April 22:

To the Editor of the Post:

Sir—In your issue of April 17 an article signed by the manager of "The Birth of a Nation" company stated that I had called on him. The statement is not true, nor any othr portion of it, when he states: "Among those who called on me and said they thought "The Birth of a Nation" presentation was historical and would have good effect."

Last week I wrote both the Mayor and Censor Casey condemning the drama. I trust you will give this denial the largest possible publicity, as I am bitterly opposed to any movement which stirs up strife and race hatred as Manager Hnry MacMahone is doing here in this play. Repectfully yours.

PHILIP J. ALLSTON.

Boston.

If reports are true he has thus added among other accomplishments that of "liar." Previous to this interview in the "Boston Post," he and Dr. Cox (is the report) had tried to force through th Business Men's Lague, an endorsement of the Protoplay. Previous to his interview in the "Post" he stood sponsor for the apology of the Photoplay in the "Reliance." Heretofore he has considered that he was strong enough to stand alone. Hereafter let him be alone. Do him no violence. Let those of us who his own guilty conscience be his scourage. Let those of us who know him, know him no longer. The hand clasp, the cheery smile from us is gone. Imf he has occupied any position of trust among us, take it away. Let him be as a stranger among his own.

Let him know that "THE MAN OF THE RACE who would not stand up and try to protect his own from the man who has made wretches of our women, and who has enacted laws of segregation against him, are not permitted to enter HEAVEN."

OVER THE TELEPHONE.

The leading Colored lady of our city in everything that pertains to our race advancement. Mrs. McAdoo, it is reported, in asking Dr. "Judas" Cox, over the 'phone, to explain his attitude about "The Birth of a Nation," took full responsibility, and said he has his living to make. No comments; remember that press room [illegible]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) ADVOCATE
APRIL 24, 1915

THE OTHER SIDE OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Boston, Mass., April 14, 1915.

To the Managing Editor,
The Advocate:

Dear Sir:—

Concerning the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," we as a people, would enter no protest if the second act were completed, which it is not. It is all the suffering of the white man. Not one word of the suffering, injustice and humiliation of the Negro of that period and before the war. Complete the picture by showing The Cameron in the bosom of his white family while the sun shines, his black family after dark; both women bearing children the same year; boys born to both wimen the same year; both knowing of the relationship, yet friendly, until the white son ooks on the Negro daughter with lust, which causes the Negro son to join the lawless Negroes; even as such actiins on the part of the Negro causes the elder son to join the Klukluck Klan.

Another Scene:—A Negro mother protesting against the ruin of her 14-year-old daughter is forced to spend the night with the Libertine and still so protesting is shot to death in the morning.

Another Secene: A Negro is employed by three prominent Virginia business men to procure Negro girls not over 16 years old. He stands guard at the door while they accomplish their hellish purpose. How would this look to you on the screen? Again, white planters debauch Negro girls, causing them to bear children and then debauch these girls born to them, afterward selling both mother and child for immoral purposes to some unprincipled fiend. Could you accept this on the screen? No! They why expect us to accept "The Birth of a Nation" without a protest? Every task that the white man has set for us to do we have tried to do. We were freed without a plac to lay our heads, without a dollar. The white man said, "Get an education," we have done our best to become educated; the white man said, "Get property," we have worked and starved for fifty cents a day; we have property; the white man said, "Get Money," we have gone poorly clad and hungry; review our banking business in the United States; the white man said, "Fear, love and serve God," look over our churches, seventy-two in Baltimore alone.

Have we not tried to do all that has been asked of us? Now why must we as a race be so humiliated by such picture plays? Must we all suffer for the acts of a few degenerates?

If we, as a people, must accept "The Birth of a Nation," will the white man accept black families of prominent white southerners who bear their names on the screen? They can be produced. If this is not true, let D. W. Griffiths deny it, he is a Kentuckian, as was my father.

I am pleading for justice for my race.

Let the sins of the fathers be visited upon the white man as well as upon the black man.

Yours for justice,
Mrs. Sarah Jane Allen,
366 Tremont St.

Could Not Interfere

or of Boston Gives Hearing to Negroes Protesting Against Griffith Film—Sees Picture with City Officials, Finds Nothing That Would Give Him Right to Prohibit It—Colored Folk Hiss His Decision.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, New England Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

SPITE the many protestations of many of Boston's colored residents, inst "The Birth of a Nation," the gitic Griffith production, opened an inite engagement at the Tremont theBoston, on April 10, playing to caity houses, both at the matinee and ing performances.

s was announced in the last issue of World, the Boston branch of the Naal Association for the Advancement Colored People, of which Mr. Moorld Storey is the president, had reested a hearing before Mayor James M. ley, seeking to prevent it.

The mayor granted this hearing. About ee hundred prominent negroes and perns interested in the uplift of the colrd race were in attendance. David ark Griffith, the producer, and several mbers of his staff appeared in favor of production. Out of the large numr of the protestants but three had witssed the production. The remainder mitted that they were condemning the oduction from hearsay.

Butler R. Wilson, a colored attorney, ndled the case for the protestants. He jected to the scene where a negro named us" is seen chasing a young white girl a cliff, from which she throws herself escape from his clutches. The second ene to which the objection was raised is hat of a negro lieutenant-governor, who es a white girl to a chair and gags her ecause she will not marry him. The hird objection was to a scene during the ivil War when a father, mother and oung white daughter, together with two nion soldiers are holding a lone farmouse against a horde of negroes. The nal scene shows the father holding a istol against the young girl's head as the ouse is attacked by the negroes.

Before hearing the witnesses the mayor ead the statute which states that if a lay, film or any form of amusement is ndecent, immoral or tends to corrupt the ublic morals, the mayor, with the approval of the police commissioner, may ensor the production and then if both nd that it is objectionable, the mayor ay forbid its production.

Miss Mary White Ovington, a New York settlement worker, said that she had witnessed the production twice in New York City. She claimed to have heard members of the audience state after the production that they would like to murder every "nigger" in the land. She also objected to the low-neck dresses worn by some of the colored women in the production. The mayor informed her that low-neck dresses could be seen in the best of society. She said that she had never been in society, but aside from the dresses the expressions on the faces of these women were awful. The mayor then informed her that the expressions on the faces of several of the characters in the Shakespearian productions could be construed likewise.

Moorfield Storey arraigned the producer, the mayor and the people who stood for the picture. He said: "This picture is for political purposes. It is to discredit the negro all over the country."

The mayor interrupted him and said that the English could enter just such a protest against Shakespeare's "Henry VIII." The mayor then read a letter from an Episcopalian minister, who said that the picture was wonderful. Mr. Storey retorted that if the priests and the priesthood were portrayed in the way this film is alleged to protray the negro, he would have plenty of supporters among the population of Boston to suppress it.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, arraigned the book, "The Clansman," from which the play is taken, calling it vindictive, damaging to American citizenship and hurtful to the colored race. He was followed by Joseph Prince Loud, a Boston architect, who claimed to have seen the film in New York. He criticised the display of the activities of the "Klu Klux Klan" and other illicit bodies in the South after the war, which are portrayed in the pictures.

He was reminded by the mayor that history could not be eliminated and that the best way to stop such things would be to stop the printing of histories.

William Munroe Trotter, publisher of a paper devoted to the interests of the colored race, whom President Wilson asserts insulted him in Washington, was the next speaker. In his lengthy speech he told how he had supported Curley for mayor and expected that the mayor would put the ban on the film. Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was the last speaker for the opposition.

Attorney John F. Cusick opened the case for the Griffith interests by stating that out of 200 persons appearing in opposition to the film but three had seen it. He said that the play shows the people what they are enjoying at the present time in contrast to the past. He also presented the official report of the National Board of Censorship.

He told how the film was first presented in the east room of the White House, before President Wilson and the members of his cabinet. He claimed that they declared it to be wonderful. At this point every negro in the assembly hissed loudly. The mayor rapped his gavel for order and two police officers were required to cause silence. Cusick continued to tell of the distinguished personages in public and private life who had witnessed the production and declared it to be superior to anything that they had ever witnessed. These remarks were also hissed. David Wark Griffith was then introduced. He stated that protestations of this kind would mean that the Indians could protest moving pictures, for in most Western pictures they are depicted killing white men. He read a letter from a Catholic priest connected with the Columbiad, the official Knights of Columbus paper, commending him to the play; also three letters from Catholic clergy in New York wishing to take children of their parish schools to see the production in New York; also six letters from principals of New York educational institutions, who praised the play and wanted their scholars to see it. The mayor then asked him if he would be willing to eliminate the cliff scene and Griffith answered that he would if the official censor thought it advisable after seeing the production.

The mayor then said: "My power is limited in this matter. I do not want to make political capital out of it and I do not want to hurt a legitimate firm doing business. You people seem to want everything pertaining to the negro eliminated from the film. Are there not good negroes and bad? Are there not bad whites as well as good? Do you want the assassination of Lincoln cut out? Why, the white people of the country would protest that. You must remember that history cannot be denied."

At this point the mayor was interrupted by William M. Trotter, who stated that the colored voters had supported the mayor when he was elected to office. The mayor then continued: "This photoplay will be produced in this city. I will have the official censor of the municipality there and I will notify the police commissioner to have his censor there. If this film violates the law it shall be stopped. I shall not take any hand in the matter. You people have stated your case. You have used no evidence that I could use in stopping at least one performance."

The first performance was given on Friday evening to an invited audience, composed of many public officials, theater men, newspaper men and others. The mayor was present and enjoyed the production immensely.

The official censors reported that the production was neither obscene or immoral. However, the mayor requested that many minor changes be made in the film. The statement which he issued follows:

"With the desire that the fullest possible measure of justice be accorded the colored citizenship of Boston, I attended the production last evening and to-day requested the management to eliminate the prefatory statement thrown on the screen at the opening of the performance, believing it unfair to the colored citizenship. The statement in question is as follows: 'The bringing of the African to America in the seventeenth century planted the first seed of disunion.' This request was complied with.

"I requested the elimination of a portion of the chase of the white girl by Gus. I further requested the management to eliminate at least five exhibitions of the face of Gus, to which objection had been made. I further requested certain scenes, while not immoral or obscene, yet might be offensive to certain of the public, descriptive of the visit of Charles Sumner to the home of Austin Stoneman and his meeting with the mulatto woman there be eliminated. I further requested that certain scenes between the mulatto woman and Austin Stoneman and between the mulatto woman and Silas Lynch be eliminated.

"I further requested that portions of the reels portraying scenes in the South Carolina House of Representatives wherein a member is shown removing his shoes and the consideration by such assembly of a motion requiring the member to replace his shoes, be eliminated.

"To these requests the management has assented. In addition thereto the changes made in the original films while exhibiting in New York will be in force in Boston."

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) ADVOCATE
APRIL 24, 1915

TAKES ISSUE WITH DR. FLEISHER.

To the Editor of the Cambridge Advocate:—

I read a day or two ago in the Boston Herald, Dr. Charles Fleischer's estimate of "The Birth of a Nation." After witnessing this picture play for myself, I cannot understand how a citizen of Dr. Fleischer's estimable character and worth can go on record as opposing the suppression of this anti-race film, because such suppression would be "undemocratic" and un-American." To allow an exhibition which engender race hatred, portrays only the baser side of Negro character, appeals to sectional and race jrejudice, distorts and twists history to suit an unholy purpose, lies by omission, widens the gulf that already exists between the races, and bears false witness against 10,000,000 American citizens—such an exhibition is anything but democratic and American. How Dr. Fleischer or any other thoughtful and fair-minded citizen can lend his endorsement to any such savage display of race antagonisms is beyond me.

For example, to visualize before a large mixed public audience the suggestive scene of an attemptd ravishing of the white girl Flora by the renegade Negro Gus, is in itself sufficient justification for the suppression of this photoplay. Furthermore, numerous other objectionable scenes which represent the lowest type of Negro life and which seek to create the impression that the highest ambition of the Negro of today is to rule the white man and to marry some white woman, not only is a libel on the character of the entire Negro race, but is an insult to the intelligence and conscience of the white race.

In picking up the cudgel for "The Bird of a Nation," and pleading that the Southern view point be allowed a full setting forth and calling upon the management to supplement the present scenes by a presentation of the best of Negro life, Dr. Fleischer should give the reasons for the faith that is in him. His suggestion is fair and reasonable, but will it be adopted and acted upon? Is there any evidence that such a presentation can be expected or hoped for in view of the obvious intent of this picture spectacle? Is not the evidence all the other way? Does not Dr. Fleischer admit as much when he strongly urges the management to give the other side, showing Negro advancement since 1865?

It is the conviction of my soul, based upon the pictures as shown, that behind "The Birth of a Nation" lies a threefold vicious purpose:

First, commercial exploitation of race prejudice. The great mass of mankind is not moved by an appeal to the finer senses, but rather by an appeal to the savage instincts which still inhere in us. The collaborator of the "Birth of a Nation" is shrewd enough to see this and makes haste to capitalize it.

Second, the humiliation and degradation of a defenseless people. If this were not one of the objects of this photoplay, the better side of Negro life would be shown and strongly contrasted with the worst side. Like segregation, Jim Crowism, discrimination, lynchings, laws against inter-marriage of the races, and all the rest, the "Birth of a Nation" is a portent aggravating device used in helping to keep alive strife and hatred between the white and black races.

Third, this damnable play is an attempt to vindicate the Southern view point in strong contrast with the evils of Northern carpet-bagging politics, and, by indirection, an appeal to Northern public opinion to subordinate itself to Southern public opinion in all matters affecting the civil, political, and manhood rights of the egro.

I agree with Dr. Fleischer that the Southern viewpoint should be fully set forh, provided, of course, it is supplemented with pictures of Negro advancement since 1865. In the meantime, however, while we are waiting for the scene to shift to the presentation of the better side of Negro life, the bedeviled race baiting work goes merrily on and at heavy expense to the whole Negro race. For this reason, the play should be immediately suppressed in the interests of fair play and justice to a large body of loyal patriotic American citizens. Perhaps this phase of the matter has not occurred to Dr. Fleischer.

As much as I dislike to take issue with one whose life is devoted to high and noble ends (and no one questions his absolute impartiality and fairness to the Negro), I cannot allow Dr. Fleischer's observations and suggestions in this connection to go unchallenged. They are likely to create wrong impressions in some quarters. For this reason I earnestly trust you will give this communication publicity.

Frank P. Chisholm.

Boston, April 15.

"BIRTH OF NATION"

Colored Residents of This City Will Hold Meeting at Bethel A. M. E. Church Today

A protest meeting of all colored residents of this city will be held in the Bethel A. M. E. church on Kempton street today to protest against the further production of the photo-play entitled "The Birth of a Nation" which has been on exhibition in Boston and which has caused several disturbances between the colored residents of this city and the white people.

The meeting will also endorse the movement which is now on foot to secure legislation against the public exhibition of pictures or plays tending to create racial or religious prejudice.

A large number of prominent speakers have been asked to attend the meeting, some of whom have seen the picture, among those who will speak are Frederick S. Monroe, James H. Hayden, Dr. W. W. Nelson, Miss Elizabeth C. Carter and J. C. Dade.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 25, 1915

CLIPPING FROM Springfield Republican
4-26-15

MORE CENSORSHIP

ISUB censorship was discussed in this column recently. Massachusetts has experienced censorship by popular demand. "The Birth of a Nation" has been shown in Boston and the colored people of that section have demanded and been granted concessions. The picture has been changed by the elimination of a scene that was considered objectional both in New York and in this State. Unfortunately, from every point of view, not only that of the protestants but also from the point of view of those interested wholly in preserving the dramatic veritism, the elimination of this scene has been a gain. Motion pictures have made possible the presentation of scenes realistically that only have been suggested on the stage. Because it is particularly possible to present scenes that have been omitted from the regular stage picture producers seem to think that they are justified in presenting those scenes losing sight of the fact that there are also moral limitations and those suggested by good taste.

* * *

In producing a drama of the period of Reconstruction it would seem necessary to include among the problems of the South the problem of the Negro thrown into strange relations with his former owners. It was Mr. Griffith's—the producer—problem to suggest this factor in life of the new South and to do it dramatically but in a manner that would not offend those seeing the picture. If it has failed in this particular the failure is a personal one and does not condemn the story of the reconstruction struggle as unfit for dramatic achievement. Other playwrights have been confronted with similar difficulty and have found the happy medium between sacrificing truth and offensive realism.

* * *

If the scenes complained of offend good taste or are subversive to public morals or to the peace of cities, States and the Nation they certainly ought to be eliminated. If the elimination of these parts so affect the truth of the picture-drama as to destroy its perspective, the producer may be trusted to withdraw it from the theater. It would be better for the authorities to demand the withdrawal of the picture than to permit it to be shown so mutilated as to affect its historical truth. It is quite possible that when the picture-play of the present great war is written and produced hyphenated citizens will object to the parts of the film that show that neutrality of Belgium was violated by Germany and that the little country was invaded and devastated. It is possible, too, that the Mayors of Milwaukee and St. Louis will order the elimination of those parts of the film that show the Belgium episodes. If their honors take this action, the elimination will please a part of the population, but the war drama so edited will hardly be a truthful picture of the war.

* * * * * *

It has been announced definitely that Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who is making a farewell tour of the United States and who will play at Court Square Theater May 17, will appear in Hamlet. Forbes-Robertson is generally conceded to be one of the great Hamlets and probably no selection from his repertoire would interest so many as this.

* * *

Dorothy Mackaye, who was a winsome Peg in "Peg o' My Heart" in the early season, returns to Court Square Theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, "Peg o' My Heart" is remarkable in that it has produced so many girls who play it, and Miss Mackaye is one of those who play it well. Miss Mackaye was complimented by crowded houses on her visit here last fall and was compared without disparagement to the great Peg, Laurette Taylor and Peggy O'Neill.

A. L. S. WOOD.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 25, 1915

Tremont Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation," the most [illegible] ever shown, entered its third week Monday at the Tremont theater. The tremendous [illegible] greeted the advent of this [illegible] drama in Boston has been [illegible] the attendance in the last few days [illegible] desire to see it on account of more people than the theater can accommodate. The [illegible] features of this [illegible] a great variety of entertainment [illegible] astonishingly [illegible] enough [illegible] to supply half a [illegible] as a relief [illegible] the picture. [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] in [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 25 1915

Charming Romance in "Birth of a Nation"

Human Interest Predominant in Film Play

SHERMAN'S MARCH TO THE SEA.

LILLIAN GISH.

Scenes from the "Birth of a Nation," and one of the charming film stars who appear in it.

By HARLOW HARE.

The legal complications which have attended the performances of "The Birth of the Nation" during the past two weeks have caused a part of the public to think that the big picture is some sort of anti-negro propaganda, that it is political and dogmatic rather than romantic.

The facts are that the Griffith picture is one of the sweetest and most charming romances ever pictured, and from the first scene to the last the human interest is predominant.

"Cabiria," the extraordinary photo drama of Gabrielle D'Annunzio, was very nearly the equal of "The Birth of a Nation" in spectacular features, and it was even more picturesque because of its painting of the ancient world. The picture lacked the one thing which "The Birth of a Nation" possesses, a great throbbing human story to hold the whole structure together.

SHARP LIMITATIONS.

There are very sharp limitations to the photo drama. Pantomime as a means of expression is far inferior to speech. Many of the picture makers have taken plays that were legitimate successes and contented themselves with turning them into pictures without properly providing for the translation of the dialogue upon the screen.

Two screen actors cannot carry on more than a very limited conversation and have the audience follow them. To have them stand facing the audience and endeavoring to convey by lip movement and gestures a long speech is not doing the camera justice.

Griffith was among the first to realize this and in "The Birth of a Nation" he eliminates all such scenes. He tells his story just as effectively as a novelist or a playwright by flashing his love scenes at you just as he flashes his battle pictures. At the moment when you see his lovers their attitudes and facial expression is sufficiently eloquent and there is no need for dialogue.

WHAT GRIFFITH SAYS.

Griffith himself does not believe in taking plays for picturization. "The motion picture is much closer to the novel than to the drama," he explained to me the other day. "On the screen we can picture almost everything that a novelist can tell about. On the stage they are limited to three or four settings and the action must necessarily be constricted. A novelits will describe 2,000 or 3,000 situations in the course of a book. A play will show only a few hundred.

"The motion picture follows the book. Of the thousands of scenes mentioned by the author there are few we cannot reproduce. Even the mental sufferings, the flashes of thought and imagination can be caught.

"With such a marvelous field before us, how foolish to be puttering with a play, trying to expand it into a good picture. Why, all the literature of the world is before us. Every director is a Christopher Columbus. The thought of the great poets and writers of all the ages is waiting to be picturized. We shall make the classics popular, and spread culture and entertainment abroad at the same time."

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 25 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" Continues at the Tremont

"The Birth of a Nation," the most pretentious film play ever shown, enters upon its third week tomorrow at the Tremont Theatre. The tremendous interest that greeted the advent of this wonderful film drama in Boston has not shown any abatement, in fact the unusual discussion of the past few days has increased the desire to see it on the part of more people than the theatre has been able to accommodate.

As a relief to the tensions created by the melodramatic episodes, David W. Griffith, the producer, has introduced moments of romantic, sentimental and humorous interest, reproductions of famous and familiar historical personages and groups of them in action that gives the illusion, aided by the skilful makeups of the actors, of the pictures having been taken of the actual individuals during their lifetime. "The Birth of a Nation" presents much that is symbolic and prophetic as well as that which is historical.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 25 1915

Tremont Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation," the most pretentious film play ever shown, will begin its third week tomorrow at the Tremont Theatre. The many entertaining features of this drama embody a variety of exciting episodes shown in astoundingly rapid sequence, embracing enough theatrical material to supply half a dozen plays. As a relief to the tension created by the melodramatic episodes, David W. Griffith, the producer, has introduced moments of romantic, sentimental and humorous interest, reproductions of famous and familiar historical personages. The perfect photography projected with faultless technique upon the screen, the light effects and the landscape peopled to its most remote perspective with living figures make this film drama enjoyable. Two performances daily, afternoon and evening.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 25 1915

THINKS IT HURTFUL PLAY.

Booker T. Washington Doubts That "The Birth of a Nation" Would Be Allowed in Southern Cities.

Booker T. Washington, in a telegram from Tuskegee, Ala., to Dr S. E. Courtney of this city, gives his views of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." He says that from what he can learn it is a vicious and hurtful play and suggests that if it cannot be stopped it should be modified or changed materially.

"Best thing would be to stop it," the telegram reads, "as it can result in nothing but stirring up race prejudice. Do not believe the play will be permitted in its present form in any of our Southern cities. Glad to hear people of Boston are against it and hope their efforts to stop play will be successful."

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 25 1915

REFORM LEGISLATION CRUDELY PRESENTED

Measure for Censoring of Motion Pictures and the so-Called Innholders' Bill Fair Samples of Faulty Preparation

By JAMES C. WHITE.

In justice to the legislators and the public at large, the proponents of reform legislation on Beacon Hill should make certain first of all that their hobby bills are sane, reasonable and workable. During the present session particularly there has been in evidence to a distressing degree a disposition to file good intentions rather than accurate legislative measures. Out of this disposition, unless it is corrected, all sorts of troubles are certain to develop.

The general bill for the censoring of motion pictures, not "The Birth of a Nation" bill, may be well cited as an example. This bill is backed by the Federation of Women's Clubs and is now before the Senate ways and means committee. It is more than likely that committee will make a favorable report. Yet this bill is one which is certain to be in constant danger while going through the House, and, if enacted, it will be almost unworkable.

The bill relative to the registration of guests in hotels, which has passed nearly all of its stages and which will shortly reach the Governor for his consideration, is based on a good intention, but is worded so crudely that it can be easily made an instrument of blackmail.

The pure bread bill, to cite another, came very near being enacted in the Senate the other day in such shape that the use of cornmeal in bread would be illegal. Senator Gordon of Springfield caught it at the last minute, and the amendment which he offered was added. When it was over Senator Norwood confessed that, perhaps, really proper consideration had not been given to the measure while in committee.

Bills Improperly Prepared.

A good, strong, healthy public sentiment for progressive legislation is one thing, but when the bill to carry out these intentions is presented it should be in fairly proper shape.

The business lobbyist on Beacon Hill is viewed with suspicion from the time he registers in the office of the sergeant-at-arms till the session is prorogued. The social welfare lobbyist, who is quite as persistent, even though a counsel fee may be lacking, is viewed with an easy tolerance which prevents a close inspection of the measures offered.

The business lobbyist has to defend every line and word, every comma and semi-colon in the draft which he submits, but the bill offered by the social welfare worker in many cases is taken as offered without a question.

This confidence in the good intent and the ability of the welfare people is too precious an asset to be wasted or destroyed by the presentation of disjointed, half-connected bills which fail to hit the mark or which create damage by bursting like shrapnel far in the air and covering a wide area with devastation.

The motion picture men, to take the matter up in more detail, appreciate that official censorship is coming. They are not enthusiastic over it, but they are about ready to go half-way. They are ready to make a virtue out of the conditions. The special movie bill though, which puts the inspection burden on the state board of labor and industries, is not a good one. The case is not helped either by misrepresentations as to the staff which will be required to properly censor the films offered. Again there is an element of unfairness which invites defeat in the plan which practically compels a dealer to pay a $1 license fee on each 100-feet film which he may have in stock. If that could be worked over providing that the fee should be paid only when the film is displayed, it would work to an easier settlement.

The Innholders' Bill.

A really vital out in the innholders' bill in question is in penalizing the innholder only, in the event of a guest registering a false name. Mr. Gifford's amendment penalizing the person who so registers falsely, was perhaps offered at an inopportune time, so that it appeared more like a move to kill the bill than to amend it, but the germ of right idea is there and it should have been added. The bill should continue the penalty on the innholder no doubt, but the guests who perform the illegal act should also be made subject to a penalty. There is also a fear now that the bill is so broad that even the practice which certain groups of business men have of eating lunch in a private room at a hotel will necessitate that they register in advance at the office, and that an exact record be kept of the time during which they occupy the room.

It is no easy task to frame good legislation which will meet social evil conditions or which will advance the general comfort of the people in an entire state. It is not work to be done in a hysterical mood and there has been a disposition this year when favorable action has been taken to put it along in a hurrah boy spirit which is dangerous, to say the least.

The possibility that Councillor Guy A. Ham may have the Republican lieutenant-governorship nomination without any opposition is disturbing to some Republicans at least, judging from the activities going on in various quarters. Former Councillor Lovell Johnson of Fitchburg has been pressed very strongly to enter the lists as a rival, but has so far refused. Former Councillor Schuster of Douglas has also been pressed, but while apparently he has been more willing to listen than Mr. Johnson, he has not taken the step. Calvin Coolidge and Levi Greenwood booms have also been set in operation. Mr. Coolidge says he has his hands full running the Senate just now, and Mr. Greenwood is on the Pacific coast. It is understood that Col. Goettins of Springfield is a candidate, but this is hardly the time for absent treatment, and the anti-Ham men want an out-and-out candidate to whom they can hold. The latest now is the suggestion that Councilor Wright of Pittsfield allow the use of his name.

This very anxiety to pick a rival candidate is strengthening Ham and weakening the opposition. In the end the place is apt to be worth little or nothing unless the various initiation moves are properly labelled. Ham is a clean, clever, aggressive talker, and has been a good party worker, and it is not altogether plain on just what the opposition is based. Much has been made about the need of picking a man from the western part of the state to balance the ticket, but it is far from certain that the geographical situation is at the bottom of the desire to give him a battle. It may be that there is some feeling he is a Cushing rather than a McCall man, which has caused the distrust. Mr. Ham has no special reason to worry over the situation as it stands. The delay in an opposing candidate declaring himself is allowing him full opportunity to strengthen his fences. If the anti-movement develops into an open movement of "anything-to-down him" his nomination will be as good as settled.

The Governor and the Tax Problem

Governor Walsh, in the opinion of some people, has all but blocked his own desires for tax reform by the multiplicity of the suggestions in his last message to the Legislature. It is hinted that if his message had been only half as long, and had contained only an exhortation for the passage of the income tax constitutional amendment, his position would be much stronger.

When in one and the same message he linked together his call for the constitutional amendment, and his request for the passage of certain new tax reform bills, and then capped the program with the request for an authorization for an unpaid tax commission to study the whole subject and report to the next General Court, he overloaded the platform.

Members of the Legislature who are still in the kindergarten stage of simple addition in parliamentary and taxation procedure, have been swept off their feet by the variety of his suggestions. They are willing to agree that the first task at hand is the acceptance of the amendment, but if they are also going to authorize a special commission to study the matter, they want to know why the new tax suggestions which he says he wants now, should not be transmitted to this body for consideration. If they accept the amendment and put through the compulsory tax return, they are in doubt as to why they should authorize a special tax commission. As matters stand, they are twirling their thumbs in doubt. All the cross roads look good to them.

No Easy Task.

The judiciary committee, which now has on its hands the problem of framing a workable and safe law to regulate the giving of theatrical entertainments which shall not excite any class of the citizens of the state, is not to be envied its task. Off hand, it is a very easy matter to draft and even to enact a bill which shall boldly state that no theatrical manager shall be allowed to furnish any entertainment which shall offend any race or religion or be immoral. Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, in fact, told the committee on rules much to its disgust that there was no reason why a bill of that sort could not be drafted and put through the Legislature in three days. When, however, the lawyers of the judiciary committee take up the drafts it will be surprising if they are able to draw an acceptable one out of the hat even within the time set by his honor for the passage of the bill.

Under such a bill as is suggested the performance of the "Merchant of Venice" could be made impossible if the Jewish citizens cared to protest. All sorts of complications could easily develop from the enactment of a measure which boldly set forth in statute law what many people desire.

There are some who believe that the real solution is making a minor amendment in the law to change the authority for enforcing it, so that the mayor of Boston shall be the sole authority. A theatrical performance under the existing law can only be stopped when the mayor and police commissioner agree. Out of this divided responsibility, in part, the present trouble over "The Birth of a Nation" has arisen. But this division of authority in Boston, which is different from any other city in the state, was not a mistake in the law as some people seem to think. It was deliberately provided because, to speak frankly, the theatrical managers of Boston, with a considerable amount of property, did not care to be made subject to the whims of the mayor alone. There have been times in the past when this divided authority alone has saved them from petty prosecution and blackmail by city officials. It is to be hoped a fair settlement will be reached; it is also to be hoped the solution will be a real and not a makeshift creation.

Is with some truth that they were ur... to take various war orders for ... because they could not make ... on time. They suggested the ... bility of amending the ... latter to ...

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 25, 1915

Lillian Gish Playing the Part of Elsie Stoneman in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 25, 1915

By JAMES C. WHITE.

LEGISLATIVE

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 25 1915

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
Apr 25, 1915

Two Meetings of Protest Are Scheduled Today

Feeling runs unabated among the opponents of the photo-play, "Birth of a Nation," with the determination to have the production suppressed. To protest against the play and to support the passage of a law to stop it by the Legislature, the colored citizens will hold two mass meetings today. The Women's Protective League, a new semi-secret organization which has grown out of the fight against the play, has called a public meeting at 3 o'clock at the Twelfth Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue and Madison street.

Under the auspices of the National Independent Equal Rights League, a mass meeting will be held at night, at the close of the regular church services, in the A. M. E. Zion Church, corner Columbus avenue and Northampton street. Mr. Emery T. Morris will preside. The speakers will be the Rev. M. W. Thornton, the Rev. Walter McClane, the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, the Rev. B. W. Swain, the Rev. S. A. Brown, the Rev. A.W. Fuller, the Rev. T. E. Anten, C. G. Morgan, William D. Brigham, ex-Representative George T. Daley, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson and Deputy Commander A. T. Knowles of the Grand Army.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 25, 1915

Mark D.L.

Outbreaks in Boston over the moving picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," recall the fact that so far the Supreme Court of the United States has managed to avoid—of a lesser tribunal one might say "dodge"—actual decision on the "Jim Crow" law or the "Grandfather Clause" law in various States, in which discrimination against the negro race is claimed by its champions.

Individual decisions affecting cases here and there have been decided, but no decree has been handed down which would settle in broad terms all such controversies.

Before "going on the road," this play was shown here at a special performance to the National Press Club and hundreds of distinguished guests, including many members of both branches of Congress, but naturally created no excitement or adverse comment in this semi-Southern city on its treatment of the negroes.

On the color line, a good story is told on Sec Daniels of the Navy, who hails from North Carolina and who is an aggressive advocate of democracy in his branch of the service.

Daniels, it is related, was just about to sign an order for officers and men aboard ship to mess together and had his pen poised in air, when a bystander suggested that it might not be agreeable for officers from Southern States to sit at the table with negro members of the crews.

The pen, concludes the story, was carefully restored to its place on Daniels's desk before it could perform its work, and the order was buried in a pigeonhole or wastebasket.

In a report on the county and municipal indebtedness in the States for 1913, the Department of Commerce this week said the indebtedness of the civil division of Massachusetts, less sinking fund assets, was $137,678,004.

This amount was exceeded by only New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and is an increase of $48,700,000, or 30.1 per cent, over the figures of 1902.

Essex County, with $1,057,000, had the largest county debt in the State and Dukes, with $4407, the smallest.

The indebtedness of Boston was given as $118,357,648, with sinking fund assets amounting to $47,681,618.

NORTH AMERICAN
Philadelphia, Pa.
APR 25 1915

...production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," may go on at the Tremont Theatre, according to a decision by Judge Thomas D. Dowd, in the civic criminal court last week.

Picture Producers Now Facing the Ordeal of Submitting to a Multitude of Censors, Says Harlow Hare.

By HARLOW HARE.

"The Birth of a Nation" squabble here in Boston has resulted in a bill before the Legislature which means censorship of pictures. The picture producers, without deserving such a fate, seem doomed to fall into the hands of a multitude of censors.

There is a bill before Congress at present for Federal censorship, which won't pass in all probability because it is a flagrant violation of the rights of the States to conduct their own private affairs.

But after passing the Federal board, if it becomes a law, the pictures then come under the jurisdiction of State boards of censorship, since several States have already appointed such boards.

Passing the State and Federal boards the picture is scrutinized by the town and city authorities.

And if the picture has been safely guided by all these censors few persons who are willing to be disorderly and create a disturbance in the vicinity of the theatre where a picture is play may be able to scare the authorities into putting a stop to the well-earned privileges of the picture

Now what is the situation? A picture producer may take a famous book or play like "The Clansman" and make a picture of it. Like the manufacturer of any product he asks to be permitted to sell it in every town and city of the United States.

What happens to him? He has to pass several hundred or even several thousands of censors, State, Federal and local, and in all probability most of them will be most marvelously incompetent. No matter if the book has been on an uninterrupted sale for years and if the play has held the boards for a long time. If any or all of these mushroom authorities object to it, the picture will be barred from certain territory and perhaps from all the important territories of the country.

Is this a free country?

Another photoplay, of which much has been written and which is declared to be one of the finest productions yet made, is the Famous Players' picturization of Hall Caine's "Eternal City," which will occupy the Boston Theatre during the coming week. Pauline Frederick, who was seen here in "Innocent," plays the chief female role.

SUNDAY POST, APRIL 25, 1915

EACH MOVIE QUEEN A MANY-SIDED BEAUTY

Mae Marsh of "Birth of Nation" Example of Versatility

Other Girls in Company Show Changes of Character

Miss Lillian Gish in the role of Elsie, an ideal type of piquant, young womanhood. Somehow the movie camera has changed her as Cinderella was changed from the little girl who sat in the corner to the lovely princess.

Notice the chameleon-like qualities of Miss Mae Marsh as illustrating this. She might be a little slavey (and often is in domestic pictures) or a nymph for herpes to dream about. It is all in the way the camera looks at her.

Miss Miriam Cooper as the flower-like Margaret Cameron of the South Carolina Clan in "The Birth of a Nation." Off the boards she is just a simple, rogueish miss.

To find that the "adorable she" is not one girl but a thousand would be rather a shock to the average young man who goes a-courting. That, however, is the experience of the chap who sees this ideal in picturland.

The scrutinizing camera eye reveals the myriad different personalities masked by one identity, and from scene to scene the heroine is ever new, ever different, and out of the motion pictures in every day life she is different, too.

Take Mae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation" now running at the Tremont Theatre. It would be clever to call Miss Marsh a chameleon, if so many others had not called her that before this.

The camera never does such startling tricks as when she is before it. A scrubby little slavey; a young miss from boarding school; the sweet college graduate; the young woman of fashion; the romantic heroine; the soubrette cut-up, and finally the everyday freckle-faced, rather homely and always roguish kid—those are just a few of the things that Mae Marsh is.

It was her youthful love of adventure that prompted her to visit the Majestic-Reliance studio in Los Angeles one day and look around to see what was happening. Director Griffith found her, sensed her temperament and set her to work.

The sweet and sugary sort of darling girl is represented among Griffith's forces by Miss Lillian Gish. Without the plastic quality of Mae Marsh—the mask of a thousand faces—Miss Gish has a style of beauty that lends itself to every representation of daintiness and adorable femininity.

Away from Pictureland Miss Gish is the well-groomed, fashionable, slim young woman that one may see any fine morning walking past the Tremont street shops in Boston.

And then there is Miss Miriam Cooper, playing the Southern belle, Margaret Cameron, in "The Birth of a Nation," who may fairly be described as "camera-proof." The picture must commit hari-kari itself before it can misrepresent her. The technicians say that this is due to the classic regularity of feature, and especially to the perfection of the large eyes.

Out of the realm of the motion picture Miss Cooper is just as pretty to look upon as she is within the camera limit. She drops the romance, of course, and the old Southern atmosphere of the F. F. V., yet neither Los Angeles nor New York can make her other than beautiful.

The young women of cameraland work long hours. They could not very well belong to a labor union, because much of the work is waiting and watching for one's turn to come around.

For every pose one sees, 25 poses have been rehearsed, and a dozen poses actually photographed and most of them thrown away.

Out of the harvest of 140,000 feet of "Birth of a Nation" films, Director Griffith selected 12,000 feet which he called good. His judgment has been abundantly ratified. It would be difficult to find an ugly pose of Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish or Miriam Cooper among all the thousands that one witnesses in the great Tremont Theatre film.

GLOBE

FALL RIVER, MASS

APR 26 191

BIJOU BOOKING.

Among the bookings announced by the Bijou theatre is that of "The Nigger," the motion picture adaptation of Edward Sheldon's famous play that is now sharing attention with "The Birth of a Nation," under the title of "The New Governor." Few plays have been ecorded the attention given "The Nigger" when it introduced a new playright to the world a few years ago in the person of Edward Sheldon, a young graduate of Prof. Baker's famous class at Harvard. Considerable interest has already been aroused in the local showing.

FITCHBURG (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 26, 1915

Gov. Walsh Has Them Guessing

The politicians would like to know whether Governor Walsh will be a candidate for re-election. This curiosity is by no means confined to the Democratic party, but is widespread also among the Republicans, who admit that the governor would be much stronger than any other nominee the Democrats could put forward. No one has authority to speak for the governor, and he has said that he would not announce his intentions before the adjournment of the legislature, but the people who are close to him expect that he will run again.

The governor has had his troubles, but on the whole good fortune has attended him. The uprising against "The Birth of a Nation" has worked distinctly to his advantage, and, if the election were to be held tomorrow, thousands of colored voters, who have hitherto supported Republican candidates, would mark their ballots for David I. Walsh. Mr. Cushing and Mr. McCall, the contestants for the Republican nomination, have done what they could to make capital from the affair, but the governor has been the chief beneficiary from it.

The position of Mr. Foss plagues the Republicans. They would like to have him state definitely what he proposes to do, but, following his custom, he is waiting to see how potent national prohibition will be as a campaign issue. If the people like it, he will, without doubt, become a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, if it does not take hold on the popular fancy, he will wait for a more promising occasion.

In the meantime Mr. Shaw, who has been proposed as the Prohibitionist candidate for governor, is proceeding with his efforts to obtain the signatures of 50,000 men who will vote for prohibition. If he succeeds in getting anything like as many names as that, the Republicans might just as well abandon their campaign unless they are willing to adopt a prohibition plank in their platform next fall. Inasmuch as the Republican senators and representatives from Massachusetts voted against national prohibition, the state convention can hardly stultify them.

WALTHAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS
APRIL 26, 1915

HYSTERICAL LEGISLATION.

Isn't it possible for the General Court to distinguish between hysterical legislation and that which has a basis of sound sense? A portion of the public has been worked up to a fever heat of excitement over a moving picture on exhibition at a Boston theatre. Mayor Curley had viewed the exhibit and, after directing certain changes made, allowed the show to proceed. The projectors were summoned into court by an over-wrought sentiment under the only statute which could be so tortured as to apply. The judge himself went to the theatre and viewed the play, and could find but a single objectionable feature and that was promptly eliminated. Now an effort is being made to put through some most dangerous legislation aimed to cover the complaint of people who, ninety-nine out of a hundred, never saw the inside of the theatre, and who go out of their way to threaten violence. Let us hope that the General Court will not yield to irresponsible mob rule.

m EVENING TRANSCRIPT
ress: Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915
e

CLAXTON WILSTACH DEAD

Assistant Manager of "The Birth of a Nation" Dies Suddenly in His Room

Claxton Wilstach, publicity agent and assistant manager of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," was found dead this morning on the floor of his room in the Hotel Georgian. Medical Examiner Leary said that death was probably due to natural causes, but he ordered the body taken to the morgue for an autopsy.

Mr. Wilstach was oen of three brothers all prominent in the theatrical world. He came to Boston a week ago to replace Henry MacMahan. Mr. Wilstach was about forty-two years old and married.

Mr. Wilstach at one time was connected with Sothern and Marlowe as his brother Frank has also been. Paul, another brother, was secretary and publicity man for Richard Mansfield.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
APRIL 26, 1915

As a happy compromise it has been suggested that all the Ku-Klux clan scenes be eliminated from the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," and some of the more harrowing scenes from "Uncle Tom's Cabin" substituted for them. This might, however, invite a protest from indignant white Southerners.

BOSTON (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 26, 1915

It is not probable that the Legislative Committee on Judiciary will report anything like that Sullivan bill which is specifically aimed at the photo play the "Birth of a Nation." And there is also very little likelihood that any change in the clause providing that joint approval of the Mayor and Police Commissioner in the present law will be made.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 26, 1915

FITCHBURG (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 26, 1915

Ministers Divide On "Birth Of A Nation"

(Special Wire to Daily News.)

STATE HOUSE, April 26.—The controversy over the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," took on new life today. Two thousand persons attended a legislative hearing where the supporters of the photo play denounced the Sullivan bill. The Rev. William H. Jordan of Clinton, told the Congregational ministers at Pilgrim hall that Governor Walsh believes all the ministers' associations of Boston should take action against the photo play. He moved that a committee should be appointed with that end in view. The Rev. E. Johnson objected and believed the matter should be allowed to rest. The Baptist ministers in Shipman hall voted to favor the governor's proposal after a stormy de-

(Mass.) SUN-AMERICAN 460
APRIL 26, 1915

ROXBURY PASTOR CALLS PLAY A TRAVESTY

Last night, at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Pastor Charles A. Fulton took occasion, in the course of his sermon, to state why he thought the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," ought to be suppressed. He said in part; "I know the South and love it and its people, for I have lived among them as one of their number, being, though northern born, welcomed to their hearts and homes as pastor. I know the southern Negro, with his faults and excellencies. The days of the civil war and of reconstruction are behind us. Let them be forgotten, save as their memory helps us in planning wisely for the future and in honoring those who made the era of the war illustrious by their deeds of heroic devotion.

"'The Birth of a Nation' is a misnomer for the photo-play which should be called 'the Clansman.' As a spectacle, it is a wonderful production. But it should be stopped. It must be stopped in Massachusetts if she is to remain worthy of the memory of Garrison, Phillips and Sumner. It must be stopped because it is a travesty of history. Nothing but mischief can come of it."

Ex-Gov. [illegible] photo-play, [illegible] M. R. Patterson of Tennessee, yesterday, attacked the Universalist [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," at a meeting held in the First [illegible] and [illegible] Church, Everett. He also criticized "Uncle Tom's [illegible]ice to [illegible]he Clansman," and said all three are doing a great [illegible]m the South [illegible] negro race. "There were hundreds of good mas- [illegible]d that was pict[illegible] in the days of slavery," he said, "to one of the [illegible] deal of harm [illegible]ured in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and the book does a [illegible] 'Clansman' an[illegible] Another book that is a mistatement of fact is [illegible]ion.' Altho[illegible] also the photo-play taken from it, 'The Birth [illegible]oped. No [illegible] I am a Southerner, I believe the play ought [illegible] the negro [illegible]e in the history of the world has been so [illegible] There are a hundred good negroes to one

HERALD
ress: Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

PASTOR CALLS PHOTO PLAY TRUE PICTURE

Finds No Suggestion of Immorality in "The Birth of a Nation."

Before a large congregation, last night, the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain, spoke at length upon "The Birth of a Nation" and said that he failed to see a thing in it that suggested immorality to any normal mind. He said: "I regret the elimination, by order of the court, of the scene where Gus, the Negro, chases the little white girl. It was ordered out on the ground that it was immoral. That scene is the masterful picturing of the cause of the southern man and woman on one of the most momentous questions with which they have to deal. It is the pathetic appeal of the South to the nation that the whole people may understand the dread under which the southern woman constantly trembles. The horrible fear of rape, the dread never absent from the southern home, could be the only thought in the mind of normal persons while watching this scene."

Continuing, the Rev. Mr. Hawkins said in part:

"The greatest objection that has been raised to this play is that it stirs race prejudice. I see nothing in the play that ought to stir race prejudice. But a larger question is entirely ignored, namely, shall any race be placed above criticism? Is it wholesome for the public wellbeing to take a stand, through court decisions and legislative acts, that the bad features of any race shall not be revealed for public scorn and condemnation? Races that have passed out of their childhood welcome criticism. God pity us when we reach that supersensitive state where we cannot listen to a rehearsal of our faults.

"Whatever our politicians may say, the Negro is the greatest menace in our national life at the present day. He as a race is lowest in the scale of our national development. He has produced some great men. There are noble souls under black skins. But after all this is said, it still remains that he threatens more than any other the health, moral and physical, of our land. The overwhelming majority of them are still in their animalism. No one knows this more than some of our level-headed Negroes. No one ought to be more willing to listen to this revelation than the Negro. It is only the abnormally developed Ego of a few northern Negroes, who are sometimes disgusting in their self-assertiveness, who would hide these facts from the public, who would excite the mob spirit in the mass of ignorant Negroes, that the truth may be covered. We are never going to lift the colored race to the place it ought to occupy by this ostrich policy of hiding our faces in the sand."

REV. WALTER E. CALLEY DEPLORES FILM AGITATION

The Rev. Walter E. Calley of the First Baptist Church of Jamaica Plain referred last evening to what he called "Boston's latent excitement," and said that he regretted that the Negroes of Boston had felt called upon to make the demonstration they have made against "The Birth of a Nation." The preacher said he felt that the agitation would result in harm rather than good to the protesting colored people.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 26, 1915

MR. DOLE ON THE PHOTO-PLAY

No one can question the Rev. Charles F. Dole's devotion to the ideals of human freedom or his zeal in behalf of the dusky races here and in Asia. But this is what he says of the legislation now pending at the State House, which The Herald denounced as "hysterical."

I was glad to see your judicious warning against hasty legislation of the suppressive type touching the vexed question of the wicked films. I have not been able to see them yet. But I think we may at times greatly deplore the misrepresentation produced by a book or a show without being justified in forbidding people to see it. Isn't this really a good opportunity to rally the Negroes to play the part of men, and not to make fools of themselves, because a rather evil-minded white man plays the fool?

Good deal of sound sense here. Think it over, Mr. [illegible]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
[illegible]
APR 26 1915

As a happy compromise it has been suggested that all the Ku-Klux clan scenes be eliminated from the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," and some of the more harrowing scenes from "Uncle Tom's Cabin" substituted for them. This might, however, invite a protest from indignant white Southerners.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass. Apr 26 '15

"BIRTH OF NATION" AGENT FOUND DEAD

Claxton Wilstach, widely known theatrical man, who came here from New York last week to relieve Henry MacMahon as assistant manager and publicity agent for the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," showing at the Tremont Theatre, was found dead on the floor of his room in the Hotel Georgian, Park square, shortly after 7 o'clock this morning. Medical Examiner Leary, after a perfunctory examination, gave it as his opinion that death was due to natural causes.

Wilstach, who was about 42 years of age, had left a call at the hotel, and when repeated summonses failed to elicit any response, the door to his room was forced, and the body discovered. A partly-filled glass of water was found on a table nearby, but there was nothing to indicate anything suspicious in the death. The body was removed to the City Hospital morgue, where an autopsy will be performed.

Claxton Wilstach was for many years manager for E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, and was one of the best-known theatrical traveling managers in the business. A brother, Frank Wilstach, was in advance of the Sothern-Marlowe show for some seasons. He is now connected with the Messrs. Shubert in a similar capacity.

At the Georgian Hotel this morning and at the Tremont Theatre persons who knew Wilstach intimately said he had been complaining of poor health for more than a week, although his illness was at no time considered serious.

Medical Examiner Leary completed an autopsy on the body of Wilstach shortly before noon today, and said death was due to natural causes. According to the medical examiner a large blood vessel just below the heart burst, causing internal bleeding, which led to his death.

"Birth of a Nation" True Picture, Declares Minister

Describing the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation" as a true picture, with nothing in it that suggested immorality to any normal mind, the Rev Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain, last night addressed a large congregation and declared he was opposed to the prohibition of the film. He said:

"I regret the elimination, by order of Judge Dowd in the criminal court, of the scene where Gus, the Negro, chases the little white girl. It was ordered out on the ground that it was immoral. That scene is the masterful picturing of the cause of the southern man and woman on one of the most momentous questions with which they have to deal. It is the pathetic appeal of the South to the nation that the whole people may understand the dread under which the southern woman constantly trembles. The horrible fear of rape, the dread never absent from the southern home, could be the only thought in the mind of normal persons while watching this scene."

Continuing, the Rev. Mr. Hawkins said in part:

"The greatest objection that has been raised to this play is that it stirs race prejudice. I see nothing in the play that ought to stir race prejudice. But a larger question is entirely ignored, namely, shall any race be placed above criticism? Is it wholesome for the public wellbeing to take a stand, through court decisions and legislative acts, that the bad features of any race shall not be revealed for public scorn and condemnation? Races that have passed out of their childhood welcome criticism. God pity us when we reach that supersensitive state where we cannot listen to a rehearsal of our faults.

"Whatever our politicians may say, the Negro is the greatest menace in our national life at the present day. He as a race is lowest in the scale of our national development. He has produced some great men. There are noble souls under black skins. But after all this is said, it still remains that he threatens more than any other the health, moral and physical, of our land. The overwhelming majority of them are still in their animalism. No one knows this more than some of our level-headed Negroes. No one ought to be more willing to listen to this revelation than the Negro. It is only the abnormally developed Ego of a few northern Negroes, who are sometimes disgusting in their self-assertiveness, who would hide these facts from the public, who would excite the mob spirit in the mass of ignorant Negroes, that the truth may be covered. We are never going to lift the colored race to the place it ought to occupy by this ostrich policy of hiding our faces in the sand."

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1

PASTOR CONDEMNS 'BIRTH OF A NATION'

"Outrageous Insult to the Negroes," Declares Dr. Charles A. Fulton.

"The Birth of a Nation' teaches the justification of lynch law, and if it is not taken off the screen, harm will come to it. It is misnamed, this outrageous picture; it ought to be called 'The Clansman,'" declared Rev. Dr. Charles A. Fulton of the Dudley Street Baptist Church in his sermon last night.

Dr. Fulton said the photoplay producers in quoting President Wilson as "commending the work of the Ku Klux Clan" does the President a great injustice.

"It brings the President altogether in the wrong light," he declared. "As an artistic and spectacular production, the 'Birth of a Nation' is perhaps the last word in moving picture skill. But it is an outrageous insult to the negroes. It is a travesty on history. It is unworthy of Massachusetts, and I am grieved to hear Bostonians cheer the killing of helpless negroes by the Clansmen. Nothing good will come of this."

PATTERSON RAPS BOOKS ON NEGRO

"Uncle Tom" and "Clansman" Equally Misleading, Southerner Says.

Ex-Gov. Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee attacked the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at yesterday's big prohibition rally, held in the First Universalist Church, Everett. He also criticized "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Clansman," and said all three are doing a great injustice to the negro race.

The ministers of all the Protestant churches of Everett co-operated in the rally, which was presided over by Mayor James Chambers of Everett. Gov. Patterson was introduced by former Attorney General Thomas J. Boynton. He said no man who believed in the religion of Jesus Christ could possibly believe in the liquor traffic.

In regard to the photo-play, the former governor said he grieved for the negroes of Boston, who were being done "a rank injustice" when the "Birth of a Nation" was nightly shown to thousands of people.

"There were hundreds of good men in the South in the days of slavery," he said, "to one of the kind that was pictured in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and the book does a great deal of harm. Another book that is a mistatement of fact is 'The Clansman,' and also the photo-play taken from it, 'The Birth of a Nation.' Although I am a Southerner, I believe the play ought to be stopped. No race in the history of the world has been so maligned as the negro. There are a hundred good negroes to one bad one."

FALL RIVER (Mass.) GLOBE
APRIL 26, 1915

OBJECT TO FILM.

Acting upon telephone instructions received from brethren in Boston this morning, two representatives of the colored race here consulted attorney John T. Coughlin this morning, with a view of preventing a proposed production of "The Nigger" a photoplay. The picture is being advertised for presentation at one of the theatres here next week. Attorney Coughlin has conferred with the proper authorities urging that the use of the picture be prohibited. Advertising matter [illegible] in connection with the picture [illegible] that it is even a stronger production than "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] so much objection [illegible] Boston. A decision on the matter will be reached in a day or two, it is believed.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 26, 1915

ONE EXPONENT OF THE GOSPEL

THE Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain, is to be commiserated with in the fact he feels because the court has eliminated as immoral and obscene the scene from "The Birth of a Nation," wherein a Negro chases a little white girl for the obvious purpose, as set forth by the author of the play, of committing rape. As Abraham Lincoln would say: "For a pastor of a church preaching the gospel of the Prince of Peace who wants that sort of thing, that is the sort of thing he is likely to want."

The Revs. Samuel M. Crothers, Alexander Mann, Christopher R. Eliot, Henry Francis Smith and many other clerical colleagues will doubtless feel grateful to the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins for this new interpretation of Christianity and of the brotherhood of man.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
APRIL 26, 1915

OBLEM OF CENSORING MO- TION PICTURE FILMS.

...Dowd of the Boston ...icipal court declared that "the law ...s no race creed in Massachu- ...tts" he uttered a sentiment which, ...ile meritorious in itself, seems not ...o touch the root of the problem raised ...the film drama, "The Birth of the ...ion." It may be said in rejoinder ...t the fact that a play deals with a ...question secures for it no special ...munity or protection against those ...nd functions of the State in protec- ... itself against crime and disorder. ...t can be shown that this or any ...r play constitutes an incitation to ... and lynching, it most certainly ...y and should be suppressed. Wheth- ...the play in question does this or ... it seems that certain portions and ...d the chief motif of the work, ...e dangerously near that point.

...t whether the play properly calls ...legal suppression, beyond the elimi- ...on of one or two scenes condemned ...decent, the fact remains that such ...heme is open to strong objections ...n employed for film purposes. If ...play were merely of a historical ...racter, as has been claimed, the ... would be different. But this ap- ...rs to be one of the several shams ... which the efforts are put forth. ... we understand it this film is ...gned to portray the Negro as in- ...patible with the welfare and safety ...the white race, now as in the past, ...to create a sentiment that will call ... pressure and persecution of ...roes to the point of ultimately ...pelling their deportation from this ...try. If that is true the play is an ...lt to our Negro citizens, and a ...ace not only to them but to the ...e social fabric. If the kindling ... stimulating of a vindictive passion ...nst Negroes and the investment of ...r character with an aspect both ...ible and loathsome in film deline- ...ns is not an act that calls for the ...ntion of the authorities of law, ... we mistake altogether the dan- ...us nature of symptoms but too ...ly manifest in both North and ...th. This means a wanton and de- ...ate playing with fire in the pres- ... of inflammable elements which, ...ignited, work ghastly results.

...t Massachusetts citizens, what- ... they may think about the cau... ...he Civil war and the events of Re- ...struction, ought to be tolerant ...ugh to allow the South's side to be ... forth, is entirely true, in the ab- ...ct, and this applies to art as well ...historical writing. But there is a ...t where the governmental authori- ...may and must intervene in the ex- ...e of those broad powers which ... to the safeguarding of the rights ... welfare of the people representing ...races and conditions, and where ...tance of opinion and liberty of ...ch cease to be the dominant con- ...rations. Where this border line ... is bound to be more or less of a ...blem, as is the whole subject in- ...ved in the question of motion pic- ...e censorship, now before the Mas- ...husetts Legislature.

...e are inclined to be conservative ...pecting this matter of official inter- ...nce in the film drama, believing ...t public opinion will largely govern ... restrain producers, in the long ..., from transgressing bounds of de- ...cy. Like any form of art, the film ...ma must enjoy a large degree of ...dom and spontaneity if it is to ...e real power and value. "The Birth ... the Nation" is concededly an illus- ...tion of the dramatic and epic possi- ...ties of motion pictures; the objec- ... comes from making those qualities ... vehicle for the exploitation of a ...me involving vindictive bias along ...morbid sensationaling. It is by ... means a solitary example of the ... of really artistic features to cloak ... appeal that is false and unwhole- ...e in other respects. In this the ... drama, in the normal course of ...olution, should find and fulfil its ...per relationship to the moral and ...ial weal.

...oo much faith should not be placed ... artificial excisions and suppressions ... boards of censors appointed through ...e activities of well-meaning reform- ... The only way films can be satis- ...torily censored is in the making. ...at the board of censors maintained ...m producers has done good work ... the whole, seems well-established. ... is found that too much license is ...orded in certain ways, the adjust- ...nt will come in time. The plan of ...nsorship referred to has been called ...rical because under the auspices of ... producers, but this overlooks cer- ...in salient facts that go to make the ...n essentially sound. Possibly such a ...nsorship can be made more satisfac- ...rough the institution of other boards ... censors, but there should be no plan ... censorship applying to one class of ...atrical productions that would not ... one way or another attend to other ...ts of the field under our present ... of enlightened public opinion.

...ecision of Speaker Cox, who said it was a difficult matter for a board of three men, as proposed, to censor fairly the great number of films shown in different parts of the State, owing to fatigue, eye strain and other factors involved. To delegate to three persons, with their personal whims and idiosyncrasies, the business of passing on moral questions for 3,500,000 inhabitants of the Commonwealth he holds to be a decidedly doubtful departure from a democratic standpoint. There is much to be said on this side of the case. And if States and cities are to set up their various boards to govern the presentation of films according to their multifarious standards, the business will be involved in a state of confusion as pronounced in its way as that arising from conflicting automobile laws. It is not easy to rectify faults in a film after it is made. To get economical and satisfactory censoring it is necessary to get [illegible]

MORNING STAR
ss: Newark, N. J.
APR 26 1915

RACE ISSUE IN OLD BAY STATE

How a Moving Picture Has Stirred Things Up in Massachusetts.

THREATENS REPUBLICANS

Negro Vote May Go to Democratic Candidate for Governor Next Fall.

BOSTON, April 25.—A moving picture show has stirred up political feeling in a way to threaten Republican success next fall. There has been nothing like it seen since the Civil War, and it is racial.

"The Birth of a Nation" has suddenly been injected into the campaign as a political issue that has frightened the Republican leaders and threatens to throw the solid negro vote of Massachusetts to Mr. Walsh, the Democratic Governor, if he should be a candidate at the next election.

Contrary to what might naturally have been expected, Mr. Dixon's novel, as produced on the screen, scored an instantaneous hit in Boston, the audience cheering "Dixie" and applauding the Ku Klux Klan.

The proof of the popularity of the play as a spectacle is shown by the fact that, although regular prices of the theatre are charged, the house is filled to the doors each night and seats are sold four weeks in advance—and this at the birthplace of the abolition movement.

Popularity of Show.

This popularity is due, in part, perhaps, to the advertising the show has received throughout New England as a result of the fight the negroes have been waging against it, but the Civil War battle scenes probably have had their effect also.

Opposition to the play culminated a week ago in a riot, when a negro mob stormed the theatre and was only prevented by the police reserves from stopping the play and destroying the films. Several of the leaders, including William Munroe Trotter, who will be remembered in connection with a recent White House incident, were arrested. A mass meeting of protest in Faneuil Hall on the day following the riot further stirred up the feelings of the colored people.

On Patriots' Day, last week, a negro delegation which gathered at the State House to ask Governor Walsh to stop the production, hissed a band playing "America," and conspicuous headlines to this effect on the front pages of the Boston newspapers did not help the cause of the colored people. Governor Walsh was sympathetic, and, although he could not stop the play under the law, his attitude has pleased the negroes hugely.

One Scene Eliminated.

An attempt was then made in the Municipal Court to prohibit the production. Judge Dowd, after visiting the play, ordered eliminated one scene in which a white child throws herself from a cliff to escape a desperate negro. This came within the provision of the law relating to immorality and obscenity.

The play continuing in censored form, the negroes are now asking a new law of such sweeping provisions that it is being denounced even by the Republican press in this State as being so drastic that under its terms "The Merchant of Venice," films depicting the devastation of Belgium, or pictures showing the evils of child labor or drunkenness could not be produced in Massachusetts if objections were made to them by a minority of its citizens.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 26, 1915
1701

COLORED WOMEN FORM A LEAGUE

Join in Fight Against "Birth of Nation."

Mayor Curley's Name Hissed and His Recall Demanded.

Boston Clergymen Discuss Photo-Play in Sermons.

About 800 colored women of the city yesterday afternoon joined in the protest against "The Birth of a Nation" by conducting a mass meeting at the Twelfth Baptist Church at Shawmut av and Madison st, Roxbury, which resulted in the forming of a protective league of all colored women of Greater Boston "for the maintenance and protection of our civil rights."

The meeting was one of the largest gatherings of colored women ever assembled in this city. The speeches rang with determination and enthusiasm ran high when the whole gathering sang "The Fight is On," "Hold the Fort for I Am Coming" and "Onward Christian Soldier."

Mayor Curley was bitterly denounced by several speakers and his name was hissed.

Resolutions were adopted condemning the play as it stands with the chase scene eliminated and criticising the action of the police on a week ago last Saturday night at the Tremont Theatre.

The meeting had been arranged by Mrs Olivia Ward Bush-Banks, but she was unable to be present yesterday because of illness, and Mrs Minnie T. Wright was the presiding officer.

Rev Theodore A. Asten of Cambridge, minister, opened the meeting with prayer.

The next speaker was Dr Alice McKane, who said: "Shall we fight for existence, or shall we not exist because we are black? I say fight, fight to the bitter end; fight until the last drop of blood is gone. We are not fighting as black people but as American citizens. We want 'The Birth of a Nation' removed from the city of Boston and we purpose to see it go. If we cannot get rid of it by fair means, we will get rid of it by foul."

Clement G. Morgan of Cambridge declared that every appeal to the authorities and to the courts was of no avail unless the show goes. Somebody said "Amen." Continuing, Mr Morgan said: "We want Mayor Curley recalled. He is not worthy to sit in the chair of Mayor of Boston." The statement brought forth shouts of "No!" and the name of Mr Curley was hissed.

Rev M. A. N. Shaw, minister of the church where the meeting was held, announced that though he had arranged to have Mr Curley speak at the church early in May he felt that he could not now allow him to do so.

Joshua Crawford said that they will have to take "The Birth of a Nation" out of Boston or jail the colored people.

W. Monroe Trotter read resolutions which were adopted. These resolutions protested against the action of the police a week ago Saturday night, and demanded that all plays requiring police action be stopped at once.

Mrs Theodore Asten of Cambridge read a poem on the negro problem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and Mrs Mary Chapman of Cambridge told of the plans for the organization, as suggested by Mrs Bush-Banks. Mrs Gertrude L. Cromwell read resolutions voicing the sentiments of the Mothers' Clubs of Cambridge. Another speaker was Mrs Agnes Adams.

Mrs Olivia Ward Bush-Banks was elected president of the new protective league and Dr Alice McKane was elected vice president. The other officers are Miss Josephine B. Selden, secretary; Mrs M. F. Donaldson, treasurer. Mrs Minnie T. Wright was elected chairman of the vigilance committee and Mrs Theodore Asten of Cambridge, vice chairman.

MEETING AT CAMBRIDGE.

White and Colored Men Speak at the First Parish Church in the Afternoon.

Rev Samuel McC. Crothers, pastor of the First Parish, Cambridge, severely criticised the production of the photo-play "Birth of a Nation" at a service held at the church yesterday afternoon. The church was crowded, the majority of the congregation being colored people.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 26, 1915

Should Be Americans First, Last, Always

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

I have noted with interest your editorials on "The Birth of a Nation." This picture seems unfortunately to have created a state of mental collapse throughout this section. It is a pity that so many have rushed into print. Let everyone now work for mutual peace and good will regardless of race. Let us be good Americans first, last and all the time.

Now that legislative action is at hand let us hope that this moving picture issue will remain out of politics. There is already a sufficiency. It would be very interesting to hear a little more discussion, not necessarily on the picture itself, but on this prospective new law and the kind of board which may have the seriously important task of censorship. Respectfully yours,

ROBT. E. STONE.

April 23.

Rev Dr George L. Cady of Dorchester, Rev Mr. Swain, a Cambridge colored clergyman, and William H. Lewis also spoke, and Miss Maria Baldwin, principal of the Agassiz School, read Dunbar's poem on Douglass.

LASTS UNTIL MIDNIGHT.

Protest Meeting Against "The Birth of a Nation" Held at the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Church.

An enthusiastic meeting in protest against the continuance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was held last night in the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Zion Church. The auditorium was filled and an overflow meeting that taxed the vestry was held downstairs.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the National Independent Equal Rights League. It did not begin until after 9:30, and it was long after midnight before the last speaker was heard.

Emory T. Morris presided. Rev Aaron W. Puller of the People's Baptist Church urged race unity and race sacrifice.

Sherwin L. Cook said he wondered how it would feel to be in Iberia and witness a film show in which the white race were shown up in the true light.

Walter D. McClain said the colored race didn't want hysterical or violent leadership, but a leadership that is calm, serene, careful and thoughtful.

William D. Brigham said he thought that in the production of the film was a deep-laid plot to injure 10,000,000 colored people of this country.

Rev B. W. Swain said he had to take off his hat to Gov Walsh for his attitude in the matter.

Rev Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Boston Baptist Tabernacle, said the colored people were not making the fight alone, as the great mass of the people are with them.

Rev M. A. N. Shaw said that all intermediary steps that the law allows were being taken and if these failed, he wanted the newspapers to advise all law-abiding people to keep away from the Tremont Theatre.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the conduct of the police at the Tremont Theatre.

DEFENDS PHOTO PLAY.

Rev Chauncey J. Hawkins of Jamaica Plain Declares Nothing Should Have Been Cut From It.

Rev Chauncey J. Hawkins in a discourse last evening in Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, declared that there was no justification for the criticisms passed on the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation."

He said in part: "Boston has been whipped into a state of hysterics that threatens to sweep people off their feet and cause them to do something they will regret. I am in opposition to the proposal that the Legislature take action in the matter, for I maintain that it will be in violation of freedom of the press and of public expression.

"In my opinion the play does not revive dead issues, but presents one that is particularly alive in the South today. I saw nothing immoral in the scene that was cut out by order of the court. It was merely distressing, because it represents the position of white women in the South today."

TIME TO FORGET.

Rev Dr Foulton Says Days of Reconstruction Are Behind Us.

"The Birth of a Nation" must be stopped if Massachusetts is to remain worthy to the memory of Garrison, Phillips and Sumner, said Rev Dr Chas. A. Fulton at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Roxbury.

"The days of the Civil War and the reconstruction are behind us. Let them be forgotten, save as their memory help us in planning wisely for the future."

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

Theatrical Man Found Dead in Hotel

Wilstach's Death Was Due to Natural Causes

Claxton Wilstach, assistant manager and publicity agent of "The Birth of a Nation," the photoplay at the Tremont Theatre which has aroused a storm of protest, was found dead in his bed at the Georgian, shortly after 7 a.m.

The body was discovered by a call boy at the hotel who went to Mr. Wilstach's room to awaken him.

Medical Examiner Leary made a preliminary examination of the body and said that death may have resulted from natural causes. The body was taken to the southern mortuary at the City Hospital, where Dr. Leary performed an autopsy later in the day.

On a table beside the bed was found a glass containing what is thought to be water, but Dr. Leary took it away for examination.

When the call boy knocked at the door of Wilstach's room he obtained no response. After hearing no noise within after continued rapping the call boy summoned the manager of the hotel. The room was forced open and Wilstach was found lifeless on his bed.

Wilstach was 42 and had been in Boston about a week. The position he had with "The Birth of a Nation" company was formerly filled by Henry McMahon. Wilstach was at one time manager for the Sothern and Marlowe company and was one of the best known theatrical men in the country. His brother, Paul Wilstach is famed as an author and he has another brother, Frank Wilstach, who is a well-known theatrical publicity man.

AMERICAN
ess: Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

RAP PHOTO PLAY AT MASS MEETING

"The Birth of a Nation," the photo-play which has been so bitterly condemned by the colored people of Boston, was scored from platform and pulpit, especially at the "fellowship meeting" in the First Parish Unitarian Church in Harvard square.

At a mass meeting in the Twelfth Baptist Church, in Shawmut avenue, a "vigilance committee' was organized, with Mrs. Olivia Ward Bush Banks as its president. In calling on the people of her race to stop the film, Mrs. Banks announced that the women were not afraid to die to prevent the photo-play, even if the men were.

At the Harvard square meeting, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, Harvard's president emeritus, joined in the protest, declaring that the people of the North resent the imputation that they are turning from the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Others who assisted in the meeting were the Rev. George L. Cady, William H. Lewis, former assistant United States District Attorney; the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, the Rev. Powhattan Bagnall and the Rev. Samuel M. Crothers.

ELIOT AGAINST FILM.

Dr. Eliot said:

"I have not seen the photo play, but from what I have heard of it, I object first to its expression of a grave historical error. This nation was not born in the reconstruction period. It was born when the Constitution of the United States was accepted by the thirteen colonies.

"I understand from hearsay testimony that this film represents the Ku Klux Klan as doing a good work during the reconstruction period. I lived in Massachusetts during that period and I never heard any citizen of Massachusetts express any favorable opinion of the Ku Klux Klan. On the contrary, it stood as an example of lawlessness, cruelty and outrage and was not thought the better of because the men who took part in its activities always rode in disguise. That is not a method which freemen use.

"I wish the white people of the North would learn something from the white people of the South about giving the colored people the right to pursue happiness. This film, or play, should not be allowed to accomplish what is probably its purpose—to inspire the white people of the North with a different feeling toward the colored people than we held at the close of the Civil War.

"We resent the idea that we are turning, even in our minds, from the Fourteenth Amendment. We resent the idea that there is any chance of that amendment being reconsidered. In fact, we hold that all men are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

OTHERS DEFEND PLAY.

The Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, in Jamaica Plain, announced that he saw nothing untrue in the photo-play. He said:

"The greatest objection that has been raised to this play is that it stirs race prejudice. I see nothing in the play that ought to stir race prejudice. But a larger question is ignored, namely, shall any race be placed above criticism? It is wholesome for the public wellbeing to take a stand, through court decisions and legislative acts, that the bad features of any race shall not be revealed for public scorn and condemnation? God pity us when we reach that supersensitive state where we cannot listen to a rehearsal of our faults."

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 26, 1915

Claxton Wilstach Is Found Dead in His Hotel Room

Claxton Wilstach, one of the best-known theatrical publicity men in the United States, was found dead early today in a room at the Hotel Georgian, Park square. Wilstach had complained of ill health for some time. It was thought by the medical examiner that he had a heart attack while dressing.

Wilstach was about forty years old, and for many years was publicity man for Sothern and Marlowe. He had come to Boston about a week ago as publicity man for the "Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre. His brother, Frank Wilstach, is also a widely-known theatrical publicity man.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

NEGROES HEAR OPPONENTS

Throng Listens to "Birth of Nation" Supporters

Warned No Demonstration Will Be Tolerated

Largest Crowd of the Year on Hand

Many Tussle to Get Into Hearing Room

So great a crowd assembled in the largest committee room in the State House, this morning, to listen to the arguments of the opponents of the Sullivan bill to stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" that Senator Norwood, chairman of the Committee on Judiciary, felt it necessary to warn the spectators that comment would not be tolerated and that hissing or applause would result in the clearing of the room. Fifteen hundred persons crowded the room and three hundred others stood in the corridors when the opponents began their case.

Several hundred persons, mostly negroes, assembled at the State House two hours before the hearing began at 10.30 o'clock. Upwards of two thousand were packed in the corridor when the committee room doors were opened. The crowd pushed to get seats and Sergeant-at-Arms Pedrick and ten of his assistants had all they could do to keep the people orderly. Their orders "keep quiet," "stop your pushing, gentlemen," "be orderly," repeated almost constantly, helped some, but many women had their clothes and hair disarranged in the rush for seats.

The crowd constantly increased. At eleven o'clock there were more present than at the hearing last week and the crowd was greater than at the sectarian hearing earlier in the year.

Substitute Bill Offered

J. Mott Hallowell offered the committee a bill as a substitute for the Sullivan petition which would amend the present law so that no entertainments or shows could be given that would cause race hatred or religious prejudice. The Hallowell bill would amend Section 2 of Chapter 494 of the Acts of 1908 so as to read:

Section 2. If at any time under a license granted hereunder there shall be given a theatrical exposition, public show, moving picture, photoplay, or other pictorial representation, public amusement or exhibition any part of which in the opinion of either the mayor of Boston or the chief of the Massachusetts district police, is obscene or immoral, or tends to injure the morals of the community, or tends to create disturbances, incite riots, or cause public disquiet, and is not eliminated at the request of the mayor or the chief of the Massachusetts district police, then he may suspend the license for such particular representation. And if said mayor or chief of the Massachusetts district police shall suspend any license under this section the Supreme Judicial Court, or the Superior Court, shall have jurisdiction in equity to enforce the provisions of this act upon the petition of said mayor or chief of the Massachusetts district police.

"Protest Easier Than Memorial"

John F. Cusick, representing the Epoch Production Company, sponsors for "The Birth of a Nation," conducted the hearing for the opponents. He called upon M. Sumner Coggan, who declared that the legislation proposed in the Hallowell bill came from hysteria and was aimed against a single production. A protest, he said, is easier to get up than a memorial—a driver often swears at and beats his horse, but does not give him a lump of sugar with so much alacrity. This production has been viewed by thousands and only a small proportion of those who have atended have uttered protest.

In reference to the suggestion that the mayor have the sole authority for the suppression of productions, he said the managers felt that this was too much power to give to any one man. He, therefore, offered an amendment giving the mayor the right to suspend licenses, with however, a right of appeal to the Supreme Court by the theatre whose license has been threatened by revocation. This amendment, he said, would eliminate the objection to the dual authority under the present law.

In answer to Representative Drury's question as to whether he believed that a play which was opposed by a considerable part of the population should be suppressed, Mr. Coggan said that, if that were to be, the productions would become uninteresting. Members of the committee then gave many examples, and asked whether these instances could be suppressed if they arose.

Negroes Hiss Dr. Hawkins

Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, D. D., of Jamaica Plain, said that he came to protest against the attack on American censorship. "We suffer many things from the press that we do not like," he said, "and I think the same should apply to the stage. I therefore protest against any restriction of this freedom, and I believe that no race should be beyond criticism." He also stated that he had no other interest in the matter than that.

Asked whether he thought that Harvard should be characterized by the egg-throwing exhibition at the Majestic Theatre a few years ago, he replied that as a Yale man he did not object. Representative Kennard said that the Harvard men on the committee took no chance. Dr. Hawkins said that his limit [illegible] restrictions on [illegible] would be [illegible] ality. Hissing followed Dr. Hawkins' remarks about the negro in the history [illegible] There are [illegible]

It would awaken the North as much as the South as to the condition of the negro. He also said that he objected to the limitations of free speech which this bill would impose. He cited President Wilson's remarks in his history in defence of the Ku Klux Clan. Dr. Fleischer attacked Moorfield Storey for his leadership against the play when he had not even seen it. The governor, he said, would not for the world miss the chance to play up to the negro, and he spoke of the hysteria which had overcome Lieutenant Governor Cushing, Speaker Cox and Hon. S. W. McCall when they championed the negro. Mr. McCall's "Life of Thaddeus Stevens" was cited to show Mr. McCall's remarks upon the Ku Klux Clan, and his apparent contradiction as to his idea of its purpose.

Says Negroes Act Like Children

In regard to the Jews, Dr. Fleischer said that if they had never been persecuted they never would have grown up. "The negroes act like children in this case," he declared, "when they cry out when they are hurt. There is something more than feelings, however; there are laws and principles to be considered.

Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, for fifteen years on the editorial staff of the New York American, and a Southerner by birth, said that the scars of the war were practically eliminated, and spoke on the truthfulness of the play. He declared that everything depicted by the play was true, since he said that he had seen them. But no man could depict those unspeakable ten years of hell called the Reconstruction period. This play is merely educating the people to the facts, he said. It was not the negro who caused those days of the Reconstruction period, but those human vultures, neither white nor black, neither Northern nor Southern, who used the negro for the vote. There is no reason for this legislation. It is using Vesuvius to roast an egg. The Ku Klux Clan was not a band of murderers. There were 700,000 members—more than the entire army of Virginia—and it is not right to indict a whole nation.

The Playwright's Viewpoint

Eugene Walter, a playwright, said that long after the negro problem was solved there would be many play-writers who would wish to make a living, and these people would want to know how far they might go. He objected to a law which would allow anyone to stir up ill feeling by rivals or enemies. He spoke of the English system of censorship which he thought admirable. He was not interested in "The Birth of a Nation," but asked whether many plays, which were liable to hurt a few people, were to be stopped or whether the Legislature would give the writers and producers a good sane law.

Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, representing Mayor Curley, said that the Sullivan bill was inadequate from any point of view. While it inflicted a penalty in this case it would also penalize any play tending in the remotest degree to incite race prejudice. The play has a recognized and valuable part in the life of the people and it would be unfair to impose such a law.

Present Law Inadequate

Mr. Sullivan spoke of several cases where races had been hurt by productions, and yet they had not attempted to have them removed from the stage. The language of the Sullivan act, too, he said, was an invitation to reckless persons to produce breaches of the peace.

In regard to the Hallowell amendment, Mr. Sullivan said he objected to having the power taken from the police commissioner and given to district police. He asked that this power be left in the hands of one responsible authority. The present law, he said, results in a deadlock, and should be changed. If the power is given to the mayor alone, however, let there be some appeal to the courts. In answer to a question whether it was true that the mayor would have stopped the play if he had had the power, Mr. Sullivan said he thought that if the mayor did say so, it must have been before the objectionable parts were eliminated.

As to whether this play should be taken from the stage, he said that the case was similar to that of a negro moving into a white comumnity against the wishes of the whole of that community, which would have no right to make that negro sell out. Laws cannot be broken because of the whims of a large body of people, he said. In addition to this, there are many more persons who have seen the play and have liked it and who want it to continue.

If there is to be a censorship, give the mayor the right to appoint a trained man, he said. Neither the mayor nor police commissioner may have the slightest knowledge of censorship and, therefore, the present law is not real consorship.

Judge Brackett, representing the Theatre Managers' Association of Boston, said that the proposed legislation would affect very large interests which he represented.

The hearing was continued until 10.30 tomorrow morning.

PHOTOPLAY MUCH CONDEMNED

"The Birth of a Nation" Denounced from Many Pulpits—It Finds Only One Defender Among Ministers

Denunciation of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" and severe criticism of Mayor Curley for failing to stop its production in Boston, were expressed at several meetings Sunday. Some of these gatherings were held particularly for the purpose of discussing the play, while at others the speakers referred to it directly or indirectly in the course of their discourses. In only one instance reported did a minister, who touched upon the subject, defend the play.

One of the large meetings was that in the First Parish (Unitarian) Church in Harvard square, Cambridge. It was called a service of Christian Fellowship and there was a large attendance of white people and of negroes. Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers, D. D., the minister, led the meeting and the speakers included Dr. Charles W. Eliot, William H. Lewis, Rev. George L. Cady, D. D., of the Pilgrim Congregational church in Dorchester and others. In the course of his remarks Dr. Eliot said:

This film, or play, should not be allowed to accomplish what is probably its purpose—to inspire the white people of the North with a different feeling toward the colored people than we had at the close of the Civil War. We resent the idea that we are turning, even in our minds, from the 14th amendment, we resent the idea that there is any chance of that amendment being reconsidered. In fact, we hold that all men are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Dr. Crothers pointed out the difference between a play which may offend some race through some incident in it, and a play which is deliberate propaganda promulgated by some extreme party, and classed "The Birth of a Nation" with the latter. Although it is difficult to draw a line, he thought there should be some legislation or censorship not against a work of art but against a propaganda. Continuing, he said in part:

"The fundamental thought of American citizenship is that we shall build up a community of brotherly love, that we shall not be taught to hate each other. The teaching of the propaganda of this film is destructive of the American conscience and the American fibre of life. There are some things so desperately wicked that they must be stopped. This whole idea of dividing men and women into classes and pointing the finger of scorn and hate at one class is un-American. Every American ought to resent it."

In the A. M. E. Zion Church on Columbus avenue there was a large gathering under the auspices of the National Independent Equal Rights League, and the meeting lasted until midnight. Mayor Curley was criticised for his alleged insincerity and Rev. M. A. N. Shaw of the Shawmut Avenue Baptist Church said he had revoked an invitation to the mayor to speak in his church. Other speakers were Rev. A. W. Puller of the People's Baptist Church, and Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the conduct of the police at the Tremont Theatre and demanding a cessation of such invasion of public rights.

Another large assemblage, mostly of negro women, was at the Twelfth Baptist Church on Shawmut avenue, where a league of colored women for the maintenance of protection of civic rights was formed. Mayor Curley was denounced by speakers and resolutions adopted condemning the play. There was a long list of speakers.

Rev. Walter Calley, at the First Baptist Church in Jamaica Plain, declared that "The Birth of a Nation" as well as other photoplays ought to be stopped for the bad influence that they exert on the young boys and girls of the community. He gave it as his belief that a good deal of the trouble of the reconstruction period was a disgrace to the nation, but that those days as well as the differences engendered by the Civil War ought to be forgotten if we are today a united nation.

Rev. Ambrose W. Vernon of the Harvard Congregational Church in Brookline, in the course of his discourse, said: "The great issue is between absolute freedom of speech and freedom of art and the effect of that freedom upon the fanning of the flames of race prejudice. The spectacle in Europe is showing what race prejudice can do when started, and our own country is a mosaic of different races."

Speaking in his pulpit at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Rev. Charles A. Fulton said: "'The Birth of a Nation' is a misnomer, for the photo-play which should be called 'The Clansman.' As a spectacle it is a wonderful production. But it should be stopped. It must be stopped in Massachusetts if she is to remain worthy of the memory of Garrison, Phillips and Sumner. It must be stopped because it is a travesty of history. Nothing but mischief can come of it."

Former Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee, speaking at a prohibition rally in the First Universalist Church at Everett, attacked "The Birth of a Nation" and criticised "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Clansman," saying that all three were doing a great injustice to the negro race. "Although I am a Southerner," he said, "I believe the play ought to be stopped. No race in the history of the world has been so maligned as the negro. There are a hundred good negroes to one bad one."

Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, in the Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, declared that there is no justification for the criticisms passed on "The Birth of a Nation."

He said: "Boston has been whipped into a state of hysterics that threatens to sweep people off their feet and cause them to do something they will regret. I am in opposition to the proposal that the Legislature take action in the matter, for I maintain that it will be in violation of freedom of the press and of public expression. In my opinion the play does not revive dead issues, but presents one that is particularly alive in the South today. I saw nothing immoral in the scene that was cut out by order of the court. It was merely distressing, because it represents the position of white women in the South today."

WILL NOT VOTE IGNORANTLY

Unitarian Ministers Wish to See "The Birth of a Nation" Before Condemning the Film

Rev. Charles W. Wendte, D. D., presented to the Ministerial Union, in Channing Hall this morning, resolutions expressing "sympathy with the outraged feelings and the plea for a just judgment and equal civic rights on the part of our colored fellow-citizens," and demanding that the laws be enforced "for the suppression of a theatrical representation which is unfairly discriminating against one element of our population."

When this was offered to the meeting, Rev. C. F. Dole, D. D., said that his own feeling was that the members ought to be extremely shy in asking for suppression. He had not seen "The Birth of a Nation," and, therefore, could not trust himself to speak as to its effect on an audience but from what he had heard he was inclined to believe that the Nation," and [illegible] mis-reading" of history, harrowing scenes [illegible] "Uncle Tom's Cabin" substituted [illegible] This might, however, in- [illegible] protest from indignant white [illegible]

Rev. J. J. Coleman of East Bridgewater declared the effect of the play to be hostile and pernicious, and he was sorry to see such a production in Boston. Several others spoke, but it turned out that few had seen the production. Rev. Harold O. Arnold of West Roxbury suggested that the resolution be laid on the table and a committee appointed to attend the play and report. This met with unanimous approval. Rev. Frederic Gill of Arlington, who presided, chose Dr. Wendte, Dr. Dole and Rev. George D. Latimer to serve, and they consented.

Rev. W. Harris Crook of Oxford, Eng., now taking courses in economics at Harvard, was the speaker of the morning and his subject was "The Price of Patriotism." His address was under three heads; the cost of war in dollars; in the health of a nation and the danger to the democratic spirit of a country. He said he must necessarily say things which all thoughtful men must know in connection with the war, such as the loss of millions of dollars and millions of men and the bitterness of spirit which fighting fosters. Militarism, he said, is a menace to a civilized nation whether it leads to war or not, and he quoted statistics to prove his assertion that the army is a hot-bed for the propagation of disease. Only the choicest men are chosen, but the military system soon shows what it can do to make fit men unfit, he said.

Mr. Crook spoke with sadness of the silence of the churches in this crisis and said that each nation takes the attitude that God cares for it more than for any other people. "If this notion gets into the heart of the next generation," he said, "it will be the death-blow to Christianity." Mr. Crook declared that the armament trusts are all in league and that America should be on guard because, "at this very moment the people may be rushed by their rulers into war." He read from a manifesto published by German Socialists which looks for complete disarmament.

Rev. George Willis Cooke said he was ashamed of the attitude of the average church organization; the only denomination which has set itself firmly against the war is the Society of Friends. As the contention of Mr. Crook was that the patriotism of the English people is not worth the price demanded, Rev. T. C. Bacon of Salem inquired as to whether this could be said justly regarding the civil war. In answer, Mr. Crook told of his recent visit to Washington; of his trip to Mount Vernon on the passenger car which became "Jim Crow" on entering Virginia. He would not think any war worth the price if a spirit of hatred and injustice continued to be engendered and fostered long after it was over.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) TIMES
APRIL 26, 1915

PASTORS ENDORSE PROTEST MADE BY COLORED CITIZENS

"The Birth of a Nation," the photo play which has stirred the colored blood of the nation into a turbulence of protest, was condemned by the New Bedford Ministerial union at its regular meeting this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, when a resolution sympathizing with the colored people in their protest against the injustice which they claim is done their race by the pictures, was adopted by a unanimous vote, and the organization went on record as pledging its co-operation with them for the suppression of the film.

The resolution drawn up by the Rev. Frank E. Ramsdell, pastor of the North Congregational church, and presented by him to the meeting is as follows:

"Resolved, That the New Bedford Ministerial union express its sympathy with the colored people in their protest against the injustice done their race by the moving picture play "The Birth of a Nation," and pledges its co-operation with them for its suppression."

Two colored clergymen who are members of the ministers' organization were present when the resolution was adopted.

The action taken by the clergymen means that vigorous opposition will be set up, should any of the managers of local picture playhouses attempt to bring the objectional film to this city for exhibition, when it is released after its run in Boston.

Several other important matters were dealt with by the ministers at their meeting today.

Report On Controversy.

A report wah made on the recent controversy between officials of the local camp of the Spanish War Veterans and officers of the Ministerial union relative to the objection made by the latter to the granting of a permit for a sacred concert on Sunday for the benefit of the S. W. V. and it was announced that the benefit concert is to be held on a week day night.

The meeting voted to endorse the action of the officers of the camp in changing their plans and to hold the concert on a week-day night instead of Sunday, and to assist in every way to make the concert a financial success.

Following a lengthy discussion on the matter of extending missionary work to Chinese residents of this city it was voted start a Bible class among the local sons of the Orient who can be persuaded to take an interest in religion. A committee comprising The Rev. Thomas S. Sayer, the Rev. C. F. Hersey and the Rev. W. H. Mosley was appointed to take charge of the work.

It was voted to [illegible] outing of the union in [illegible] Rev. Henry Rounsaa, the Rev. [illegible] Kershaw, and the Rev. [illegible] were appointed a committee to [illegible] arrangements for the event.

The Rev. Royal W. Sayer, the Rev. Paul N. Cayer and the Rev. [illegible] Oxnard were appointed a committee to bring in a list of nominations for officers of the union, to be elected at the next meeting.

The program committee announced that Arthur N. Harriman, president of the Central Labor union of this city, will be the speaker of the next meeting.

Prof. George C. Cell of Boston university was scheduled to address the meeting this morning, but he failed to make an appearance, nor did he send any word explaining his absence. In place of Prof. Cell, Fred H. [illegible] of the editorial staff of the Boston [illegible] Herald was introduced and delivered a short [illegible] oston, Mass.

APR 2 6 1915

ANTI-BAR ADVOCATE ENDS TOUR

Attacks "Uncle Tom" and Much-Discussed Photo-play

The books, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Clansman," and the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," were vigorously attacked as an injustice to the negro race, by ex-Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee, at a prohibition rally held yesterday in First Universalist Church, Everett.

The former Southern statesman declared that there were far more good masters, than the bad ones pictured in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," that "The Clansman" was a misstatement of facts and that Boston was doing a great injustice to the negro race by viewing "The Birth of a Nation," and said that its production ought to be stopped.

ENDS SPEAKING TOUR

Patterson ended his speaking tour in this State at the meetings yesterday. The gathering at Everett was a most enthusiastic one and was presided over by Mayor James Chambers, and the speakers were introduced by the Hon. Thomas J. Boynton, former State attorney-general. Ex-Governor Patterson also spoke yesterday at the Congregational Church, Concord and at the First Baptist Church, Brookline.

"No man can believe in the religion of Jesus Christ and at the same time believe in the liquor traffic. The question is now squarely before the public, with a long stain of blood and wrecked lives upon it," said Mr. Patterson.

"No one defends it. Where can you find even a newspaper or a magazine that prints liquor advertisements that will defend this poison ivy that clings to the soil of the earth? It is the sewer that empties its filth in the big cities. It is confusion's masterpiece.

"The liquor interests have thousands of slaves to their curse, and yet when they have faithfully served the god of drink, and wrecked their lives, there is no one to take care of them.

" 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' 'The Clansman' and that picture, 'The Birth of a Nation,' are a great injustice to the negroes. I have a great sympathy for the negroes of Boston. They are being subjected to a rank injustice when that play is allowed to be [illegible]

SPEAKERS SCORE MAYOR

000 Attend Colored Mass Meeting in Protest Against Photo-Play at Columbus Avenue Zion Church

Colored citizens, to the number of 000, not only packed the auditorium of the Columbus Avenue Zion Church last evening, but also filled the two vestries on the ground floor at mass meetings in protest against further exhibition of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre and, while Governor Walsh came in for words of commendation, Mayor Curley was scored by several of the more than a dozen speakers for his insincerity.

"And we are going to do everything in our power to make him feel and realize it," exclaimed the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, pastor of the Shawmut Avenue Baptist Church. "As a beginner in this direction, I have revoked the invitation extended to Mayor Curley to speak in our church on the second Sunday in May. And, why? Simply, because for him to attempt to speak from the same rostrum as did Wendell Phillips, Charles Sumner, William Lloyd Garrison and other anti-slavery advocates, would be nothing short of desecration."

The Rev. A. W. Puller of the People's Baptist Church, in a fervid plea, advised his hearers to use five weapons in this warfare, viz.: Race thankfulness; race unity; race loyalty; race agitation and race sacrifice. For nearly 40 years he had preached the gospel and with faith in God and such weapons there could be no question that they would win the fight to banish the play from Boston and have better and needed laws on the statute books of Massachusetts to prevent occurrence of recent troubles by reviving race prejudice.

The Rev. Dr. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church said that when he saw the photo-play of "The Birth of a Nation," he wished that, instead of his name being Herbert S., it was "Jack" [illegible] because it put him in such a fighting mood. Furthermore, he told his hearers the colored citizens were not making a fight alone for their [illegible] the white people who [illegible] humanity. He did not [illegible] propaganda directed against the race and rather a personal [illegible] on the part of certain individuals.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the conduct of the Boston police at the Tremont Theatre during the run of the "Birth of a Nation," and demanding a cessation of such invasion of public rights and, further, that any play which is deemed to regard such police action necessary, be stopped at once.

The meetings were held under the auspices of the National Independent Rights League, with Emery T. Morris as chairman, and the pastor, the Rev. E. S. Swain, made an appeal for funds, and the response was generous and gratifying.

Among the other list of speakers who held forth until after the midnight hour and who advised all to attend the hearing at the State House today, were the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, the Rev. Walter D. McLain, the Rev. T. E. Aubin, D. O. Walker, Sherwin L. Cook, William D. Brigham and George T. Daily.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) TIMES
APRIL 26, 1915

SPEAKERS URGE WAR AGAINST PHOTO-PLAY

"Birth of Nation" Scored in Resolution at Meeting

Approximately 100 colored residents of this city gathered in the Bethel A. M. E. church yesterday afternoon when they were addressed by their leaders regarding the evils which are found to follow the continuation of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," which is now being produced in a Boston theatre.

At the conclusion of the mass meeting the following resolution was unanimously adopted: Resolved—That this meeting condemns the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" as a perversion of history and a maliciously false and defamatory libel upon the black American citizen, and endorses the movement to secure proper legislation that shall prevent the public production of plays or pictures, the purpose or effect of which is to arouse race and religious discord."

In addition the meeting appointed a committee to interview members of the New Bedford delegation to the legislature and urged each of them to support with his vote the Sullivan-Halloway bill, which seeks to prevent the production of plays or photo-plays which tend to arouse race and religious discord, and which is aimed directly against the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation." The committee appointed to do this work is comprised of Miss Elizabeth C. Carter, John R. Barreau, and Frederick S. Monroe.

Jourdain Presides.

E. R. Jourdain presided at the meeting, and he made the principal address. Attorney I. C. Dade was scheduled to be one of the speakers, but he arrived at the meeting so late that he was not called upon. Miss Elizabeth C. Carter, who saw the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" in New York city, described its objectionable features in the eyes of the colored people, and James H. Magnett, the last speaker, lauded Gov. David I. Walsh for taking the first step to secure legislation to place the ban on objectionable photo-plays such as "The Birth of a Nation."

Among the white people who attended the meeting were former Mayor Thomas Thompson, the Rev. E. O. Cunningham and Charles E. Vaughan.

Mr. Jourdain stated that "The Birth of a Nation" is a malicious, vicious libel upon an entire race of people. It is a part of a propaganda of the reactionary element in the south to alienate from the negro all sympathetic feeling in the north, and is aimed to bring about the repeal of the 14th amendment to the constitution of the United States which insures equal suffrage for the negro.

The Klu Klux Klan, which is lauded in the photo-play as a band organized and operated to defend the honor of women from the negroes, Mr. Jourdain characterized as an organization of man banded together for the purpose of driving the colored people out of the south, in order to prevent the overthrow of the clique which controlled the politics of the south.

Under the charge of rape, Mr. Jourdain stated, negroes have been lynched for everything from murder to being "sassy" to white people. A certain element in the south, he said, have never ceased to desire to disfranchise the southern negro, and to do this they at one time sent many lecturers to the north. Now that the motion pictures have become the rage, he said, they have adopted this method to create prejudice in the north against the negro race.

Mr. Jourdain praised William Monroe Trotter, William Henry Lewis and other negro leaders for their courage to fight for the rights of the negro race. Relative to President Woodrow Wilson's charge that Mr. Totter was impudent to him, Mr. Jourdain said that Massachusetts in the past has had other impudent men, including Patrick Henry [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 26, 1915

NEGRO WOMEN OFFER TO DIE TO STOP FILM

Organize Vigilance Committee, Hiss Mayor's Name and Demand His Recall.

Mayor Curley and the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," shared unequally in condemnation and denunciation at a mass meeting of Negroes at the Twelfth Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue, Roxbury, yesterday afternoon, called to express indignation against the continued exhibition of the play. The mayor received by far the larger share of the censure.

The mayor was stigmatized as "the most hypocritical mayor that the city of Boston has ever had"; it was asserted that to hold good now the invitation that has been extended to his honor to speak at a meeting of the church in May would be to "desecrate the platform"; the mayor was threatened with the recall; his name was hissed, and, last but not least, the name of John F. Fitzgerald was cheered to the echo when his action in forbidding the continued production of "The Clansman" was contrasted with Mayor Curley's failure to order "The Birth of a Nation" to quit business in Boston.

The meeting was called by Mrs. Olivia Ward Bush Banks and its announced purpose was to form "a protecting league of all colored women of Greater Boston for the maintenance and protection of their civil rights." Such an organization was formed, with Mrs. Banks as its president and Mrs. Minnie Wright as chairman of the "vigilance committee of 100 women."

Mrs. Wright presided at the meeting and feeling ran high. The name of Curley was always the signal for hisses and some of the more excitable women added to the demonstration by shouting very uncomplimentary things about Boston's chief executive.

Pastor Denounces Mayor.

It was the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, pastor of the church, who declared that the invitation extended to Mayor Curley to speak at the church in May would be withdrawn. He said:

"As far as it is within my power to recall Mr. James Curley, that will be done now; that is, he will ne told his services are not wanted at a meeting to which he had been invited in May. I would not desecrate the platform of our church with Mr. James Curley." Mr. Shaw accused the mayor of "hiding behind the law."

"Mayor Curley never meant a word of anything he said to us at his office. If the Legislature gave him the power he would not exercise it," declared the pastor.

Clement G. Morgan, an attorney, condemned the action of the police upon the night that the arrests were made at the Tremont Theatre, and said that it was without cause. Mr. Morgan charged Mayor Curley with failing to do what he had promised. "You have an opportunity to recall your mayor next fall," he said. "The man sitting in that chair should not be there to represent the people."

"When we took our message to former Mayor Fitzgerald, while he was in office, regarding 'The Clansman,' he gave us audience and did something for us," said Morgan, and for several minutes the audience applauded the mention of ex-Mayor Fitzgerald's name.

"At that time we were sent to Commissioner O'Meara and then we were sent back to the mayor," continued Atty. Morgan. "He told us if it was up to him it would go and it want. I don't like Mayor Curley; he is the most hypocritical mayor ever in the chair. An opportunity is given for recall; if there are any here at this meeting that are not registered, now is the time to fix it up."

Women Not Afraid to Die.

Joshua Crawford, another colored lawyer, said that every Negro, "from the man in the gutter to the man on the pinnacle" is working to drive "The Birth of a Nation" out of Boston, "and we are not going to stop. It has got to go or they will have to put us in jail."

William Monroe Trotter read several telegrams from Philadelphia lauding Gov. Walsh and Lieut.-Gov. Cushing for their position in the matter. Mr. Trotter introduced resolutions condemning the Boston police for their actions at the Tremont Theatre affair. They were adopted.

Mrs. Wright made an impassioned address. "What pride is it for me to say that I was born in Boston if I am [illegible]

After telling of the cheers which greeted the deeds of the Klu Klux Klan and the ridicule which greeted the impersonation of Charles Sumner, the idol of the colored race, when she saw "The Birth of a Nation" in New York city, Miss Carter stated that she hopes the photo-play will never be allowed in New Bedford, and will soon be legislated off the films in every place in the country.

If it is wrong to start a movement in Boston to prevent the production of "The Birth of a Nation" Miss Carter said that the Boston tea party was also wrong and Paul Revere's midnight ride was also wrong.

James H. Magnett praised Governor Walsh for taking the initiative in the matter of legislation against offensive photo-plays.

PREACHER LAUDS ACTION AGAINST PHOTO-PLAY

The Rev. Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon, pastor of the Harvard Congregational Church, Brookline, during the vesper services yesterday afternoon took for his theme "The Birth of a Nation," and lauded Gov. Walsh, Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and former Congressman Samuel W. McCall for their stand.

Dr. Vernon said: "The great issue is between absolute freedom of speech and freedom of art and the effect of that freedom upon the fanning of the flames of race prejudice. The spectacle in Europe is showing what race prejudice can do when started, and our own country is a mosaic of different races."

ROXBURY PASTOR CALLS PLAY A TRAVESTY

Last night, at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Pastor Charles A. Fulton took occasion, in the course of his sermon, to state why he thought the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," ought to be suppressed. He said in part: "I know the South and love it and its people, for I have lived among them as one of their number, being, though northern born, welcomed to their hearts and homes as pastor. I know the southern Negro, with his faults and excellencies. The days of the civil war and of reconstruction are behind us. Let them be forgotten, save as their memory helps us in planning wisely for the future and in honoring those who made the era of the war illustrious by their deeds of heroic devotion.

"The Birth of a Nation' is a misnomer for the photo-play which should be called 'the Clansman.' As a spectacle, it is a wonderful production. But it should be stopped. It must be stopped in Massachusetts if she is to remain worthy of the memory of Garrison, Phillips and Sumner. It must be stopped because it is a travesty of history. Nothing but mischief can come of it."

REV. DR. CROTHERS CALLS PLAY "SKILFUL TREACHERY"

Condemns "The Birth of a Nation" After Seeing Film.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel McCord Crothers condemned the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" as a "deliberate and skilful bit of treachery" in an address on the Lincoln Highway in the First Parish Church of Cambridge before an audience largely made up of Negroes yesterday afternoon. The meeting to which the colored people of Cambridge were invited was not an indignation meeting, Dr. Crothers said, but "a meeting of fellowship and re-consecration to American ideals." Other speakers were President Emeritus C. W. Eliot of Harvard, the Rev. Dr. George L. Cady of Dorchester, the Rev. Dr. Swain, a Negro clergyman of Cambridge, and former Assistant United States Dist.-Atty. William H. Lewis. Miss Maria Baldwin, the principal of Agassiz school, Cambridge, recited Dunbar's poem on Douglass.

The Rev. Dr. Crothers said in part:

"The other day I went to see the photo-play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' The impression that came to me was of amazement at the fact that people of Boston could look at it as a mere spectacle. It is not that. It is not a work of art for art's sake, to be so enjoyed. It is not history as an impartial historian understands history. It is a deliberate and skilful bit of treachery. It is frankly educational. It has a lesson which it seeks to teach and does teach in the most direct fashion. The scenes are unrelieved by any touch of nobleness, no glimpse of the faces that on the Shaw monument move to tears by their pathetic earnestness. We come away taught to hate as well as despise.

"It is not a scene here and there that is offensive. The protest should be made not by Negroes alone, but by all who care for American idealism and for the rights of man."

Mr. Eliot, in his first public utterance regarding the photo-play, declared that the people of the North resent the idea that they are turning, even in their minds, from the 14th amendment to the constitution.

"We of the North today, as 50 years ago," he said, "believe that all Americans are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Therefore, I have seen with the utmost regret that in the North the colored people have not as good a chance for the pursuit of happiness as those in the South, because they are excluded in the North from most of the fundamental trades and most of the skilled occupations.

"This film or play should not be allowed to accomplish what is probably its purpose—to inspire the white people of the North with a different feeling toward the colored people than we hold at the close of the civil [illegible]

NEGROES IN MASS MEETING THREATEN THEATRE

Say It Will Be Unsafe Unless Law Forbidding Film is Passed.

Determination to stop the production of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," and warnings that if a law forbidding its presentation is not obtained this week it will be unsafe for people to attend the performances, were voiced at a mass meeting of 3000 persons, mostly Negroes, at the Zion Methodist Episcopal Church at Columbus avenue and Northampton street last night. It was also announced that a strong fight will be made in defence of the four Negroes arrested at the Tremont Theatre, whose trial is scheduled for Wednesday. A collection, taken last night, added a large amount to the defence fund.

The speakers declared heatedly that every loyal Negro in Boston will take part in the fight that begins this morning at the State House for the passage of a law that shall make impossible what they called insult and humiliation to the race.

Practically every Negro clergyman in Boston participated in the exercises and spoke vigorously against the play. The white speakers included the Rev. Herbert W. Johnson, W. D. Brigham, Sherwin L. Cook and G. T. Daily. Emery T. Morris presided, for the League for the Advancement of Colored People. Negro speakers were the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, the Rev. A. W. Puller, the Rev. W. D. McLean, the Rev. E. W. Swain, the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, D. O. Walker, W. M. Trotter and the Rev. T. E. Autin.

"I think there is a deep laid plot to degrade 10,000,000 Negroes in America. The fact that Wilson and his cabinet have a good word for it does not recommend it for me. Wilson has a good word for slavery, too," declared W. D. Brigham.

"I am sorry Tom Dixon was a Baptist minister," said the Rev. Herbert W. Johnson. "I ask you to help the white people from doing a great harm to themselves in thus insulting the Negro race. You have 20,000 male Negro voters in Massachusetts, which is the balance of political power practically. You can compel the two parties to do what you want in this matter."

"I want to advise the people of Boston as a measure of 'Safety First' that Tremont Theatre will be a good place to stay away from if the Legislature does not pass legislation preventing the production of this filthy picture," declared the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw.

Resolutions were passed protesting against police activities inside the lobby of the Tremont Theatre as illegal and in contravention of the personal rights of a citizen.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) MERCURY
APRIL 26, 1915

While the protest of the race that is affronted by the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," is sincere beyond question, it is suspected that more or less of it has been invited and cultivated for advertising purposes. This is more readily believed when we recall the incidents attending the production of the play "The Clansman," founded upon Dixon's novel—the story which is the basis of the film which is arousing so much comment and passion. When "The Clansman" was produced around the country, the advance agents made a business of inspiring a controversy and some degree of protest against the presentation of the play in cities where it was booked. Before the film was produced there was speculation upon the attitude the colored race would take and trouble seemed to be invited. Not only has the picture shown been well advertised, but a number of politicians have made capital out of the affair. There has been a disposition to prevent [illegible] official from securing a monopoly [illegible] the colored vote as a result [illegible] action and sympathy and a [illegible] of candidates will be set [illegible] claims this fall to having [illegible] especial champion of the colored [illegible] This, we repeat, is not a [illegible] upon the good faith of those who [illegible] denouncing the reflection they feel is put upon their people.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 26, 1915

DR VERNON CRITICISES.

Opposed to Any Picture Show Tending to Arouse Race Prejudice.

Rev Dr Ambrose W. Vernon declared strongly against the moving picture performance of "The Birth of a Nation" during the choral vesper service at the Harvard Congregational Church in Brookline, yesterday. He attended one of the performances last week.

Dr Vernon was not only opposed to this particular moving picture show, but against any form of picture shows which tendered to arouse race prejudice among the people of any nationality.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) STANDARD
APRIL 26, 1915

MINISTERS ARE OPPOSED.

Pass Resolutions Against "The Birth of a Nation."

The union ministers' meeting this morning unanimously endorsed the opposition to the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" by the following resolutions:

"Resolved, that the New Bedford Ministerial union expresses its sympathy with the colored people in their protest against the injustice done their race by the moving picture play 'The Birth of a Nation,' and pledges its co-operation with them for its suppression."

A committee was appointed to confer with and aid the Spanish War Veterans in a concert or entertainment to be given on some week evening. W. S. MacIntire and F. E. Ramsdell, committee. Prof. George C. Cell of Boston university was to have read a paper to the union but failed to appear at the appointed time. Rev. F. H. Morgan of Zion's Herald was drafted into service and gave an informing talk on religious journalism.

Rev. Thomas S. Sayer, C. F. Hersey and W. H. Mosely were appointed a committee to consider the matter of a Chinese Bible school.

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 26, 1915

PHOTO-DRAMA IS CONDEMNED IN MASS MEETINGS

Gatherings of Negroes Register Dissatisfaction With "The Birth of a Nation" as Revised and Want the Show Closed

Criticism of the photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown in a Boston theater, developed in several quarters Sunday, when mass-meetings and congregations were addressed by negroes who feel that the play casts aspersions on their race, and ministers and educators who feel that performances of the film are contrary to the best interest of the people because of the race prejudice aroused and the disturbances of the public peace caused.

Meanwhile, the persons interested in the performance of the film have their opportunity to be heard at the State House today, when the committee on judiciary listen to arguments of the objectors to the proposed amendment to the present theater censorship act by which legal action may be taken against theatrical performances that tend to arouse race prejudice or tend to a breach of the public peace. Room 240, the large hearing room at the State House, was used.

At a mass meeting of negroes at the Twelfth Baptist church in Roxbury yesterday afternoon there was much criticism that the mayor had not found it legal to do more than require one scene cut out of the film.

Among the speakers was Dr. Alice McKane, who said: "Shall we fight for existence, or shall we not exist because we are black? I say fight, fight to the bitter end; fight until the last drop of blood is gone; we are not fighting as black people but as American citizens. mayor want 'The Birth of a Nation' repressed from the city of Boston and we the mana to see it go. If we cannot get power to by fair means we will get rid of fore, offe ll."

mayor th however, a Crawford said that they will Court b take "The Birth of a Nation" been Boston or jail the colored people. amen W. Munroe Trotter read resolutions which were adopted. These resolutions protested against the action of the police a week ago Saturday night, and demanded that all plays requiring police action be stopped at once.

Similar sentiments were expressed at a meeting in the Zion Methodist Episcopal church, Columbus avenue.

Former Gov. Malcom R. Patterson of Tennessee during his prohibition speech in the First Universalist church, Everett, yesterday, scored the film as a "rank misinterpretation of the negroes." He said that he spoke as a southerner who was in sympathy with the negroes in this protest.

ENTERPRISE
BURLINGTON
APR 26 1915

ACTOR FOUND DEAD

United Press

BOSTON, April 26.—Claxton Willmark, well-known through theatrical circles, was found dead today in his room at the Georgian Hotel. Although the medical examiner said death appeared due to natural causes an autopsy will be performed later to determine if foul play was in Boston in "The Birth Of

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) MERCURY
APRIL 26, 1915

CHARGE PROPAGANDA TO INJURE THE NEGRO

View of "The Birth of a Nation" Expressed at Mass Meeting of Negroes—Resolutions Adopted and Committee Appointed to Interview Legislators.

"Resolved, that this meeting condemns the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' as a perversion of history and a maliciously false and defamatory libel upon the black American citizen, and endorses the movement to secure proper legislation that shall prevent the public production of plays or pictures, the purpose or effect of which is to arouse race and religious discord."

This resolution was adopted at a mass meeting of New Bedford Negroes, held in the Bethel A. M. E. church yesterday afternoon. In addition, a committee consisting of Miss Elizabeth C. Carter, John R. Barreau and Frederic S. Monroe was appointed to interview the local representatives in behalf of the Sullivan-Halloway bill.

E. B. Jourdain presided at the meeting, which began at 4:15. About fifty people were present at the outset, but others kept drifting in, until there were about a hundred when adjournment was taken at 5:30 on account of a meeting of another organization scheduled for that hour. I. C. Dade, who was announced as one of the speakers, arrived just before the adjournment, and was not called upon. Among the white people noted in the gathering were Rev. F. O. Cunningham, Charles E. Vaughan and Thomas Thompson.

"This meeting was called," said Mr. Jourdain, in opening the meeting, "for the purpose of protesting against the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation.' The protest is because it is untrue, a malicious, vicious libel upon an entire race of people. It is presented for one of the most despicable of ulterior motives. It is part of a propaganda of the reactionary element in the south, to alienate from the Negro all sympathetic feeling in the north, and to bring about the repeal of the constitutional amendments which forbid denying the right of suffrage to the black American."

Speaking of the Reconstruction period in the south after the Civil war, and the picture-play scenes that purport to represent incidents of that period, Mr. Jourdain said that the members of the Ku Klux Klan, who were pictured as the defenders of white women and children against outrages by Negroes, had a record of murder and criminality practiced against the black men, with the purpose of driving them out of the south. "Search all the history of that era," he said, "and you will not find that the black men of the south were even claimed to be rapists. The southern whites said that they did not propose to let the black men run the southern government.

"Along in the 90's, Hoke Smith, Tillman and the other men in the saddle saw that if the southern Negroes and whites got together, the end of their reign had come, and decided that the Negroes must be terrorized. Then for the first time they raised the cry of rape. That has been carried on down to the present. But the record of lynchings in this country, in any one year, shows that the cause of the majority of lynchings runs all the way from murder and rape, down to 'being sassy' to white people. Not one per cent of the millions of colored people in this country have been shown as rapists.

"Their desire has been to disfranchise the southern Negro. After the lecture scheme had failed—and they flooded the north with lecturers—they saw the possibility of the moving picture. To southerners, the reconstruction era has always been the answer to the question of whether the Negro should have the ballot. But for the influencing of the north, they said, to use the slang phrase, 'It can't be done without a makeup,' and 'The Birth of a Nation' is the makeup. The Ku Klux Klan are pictured as the defenders of womanly virtue, and the black men as lust fiends, or as ignorant, worthless Negroes, masquerading as legislators. That is a lie of the most damnable sort, from beginning to end!"

Mr. Jourdain took exception to the characterization of those protesting against the photoplay as only "excited Negroes," and defended warmly the activity of William Munroe Trotter. As to the charge that Mr. Trotter was impudent to President Wilson, Mr. Jourdain said: "There have been other impudent men. Patrick Henry was one of them; and we have some in Massachusetts. Thank God for William Munroe Trotter! His heart is right and his courage is right."

Mr. Jourdain also spoke of William Henry Lewis and other Negroes who have attained eminence, and remarked: "The southern leaders don't fear ignorant, worthless Negroes. It is the capable progressive Negroes that give Hoke Smith, Vardaman and Tillman the nightmare, and that the latter are aiming to reach. But we don't propose to sit down and let those reconstructed rebels come here and put this thing over on us!

"We protest against any such perversion of history as 'The Birth of a Nation.' It is the most vicious libel, and if directed against any individual it would result in the heaviest damage suit ever heard in a court.

"The black race does have its criminals. The only wonder is that after 300 years of subjugation, the race could come out as virtuous and high-minded as they are. But if people see these pictures and get their idea of history in that way, what can their idea be of the Negro? It is a lie. White men are responsible for the mulattoes among the Negro race; but what a howl would go up if the white southerners were represented as a lustful people!

"If there is any reason in the legislators, we will convince them that the story told in this photoplay is untrue. We are standing not only for our rights, but for law and order, for the fundamental principles of Americanism."

Miss Elizabeth C. Carter, who saw "The Birth of a Nation" produced in New York, was introduced as the next speaker. She stated that on the programme of the theatre it was announced that no tickets were to be sold to colored people. Her characterization of the presentation was "One of the most abominable photoplays before the country today." She said that "The Birth of a Nation" and another production entitled, "The New Governor" appeared to be part of a concerted effort to change the sentiment of northerners toward the colored people.

"Charles Sumner," she continued, "is held up to ridicule in the play; and we love the memory of Charles Sumner.

"The pictures of Ku Klux incidents were cheered and clapped by the New York audience. It looks as if that was what they wanted in this country again.

"Another part of the play which I consider just as objectionable as that representing a white girl fleeing from the Negro, Gus, is that which pictures a white girl being forced to marry a colored man."

Commenting upon the riot at a recent presentation of "The Birth of a Nation," in Boston, Miss Carter said that while she did not believe in encouraging lawlessness, she considered that those in authority should keep out things that incited people to riot. "If they do not," she continued, "those in authority are responsible, and not the rioters. If those men and women in Boston were wrong a week ago, was it wrong for the Boston Tea Party to throw the tea overboard? And was it wrong for Paul Revere to take his midnight ride? I don't think that those people felt quiet and peaceful.

"I trust that that vicious film will be kept from this city. I question the advisability of placing any pictures of lynchings and Ku Klux outrages before the people.

"'The Birth of a Nation' seeks to show the depraved side of Negro life; but not the depraved side of the white master.

"Thousands of dollars have been brought into the city of Boston from the south, to see that the play is continued; and the same thing was done in New York."

James H. Magnett said he was glad to see that Governor Walsh took the initiative in the matter of legislation against offensive photo-plays. "I believe," he said, "that the typical Yankee is against the colored man, but the Irishman knows when he is unjustly dealt with. The Yankees, because of their small families, are getting to be things of the past; and the Irishmen are coming to the front."

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) STANDARD
APRIL 26, 1915

NEGROES CONDEMN FILM

CALL "BIRTH OF A NATION" ABOMINABLE.

Mass Meeting Yesterday at Bethel A. M. E. Church to Protest Against Photo Play—Compare Their Feeling Against It to Boston Tea Party.

"'The Birth of a Nation' is a disgrace to a nation," was the burden of impassioned speeches at the mass meeting held yesterday afternoon at the Bethel A. M. E. church to protest against the showing of the photoplay. A resolution was adopted unanimously at the close of the meeting condemning the film and protesting against its being shown in the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Perhaps the speech most full of feeling was that of Miss Elizabeth C. Carter, who saw the whole film in New York just two days before it was suppressed in part and left the city. She characterized it as altogether abominable.

The statements of Miss Carter which aroused the most feeling in the audience were those relative to President Wilson. Three times during the film, quotations from President Wilson are thrown upon the screen, all derogative of the American Negro. The speaker's voice broke as she said that she did not know where the country was coming to when its chief executive would utter such sentiments against the colored race. Miss Carter asserted that money was flooding the north along with the film to insure its being produced. She said that pervert missionaries were being sent through Massachusetts seeking to alienate their sympathies from the Negro race, and from the memory of men like Charles Summer, Wendell Phillips, and Lloyd Garrison.

"I just cried when the picture of the noble Charles Sumner was thrown on the curtain, and then he was held up to ridicule. And the part of the film where a Negro is shown chasing the white girl and which is usually cut out when protest is made, is not much worse than the rest, if any worse. Another scene where a white girl is forced to marry a Negro is equally as disgusting. Throughout the play, the black man is represented as a lustful, degraded creature. Is it any wonder that we get excited? Has any person or editor a right to condemn the Negroes of the various cities for making demonstrations against the play? If so, then the Boston Tea Party, and the Battle of Lexington was wrong. People were excited then against just such wrongs as the Negroes are suffering today."

Miss Carter won the crowd and an 'Amen' was heard as she sat down. She was followed by James H. Magnett who was somewhat more bitter. He made the startling assertion that the presence of mulattoes showed that more crimes had been perpetrated upon the Negro women by many times that had ever been forced upon white women. He denounced as pernicious anything which tends to rouse race, class or religious prejudice but followed that assertion shortly with the statement that the Irish-American was the best friend the Negro has and that the typical Yankee was against the black man. Mr. Magnett's statements were made relative to the indorsement of the black man's position by Governor Walsh, Mr. McCall and others.

E. B. Jourdain, who presided, made an introductory speech dealing more with the historical and legal phases of the question. His bitterness was turned more against the Klux Klux Klan, who are represented in the film as the defenders of the virtue of women. Mr. Jourdain said that the record of the organization was so black as shown by sworn testimony during the trials of the seventies that defending lawyers threw up their defense and did not ask for mercy from the civil courts. The whole "Birth of a Nation" is pernicious, vicious and malicious, he asserted.

"I invite any one," said the speaker "to look into the court records, to read the president's message and then to go and see this gang of murderers and thieves known as the K. K. K. depicted as the bulwark of woman's virtue. The records will also show that the race stories were never thought of until the nineties, when all other efforts to win the approval of the north had failed. There was no hint of it in any of the records of the reconstruction periods, yet this film purports to be a historical play showing the life of that time.

"The whole trouble is that all American history has been one of compromise. The founders on the question of the Negro compromised and thought that slavery would cease by the beginning of the nineteenth century. Then a compromise was effected with reference to the territories. Finally the Civil war was fought and the black men given their rights. Now we face the possibility of losing all that millions lost their lives for? The south is again taking away the civil and political rights of the Negro. Such men as Senators Tillman, Hoke Smith and Vardaman, and Dixon, author of The Clansman and other libels on the Negro, have but one great goal and that is the repeal of the so-called war amendments to the federal constitution. They won political preferment on that one issue."

"Another meeting at 5 30 made adjournment necessary but many of the more than a hundred present were eager to talk.

A committee of Miss Carter, Frederic S. Monroe and J. R. Barreau was appointed to interview the New Bedford members of the legislature and the following resolution was adopted:

Journal 26/

1000 NEGROES HEAR SPEAKERS RAP PHOTO-PLAY

Another Demonstration Is Threatened Unless Legislature Passes Law.

PROTEST USE OF POLICE AT THEATRE

Scrutiny of Tickets Called "Invasion of Colored Man's Rights"

More than 1000 negroes heard numerous speakers, white and colored, protest against "The Birth of a Nation" films last night in Zion Methodist Church at Columbus avenue and Northampton street.

Emery T. Morris of the National Independence Equal Rights League presided. The speakers were Rev. Samuel A. Brown, Rev. Aaron W. Fuller, Rev. Edwin L. Cook, a grandson of William Lloyd Garrison; Rev. Walter D. McLean of Cambridge, William D. Brigham, Rev. Herbert Johnson, ex-State Representative George T. Daly of Cambridge and Rev. M. A. K. Shaw. The following resolution was read and adopted by the meeting:

"To the Mayor and Police Commissioner of Boston:

"Whereas, To act as ticket sellers or ticket takers for a theatre is not the proper function of a policeman whose salaries are paid by public taxation, and,

"Whereas, For a policeman to stop a citizen in the entrance lobby of a theatre is illegal and for a policeman to demand to see and scrutinize the theatre ticket and to check a citizen at the door is a violation of personal liberty.

"Resolved, That we protest such action by the Boston police at the Tremont Theatre during the run of 'The Birth of a Nation,' and that we demand a cessation of such invasion of public rights, and that any play which is deemed to make such police action necessary be stopped at once."

Threatens Demonstration

"If no law is made which has teeth in it to stop this infamous thing," said Rev. Mr. Brown, "I believe that white and colored people of Boston will make such a demonstration as will make it unprofitable to exhibit the film known as 'The Birth of a Nation.'

Rev. Aaron W. Fuller, who was arrested in Tremont Theatre during the disturbance there early in the run of the film, counseled race thankfulness that such strong unifying forces had come; race unity, race agitation and race sacrifice as the weapons available for fighting the issue. "Any play," he said, "which portrays every negro woman as a prostitute and every negro man as a rapist, is not fit to be shown in Torment, to say nothing of Boston."

Sherwin L. Cook asked what would be the feelings of a white man in Liberia who saw displayed there a film which pictured only the truths of the white man's injustice to the negro—pictures of the slave ships, with white arms thrusting negroes back into the holds—pictures showing black women denied not only their freedom but their right to chastity?

"If such a picture were exhibited I would seek the highest officials I could find, and, although I would be in a racial minority, I have enough confidence in your race to believe that the film would be suppressed."

"The color of the package," said William D. Brigham, "doesn't determine the contents. A brown wrapper may cover a diamond and a white one enclose sawdust or ink. White people and colored are essentially the same."

Urges Use of Ballot

"You can't win by force," Mr. Johnson told the audience. "They are, I understand, some 18,000 or 20,000 colored voters. With the political parties so closely divided as they are, you have very nearly a balance of power if you will stand together and support the man irrespective of color or creed, who stands by you."

Various speakers expressed very high praise for Gov. Walsh, Wells Goodrich Curley, the censor, the police commissioner, Judge Dewd and the city administration in general were sharply criticized.

A large delegation of negroes will go this morning to the hearing before the judiciary committee to further a bill to make it possible to censor and suppress the photo-play.

NORTHAMPTON (Mass.) HERALD
APRIL 28, 1915

THEATRICAL CHATTER

RODUCING PICTURE PLAY ON STAGE WHICH WAS FULLY FIVE MILES WIDE

w D. Griffeth Worked Oou Historically Accurate Batt'e Scenes With 18,000 Actors and 3,000 Horses

n observing officer of a moving ure corporation was watching re- rsals for a little film drama one rning seven years ago when a com- ation developed, and it was patent t, as arranged for, the idea in the ground of the studio would not get r.

ne of the players in the company, s the New York Times a slender ng leading man, went up to the ducing director and said: "Why dn't it be done so and so?" in- ating his plan.

The producing director nodded em- atically, "Right!" he said, and it s right. Whereupon the observing icer first mentioned turned to the tor, saying seriously: "Why don't u try producing, Griffith?"

"I wouldn't mind having a chance to rk out a few little ideas," was the swer.

"Work them out, then," was the de- sion.

Up at the Liberty theater, New York, uring the last few weeks people are anding in a line which stretches from e box office nearly over to Seventh venue, suffering for the privilege of ying $2 a seat in many cases, to see thing but a moving picture drama.

The man who produced that $2 movie the man addressed in the studio ven years before, the man who said had a few little ideas to work out.

He was Griffith then, now he is Da- d Wark Griffith, for whom even the ost surfeited regular dramatic critic d words of praise when that movie d its first night in New York and of hom also other men who study and serve rather than direct declare that has raised the film drama to an art ith a capital A, and that he has un- ded new possibilities, pioneered in itherto unsuspected fields.

HE TOOK "THE CLANSMAN."

In brief, Mr. Griffith took "The Clans an," a novel by the Rev Thomas ixon, and from it evolved an ambi- ous spectacle for the camera in which orking on a stage roughly speaking ve miles long and two miles deep, he mployed altogether 18,000 persons and ,000 horses.

He delineated battle scenes conduc- ed according to the records preserved the war department at Washington ging artillery, cavalry and infantry as hey were used in a real battle of the ivil war.

His artillery duels were real artillery uels, his cavalry charges were passed by the men who participated in such charge fifty years before. His men led as men had died in the trenches f the South and they suffered just as he men who did suffer said they had.

He built or caused to be built no less han five complete Southern towns, aithful to the last architectural de- tail, and he burned three of them.

He massed and handled great mobs of whites and negroes as history said the real mobs acted. He reproduced one theater exactly life size and de- lineated the great national tragedy of the assassination of President Lincoln just as history says it occurred.

He built the legislative halls of a Southern State and with an actual still photograph as a model brought back to life a scene in that chamber fifty years ago. Above all throughout two hours and forty minutes he ran the threads of a love story.

This is was that Mr. Griffith leaned back in his chair puffing contentedly at an after luncheon cigar, taking his first vacation in about fourteen months

FOUR SERIOUS PROBLEMS

He was at that moment digesting among other things four questions which would take several hours to answer.

"Who are you?"

"Where did you learn how?"

"How did you do this?"

"What will come after?"

Mr. Griffith told how he was born in Kentucky some thirty odd years ago, the son of Jacob Wark Griffith, a brevet Brigadier-General of the Confederate army. His family comes near to being eligible for about all the patriotic societies, for his grandfather was Capt. Daniel Griffith of the war of 1812.

In the generation further on there was a great grandfather in the Revolutionary war. Before that time there were Griffiths in Virginia.

After the war, of course, the Griffiths of Kentucky had, like many other families mainly their memories to live on—memories and the products of a farm on the edge of the blue grass. The boy was born in that situation, received his education at the nearby country school.

The wander year came to the boy at 20. In the meantime he had always liked to act in the dialogues at school Friday afternoons and a little later when they gave the plays at the Literary Society.

In any event when he went out into the world he gravitated to Louisville and very promptly applied for a position with a modest little stock company which was giving everything from Shakespeare to Charles Hoyt at a local theater.

He was engaged, as he says, because they needed somebody. Then there were seven years of the stage, now in road companies, now in repertoire, all the time getting up a little.

He played with Gertrude Coghlan, Walker Whiteside and finally Nance O'Neil, in the last year a leading man.

HOW HE GOT START

Something else happened. In an odd moment on the road the young actor had written a short story or two and some verses. He came back to New York and sent them to a magazine which promptly accepted them.

Then he wrote a play, "The Fool and the Girl," and James K. Hackett took it. Another great romantic drama was begun, and its acceptance promised. This was in the latter part of 1906 and the early part of 1907.

"That ended the stage for me," he explained. "No more of the hardships. I was going to be an author and draw down royalties. I woke up in about five months.

"The Hackett play failed and I have always had a little bit of a sore spot over that. I know a little bit more about stage management now, you know. Then short story writing was not extra profitable and I came back to New York from the country and found the moving picture game growing."

He began writing moving picture scenarios then at $5 and $10 apiece. That was all right if you could turn out enough of them. There are limits, however, to the physical capacity of even such plots as they used in those days and the young man added moving picture acting to his other work.

He went into the company of a corporation, the first one mentioned, studied the game as it was then, saw that it might be made an art and bided his time until the officers heard him make the suggestion to the producing director, whereupon another era was born.

AMBITION WAS INCREASED

There is no doubt the young manager grew a little more ambitious about that time.

The corporation for which he worked had not been particularly prosperous, although to-day it is worth millions, but there was somebody in it wise enough not to impose any rules or regulations on the new director.

Perhaps the reader will remember a modest, haunting little film, "Pippa Passes," the representation of Browning's poem. Griffith did that and all it was was a day of a young girl with her ancient Italian guitar singing her little song ending: "God's in His Heaven; all's right in the world."

Then came "The Merchant of Venice" rather ambitious; "The Diet on the Escutcheon." "Enoch Arden," a sombre fancy; "Lines of white on a Sullen Sea" all of which led up to "Oil and Water," written by Mr. Griffith himself.

A little more ambition and then came "A Corner in Wheat," the first pictures of which were modelled directly on Miller's "Gleaners," and the audience liked that.

"Just about that time," he put in, "it came to me that a wonderful thing could be done with 'The Life of Christ.'" The divine tragedy has a universal appeal, and adequately done with reverence it could not fail of approval." He laughed.

"I submitted my idea and it was approved, but when I got to talking about details, Palestine and Jerusalem, a great cast, for I had chosen two of the foremost actors in the world—an initial expenditure of thousands—the thermometer dropped.

"It was madness" He paused. "Do you know it is a little gratifying to me now that within the last few days I have been approached by a syndicate which has asked me to do that very same thing and they have said that I need not worry about a little thing like $500,000 or a $1,000,000 if I need it."

REACHES FULL STRIDE

By this time it is apparent Griffith had swung into his stride and a year ago or a little more came "Judith," using about 2,000 people, where they built forty foot concrete walls, wide enough to have a battle on.

Then came "The Clansman" It seems that the chief producing director, as Mr. Griffith was, changed from one company to another, and according to reports he did so at a salary that would pay the President's yearly salary and more.

He wouldn't talk about that. In any event he had not worked long before he had the Dixon book handed over to him to read He read it and lost interest in about everything else.

"I read the book," he says, "and I saw it. Not the book entirely, but as an opportunity for me to set forth, first the birth of the South following the travail of the Civil war.

"I saw a chance to tell the story of how they suffered through what I believe to be the most dramatic period in the history of the country—reconstruction. There was a chance to show what the South thinks of Lincoln; there was a chance to show that the negro of the South did not of his own volition degenerate into the human being who made the Ku Klux Klan necessary, but rather he was seduced by the unscrupulous adventurers, who exploited a situation for their own selfish ends.

"There was nothing of race in my idea, and may I say there is nothing of race antagonism in my production. It is simply the pictorializing of an epoch."

Taking the book, reading it and dreaming about it, however, did not do the work. There were eight months of incubation. First three men and they were professors of colleges were asked to work out the correct historical data.

TASK A GIGANTIC ONE

There were interviews with veterans of the Civil war on most important points, recourse to maps and reports down at Washington and finally a patient county by county tour of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and North Carolina until Piedmont was discovered.

Then came the location of the battlefields, after which the veterans with their maps went forth to lay out a battlefield just as it was at Petersburg and just as it was in part during the march of Sherman's army from Atlanta to the sea. Where approved territory was found the experts went to work upon it.

If a road wound this way, of there was a brook or a river, on a house or a barn, that road, brook, house and barn were found or put in. If a town was needed along came an architect with his corps of builders and they put it up just as some gray hair old man remembered it.

They remembered burnings, and a town, two towns were put in—five altogether were built. One man remembered the burning of a town by night. Something must be done about that.

A fireworks man said he could build bombs which exploding in the air would give enough light for the camera to work at night. Incidentally it may be added the bombs cost $80 apiece, but they did the work.

"Was it difficult to get the actors?"

"No," replied Mr. Griffith, "not difficult, but tedious. You see we advertised in the newspapers that we wanted so many persons, men, women and children. We established employment bureaus, so to speak, and made our selections."

NEGROES NATURAL ACTORS.

"How about the negroes?"

"They were the easiest. The negro is a natural actor, and I do not mind saying that among the 4,500 of them we took out of the fields, out of the shops and from every other place we found some with remarkable talent.

"A producer some day may put forth the tragedy of the negro on the film—he will find men and women of that race fully competent."

Of course, it was explained, they did not use the 18,000 persons all the five or six months they were actually photographing the drama.

While it is true that by the time he had finished his long term of study Mr. Griffith did not use a scrap of paper, a book or scenario, yet he had arranged it all in his mind.

The great multitude for the flight from Atlanta and the town scenes were not actually under employment longer than two weeks. Then it may be added that the expenses ran far up into the thousands every day.

"The only way we could handle them was by military discipline," said Mr. Griffith. "We laid out a camp for the white and a camp for the blacks. We set up two commissaries.

"Then we divided our forces into sections, each section commanded by a captain who had his staff under him. That is how the picture was worked out.

"Every section leader in the big battle scenes or the town scenes kept his section, rehearsed it and looked after it. Complete telephone systems were installed for every section and the orders delivered from headquarters were megaphoned by the captains to their commands."

BITZER HANDLED THE CAMERA

The headquarters alluded to in the battle scenes was a sixty foot tower in front of the whole scene. It was there that George W. Bitzer, "best camera man in the world," Mr. Griffith says, and five assistants set their cameras. Every scene it may be said was taken six times.

Finally when every move of every section had been gone over again and again in rehearsal, when the soldiers knew when to charge or fall back, when to die or drop, even when the artillery knew the exact second when to wheel into action and the cavalry had its time schedule perfect even to the exact place where a horse must stumble or fall, the section leaders came to headquarters.

Back in the hills the thousands were waiting. They dashed back to their commands. Word came that all was ready and to the beat of a watch under telephone orders the action be-

The air filled with smoke—the soldiers appeared as if in a real fight. Trains of panic stricken refugees wound over the hills in flight, and then they stopped.

"We used the greatest number in all the scenes where they appear without reference to the position the pictures appear in the production," said Mr. Griffith. "That is always done.

"The multitudes were taken first and gradually the number was cut down until at last we had only the principals in their scenes.

"Some of the scenes which appear in order today were taken three or four months apart. That made more trouble, but it had to be done that way.

MAKES HAIR TURN GRAY.

"You must remember exactly what the individual did the first time in order to preserve uniformity exactly how he or she wore a hat, entered a house, wore the hair, or did anything else. That brings gray hair. Then we had a few little stunts.

"You remember that case where the negroes are shot and fall when the Ku Klux come into the town. The horses jump over them as they lie in the street.

"It took considerable persuasion to get men to do that, although the horses and their riders were the best trained obtainable. We took it up with some men. 'Boss, we won't do that for less'n $5 a day,' they said. They got it.

"Take another case in the guerrilla invasion of the town. It may be recalled that a man shot falls from the roof of a front porch head first on the ground. Many think the fall is made by a dummy.

"A real man does it and practically a fire net until he got his fall just right, timed exactly as it had to be done to fit in with the scene.

"There is one case where a rider coming out of a house makes a flying leap into the saddle over the tail of his horse. That took time and it does not show, but the man who did that had to jump over a railing encumbered by a robe.

"Many things were done in the work that do not appear in the film. There are twenty-five field guns in the battle scene pounding away and they were too far away for the eye of the camera.

"Houses are burned of which you can catch only a vague glow, people are fleeing over the hills and you can hardly see them."

ALL OVER IN FIVE MONTHS.

The actual work was all over in five months, Mr. Griffith said. From their first camp they went to California for interiors and the honeymoon scenes, the allegories and theater scene showing the assassination of President Lincoln.

"The theater was the exact size of Ford's in Washington," Mr. Griffith explained, "and it was an exact duplicate. Old prints gave us every detail even down to the appearance of Laura Keene and her company in 'The American Cousin.' We sought long before we got a man who could satisfy us as President Lincoln, and every man who became a member of his Cabinet was required to look like the original in size and general makeup.

"It was there that detail became almost overpowering. Men who lived in the old days were besieged. How did this man walk; how did he gesture; how did he wear his clothes; did he have any mannerisms." I told you it kept a great many people awake nights.

"We took the famous painting of the surrender of Lee and we never laid it down until I believe every man in it had an exact double before the cameras."

Thus it all came out. There were more months as the film was perfected and made ready for the public. But at last it was all done.

"Now what is the future of the moving picture?"

The man being interviewed lifted his hands. "Why, there are no limits to its possibilities in artistic work. It is only child's play.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

ONE EXPONENT OF THE GOSPEL

THE Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain, is to be commiserated with in the regret he feels because the court has eliminated as immoral and obscene the scene from "The Birth of a Nation" wherein a Negro chases a little white girl for the obvious purpose, as set forth by the author of the play, of committing rape. As Abraham Lincoln would say: "For a pastor of a church preaching the gospel of the Prince of Peace who wants that sort of thing, that is the sort of thing he is likely to want."

The Revs. Samuel M. Gothers, Alexander Mann, Christopher R. Eliot, Henry Pradie Smith and many other clerical colleagues will doubtless feel grateful to the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins for this [illegible] tion of Christianity and of the brotherhood of

STAR
ATTLEBORO, MASS
APR 26 1915

2,000 AT HEARING ON FILM LAW

Boston, April 26—The controversy over the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," took new life today when 2,000 people attended a legislative hearing where supporters of the play denounced the Sullivan bill which would allow a more rigid censorship of public entertainments.

Mass.
AY 2

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 26, 1915

KILL THE SULLIVAN BILL!

IT IS SPECIAL AND CLASS LEGISLATION AIMED TO DESTROY "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE TREMONT THEATRE, BUT IF ENACTED INTO LAW WILL ASSASSINATE DRAMATIC ART IN THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

WHAT THE HERALD SAYS (Editorially)

HYSTERICAL LEGISLATION.

The petition of Representative Sullivan for a large increase in the censorship power of the city executive ought to be beaten by an overwhelming vote in the Legislature. It bears all the marks of a hastily devised measure designed to secure an end for which just now there is much popular demand, but which, once in operation, would do far more to limit the freedom of the individual, of the theatre, and of the church and the press than any citizen devoted to the best interests of the whole people could possibly desire. The agitation over a film play now showing at a Boston theatre has induced hysterical conditions in many minds, one of the symptoms of which is this petition offered in all seriousness by Mr. Sullivan. An amendment is far too radical which seeks to change the existing law by penalizing those responsible for "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

This petition would enable any group of persons, held together by sympathies of race or creed, or even by professional or merely selfish considerations, to produce the conditions which would warrant the application of the censorship. It would only be necessary for them to meet and pass protesting resolutions, or to agitate and assume a threatening attitude, or to put themselves in the position of violating the public peace. It is easy to legislate in haste, and hasty legislation is usually followed by prolonged and costly penitence. Along with vehement protest against admitted wrong must be joined calm consideration of the means of cure. Officials now have the power, under the laws as they are, to revoke the license of any theatre whose exhibitions tend to damage public morals. Recourse may be had from the decisions of these officials to the courts. The people are impatient of any censorship which limits that freedom which they hold as a priceless heritage. They want exact fairness and justice for all races and creeds. The only limitations of personal freedom which they are disposed to tolerate must be in the interest of general decency and moral welfare.

With due respect for social fair play, it must be remembered that besides freedom of speech and freedom of the press, we need the same sort of freedom of the stage.

WHAT THE TRANSCRIPT SAYS (Editorially)

THE CURSE OF A NATION

The framers of the organic law of the Commonwealth concluded their contribution to human happiness with the purposeful phrase: "To the end it may be a government of laws and not of men." Upon Massachusetts therefore rests a peculiar obligation to oppose the tendency of the times to change by class legislation and executive censorship a government of laws to a government of men. The passion to limit by legislation or executive order the freedom of the individual is today the curse of the nation. • • •

The Sullivan petition would deliver a blow at religious freedom, the rights of the individual and the liberty of the press. It puts a premium on violence by making it possible for any two men who engage in a fisticuff in the lobby of a theatre to force the authorities to stop the show or entertainment over which the fisticuff occurred. Were such a statute in operation today our citizens of German sympathies could prevent by resolutions of protest or threats of violence the exhibition of any film showing the devastation in Belgium; our Catholic citizens could shut down any theatre whose entertainment failed to receive the approval of the cardinal; our Jewish citizens could prohibit a performance of "The Merchant of Venice"; our Christian Science citizens could place their veto upon any film whose portrayal of pain or of the efficacy of medical aid they found conflicted with the tenets of their creed; our Protestants citizens could end the exhibition of any film extolling the usefulness of the parochial school system or portraying the awful persecution of the priests and nuns in Mexico; our mill owners could drive off the stage any play or from the screen any film portraying the horrors of child labor; our saloon keepers could force the Prohibitionists to give up the use of the film in their crusade; our citizens of Southern origin could have the license of any theatre revoked where a picture was exhibited in illustration of the hideous conditions to which helpless Negro prisoners are today subjected in some of the Southern States. In short, the usefulness of the theatre either as a place of amusement or of education would be reduced to a ridiculous minimum were the law enforced as Mr. Sullivan would write it.

No city or town officials in Massachusetts today lack power under existing law to revoke the license of any theatre giving an exhibition which, in the opinion of the authorities, is obscene or immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community. Where the decision of the mayor or, in the case of Boston, of the mayor and the head of the police jointly, is not satisfactory, an appeal can be taken to the courts. Such an appeal has just been made in this city and the court decision was promptly complied with by the theatre management and acquiesced in by the city officials. No further legislation is necessary to protect the public morals of any community, and no further legislation is warranted which would set up over any community a racial or religious censorship. If it be found that the city authorities are not enforcing existing laws with respect to motion pictures, it may well be that the responsibility for such enforcement will sooner or later be transferred either to the state board of education, or better still to a national board under the direction of the secretary of the interior, which is provided for in a bill favorably reported to the House of Representatives at the last session of Congress. But we must keep in mind that to license a theatre is no more to sanction its exhibitions than to license a book store is to approve the contents of the books sold over its counters. Any sort of censorship is irritating to the spirit of our people, and only that regulation which is in the essential interest of public decency and public morals should ever be tolerated, if we are to preserve the handiwork of the fathers, the form they wrought—"a government of laws and not of men."

THE JOURNAL ON "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

(Editorially)

NOW that the last valid objection to the production of "The Birth of a Nation" has been removed, it is in order to remark that the picture drama is remarkably effective, because exceptionally inspiring, from the standpoint of broad and true Americanism. It represents an outlay of a fortune in preparation, but it represents something more important to the public, and that is its careful and coherent attempt to tell the story of the nation's upbuilding in a manner that will appeal most effectively to the average human.

Indeed, on its constructive side, it is easily one of the most remarkable achievements that the people of Boston have ever seen. Unfortunately a serious diversion caused by the opposition of colored leaders in this city to certain phases of "The Birth of a Nation" has obscured temporarily—except for those who witnessed the production with open minds and responsive hearts—the strength, beauty and inspiration of the whole.

"The Birth of a Nation" goes further in genuine constructive work by means of photographic films than any of its predecessors have gone or tried to go. It deserves the unqualified support of those who seek something better and more satisfactory than a few hours of enjoyment and who can appreciate the zeal and energy, the intelligence and patriotism, that are so happily blended in Mr. Griffith's masterpiece. No man or woman can see "The Birth of a Nation" without rejoicing that he or she is part of that nation and a sharer in a glorious heritage.

SAYS SLAVERY TRAFFIC MADE YANKEES RICH

Rev. Walter Calley Claims New Englanders Oppose Other Races.

"[illegible] of the richest families in New England made their money in the slave trade, and if slavery had been a commercial success in New England there would have been slavery in New England today," said the Rev. Walter Calley at the First Baptist Church, Jamaica Plain, last night in his sermon on "The Latest Excitement in Boston."

"The old time New Englander still feels bad that he has had to give up New England to other races," declared Mr. Calley.

"Oh, yes, you still feel bad," said Mr. Calley, as a visible stir took place in the congregation.

"A great many people theoretically love the negro, and that's better than not loving him at all," he continued.

Forget Race Differences

"We forget how far removed the negro is from us racially. In Boston only 2 per cent. of the population, 30,000, are negroes. Think of 10,000,000 in the United States. In his physiology and characteristics the negro is antipodal to the white race. He is fundamentally removed farther from us than the Lapp or other races. A race of 10,000,000 absolutely antipodal does form a problem. And if you were to live South you would say so. In large cities of the South more than 50 per cent. of the people are negroes. Suppose Jamaica Plain had a population 50 per cent. negro and you will have a fair conception of the problem of the South."

Mr. Calley said that friends of the negro believe that the freedom given 50 years ago was harmful and that it was given for political reasons.

"He received all sorts of privileges that he was not prepared for," declared Mr. Calley.

Sneered at in Cambridge

"Why I have been sneered at because I have had a negro as some business for me over in Cambridge and that my room here," asserted Mr. Calley. "And when that negro put up a little home, even though he was a decent man, everybody in the neighborhood put up their houses for sale."

"A negro can't get anything to do in Boston. There used to be negro barbers in Boston, but now there are none. A white man in this town won't work along side of a Negro. He isn't welcome in trade unions. We are willing to criticise injustices when they do not touch us.

"How is it about the Jew?" asked Mr. Calley. "You and I sneer at the Jew. Oh yes, we do. He's a sheeney, and yet as a Christian people we are constantly turning toward a Jew. You can't forget that Christ was a Jew. How mean and contemptible and prejudiced it is to be prejudiced toward a man because he is of another race.

"We shouldn't criticise our brother in the South because he has his problem. Put your self in his place. It is a problem where one half the people are of the negro race and when he is so far removed from the white race.

"The negro race has made wonderful progress in the last 50 years. Fifty years ago 97 per cent of the negro race were illiterate, today only 30 per cent. are illiterate."

Mr. Calley declared that the "Birth of a Nation" as well as other plays ought to be stopped for the bad influence that they exerted on the young boys and girls of the community. He gave it as his belief that a good deal of the trouble of the reconstruction period was a disgrace to the nation, but that those days as well as the differences engendered by the Civil War ought to be forgotten if we are today a united nation.

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

SAYS FILM PLAY IS AID TO ANARCHY

"Birth of a Nation" Scored at Big "Fellowship" Meeting

"The Birth of a Nation" received further condemnation from prominent ministers and laymen, white and colored, at a big "fellowship" meeting held in the First Parish Unitarian Church, Harvard square, Cambridge yesterday afternoon.

Various speakers characterized the photo-play as anarchistic un-American, as a perversion of history and an insult to the colored race. Hundreds of Greater Boston colored people were in the large congregation that filled the auditorium and gallery seats.

DR. ELIOT PROTESTS

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, lent his voice to the protest. It was the first time that the noted educator has publicly expressed his attitude on the much-discussed film. He declared that the people of the North resent the imputation that they are turning from the 14th amendment to the Constitution.

Dr. Samuel M. Crothers, pastor of the First Parish Church, who stated that he has seen the film since it was "expurgated," declared that it teaches a propaganda that is distinctly anarchistic.

Others who participated in the meeting were the Rev. George L. Cady of Dorchester, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church; William H. Lewis, former Assistant United States Attorney-General; Oswald G. Villard of New York, president of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People and a grandson of William Lloyd Garrison; the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, pastor of the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Zion Church, and the Rev. Powhattan Beanall of the Parker Memorial.

Sing the "Battle Hymn"

Miss Maria L. Baldwin, principal of the Agassis School, Cambridge, read a poem on Frederick Douglas written by Paul Lawrence Dunbar, the negro poet, and the choir from the Massachusetts Avenue Baptist Church sang several hymns, including Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

In welcoming the colored people to the meeting, Dr. Crothers explained that he had not called it as an anti-nation meeting, but simply as a gathering of Christian fellowship to show that "the old Boston spirit of friendship and good will toward the colored people is still strong." For the most part it took the form of a protest against the showing of the film.

Cambridge Meeting Protests Photoplay

THE SPEAKERS AND PARTICIPANTS IN THE "FELOWSHIP" MEETING AT THE FIRST PARISH UNITARIAN CHURCH, CAMBRIDGE, YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, WHICH THE PHOTO-PLAY, "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" WAS CONDEMNED.

Left to right are the Rev. George L. Cady, the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, Oswald G. Villard, the Rev. Powhattan Bagnall, the Rev. Samuel M. Crothers, D. D. The inset on the right is Dr. Charles W. Eliot; on the left William H. Lewis, former assistant United States Attorney-General.

Continued From First Page

took: "The Need of a Better Understanding of the Negro Problem in the North."

Resent Attempt to Insult

"Leaving the legal and legislative questions involved to those fitted to deal with them wisely," he said, "I shall speak from the standpoint of religion. In this time, when there are men seemingly intent on stirring up strife by reviving bitter memories, it is well to make it known that the New England of Sumner and of Emerson still lives, and resents any attempt to insult a human being."

Dr. Crothers then asked Dr. Eliot, who was seated in one of the pews, to address the congregation.

Dr. Eliot alluded at once to the protested photo-play, saying:

Grave Historical Error

"I have not seen it, but from what I have heard of it, I object first to its expression of a grave historical error. This nation was not born in the reconstruction period. It was born when the Constitution of the United States was accepted by the 13 colonies.

"I understand from hearsay testimony that this film represents the Ku Klux Klan as doing a good work during the reconstruction period. I lived in Massachusetts during that period and I never heard any citizen of Massachusetts express any favorable opinion of the Ku Klux Klan. On the contrary, it stood as an example of lawlessness, cruelty and outrage and was not thought the better of because the men who took part in its activities always rode in disguise. That is not a method which freemen use.

Same Rights as Others

"It seemed to Massachusetts men of 50 years ago, and it seems to them now, that the Civil war settled something more than the question of the right of the States to secede. Massachusetts men of today feel that the colored people have precisely the same rights as any other citizens to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"This play is intended to create in the minds of the white people of the North a different opinion, its teachings will not be accepted and it will not succeed as a political or historical undertaking.

"We of the North today, as 50 years ago, believe that all Americans are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Therefore, I have seen with the utmost regret that in the Northern States the colored people have not as good a chance for the pursuit of happiness as the colored people in the Southern States, because they are excluded in the North from most of the fundamental trades and from most of the skilled occupations.

Should Not Be Allowed

"I wish the white people of the North would learn something from the white people of the South about giving the colored people the right to pursue happiness. This film, or play, should not be allowed to accomplish what is probably its purpose—to inspire the white people of the North with a different feeling toward the colored people than we held at the close of the Civil war.

"We resent the idea that we are turning, even in our minds, from the 14th amendment," said Dr. Eliot. "We resent the idea that there is any chance of that amendment being reconsidered. In fact, we hold that all men are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," he concluded with emphasis.

Anarchistic Propaganda

"We cannot prevent the presentation of Shylock on the stage, we cannot bar the imitator of the Irishman or Yankee, and so I thought, before I had seen this film, that it would be difficult to draw the line," began Dr. Crothers as Dr. Eliot concluded his remarks.

"But we are up against a kind of education in this film that is not simply against one race, but an education which would make such a government as the one handed down to us by our forefathers impossible," he declared. "That film is not a play, it is a propaganda. It teaches a propaganda that is distinctly anarchistic.

Strikes Every American

"The people who should resent such a perversion of history are not simply the colored people. When they strike them, they strike me and, in one way or another, every American.

"Some tell us that the past is secure. The past is not secure. You can rewrite it so as to take all its glory away and destroy the soul of the nation. The soul of this nation," continued Dr. Crothers, "is based on the spirit of equality—equality of the right of all men to be respected. This spirit is destroyed by teaching a reversion to the brute and brutal passions and saying that only in that way has anything been accomplished.

Problem of American People

"The fundamental thought of American citizenship is that we shall build up a community of brotherly love, that we shall not be taught to hate each other. The teaching of the propaganda of this film is destructive of the American conscience and the American fibre of life.

"There are some things so desperately wicked that they must be stopped. This whole idea of dividing men and women into classes and pointing the finger of scorn and hate at one class is un-American. Every American ought to resent it. Cannot we protect one another from that which strikes all? It is not the problem of the negro, it is the problem of the American people—of whether the white American people are diligent in preserving the rights handed down to them by their forefathers.

Recalls Lincoln's Words

"What I want is a great uprising of the American people just to keep ever in mind the words of Abraham Lincoln, 'with malice toward none, with charity for all.' And when I preach of charity, charity that endureth all things, I sometimes feel that some have endured long enough and that we ought to spell them for a while."

Dr. Cady said: "I feel much more deeply concerned about my own race in this matter. I cannot help feeling that whenever we have degraded or attempted to degrade a people, we have degraded ourselves more. I want to say to my white brethren that you and I are in much more peril than any others when one comes to us who would teach us to hate. In the name of Christianity I protest against this photoplay.

Why Dixon Left Ministry

"The only time I ever felt any charity toward Tom Dixon was when he realized that no man could write such books as 'The Leopard's Spots' and 'The Clansman' and remain in the Christian ministry, Dixon left it.

"I know not how this thing can be stopped, but I do believe that there is law, or that law can be found, by which open insult to any race can be prevented."

Mr. Lewis, who was seated in the congregation, was invited to come forward and "say a word."

"I cannot speak of this subject in a word—at least not in a word that is fit to be said here," he said in response to Dr. Crothers' invitation. "I could do it in a phrase outside," he added, continuing:

Insulted by the Film

"It is doubly regretful that here, in our own Boston, which Abraham Lincoln said had done more than any other city in the Union to bring on the war of emancipation, we should be insulted by that infamous film play now being shown at the Tremont Theatre.

"It is the spirit of Christianity and of democracy to ignore race absolutely. The colored people are not sensitive, but we do draw the line on an attempt to indict a whole people. We stand against the destruction not only of the morals but of the fundamental principles of the American nation.

Furthers Southern Programme

"We believe that this film teaches a propaganda for the purpose of so stirring up the people of the East and the West and the North that they would consent to allowing the Southern programme of disfranchisement, segregation and lynching of the negro, and finally to the repeal of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

"To me, the most objectionable thing in the play is the attempt to justify lynching. Lynching is forbidden by law, and what is forbidden by law is immoral. A Harvard professor once predicted that we should have lynchings on Boston Common. If we submit to teachings of this kind, there is great danger that we shall not only degenerate so far that we shall have lynchings but far worse.

"We have got to work against these pictures, and when the Mayor and the police commissioner and the police court judge say that they are not obscene and immoral, we have got to get the Massachusetts Legislature to tell them what is immoral and obscene and what tends to corrupt the morals of the young."

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE
APRIL 26, 1915

500 IN A ROOM MEANT FOR 200

At Hearing on "Birth of a Nation" Bill.

Opponents Heard, Among Them Eugene Walter, Playwright.

Theatrical Men Had Hard Work Getting in.

Interest in Legislative proceedings to change the law governing public amusements, with especial reference to "The Birth of a Nation," now being exhibited in moving pictures at the Tremont Theater, reached its highest point, numerically at least, this morning at the State House when 500 people, mostly colored, crowded into a hearing room intended to contain about 200, and thronged stairs and corridors at the hearing before the committee on Judiciary on the bill to stop all public amusements "tending to create religious or racial prejudice or tending to to incite riot."

Already the proponents of the measure have ben heard. Today those who are opposed to changes in the present law or who would accept a bill less drastic turned out in large numbers. The colored people were on hand earlier however, so that they got in first. Then the doors were locked and nobody was allowed in unless his argument with the door-keper was ecpecially effective.

Eugene Walter, the well-known playwright and author of "The Easiest Way," which Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald prevented from being shown at the Hollis st Theatre, came over to give the committee the benefit of his ideas on censorship. Mr Walter has no interest in "The Birth of a Nation," but has never forgotten how his play was stopped in Boston. That was why he wished to tal about the amusement laws.

Here are some of the prominent theatrical men who attended and several of whom were unable to gain admission: E. D. Smith, manager of the Majestic, Wilbur and Shubert Theatres; A. L. Wilbur owner of the Wilbur and Majestic Theatres; J. E. Cort, manager of the Cort Theatre! Fred E. Wright, manager of the Plymouth Theatre! A. M. Sheehan, business manager of the Tremont Theatre; Joseph A. Pi Pesa of the Plymouth Theatre, Fred W. Jordan of the Cort Theatre, Albert Gray, William Duggan and James P. Murphy.

Mr Walter, Rev Chauncy Hawkins of Jamaica Plain, Dr Charles Fleischer and Rev Thomas B. Greggory of New York were prominent among those heard. John F. Cusick, the attorney, conducted the hearing for the opposition.

Spectators Admonished.

Senator Norwood, the chairman of the committee, announced that the hearing would be adjourned if the spectators indicated approval or disapproval of the remarks of the speakers, but this admonition did not prevent occasional hisses.

M. Sumner Coggan, the first speaker, who represented John B. Schoeffel, said he hoped the committee would not approve legislation that would confiscate the property of the theatrical promoters and reduce the photoplay to a level that would make it uninteresting. The present agitation is purely a hysterical one, he said, and it is unsafe to base legislation on such a foundation.

He offered a substitute bill to provide that the Mayor should have power to stop a production if any part of it is obscene or immoral, or tends to injure the morals of the community, but also provides for an appeal to the Superior or Supreme Court.

There is also a section appended to the Coggan bill making the act operative Aug 1 of this year. He said in defense of this section that the theatrical year ends on the first of August and in justice to the theatrical men, no radical step should be taken until that time.

Mr Coggan said that the Indians could object to scalping scenes and almost any photoplay could be suppressed if the Sullivan bill or any substitutes offered by the proponents were accepted. He declared in answer to a question that he considered the law applying to the cities outside of Boston to be unfair.

Rev Dr Hawkins Heard.

Rev Dr Chauncey J. Hawkins of Jamaica Plain opposed what he termed to be "Russian censorship." He said that any race or class of people must put up with many things that are unpleasant for the sake of the preservation of the freedom of expression so sacred to the American people. No race should be placed by law above criticism, he said. He declared that he had seen the play and found nothing objectionable in it, even before the "Gus" incident was removed. No race should be so sensitive that it can not stand a discussion of its weakness, he thought.

The next witness was Dr Charles Fleisher. He said that he was asked in the beginning to join the protest against the "Birth of a Nation," but after seeing the play, he refused to do so because he saw nothing objectionable in it.

"I can stand all the hysteria and villification that will come to me for my stand on this matter if this play tends to make the North and the South face the negro problem. I am glad the play is being given," he said.

He said that he felt that the great principle of freedom of speech is being threatened by this agitation. He quoted liberally from Woodrow Wilson's history of the United States to show that the play, while not precisely accurate historically, is generally correct

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 25, 1915

GRIFFITH ASSAILS FILM PLAY BILL

The conflict over the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," was renewed today at a legislative hearing on the bill introduced by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan, which would make it a criminal offence to produce any "show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace."

D. W. Griffith, author and proprietor of the photoplay, issued a statement defending his production and attacking the Sullivan bill. He said:

"The Sullivan bill is astounding! Actually an effort is being made to rush through the General Court, under suspension of the rule, House bill No. 2,077 which would make it a criminal offence to produce 'any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice, or tends to a breach of the public peace.' Not only have the rules been suspended to jam it through, but the second section provides that, immediately and without further notice to any property rights involved, 'this act shall take effect upon its passage.'

"Probably it has never occured to the supporters of this measure that universal dramatic art is practically impossible without the excitation of some degree of race or religious feeling. How unwise to drag race or religion into the realm of censorship! It is unwritten law that neither of these matters belong to legislative regulation, but are reserved within the clause of the Constitution that grants freedom of speech. If the Sullivan bill be enacted, the civic authorities and the courts will find themselves in very deep waters. They will be censoring racial and religious matters that do not possibly concern them.

CITES RECENT PLAYS.

"The Jew that finds himself prejudged in the eyes of the community by 'The Merchant of Venice' or 'The Children of the Ghetto;' the German whose sensibilities are offended by 'The Hypen' or 'Marie-Odile' or 'Inside the Lines' of this season's plays; the Italian stung by 'The Vendetta,' the Irishman who dislikes Bernard Shaw's 'John Bull and His Other Island,' the Yankee disliking 'Way Down East' caricatures, the Russian miffed by 'The Yellow Ticket' and the Oriental hurt by 'The Tyhpoon' or 'Mr. Wu,' will rush into the courts of the Commonwealth for sympathy, vengeance and redress.

"I do not mean that all the representatives of the various American stocks will do this, but the opportunity opened up for petty persecution and spite against the theatrical producers and managers is almost endless.

"On the religious side, the consequences will be more momentous and lamentable. Even the great religious operas will be barred from the Opera House. From the wonderful 'Passion Play' of Oberammergau to the latest drama dealing with the spirit world or some faith cult, not one but is open to objection from its more bitter opponents. One man's orthodoxy is another man's heterodoxy. One man's 'judgment' is another man's 'prejudice.' Why, then, this idle talk of 'religious prejudice?'

OBJECT IS TO DESTROY PLAY.

"The truth is, hardly anyone seems to have considered seriously the far-reaching consequences of this rash project. The clause, tending to 'a breach of the public peace' opens up the way for any disgruntled or venomous adversaries to start a disturbance in a theatre lobby and thereby get a play suppressed. The real purpose of the bill is to destroy one film play, 'The Birth of a Nation.'

"Shall this magnificent Civil War and reconstruction drama be stopped in Boston at the behest of an insignificant minority? Shall Lewis and Trotter and Puller and Wilson tell the legislators of Massachusetts and the people of Boston what to do?

"We respect the colored people of this city and Commonwealth. But in this controversy those who have tried to rush class legislation of the above character, for the arbitrary purpose of suppressing one play, have been most badly advised. No good will ultimately come to the race through an attempted hushing-up of reconstruction memories.

"Special class legislation should not be allowed for one instant in the free State of Massachusetts. The senators and representatives should not make themselves the laughing stock of the country by enacting such a travesty of law and justice."

ELIOT JOINS PROTEST.

The photoplay was attacked at a meeting in the First Parish Unitarian Church in Harvard Square. It was criticized also at a meeting in the Twelfth Baptist Church in Shawmut avenue. In Cambridge Dr. Charles W. Eliot joined the protest. Other speakers were the Rev. George L. Cady, former Assistant United States District Attorney William H. [illegible], the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, the Rev. Powhatan Bagnall and the Rev. Samuel McCord Crothers.

The Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins of the Central Congregational Church in Jamaica Plain defended the production.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

DIXON ASKS FAIR PLAY FOR "BIRTH OF NATION"

Author Declares Proposed Law Would Mean Confiscation of Two-Thirds of Serious Dramas Now Running in Country—Attacks Moorfield Storey.

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

For more than 20 years I have studied the history of the period of Reconstruction. In "The Birth of a Nation" I have given to the world the results of my work in an honest, earnest and dignified presentation of the life of that turbulent era.

The courts of Massachusetts, in the face of the most persistent campaign of slander and personal vilification, have sustained the play squarely on its merits.

The critics who still differ with my views of history and philosophy, unable to answer them, have introduced a bill into the Legislature to silence me by a special statute.

Whatever may be said or thought of my book, "The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," founded on it, there can be but one opinion among thoughtful men and women on the character of such vicious special legislation. It is the violation of every principle of freedom and democracy for which the grand old Commonwealth has stood for 200 years. I cannot believe that the supreme law-making assembly of the State will deliberately deny to a Southern white man freedom of speech on Boston Common merely because a few negro agitators differ from his historical conclusions.

Still more dangerous than any play would be the establishment of such tyranny in censorship of opinion.

"Mean Confiscation"

Such a law would have suppressed "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Such a law established in New England will reduce at one stroke the whole drama to the dead level of negro minstrelsy and musical comedy. No author will dare to write on any great theme in our history or life about which there can be any difference of opinion. Under such a statute any man who differed from him could walk into the theatre, create a disturbance and have the play stopped. Under such a law two-thirds of all the serious drama at present running in America could be instantly confiscated, its authors and promoters beggared.

Whatever a few negro agitators in Boston may think about "The Birth of a Nation," is expresses the passionate faith of the entire white population of the South. If I am wrong, they are wrong. The number of white people in the South who differ from my views of the history of Reconstruction could be housed on a half-acre lot.

Moorfield Storey, president of the negro society leading their fight in Boston, in a lame article attacks the historical accuracy of the play:

"All over the South conditions were substantially the same—the negro everywhere reduced to a condition of slavery—as was abundantly shown by a report made by Carl Schurz, who was sent down by President Johnson to examine and report. This was the state of the South which confronted Congress when, on Dec. 4, 1865, is met for the first time after Mr. Lincoln's assassination. White reconstruction had been tried and had failed disastrously."

"The first act which assured the negroes the right to vote by setting aside the existing State governments and providing that no seceded State should be readmitted to the Union unless its constitution gave the suffrage to white and black alike was not passed till about Feb. 15, 1867. It was not till after May, 1868, that acts were passed admitting the Southern States, and the last of three, Virginia, Mississippi and Texas, were not admitted till 1870. Only after these acts were passed, and after the fundamental conditions which they imposed were complied with, did the governments of the Southern States come under the control of the colored voters. The Ku-Klux-Klan had really run its course before the colored voters exercised any substantial power.

"This simple chronological statement could be much amplified, but it is sufficient to show how absolutely false is the view of history presented by this play."

"Fear to Face History"

The play is a faithful record of the origin of our present united nation through the agony of Civil War and the still greater agony to the South in Reconstruction. The trouble with Mr. Storey and his negro society is they dare not face the truths of history. So they ask the people of Massachusetts to deny me a hearing.

He tells you that Andrew Johnson became President in April, 1865, and that by Dec. 1 white reconstruction had been tried in all the South and proved a failure. The last Southern army did not surrender until May. The army of occupation held the South in a grip of steel from the James to the Rio Grande. The little finger of a Southern white man could not be lifted during these months except by the consent of the military authorities, and yet this historian informs us that the white reconstruction of civil goverlment in the entire South was tried and was a complete failure from May to December, 1865—exactly seven months.

The assertion that the white South, with 1,000,000 federal bayonets at their throats, attempted during these months to pass laws to re-enslave the negro is merely a bald campaign lie of the year 1868.

Besides the federal army to protect the negro, the Freedman's Bureau of blessed memory was always there. This bureau, established by federal power and protected by federal bayonets, had absolute control of the relations of negroes and whites. No contract could be made without the approval of these armed guardians.

Every law passed by a Southern Legislature during this period before negro enfranchisement was done under the direct superintendence and advice of the Freedman's Bureau, and every law relating to the adjustment of the newly emancipated slaves to their new duties was copied from northern States.

"A Campaign Lie"

The assertion that the Freedman's Bureau and the army could not protect the negro from his former master was a malicious lie, which could have been invented only in the heat of a presidential campaign. The laws of vagrancy and apprenticeship were all enacted with the advice and co-operation of the bureau in an attempt to make a lot of joyous negroes go back to work and quit trying to live on the free rations furnished by the United States government.

Mr. Storey consults a very bad memory both for his facts and his principles.

President Johnson, on receiving Carl Schurz's report of the condition of the South—did what? Certainly he did not join with Thaddeus Stevens and his radical associates in their program of placing the White South under negro rule! Thaddeus Stevens tried to remove Johnson from the office of President and set up a dictatorship on the ruins of the Republic because the President stood firmly by Abraham Lincoln's plan of reconstruction and refused to place the South under the rule of a million ignorant negroes who had just emerged from slavery.

Johnson honestly tried to carry out the martyred President's policy. In a letter to Hahn, his reconstruction governor of Louisiana, on negro suffrage Lincoln said: "You are about to have a convention which, among other things, will probably define the elective franchise. I barely suggest for your private consideration whether some of the colored people may not be let in—as, for instance, the very intelligent and especially those who have fought gallantly in our ranks." (See Hay and Nicolay.)

For standing by this principle of the murdered President, Stevens swore to impeach Johnson, remove him from office and hang him from the balcony rail of the White House! Stevens failed to impeach President Johnson by one vote. By that one vote we were saved the shame of a dictatorship under Ben Wade, whom Stevens had selected for the position—although Mr. Wade had the effrontery to vote for himself for that office in the final test on the issue of removing the President.

Hay Approved Book

In my work on the history of Reconstruction I have mastered the contents of more than 4000 volumes forming the sources of the history of that period. The Hon. John Hay, while secretary of state, corrected the proofs of "The Clansman." Mr. Hay gave the book his unqualified indorsement in the State Department at Washington. Walter Hines Page, the publisher of the book, can testify to the truth of my statement.

One date and fact Mr. Storey gets correct. He says that universal negro suffrage was not passed until Feb. 15, 1867. Just so, and Gen. N. B. Forrest organized the Ku Klux Klan into a political power during the summer of 1867 to meet the conditions of social hell into which this measure plunged the South. Up to this time the Ku Klux Klan was merely a college boy's prank which started at Pulaski, Tenn., the year before.

That a condition of social anarchy followed the enactment of this law, enfranchising a million ignorant blacks and disfranchising the men whose fathers created this republic, is amply proven by the sworn testimony in 10 enormous volumes of the Ku Klux Klan Conspiracy, a United States government document, yhich Mr. Storey has evidently never seen.

"Gus" Incident Real

I refer him to the volume entitled "North Carolina" for the sworn record of the incident of "Gus" in "The Birth of a Nation." This crime was typical of thousands. It was this crime which took my father, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, from the pulpit into the ranks of the Klan. It was this crime which led my brother, the Rev. A. C. Dixon, D.D., pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle of London, former pastor of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church of Boston, to join the Klan and ride one of those white-robed horses you see in our play.

My great-grandfather, Lieut. Col. Frederick Hambright, poured out his blood at King's Mountain to create this Republic and gave you the South—the South with her beautiful valleys, her blue mountains and glorious skies. Your fathers fought at Bunker Hill and gave to me rock-ribbed New England, her foaming seas and shining shores. It's mine today as the South is yours. I claim with you the right to free speech on Boston Common.

Edward Sheldon's play, "The Nigger," is a bold argument for the marriage of blacks to whites. This play has just been given in Boston. No white man was silly enough to demand its suppression. This play is peculiarly distasteful to the South, yet it was permitted in every Southern State and no crank attempted to suppress it. It was written in answer to "The Clansman." I scorn the contemptible cowardice which would invoke the law to protect me from its argument.

I modestly suggest to Moorfield Storey that this is a free country and that only a negro or his color-blind associate could be child enough to ask such protection from historical discussion.

The plain truth is that every negro associated with Mr. Storey in the Inter-Marriage Society, which is conducting this persecution, hates "The Birth of a Nation", for one reason only—it opposes the marriage of blacks to whites.

"A Faithful Record"

This play was not written to stir race hatred. It is the faithful record of the life of 50 years ago. It is no reflection on the cultured, decent negro of today. In it are sketched good negroes and bad negroes, good whites and bad whites.

I received the first recognition of my life work in the call extended to me by the Dudley Street Baptist Church in Boston 27 years ago. I got from the people of New England a cordial welcome and early learned to love and admire them.

I refuse to believe that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts at this late hour will pass a special law for the sole purpose of denying to a Southerner freedom of speech in the discussion of our national history. The enactment of such a bill, it seems to me, would be an incredible insult to the 25,000,000 of Southern white people whom I represent, whose cause I am pleading and with whom the people of New England hold the most cordial business and social relations.

THOMAS DIXON.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 26, 1915

ELIOT PROTESTS 'BIRTH OF A NATION'

Resents Alleged Attempt to Inspire Feeling Against Negroes.

"It is deliberate and skilful bit of treachery," was the characterization of Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" at a meeting in the First Parish Church, Cambridge, yesterday afternoon, called in connection with the discussion of the film.

"The deadly affront to the new South and the new North comes in the treatment of the negro," he continued. "Our children are taught that the negro is a brute who must be kept down by sheer terrorism. What is this propaganda? I call it anarchy."

Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, lent his voice to the protest. It was the first time that the noted educator has publicly expressed his attitude on the much-discussed film. He declared that the people of the North resent the imputation that they are turning from the 14th amendment to the Constitution.

"I have not seen the photo-play," he said, "but from what I have heard of it, I object first to its expression of a grave historical error. This nation was not born in the Reconstruction period. It was born when the Constitution of the United States was accepted by the 13 colonies.

"I understand from hearsay testimony that this filum represents the Ku Klux Klan as doing a good work during the reconstruction period. I lived in Massachusetts during that period and I never heard any citizen of Massachusetts express any favorable opinion of the Ku Klux Klan. On the contrary, it stood as an example of lawlessness, cruelty and outrage and was not thought the better of because the me nwho took part in its activities always rode in disguise. That is not a method which free men use.

"I wish the white people of the North would learn something from the white people of the South about giving the colored people the right to pursue happiness. This film, or play, should not be allowed to accomplish what is probably its purpose—to inspire the white people of the North with a different feeling toward the colored people than we held at the close of the Civil War."

Others who participated in the meeting were the Rev. George L. Cady of Dorchester, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church; William H. Lewis, former assistant United States attorney general; Oswald G. Villard of New York, president of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People and a grandson of William Lloyd Garrison; the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain, pastor of the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Zion Church, and the Rev. Powhattan Bagnall of the Parker Memorial.

VELER & EVE. HERALD
oston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

HARGES POLITICS IN RACE FILM FIGHT

harles Fleischer Declares Walsh, McCall, Cushing and Cox Opposing Film for Own Gain in Speech Defending Photoplay at Hearing.

efenders of the photo-play, "The rth of a Nation," were given their in- g before the legislative committee judiciary today at a continued hear- on legislation introduced by oppo- nts of the film in an effort to prohibit production of such plays in the fu- e.

record crowd attended the hearing, hich was held in the largest committee om of the State House. The size of crowd, more than 2000, made necessa- the presence of 18 State House chmen and messengers, who under mand of Sergeant-at-Arms Pedrick, the spectators back until the time the hearing to open had arrived. er every bit of available space in the m had been occupied, with many ding on chairs and on window sills. er State House attaches were re-

(Continued from Page One.)

uired to keep in order some 200 who uld not obtain admission.

Opponents in Majority.

Opponents of the play were in the ma- rity, prepared, through their spokes- an, to offer further evidence and pro- st against the play in rebuttal. The atherings on the whole was quiet and rderly, although now and then there ere scattered expressions of approval r disapproval, in violation of the warn- g issued by Senator Norwood of Ham- ton, Senate chairman of the committee, hat such demonstrations would result in he adjournment of the hearing.

Two of the more prominent of the riends of "The Birth of a Nation" roved to be Charles Fleischer, a former ewish rabbi, and the Rev. Chauncey . Hawkins of Jamaica Plain. Mr. Fleischer declared it was his opinion hat the protests against the play ut- ered by Gov. Walsh, Samuel W. Mc- , Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and Speaker Cox of the House were actuated by olitical motives, although later he said e considered them all "honorable men."

Fleischer also declared that protests made against "The Birth of a Nation" by Moorfield Storey and the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson could be construed as inciting their fellow-citizens "to riot and rebellion" against the play.

The Rev. Mr. Hawkins admitted that in his Sunday sermon yesterday he had declared that "the Negro is one of the greatest menaces in our national life today."

M. Sumner Coggan, attorney for John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, where the film is being shown, filed with the committee a bill to change the method of censorship in Boston. The Coggan bill would vest sole censorship in the mayor, but would give theatres the right of appeal either to the equity division of the superior court or to the supreme court. The Coggan bill does not give the mayor broader powers than the mayor and police commissioner have jointly now of preventing the production of immoral or obscene plays. Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner O'Meara have said they have not the authority to stop "The Birth of a Nation" for these reasons. One provision in the Coggan bill provides that it shall not take effect until Aug. 1 of this year, and Atty. Coggan said that he had put this in because the theatrical season in Boston closes on that date.

Temporary Hysteria

The general argument of advocates of the film play was that the legislation proposed against it and similar productions was temporary hysteria born of agitation; that to pass the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play would be to restrict "freedom of expression" and would virtually prohibit the production of anything objected to.

Atty. Coggan, for instance, declared that the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play, would prevent German lecturers from talking against the Allies. He gave this opinion in reply to a leading question from Representative Drury of Waltham, a member of the committee.

The opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" have proposed legislation to give the mayor sole power of censorship in Boston, but to give him also powers broad enough to prevent the production of plays causing religious or racial strife and to give the state police the power to censor motion pictures proposed for exhibition on weekdays. At present the state police have the censorship of motion pictures for production on Sundays.

The mayors and selectmen, respectively, of cities and towns outside of Boston, can stop the production of plays at their pleasure. In connection with this phase of the law, Atty. Coggan told an interesting story of Mayor Blakely of Malden. The Malden mayor, said Coggan, was going to stop the production there of "Neptune's Daughter," a film starring Annette Kellerman, even though Mrs. Blakely had pronounced the play "all right," but was prevented from doing so by illness. The acting mayor followed the production and Coggan gave this story as an illustration [illegible]

John F. Cusick, attorney for the company producing "The Birth of a Nation," conducted the hearing for the advocates of the film.

It developed at the hearing that the committee on judiciary has witnessed the play since Friday morning.

It was a little after 10:30 this morning when the crowd was admitted and the hearing called to roder by Senator Norwood. The latter had the biggest gavel seen around the State House for some time.

"Easiest Way" Author Present.

Most of the prominent opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" were on hand, while Mayor Curley was represented by the corporation counsel, John A. Sullivan. Eugene Walter, the playwright, and author of "The Easiest Way," which former Mayor Fitzgerald banned from Boston several years ago, came over from New York to speak in a general way against tightening up Boston's censorship.

Atty. John F. Cusick announced he was to conduct the hearing for the advocates of "The Birth of a Nation." He said he would content himself in opening with the statement that "this is a government of laws and not of men."

Cusick then presented Atty. Coogan, who spoke about the immense amount of money invested in "The Birth of a Nation," and then went on to say:

"This legislation is not conceived in a calm and deliberate attempt to regulate, but in the hysteria of a few well meaning, well intentioned members of society directed at a production now going on in this city.

"I am not going into the merits of this production. The committee has seen it and can judge for itself. The production is not on trial here. The only way it could be is to admit that the legislation proposed, which we are objecting to, should be entitled 'A bill to suppress "The Birth of a Nation."'

"It is a peculiarity of human nature that it is easier to get up a protest than a memorial. The highest form of protest is mob violence."

After Coggan had praised the film for what he said was its historical accuracy, he began a discussion of the bill he has filed with the committee.

Argues Right of Appeal.

Coggan said he understood Mayor Curley had told Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and Butler R. Wilson that if he had the power he would drive "The Birth of a Nation" out of the state; that if this was so, it showed that the theatre should have he right of appeal as proposed in his bill.

Representative Sullivan of ward 19, a member of the committee, then asked Coggan how the mayor could stop the film under the Coggan bill, inasmuch as it did not provide for broader powers of censorship than those now existing.

Coggan said: "I have assumed that the mayor has said if he had the sole power he would suppress it."

Senator Norwood then asked Coggan for his opinion as to the advisability of continuing the joint censorship of the mayor and police commissioner, but amending the law so they could suppress anything without giving any reason. Coggan said he would not object to this, if provision were made for appeal. Norwood replied there could be no such provision if the police commissioner and mayor could suppress a play without giving any reason. Coggan's reply to this was a statement that he did not believe they should have such authority; it was too much, he declared.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) MERCURY
APRIL 26, 1915

'BUTTON, BUTTON, WHO HAS THE BUTTON?'

Game Being Played by Politicians in Connection with "The Birth of a Nation"—Expected to Enliven Legislature This Week.

(Special to The Mercury.)

State House, Boston, April 25.—What promised to be a rather quiet week at the state house will be enlivened by the interesting game of "button, button, who has the button?" that is being played by some of our most dignified statesmen in connection with the production of the "Birth of a Nation." It is interesting to see the several interested officials convincing the twenty thousand Negro voters that, while they would be pleased to help them, they have no authority and the man next door is the right fellow to see.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a gigantic photo-play founded on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman." The Negroes and a few northern soldiers are portrayed in highly uncomplimentary lights and the management has avoided as far as possible selling any seats to colored people. Many leaders of the Negroes in Boston became highly indignant and appealed first to Mayor Curley to have the show stopped. The mayor finally said that it was up to the police commissioner and the delegation trailed over to the office of the latter. The police commissioner explained that the law gave authority to the mayor and himself to stop productions that tended to injure the public morals but the law was not broad enough to cover "The Birth of a Nation." Having exhausted the possibilities of relief from city hall, the colored men and women marched to the state house and Governor Walsh hastened thither from New York.

The governor received the delegation most hospitably and made a speech of consolation and good cheer to them, having first invited the newspapermen to step outside. In the end, he regretted that he had no authority to act in the matter and advised them to go to the courts.

They went to the court promptly the next morning. The judge saw the show, heard the evidence, and then ruled that under the present law, the court could not issue a warrant for the arrest of the producers. Then Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston, he who has horned into the limelight before, with such measures as his famous bill to prevent the dancing of the tango, came across with a petition for legislation to enable the show to be stopped. The colored people became enthusiastic over this proposition and the officials breathed easier, for the legislature is a large body and the blame for its action is fairly well distributed. Speaker Channing Cox, of the house was the next champion of the cause. In an interview that was quite well circulated about, he stated that he thought something ought to be done to stop the show, and would do whatever he could to help it along.

On the day that the Sullivan petition was to be heard before the committee on rules, the Negroes flocked to the governor's office for advice. Governor Walsh was very busy, but the executive council was meeting, and someone suggested that they see Lieutenant-Governor Cushing. He came forthwith, and announced that he would be glad to help them draft a proper bill, and later he appeared before the committee on rules to urge the admission of the petition. A large majority of the witnesses before this committee prefaced their remarks by a statement that they had not seen the show, but the committee voted to admit the petition, and on the following day, the committee on judiciary held a hearing on it.

Samuel W. McCall, who happened to be out of the state, was advised that Mr. Cushing was working for the eradication of race prejudice and, perhaps to indicate that although they may possibly be contestants for the Republican nomination next fall, they are in perfect harmony on the great questions of the hour, sent in a letter which was read before the committee in the hearing of a large delegation of the colored visitors. Eugene N. Foss, who intimates that he will run for governor on the Prohibition ticket, has been quite busy of late, and up to date, has neglected to fall in line.

The petition is still before the committee on judiciary and the measure will reach the house and senate, probably within a few days. One possible solution that will satisfy everybody is an amendment to the bill that may be offered by one of the more optimistic members of the house. The amendment is to provide that villians in any theatrical productions must be made up to represent white native born Americans.

So far, the political honors in connection with this agitation have been divided about fifty-fifty. The only feature that is viewed with alarm by the large body of the public is the possibility taht the legislature, in its zeal to please leaders of the colored race, may place upon the statute books a law that will leave every theatrical enterprise helpless prey for municipal authorities, some of which are often thought by outsiders to be unscrupulous.

The Boston & Maine reorganization bill has at last been reported by the committee on railroads and is up for a third reading in the senate. A couple of rather lengthy amendments are to be moved today but the proponents expect that there will be enough left of the original by the time the legislature gets through with it to enable the struggling Boston & Maine to pull through.

Tomorrow, the committee on railroads will hear the New Haven validation bill and, as is usual when railroad legislation is being considered, a hot time is expected.

Newspaper Cutting Bureau of the World MERCURY
ress NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
APR 26 1915

While the protest of the race that is affronted by the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," is sincere beyond question, it is suspected that more or less of it has been invited and cultivated for advertising purposes. This is more readily believed when we recall the incidents attending the production of the play "The Clansman," founded upon Dixon's novel—the story which is the basis of the film which is arousing so much comment and passion. When "The Clansman" was produced around the country, the advance agents made a business of inspiring a controversy and some degree of protest against the presentation of the play in cities where it was booked. Before the film was produced there was speculation upon the attitude the colored race would take and trouble seemed to be invited. Not only has the picture shown been well advertised, but a number of politicians have made capital out of the affair. There has been a disposition to prevent any official from securing a monopoly of the colored vote as a result of official action and sympathy and a number of candidates will be setting up claims this fall to having been the especial champion of the colored race. This, we repeat, is not a reflection upon the good faith of those who are denouncing the reflection they feel is put upon their people.

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R.I.
APR 26 1915

A LAW FOR EVERYTHING.

Representative Sullivan's plan to amend the Massachusetts law concerning public entertainment so as to penalize those responsible for "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice or tends to a breach of the public peace" is, of course, merely to resort once more to the overworked fallacy that every abuse must have its legal punishment. The "Birth of a Nation" film in its unexpurgated state was an offense and it was rendered possible because the censorship law curtailed the powers of the Mayor of Boston. It should be within the local executive's discretion to close a show which plainly to his mind traverses the proprieties; fallible human nature must be depended upon in the last resort and experience shows that it is ordinarily safe to do so. The amendment, however, proposes to leave the decision practically open to any few disgruntled, or trouble-making ones who are capable of creating a loud noise, and it is aptly pointed out that almost any crochet of a handful of individuals would be able to break up a public affair.

This is the tendency of the moral-by-law advocates. They begin with the error that statutes can govern human nature perfectly. They do not realize that law is to prevent consequences rather than acts. From this it follows that each offense, large or small, should have its law and punishment, and a certain American element is continually seeking provocation for new statutes regulating private conduct. It cannot be made to see that law is for extreme cases and that the million or so irritations growing out of personal shortcomings must be controlled by public sentiment, or we shall have such a tyranny of legislation as shall blot out every vestige and comfort of liberty. The old, careless remark, "There ought to be a law against that," has grown into a passion for regulating the smallest human affairs through statutory enactment. Legislators have lent themselves too often to this folly, and in those sections where paternalism is oldest, it has begun to weary its former votaries and the reverse process has commenced.

CURRIE CUSHING AND WALSH FIGHTING RACE FILM FOR "POLITICS"

[illegible] committee" of 100 persons, mostly colored, was at the State House today.

At a monster mass protest meeting, last night, in the Columbus A. M. E. Zion Church, at Columbus avenue and Northampton street, following bitter denunciation of Mayor Curley, and of the protested photoplay, the vigilance committee was named, with full power to use whatever steps it deems necessary at today's hearing in the State House to bring about the desired results. Many of those present at the meeting last night were women, who voiced their disapproval of "The Birth of a Nation" in no uncertain terms. Dr. Alice W. McKane was especially bitter in her denunciation.

Women Demand Action.

"We want 'The Birth of a Nation' removed from the city of Boston and we women of Boston propose to see that it goes. If we can't get rid of it by fair means it will be by foul means," she said. "If there are men here afraid to do this, there are women here who are not afraid. The play would not be tolerated if it effected any other race or people. If discrimination is made because we are black, soon there will be religious and racial discriminations and that would be dangerous. The author of the count was a very weak man. They think us a poor helpless set of black people. We are not ignorant, and if the people of Boston will have 'The Birth of a Nation' they will have it in full."

Mayor Curley was bitterly censured for his failure to prohibit the showing of the protested photo-play in the Tremont Theatre.

The mayor was stigmatized as "the most hypocritical mayor that the city of Boston has ever had"; it was asserted that to hold good now the injunction that has been extended to his power to speak at a meeting of the church in May would be to "desecrate the platform"; the mayor was threatened with the recall; his name was missed, and, last but not least, the name of John F. Fitzgerald was cheered to the echo when his action in forbidding the continued production of "The Clansman" was contrasted with Mayor Curley's failure to order "The Birth of a Nation" to quit business in Boston.

The meeting was called by Mrs. Olivia Ward Bush Banks and its announced purpose was to form "a protecting league of all colored women of Greater Boston for the maintenance and protection of their civil rights." Such an organization was formed, with Mrs. Banks as its president and Mrs. Minnie Wright as chairman of the "vigilance committee of 50 women."

Mrs. Wright presided at the meeting and feeling ran high. The name of Curley was always the signal for hisses and some of the more excitable women added to the demonstration by shouting out many uncomplimentary things about Boston's chief executive.

[illegible] declared that protests against "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] would be construed as [illegible] "The Clansman" [illegible] "in vital and [illegible]" against the play.

The Rev. Mr. Hamlin admitted that [illegible] persons yesterday he had declared that "the Negro is one of the greatest menaces to our national life today."

Mr. Sherman Cuppett, attorney for John [illegible], manager of the Tremont [illegible] where the film is being shown, [illegible] the committee a bill to change [illegible] of censorship in Boston. [illegible] Cuppett would not ask censorship, but would give Boston the right of appeal either to the county division of the superior court or to the supreme court. The Cuppett bill would also give the mayor broader powers [illegible] the mayor and police commissioner more positive aim of preventing the production of immoral or obscene plays.

Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner Stephen Jubb said they have not the authority to stop "The Birth of a Nation" for three months. One provision in the Cuppett bill provides that it should not take effect until Aug. 1 of this year, and Atty. Cuppett said that he drew up this bill because the theatrical season in Boston closes on that date.

Temporary Hysteria

The general argument of advocates of the film play was that the legislation proposed against it and similar productions was temporary hysteria born of agitation; that to pass the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play would be to restrict "freedom of expression" and would virtually prohibit the production of anything objected to.

John Cuppett, for instance, declared that the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play, would prevent Governor Dunn from taking action in the matter. He gave this opinion in reply to a pending question from Representative Lenny of Waltham, a member of the committee.

The opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" have proposed legislation to give the mayor more power of censorship in theaters, but to give him also power enough to prevent the production of plays dealing religious or social strife and to give the state police the power to enforce similar provisions proposed for extension on Sundays. At present the state police have the censorship of moving pictures for production on Sundays.

[illegible] stop the production of plays of [illegible] tendency. In connection with the meeting of the day, John Cuppett told an [illegible] story of Mayor Blakely of [illegible]. The Mayor's simple, and [illegible] was quoted to stop the production [illegible] "Lorimer's Daughter," a film starring Annette Kellerman, also [illegible] Mayor Blakely had pronounced the play "very clean," and had threatened [illegible] to see to it himself. The acting mayor allowed the production of the film. Cuppett [illegible] this story when asked to give [illegible] explanation to support his assertion [illegible] to give any man the right to stop the production of a play [illegible] "The theatres in cities and [illegible] of Boston have to submit [illegible] of immoral or obscene [illegible] for the consideration of the municipal [illegible] Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner Stephen Jubb said they have not the authority to stop "The Birth of a Nation" for three months. One provision in the Cuppett bill provides that it should not take effect until Aug. 1 of this year, and John Cuppett said that he drew up this bill because the theatrical season in Boston closes on that date.

Temporary Hysteria

The general argument of advocates of the film play was that the legislation proposed against it and similar productions was temporary hysteria born of agitation; that to pass the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play would be to restrict "freedom of expression" and would virtually prohibit the production of anything objected to.

John Cuppett, for instance, declared that the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play, would prevent Governor Dunn from taking action in the matter. He gave this opinion in reply to a pending question from Representative Lenny of Waltham, a member of the committee.

The opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" have proposed legislation to give the mayor more power of censorship in theaters, but to give him also power enough to prevent the production of plays dealing religious or social strife and to give the state police the power to enforce similar provisions proposed for extension on Sundays. At present the state police have the censorship of moving pictures for production on Sundays.

[illegible] stop the production of plays of [illegible] tendency. In connection with the meeting of the day, John Cuppett told an [illegible] story of Mayor Blakely of [illegible]. The Mayor's simple, and [illegible] was quoted to stop the production [illegible] "Lorimer's Daughter," a film starring Annette Kellerman, also [illegible] Mayor Blakely had pronounced the play "very clean," and had threatened [illegible] to see to it himself. The acting mayor allowed the production of the film. Cuppett [illegible] this story when asked to give [illegible] explanation to support his assertion [illegible] to give any man the right to stop the production of a play [illegible] "The theatres in cities and [illegible] of Boston have to submit [illegible] of immoral or obscene [illegible] for the consideration of the municipal [illegible]

[illegible] for the production of "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] waiting for the [illegible]

[illegible] that the [illegible] Klansmen [illegible]

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

MINISTERS VOTE TO PUSH FIGHT ON RACE FILM

At both the Congregational and Baptist ministers' meetings today steps were taken in continued opposition to the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," with long-drawn debates at each of the sessions. Both bodies voted to send committees to act with committees from other denominations for the framing of a joint resolution condemning the photo-play, and the Baptist ministers, in Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple, passed an individual resolution in which the play was condemned as "unhistoric" and "demoralizing."

Several speakers at each of the meetings opposed the action on the ground that it was opening up an unlimited field that would end up with "encroachments on liberty."

A sharp attack was made upon the Episcopal clergy for their failure to pass the resolutions for prohibition which were introduced at their convention last week, at the Congregational ministers' meeting by Rev. Israel Ainsworth of Revere, who said, in a sarcastic vein, that they "should be thanked for the further expression of their hypocritical attitude." A resolution introduced by the Rev. Ainsworth was not recognized by the chair.

Attacks upon editorials in the Boston Herald, the Boston Transcript and Boston Journal regarding "The Birth of a Nation" were voiced. The Rev. William W. Jordan of Clinton saw in them a "campaign against the bill in the legislature." The Rev. Ansel Johnson of Everett said the state was "paying a pretty penny to keep a bunch up on Beacon Hill and why not let them take care of the matter."

"Sensationalism in the Pulpit," was the subject on which the Rev. John G. Taylor of Arlington, the Rev. Arthur T. Kempton of Cambridge and the Rev. William McNair of Cambridge, spoke. Mr. Taylor said in part: "Professional evangelists would be without a job but for their sensationalism. We must put up with it as we would with other shows.

"Extravagant statements that amount to untruths, vulgar language and slang, language of the baseball team, the saloon and the brothel is not necessary in the preaching of religion. It is not necessary in order to be understood by the average man or woman or even the men and women of the street.'"

GLOUCESTER (Mass.) TIMES
APRIL 28, 1915

WHO IS SUFFICIENT?

There seems to be something like general agreement that there should be some kind of censorship of moving pictures in this state. As to just what should be censored, there is even now violent differences of opinion, and in the days to come might possibly be more still. For instance, the films showing "The Birth of the Nation" have their ardent defenders even as they have their warm opponents. Just what principle should be employed in censoring films of this character is debatable.

The Sullivan bill which would forbid "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice," does not seem very good. For such prejudices are excited in very different degree in different people, and such a law might forbid the production of historical plays which are really very desirable. There are some rights which belong to people as a whole which must be regarded when anything like a censorship is proposed.

But even if the principle is agreed upon, there comes the very critical question as to who shall be the censors. The members of the State Board of Labor and Industries are suggested as censors, although it is difficult to see why, by virtue of their position, they should have any particular qualifications for this task. But people differ very much. And even those who intend to be perfectly fair are influenced by suggestions and prejudices of which they are hardly aware themselves. To give fallible men such arbitrary power over what people shall see in pictures or on the stage is to surrender to a few rights which are commonly thought of as belonging to the many. This question of the men who shall make up such a board is therefore exceedingly important. The whole success or failure of a system of censorship indeed depends upon it.

We have a way of trying to regulate everything by law But there are decided objections to this way. And there are even greater objections to surrendering our rights into the hands of a few men.

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 28, 1915

FOUND FAULT WITH "UNCLE TOM"

Ex-Gov. Patterson Says It Ranks With "Birth of a Nation" in Injustice.

Ex-Gov. Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee, who spoke here Friday evening, attacked the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at yesterday's big prohibition rally, held in the First Universalist church, Everett. He also criticized "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Clansman," and said all three are doing a great injustice to the negro race.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN 12[illegible]

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" SHOWING LILLIAN GISH AS ELSIE STONEMAN AND PAUL [illegible] AS THE LOVE-SICK SENTINEL AT THE TRENCH

VENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 26 1915

JAMAICA PLAIN MINISTER HISSED FOR REMARKS AT BIRTH OF NATION HEARING

REV. CHAUNCEY J. HAWKINS.

Minister Hissed by MovieCrowd

For Championing Birth of Nation

OVER 2000 AT STATE HOUSE HEARING

Ex-Rabbi Fleischer Scores Prominent Men Who Opposed Film

Over 2000 persons, negroes predominating, attempted to crowd into the largest committee room in the State House this morning to hear the opposition to the Sullivan bill aimed at the production of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," which came from the theatrical interests and many disinterested persons.

The doors were kept closed to 10:30 and then suddenly opened, with the result that there was a tremendous jam, which the messengers on duty were barely able to control. The crowd was extremely orderly except for one occasion, when they hissed the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church in Jamaica Plain for his remarks.

An attack by ex-Rabbi Charles Fleischer on Gov. Walsh, ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall, Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, Channing Cox, Moorfield Storey and the Rev. Herbert Johnson, for championing the case of the negro caused a slight flurry.

Fleischer termed their remarks at the previous hearing a beautiful and wonderful example of graded hysteria.

Gov. Walsh he especially condemned, because he had told his fellow Catholics that he would permit nothing while Governor of the State that would tend to arouse race or religious prejudice. Speaker Cox he ridiculed for saying, "We Republicans will see that this is not permitted."

John F. Cusick conducted the hearing for the opposition and introduced M. Sumner Coggan as representing John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre where the play the Birth of a Nation is being shown.

Coggan submitted a substitute bill for the Sullivan petition which would provide an appeal from the decision of the Mayor to the Supreme Court or the Superior Court sitting in equity.

The Mayor was to have sole authority to suspend a license of a theatre where a play is running that is in his opinion "immoral, obscene or tending to injure public morals," the exact wording in the present statute.

Pending a court decision, however, the theatre has the right to obtain an order vacating the suspension of the license or any other interlocutory decree pending.

Aimed Not at General Movies But at "Birth of Nation"

Coggan declared that the present request for legislation was aimed at the "Birth of a Nation" solely, was not a deliberate attempt to regulate performances. The production itself was not on trial he asserted but the type of legislation. The only way such a bill as the Sullivan bill should be brought in is an act entitled to suppress "The Birth of a Nation."

He called attention to the fact that it was easy to incite a protest and that the highest protest is mob violence. One man can incite a mob, he said, if you

Fitzgerald Returns Attack

Ex-Mayor Scores Curley

Return accusations of secret business alliances which involve the Mayor's office directly, hints at dishonorable connections and charges of neglect of duty and too much talk as expressed in ex-Mayor Fitzgerald's response to Mayor Curley's accusations that Fitzgerald is behind the recall movement, and also the author of numerous other charges.

The matter was brought to a head this morning when an interview with Mayor Curley was published in which the present chief executive stated that personal spite was behind the recall movement, and that Postmaster Murray had been formally chosen as ex-Mayor Fitzgerald's political [illegible]

In addition, Fitzgerald charges that Mayor Curley is neglecting golden opportunities to boom Boston this summer, and that he is talking a lot of "perfect nonsense" instead of acting.

In his statement ex-Mayor Fitzgerald says:

Wants Mayor to Get Busy and Stop Talk

"The Mayor's talk about Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Murray, as far as it relates to me, is perfect nonsense. I say 'stop talking, Mr. Mayor, and go to work on those things you were elected to undertake. Boston's streets and parkways are disgraceful. The summer season is near and because of the war New England should be the Mecca of thousands of tourists who have never seen this wonderful city. Prepare it as its history and accomplishments deserve. Give up those secret business partnerships which involve the honor of the Mayor's office, and if you do I will be your strongest supporter.'"

(Continued on Page Two)

ROURKE QUITS AS PUBLIC WORKS HEAD ON FRIDAY; MURPHY MAY SUCCEED

LOUIS E. ROURKE

It is practically assured that Commissioner of Public Works Louis E. Rourke, the most highly paid department head in the [illegible] [illegible] strengthened by it. If a race is to be prepared from protected from criticism it will never grow up.

The negroes, he said, have made splendid progress in the last 50 years, but the large majority of them are still children. "And this statement is proven by their actions in Boston," he added. "This brought a hiss from the negroes. "I know that is not pleasant," said Dr. Fleischer, "but it is true."

Rev. Thomas R. Gregory of New York said that everything in the "Birth of a Nation" was true. He said he had seen the incidents and know they were true. He declared the great trouble was that it was impossible to depict all of the unspeakable horror of the 19 years called the reconstruction period. He argued against eliminating even one feature of the film.

When asked by Rep. Kennard if he believed in opening up the scars caused by the Civil War Rev. Dr. Gregory replied that those things could never happen

For Want of Dope

Deprived of their supply of narcotics by the recent federal law, a rapidly increasing number of drug users in and about Boston are being driven insane by their craving for stimulant. The situation is less marked in Boston hospitals but at the state hospitals the number of patients is increasing every day.

The only relief to be obtained in Boston is by applying to the out-patient departments of some of the hospitals, but this relief is only partial and temporary. In

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 30, 1915

SCHOEFFEL A WITNESS

Testimony Given on "Birth of Nation" Disturbance

Lobby Was Filled with Great, Noisy Gathering

Trotter and Puller Asking for "Rights"

Sale of Tickets Was Promptly Shut Off

John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, and Henry L. McMahon, manager and press representative of Company B, "Birth of a Nation," were witnesses for the Government today in the cases of William Monroe Trotter and Rev. Aaron Puller, charged with disturbance and inciting a riot at the theatre, the night of April 17.

Manager Schoeffel got to the theatre on the night of the disturbance at 6.45. He looked over the ticket-rack and saw that the house was practically sold out. Then he went to the lobby, which was filled with negroes and white people. Many people were talking loudly "clamoring" for tickets. He saw Trotter at the end of the rail near the box office, and the latter, he said, was exclaiming that he wanted to buy a ticket and that he had a right to buy a ticket. He saw Rev. Mr. Puller in the middle of the lobby and heard him say something about "rights." As Mr. Schoeffel was standing at the end of the lobby near the box office, he saw what proved to be a pepper-box, containing pepper, sail through the air. He picked it up and offered it in evidence. He said that it came from Mr. Puller's direction, but he did not mean to intimate that Mr. Puller threw it. The crowd in the lobby had grown so dense after seven o'clock that Mr. Schoeffel asked Sergeant King to clear it, that people who had ordered tickets in advance might have a chance to get to the box office.

The crowd protested, declared the witness, and kept exclaiming: "We want to buy tickets; we want our rights." At 7.20, he ordered his ticket-seller, Mr. Sheehan, not to sell any more seats for that performance.

"Trotter and others told me," said Mr. Schoeffel, "that if we hadn't any seats left to hang out a sign, but we hadn't any sign —S. R. O.—or any other kind at the theatre; we never have had such a sign there in twenty-six years, and we told the people so."

Mr. McMahon got to the theatre on the day of the disturbance at 5.30 in the afternoon. After a conference with Superintendent Crowley, Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Schoeffel, he took a nap. He was back at the theatre at 7.30, and elbowed his way in through the lobby, where he said the negroes were "hogging" the space. The term "hogging" was not allowed by Judge Brackett. The crowd, according to the witness, was making a "medium loud" and confused noise. It was a swaying crowd, he said. He had to push somewhat to get through the lobby, but was strong and rather enjoyed it. He believed that seven-eighths of the people in the lobby were negroes. Mr. McMahon, supplementing Mr. Schoeffel's instructions, "ordered the sale of all tickets to all persons for all performances stopped." He then went to the picture booth and placed men to protect it. Returning to the lobby, he heard two men speaking to the crowd. One of the men was Trotter, but the witness couldn't identify Mr. Puller.

Judge Brackett asked Mr. McMahon not to use too many descriptive words, and, when the witness replied that that was his habit as a newspaper man, the Court said: "It's all right for newspapermen on most occasions, but great numbers of adjectives are not allowed in evidence."

Mr. McMahon heard Trotter exclaim: "I dare any policeman to knock me on the jaw." He was sure of Trotter's words, he said, and would not be shaken in cross examination.

A. L. Gray, an employee of the film company, said that on the night of the disturbance he rang up the curtain at about 8.15. Three or four nights before, he had seen Trotter in the theatre "taking notes." On the evening of Saturday, April 17, he saw Trotter near the box office and heard him ask for tickets. He heard Mr. Sheehan reply that there were no tickets for sale, and heard Trotter say in return that there were tickets for sale. He saw Mr. Puller in the middle of the lobby.

Albert W. Scott, ticket-taker, was at the theatre, ready for duty, before seven o'clock on the night of April 17. He saw a crowd in the lobby pushing about. Somewhat later, he notified a number of policemen, who were in the theatre, and they came out and helped Sergeant King clear the lobby. Trotter, he said, was near the box office, talking loudly to Sergeant King. Different persons in the crowd were shouting "Hang out your sign" and "Stand for your rights." He didn't hear Mr. Puller say anything about tickets.

William H. Carnes, a special officer attached to the theatre, testified that he helped to clear the lobby. Trotter, he said, advised the people not to go, saying: "The police have no right to put you out." Puller, according to the witness, exclaimed: "We'll take the law in our own hands," and then Sergeant King arrested him. Although it appeared to the witness that Trotter had gone out when the lobby was cleared, he was soon back at the box office. Sergeant King approached Trotter and told him to leave; and Trotter, so Carnes said, replied to the sergeant: "We're going in to stop the show." Trotter's arrest followed.

The cases of Trotter and [illegible] gun late yesterday afternoon, and [illegible] witness for the Government to [illegible] Sergeant King of the Lagrange-street station. King said that the defendants were in the lobby of the theatre, and that they not only would not leave when requested to do so, but told other negroes to hold their ground. They said that they were waiting to buy tickets. Trotter and Puller were arrested on the charge of disturbance, and next day, the sergeant said, the further charge of inciting a riot was preferred against them.

Other defendants involved in the disturbance at the theatre were fined by Judge Brackett as follows: Mrs. Clara Fosky, charged with assaulting an officer, $15; Mrs. Eugenia Foster, $5 on the charge of attempting to rescue a prisoner and $1 for alleged assault, and Stephen Massey, $5 on the charge of attempted rescue. James T. Bivens was found not guilty. Edgar Benjamin, counsel for the defendants, entered an appeal, and the defendants were ordered to recognize in $100 each.

At a mass meeting of negroes held at the Tweifth Baptist Church in Roxbury last night it was voted to urge the Legislature not to attend a private exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation" which has been arranged for them next Monday.

The management of the film play denies that it has been refused permission to show in Rhode Island and Ohio, and declares that the play has not been offered in either of these States.

"California, Massachusetts and Illinois are the only States where arrangements have so far been entered into to produce it," says the management, "and it has passed the censorship in each of those States and likewise in Pennsylvania. This statement is based on accurate information which we have just obtained from our New York headquarters."

Mass.
AY 2

Newspaper Cutting Bureau in the World
COURIER
om
Address LOWELL, MASS
ate APR 27 191

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION TO MASS. BAR

Senate Passes Bill Reducing Demands to Two Years Attendance in High School, Day or Night.

MEASURE NOW GOES TO GOVERNOR

Enormous Crowd of Negroes and Others Pack Big Committee Room at State House for Hearing on Suppression of "Birth of a Nation."

Boston, April 26.—Educational requirements for admission to the bar examinations in this state are reduced to two years attendance in high school, day or night, in a bill passed by the Senate today. The measure has been approved by the House. Graduation from a day high school is required at present.

Firemen's Bill Passed.

By a rising vote of 32 to 40 the House this afternoon passed to be engrossed the so-called compromise bill changing the law as to licensing engineers and firemen.

Without debate the House ordered Mayor Curley's bread bill to a third reading.

Mr. Sawyer of Ware offered an order intended to benefit farmers who produce milk for a living. The order directs the attorney general to give his opinion as to whether it would be constitutional for the General Court to enact a law compelling milk contractors to pay the farmers at regular and stated times and to file a fund in security therefor.

Mr. Burr of Boston opposed an amendment to the constitution empowering the General Court to authorize the taking of land to relieve congestion of population and to provide homes for citizens, urging that the logical result of the amendment must be that future legislatures will have power to take the land of any citizen and give it to another. By a vote of 193 to 14 the amendment was agreed to.

The bill relative to the sale and administration of natural herbs, twice enhanced by the House despite adverse committee reports, was rejected on a final call vote, 98 to 107.

Liquor Bill Recalled.

In the Senate it was voted to recall from the governor a bill aimed to prohibit the transportation of liquor in no-license cities and to towns by liquor dealers. It is understood that the governor desires to have an opinion from the attorney geenral as to whether the bill as it is drawn prevents the transportation of liquor from one license town through a no-license town to another license town. If it does he wants to have the bill amended. Senator Farnsworth moved suspension of the rule in order that there might be reconsideration of the enactment of the bill. Senator McLane of Fall River objected and therefore no suspension of the rule could be had to bring the bill again before the Senate.

"Birth of a Nation."

An enormous crowd of Negroes and a few whites, packed to overflowing the largest committee room in the State House, to hear the opposition to legislaion aimed at the suppression of the "Birth of a Nation." Dr. Charles Fleisher, Rev. Dr. Chauncey J. Hawkins, M. Sumner Coggan and others spoke against the passage of legislation under the Sullivan petition that would leave in the hands of any one man the power to suppress any theatrical production.

An hour before the doors were opened, several hundred people, mostly Negroes, crowded around the entrances to the committee room and when the doors were finally opened it took strenuous work. There are accommodations here for over 100 young men. Preference is given to young men of moderate means, and to those who desire to cooperate in the association activities.

The financial statement for the year [illegible]

WINNOW CROP OF "RUSH ORDER" CENSOR BILLS

From AMERICAN
Address Boston, Mass.
Date APR 30 1915

CENSOR BILL CROP.

Sullivan bill, to suppress all public entertainments that tend to incite racial or religious prejudice.

Wilson bill seeks same end under more subtle verbiage.

Hallowell bill wouldcreate one-man censorship monopoly.

Hallowell-Wilson bill would make chief of State police moral dictator of all public shows.

Coggan bill would protect motion picture producers against decisions by Mayor or Police Commissioner and give them right to appeal to courts.

Carstens bill would compel motion picture owners to pay tax of at least $1 for every film brought into Massachusetts.

They are still coming, although the legislative Committee on Judiciary will today take final action, in executive session, on the censorship bills hatched by the agitation over "The Birth of a Nation."

The other day the Rev. Dr. Thomas B. Gregory came over from New York to make a speech against the drastic measure offered by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester to prohibit all public entertainments tending "to incite racial or religious prejudice."

Dr. Gregory is a historian and author. He lived through the reconstruction period in the South. He was an eye-witness to events. He claimed "The Birth of a Nation" accurately portrays history. But his most striking allusion to the Sullivan bill was:

"It's like using the tremendous heat of Vesuvius to cook an egg."

This was a deep remark. It was a sermon in a dozen words. It summed up the dangers of the whole agitation. Dr. Gregory meant that if the Legislature of Massachusetts was short-sighted enough to adopt any such vicious measure to alleviate a complained of condition, it would be in peril of loosing the withering flame of race and religious hatred that has been so admirably controlled by the founders of the country's laws; the very thing it aimed to avoid.

He meant what editorial writers have emphasized, that in the feeble effort to heal a specific and exaggerated case the law-makers of the Bay State would find themselves as helpless to check the disturbing elements as they would to attempt to quench the fires of the crater named.

SEE COMPLICATIONS.

The menace of the Sullivan bill has suddenly become as apparent as the swirl of a cyclone. The flaws in the measure have stirred a tempest of protest. Press and public are aroused. It would appear that the Sullivan measure was doomed from its inception. It has served as a boomerang. Its fangs have been bared and plucked.

The alacrity with which champions of the Sullivan bill have transferred their support to supplemental bills, shows what little confidence they had in that measure. But in their retreat to the sorry shelter of substitutes they are still exposed to the righteous wrath of an indignant community. Most of the amendments are as hazardous and as wide of the mark.

Through the columns of the leading newspapers, and by the aid of vigorous editorials, the public has been warned of the danger lurking in the proposed legislation. They have been shown what little provision such a bill as that offered by Mr. Sullivan made for the future. They have been made to see what grave complications could develop. They realize that it was a blow at free speech and free thought and at a free press.

Such a law would at once become a seething cauldron of race differences and religious bitterness and complaints. There is no seeing through the poisonous vapors how far-reaching would be its effect on peace and individual rights. The Sullivan measure, according to public spirited men and theatrical interests and many legislators, struck at the constitutional privileges of the community and the individual.

It is now up to the Judiciary Committee, made up of William W. Kennard of Somerville, George P. Drury of Waltham, Essex S. Abbott of Haverhill, Joseph L. Barry of Lynn, Edwin K. Bowser of Wakefield, Andrew A. Cacassa of Revere, Arthur B. Burr of Boston, Philip H. Ball of Deerfield, Robert Robinson of Boston, John F. Doherty of Fall River and W. H. Sullivan of Boston.

COGGAN WOULD AMEND.

The bills listed above will be passed upon today behind closed doors by the Judiciary Committee, made up of lawyers. The outcome will not be announced, in all events, until the committee has viewed the historic photo production that started the fuss.

The Tremont Theatre management issued invitations to the members of the Legislature yesterday to attend a special production of "The Birth of a Nation" at 10:30 Monday morning. The fate of the Sullivan and allied measures will probably not be known until after that official view.

It is freely predicted at the State House that "Sully's pet bill hasn't got a look-in," and like defeat is looked for in the case of other censorship bills.

But the Coggan measure, which aims at more liberal legislation for motion picture producers, has a powerful backing and a hopeful outlook. This measure was offered by M. Sumner Coggan, a young attorney who represents the motion picture interests in Boston. It would amend at once section 2 of chapter 494 of the acts of 1908 so that it would read:

If at any time under a license granted hereunder there shall be given a theatrical exhibition, public show, public amusement or exhibition, any part of which in the opinion of the Mayor is obscene or immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community and is not eliminated at the request of the Mayor, then he may suspend the license for such particular production by delivering written notice of such suspension to the owner or manager of such production or to the licensees.

A copy of the notice of suspension shall be filed at the office of the city clerk on the next secular day following such suspension and shall be a public record within the meaning of chapter 35 of the Revised Laws and acts in amendment thereof and in addition thereto. From such order of suspension by the Mayor the licensee shall have the right to appeal to a justice of the Supreme Judicial Court or of the Superior Court sitting in equity, who shall review the facts and the law applicable thereto and may, on motion, pending a hearing on the merits, vacate the order of suspension or make any other interlocutory order which may to the court seem proper.

ASK APPEAL RIGHT.

Mr. Coggan said yesterday:

"In presenting this bill I represent the producers of motion pictures. We don't seek any radical changes or the overthrow of laws that are tried. We don't seek dangerous substitutes that would plunge us into the very evils that all wise and sane men seek to avoid.

"The trouble with the Sullivan measure is not so much the haste with which it was drawn as its absolute failure to provide for the future. It is a sort of rush order that makes no allowance for what is to come or for the big and growing film industry.

"It seeks to remedy o momentary agitation, to deal with a specific case, rather than with cases in general. Any such legislation is hazardous and inadequate on its face.

"Now, our bill aims only to guard motion picture producers against biased, hasty or faulty decisions by the Mayor or Police Commissioner. We do not seek to take the power away from the Mayor and the Police Commissioner in whome the statute vests it, but simply to give the added right to appeal from a decision to a justice of the Superior or Supreme Court, sitting in equity.

"Under our bill the show complained of by the Mayor or Police Commissioner would be given the privilege of remaining open to the public pending the finding of the Justice as to the soundness and legality of a complaint by the Mayor or police head.

POINTS TO DANGER.

"This would lift the present law out of the realm of possible political prejudice or graft and the pitfalls of competition. With the Sullivan law as a cloak rival picture interests could easily arrange for a disturbance in the lobby of a theatre. That would carry the matter beyond the mere theoretical stage of tending to incite racial or religious prejudice and bring it down to cold hard fact of an actual disturbance caused by some film that had aroused the envy or cupidity of competitors. I simply cite this to show you the dangerous latitude made possible by the Sullivan bill.

"One thing must not be lost sight of, the motion picture is here to stay. It has had amazing growth and popularity. It has grown on its merits. The public has been quick to note and to enjoy its wonderful advantages and its entertaining and, above all, its educational advantages.

"Motion pictures have blossomed into masterpieces. Productions are carried on a stupendous scale. No expense or trouble is spared. What wonder, then, that schools, colleges and churches have come to use them in connection with their work. The motion picture is the modern educator, and laws should be moulded or repealed to make place for it and to give it the recognition and support that is its due."

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 30 1915

JOURNAL MAIL BAG

G. A. R. Veteran Approves Of "Birth of a Nation"

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

April 28 I attended the matinee exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation." I was aware of the criticism and the present efforts made by a certain class for its suppression, hence I gave very careful attention to all its phases and details. I feel moved, therefore, to express an opinion thereon through the newspaper that I have read more or less, and respected all the time for its integrity and independence, for more than 50 years.

I am now past 76 years of age; enlisted early in the Civil War and served till the close. I followed and observed the reconstruction period closely and I believe I can judge from personal experience and from what I know. Therefore I say that the pictorial presentment, "The Birth of a Nation," is a very accurate and realistic portrayal of events as they actually occurred.

Once during the war I was captured, but fortunately held as prisoner for only a short time. I had a fine opportunity to talk with the Confederate soldiers about the war, its causes, politics North and South and other relative matters. I believe I apprehended the "general make-up" and views of the Southern man pretty accurately.

I also saw a great many "contrabands"—escaped negroes of both sexes and all ages—and could study them at close hand. If they owed a moral debt it was to misfortune; they were not to blame, because they were like children, ignorant, impulsive, without discipline or self control, utterly unfit to have and use the elective franchise, or to aid or direct in anyway the political rehabilitment of the South in such a period. Nor were they so much to blame for the maladministration of affairs in the South as one narrow-minded, bigoted man—Andrew Johnson, President by catastrophe—and his political aiders and abettors, who put unused powers into the hands of negroes and exploited them with disastrous consequences. The K. K. K. was the inevitable and logical result of vicious class legislation in the South by white "carpet-baggers" and 'gnorant irresponsible negroes.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a true presentment of those times. The present generation knows but little of that important period of our nation's history. "Out of sight, out of mind." Should we not be freshly reminded from time to time, "lest we forget?" How better teach and re-enforce these lessons than by moving pictures? How better learn to profit by past mistakes and learn new lessons of patriotism, self control hatred of wrongs, political, social and industrial?

There is much of the past that should cause us shame and regret. We New England people might be shown in moving picture the history of the Salem witchcraft craze and delusion, and the, to us, incomprehensible doings of those narrow-minded, bigoted, but honest, ancestors of ours. We are, and should be, ashamed of it and them, but I truly believe we should tolerate, even approve, a moving picture history of that period and its salutary lessons without "kicking." I don't believe we would petition the Legislature to stop the show; it would be class legislation; and such legislation as now asked for by an unrepresentative minority would put the moving picture show out of business.

The last scene shows pictures and statistics to show the great advance made by the negroes in every desirable way since the Civil War. They should be proud of it and glad to see it portrayed in the moving picture medium. But it is necessary to show their early unlovely, brutal, but unfortunate conditions as newly freed slaves to teach by contrast what any freed people can do.

Judging from the audience which completely filled Tremont Theatre yesterday afternoon and its hearty and frequent manifestations of approval, I should say that a very large majority of the people approve of the present ment, "Birth of a Nation." If it depended on their vote, the objectors wouldn't have "any case in court."

Everett. C. F. LOTHROP.

ADVERTISER
dress: Boston, Mass.
APR 30 191

FOURTH "BIRTH OF NATION" BILL IS PRESENTED

Would Give Censorship to Chief of State Police

A bill granting to the chief of the district police the power of censorship of moving pictures and theatrical performances now vested by statute in the Mayor of Boston and the Police Commissioner, was submitted to the joint legislative committee on judiciary by J. Mott Hallowell.

This is the fourth bill aimed at the "Birth of a Nation" motion picture film now before the committee. This bill goes farther than most of the other bills in granting additional reasons for suspension of a license by the chief of police. It provides that when a performance is "obscene or immoral, whether sexually or otherwise immoral, or tends to injure the morals of a community, or tends to encourage to incite or cause lawlessness or a breach of the peace, and is not eliminated at his request, he may suspend the license."

An appeal to the Supreme Court is allowed the theatrical manager or licensee. Commenting on the bill, Hallowell said:

"The bill is permissive and not mandatory. It would not be exercised therefore unless a legitimate cause existed. It omits all racial and religious matters.

"Theatrical exhibitions and photo-plays are not like the free press or free meeting. No such exhibitions have been allowed in this Commonwealth without first obtaining a license. The State confers the right and the State has the same authority on proper occasion to revoke or suspend that right.

"Such exhibitions in Boston are patronized by all the cities and towns around Boston. The power of revocation or suspension should be exercised by an authority having wider jurisdiction than a municipal officer of Boston. The chief of the district police is suggested because that officer already has supervision of theatrical exhibitions; although any officer with equally wide jurisdiction will be acceptable to the petitioners."

ITTSFIELD (Mass.) EAGLE
APRIL 27, 1915

TON—Claxton Wilstach, 42 years old, and publicity ...sistant manager of the ... Birth of a Nation," was ... in Boston ... of death probably ... examiner ... A brother, ... to natural causes. A brother, ... Wilstach, is well known in theatrical circles.

TTLEBORO (Mass.) CHRON.
APRIL 27, 1915

LSTACH FOUND DEAD

y Known Theatrical Publicity ... Succumbs to Heart Attack

...ton, April 27.—Claxton Wil... one of the best-known theatri... publicity men in the United ..., was found dead in his room at ...otel Georgian. It was thought ... medical examiner that he had ...t attack.

...tach was 40 years old. He ... to Boston as publicity man for ... Nation" film at the ...nt theatre.

...d. Boston Mass. Apr 27, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Fr

Birth of a Nation" continues to ...phenomenal interest. The new... controversy is only one side of the ...ent. The Tremont Theatre, with ...ily crowds, represents the other. ...hat there is any trouble. All that ...ne by, it seems; but there is no end ...husiasm over the record-making film ...evised by David W. Griffith. Boo... the Eastern city, after New York ...sees this photo-spectacle. The dra... critics would doubtless agree ... that it would be a pity to have ...cial feelings effect the suppression ... unequaled film drama. ... controversial features are, or have ...confined to the second act. They ...ver affected the fact that the first ... are the most remarkable of all ...ing as they do the ... battle ... and the ... Great

HELSEA (Mass.) RECORD
APRIL 27, 1915

LSTACH WAS FOUND DEAD

...dely Known Theatri... Publicity Man Suc... ...mbs to Heart Attack

...ton, April 27.—Claxton Wi... one of the best-known theatri... publicity men in the United ..., was found dead in his room at ...otel Georgian. It was thought ... medical examiner that he had ...t attack.

...tach was 40 years old. He ... to Boston as publicity man for ... Birth of a Nation" film at the ...nt theatre.

...NSTER (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
APRIL 27, 1915

...y Known Theatrical Publicity ...n Succumbs to Heart Attack

...ton, April 27.—Claxton Wil... one of the best-known theatri... publicity men in the United ..., was found dead in his room at ...otel Georgian. It was thought ... medical examiner that he had ...t attack.

...tach was 40 years old. He ... to Boston as publicity man for ... Birth of a Nation" film at the ...nt theatre.

...LDEN (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 27, 1915

... ex-rep Coggan was at the state ... yesterday to defend the pro... of the "Birth of a Nation."

N. Y. Commercial
Apr 27, 1915

...ton, April 26.—Claxton Wilstach was ... here from New York last week as ...ant manager and publicity agent for ...notoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," was ... dead in his room at the Hotel Geor... this morning. Death was due to the ...ing of a blood vessel near the heart. ...ach, who was about 42 years old was ...any years manager for Sothern and ...we and was one of the best known ...ical traveling managers in the busi... Recently he was associated with the ... & Judy Theatre, New York.

Mercury Telegram
N. Y. Apr 27, 1915

...STON, Mass., Tuesday.—Mr. Claxton ...stach, press representative of "The ...h of a Nation," is dead of heart dis...

om HERALD
dress: Boston, Mass.
te APR 27 1915

PUBLIC LETTER BOX.

A JUDICIAL VIEW.

To the Editor of The Herald:

As a lifelong friend of Negro advancement I wish to add my own voice of counsel to those who are advocating the swift passage of laws on the subject of public amusements, that they be not in too hot haste to get something on the statute books which they, and all the rest of us, may have bitter cause to regret. I believe all that Mr. Storey has written about "The Birth of a Nation," that odious combination of treachery, historical falsehood, and some other things, which may not be put into print.

But as a friend of the Negro, and no one of them will doubt my friendship, I hope that they will see to it that they are not leaping from the frying pan into the fire in the matter of hot-spur legislation. I noticed that my friend Mr. Butler Wilson appeared for "the principle" of the bill which is before the Legislature. The Sullivan bill should not be passed in a spasm, least of all in a spasm which has in it a large contemplation of coming Negro votes! No sound friend of the black race will wish them damned in years to come for getting us into troubles which wisdom would have avoided. The amusement question is much larger than "The Birth of a Nation" falsely so called. There are more millions attending moving picture shows than there are in our high schools and colleges combined, and the number probably is not far from that of the entire attendance at educational institutions of all kinds combined! So continuous an influence on the public mind cannot be left to haphazard regulation. But there must be developed some principles of control, and this is a matter of careful reflection and study. It is about the last thing we should jump at, in the midst of hysterical excitement, however soundly grounded in a specific instance. I should like to see "The Birth of a Nation" absolutely suppressed. But I should not like to see it done in a manner and by a method which I feel absolutely sure involves troubles far more serious.

And I am writing this merely to call the attention of responsible citizens to another manifestation of what happens, when they neglect thinking about serious matters of public concern, till the fat is in the fire. Moving pictures, especially in their increasing effective development and beauty, have vast educational possibilities, and because of these they have also vast dangers. But characteristically, we have done little or nothing about them till they touched a subject which aroused the sensibilities of a highly susceptible race, emerging from a long period of servitude into self-consciousness and citizenship. Must we always legislate by volcanic eruption? Can we not think ahead a little, and provide rational methods of provision for developments as they arise? The Negro people did right to protest and to agitate. They are right to break into the calm neglectfulness of responsible people by demanding that they do some careful thinking about grave dangers. But they, and all of us, will be very foolish if we furnish one more example of legislating in haste to repent at leisure and sow the wind to reap the whirlwind. I hope our Legislature will go very slow. I believe with all our friends that something ought to be done. But I do not believe it ought to be done in a hop, skip and a jump! And I am urging this quite as much in the interest of the Negro as anybody else. A. A. BERLE.

Cambridge, April 26.

FROM A BAY STATE DEMOCRAT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

It grieves me to see such supposed public-spirited citizens like former Rabbi Charles Fleischer and the Rev. Chauncey Hawkins defending "The Birth of a Nation." It seems to suggest that the devil himself can quote scripture at times. Massachusetts should again be the pioneer state to take a stand for the black man.

A messenger from Mars would tell us that the two great problems of this republic are the labor problem and the Negro problem. These are the two rocks (Scylla and Charybdis) which our ship of state must avoid. The ruthless manner in which the southern states ignore the 14th and 15th amendments is a serious defect in our form of government. The Negroes are intimidated and ballots are illegally counted in the South. This is opposed to the spirit of American institutions.

The black man is burned alive at the stake by mob law. There is no difference between a black man and a white man; both bear the image of their creator. It will be only a question of time, if such things are allowed to go on, when mob law burns a white man at the stake.

The race issue is not the only issue involved in "The Birth of a Nation." It is the association of ideas that the ordinary normal, reasonable, newspaper reading, history reading citizen forms in his mind with the scandalous, impertinent, indecent and obscene pictures. The Jews, the Germans, the Irish were never slaves in this country and sold on the auction block. No child of these people was ever torn from its mother's breast and traded for filthy lucre; no tender maiden of such races was ever merchandized into misery and concubinage; but the unfortunate black woman brought here against her will, not entirely devoid of feelings or honor, was a mere chattel at the caprice of money.

No wonder the hearts of these black men and women are seared with the sorrows and sins of the past, and why is it to be be marvelled at that an irresistible impulse overcomes them when they see their flesh and blood held up to public ridicule, scorn and contempt?

N. Y. Call
Apr 27, 1915

Press Agent for Film 'Birth of Nation' Dies

BOSTON, Mass., April 26.—Claxton Wilstach, who came here from New York last week to relieve Henry Macmahon as assistant manager and publicity agent for the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," was found dead in his room at the Hotel Georgian this morning. Medical Examiner Leary said that death was due to the breaking of a blood vessel near the heart.

Wilstach, who was about 42 years old, was for many years manager for Sothern and Marlowe, and was one of the best known theatrical traveling managers in the business.

N. Y. Herald
Apr 27, 1915

MR. CLAXTON WILSTACH.

Mr. Claxton Wilstach, press representative and assistant manager of "The Birth of a Nation," a film play, died of heart disease yesterday in his room at the Georgian Hotel, in Boston. He was forty-two years old and had been identified with the theatrical profession for many years. At one time he was press representative for Mr. E. H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe. He is survived by his wife and two brothers, Mr. Paul Wilstach, playwright, and Mr. Frank Wilstach, theatrical press representative.

Boston (Mass) Morn. Herald. Apr. 27, 1915

FILM PLAY FOES FIND SULLIVAN BILL IMPERFECT

Confer with View to Framing Workable Measure After Public Hearing Where Clergymen and Lawyers Defend "The Birth of a Nation" and Oppose Bill Offered.

Convinced that the bill presented by Louis A. Sullivan to meet the situation arising out of the agitation against the [redacted] Birth of a Nation," is unworkable, the men interested in trying to procure legislation held a lengthy conference in the Senate reading room yesterday, after the hearing on the measure closed for the day.

Butler R. Wilson and William H. Lewis, J. Mott Hallowell and James A. Lowell joined in the gathering with other assistants in the effort to settle on some type of measure which would meet the requirements. No decision was announced.

The public hearing was devoted almost entirely to the objectors to any legislation which was aimed specifically to stop the play.

A few protested against any plans for censoring film shows on the ground that the theatrical people were entitled to freedom of picture as well as of speech. The hearing lasted till 1 o'clock in the afternoon and then adjournment was had till today at 10 A. M.

Negroes at Hearing.

Negroes practically filled the committee room, but during the proceedings they held their peace. In a few cases where some of the Negroes started to make adverse comments they were promptly hushed by their seat mates.

Two of the more prominent of the friends of "The Birth of a Nation" proved to be Charles Fleischer, a former Jewish rabbi, and the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins of Jamaica Plain. Mr. Fleischer declared it was his opinion that the protests against the play uttered by Gov. Walsh, Samuel W. McCall, Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and Speaker Cox of the House were actuated by political motives, although later he said he considered them all "honorable men."

Fleischer also declared that protests made against "The Birth of a Nation" by Moorfield Storey and the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson could be construed as inciting their fellow-citizens "to riot and rebellion" against the play.

M. Sumner Coggan, attorney for John B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, where the film is being shown, filed with the committee a bill to change the method of censorship in Boston. The Coggan bill would vest sole censorship in the mayor, but would give theatres the right of appeal either to the equity division of the superior court or to the supreme court. One provision in the Coggan bill is that it shall not take effect until Aug. 1 of this year, and Atty. Coggan said that he has put this in because the theatrical season in Boston closes on that date.

Temporary Hysteria."

The [illegible]ral argument of advocates of the film play was that the legislation proposed against it and similar productions was temporary hysteria born of agitation; that to pass the legislation proposed by the opponents of the play would be to restrict "freedom of expression" and would virtually prohibit the production of anything objected to.

[illegible] single throwing [illegible] face of Gus be cut [illegible] each of the colored [illegible] like thing thrown out.

Corporation Counsel Sullivan, who represented Mayor Curley in opposition to the legislation proposed by opponents of "The Birth of a Nation," declared it would bar from the stage "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and some of Shakespeare's plays.

John F. Cusick, attorney for the company producing "The Birth of a Nation," conducted the hearing for the advocates of the film. He said he would content himself in opening with the statement that "this is a government of laws and not of men."

"This legislation," said Atty. Coggan, "is not conceived in a calm and deliberate attempt to regulate, but in the hysteria of a few well meaning, well intentioned members of society directed at a production now going on in this city."

Argues Right of Appeal.

Coggan said he understood Mayor Curley had told Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and Butler R. Wilson that if he had the power he would drive "The Birth of a Nation" out of the state; that if this was so, it showed that the theatre should have the right of appeal as proposed in his bill.

Representative Sullivan of ward 12, a member of the committee, then asked Coggan how the mayor could stop the film under the Coggan bill, inasmuch as it did not provide for broader powers of censorship than those now existing.

Coggan said: "I have assumed that the mayor has said if he had the sole power he would suppress it."

The Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, declared that he had no interest in the play or in the theatre where it was being shown. His interest, he said, was "in the principle of censorship involved—a dear principle in our American life.

"It is a case of choosing between the Russian attitude of cutting out anything that is not liked and the American attitude of suffering with such things as we do not like in order to preserve freedom of expression."

"There is danger," he said, "that in a moment of hysteria we may put upon the statute books laws we may regret later. I am against any law that restricts freedom of expression.

"No race, whether white, black, red or yellow, should be placed above criticism by any law, no matter what it is. A race is not built up by legislation and by laws; it is built up by the manliness it maintains toward criticism."

Cross-Examines Clregyman.

Representative Sullivan—Then, do you believe it proper to show college students in a play throwing things at a stage and refer to them as typical Harvard students?

Mr. Hawkins—As a Yale man I do, yes sir. (Prolonged laughter.)

Sullivan—Are you here to answer questions facetiously or seriously?

Hawkins—Seriously.

Sullivan—Then your last reply was to be taken "facetiously"?

Hawkins—Yes, sir.

Sullivan—And your other replies?

Hawkins—Seriously.

Sullivan (reading from the morning papers)—Are you the Chauncey J. Hawkins who said he regretted the elimination of the "Gus scene" from the play because it was a masterful picture of the cause of the southern man and woman?

Hawkins—I am.

Sullivan—And who said the Negro is the greatest menace in our national life at the present day?

Hawkins—One of the greatest.

Sullivan—And who said the Negro is the lowest in the scale of our national development?

Hawkins—That is my opinion.

Sullivan—And did you also say that while the Negroes have produced some great men, the majority are still in their animalism?

Hawkins—I did not use the word "animalism."

Law Sufficient, Says Fleischer.

Charles Fleischer, the next speaker, declared he believed there was sufficient law existing and that he was opposed to the "hurried and hysterical legislation that has been proposed to you."

Mr. Fleischer said he regarded "The Birth of a Nation" as an "educational and historical document." He was particularly pleased with it, he added, because "it shows the North as well as the South must face the problem of the Negro," which he did not think had been faced as yet here in the North. If this could be brought about, he continued, he personally was willing to stand any "vilification or abuse" that might come to him because of his stand.

"The legislation proposed interferes really with freedom of speech. That is what I am greatly interested in. I am one of those pernicious elements in a community known as a 'free lance.' I feel, therefore, that I am personally menaced by this bill."

Mr. Fleischer then read from what he said were excerpts from President Wilson's history of the United States, quoting the President as writing that the Ku Klux Klan was organized "to protect the southern country from some of the ugliest hazards since the time of the Revolution" and "protect their people from indignities." Fleischer said he thought this testimony very valuable, as he considered the President to be "a calm-blooded, if not cold-blooded, southerner, not given to venting hysteria."

Quotes Opponents.

"Mr. Storey says in one of his articles that it is not logical to think that the Negro will stand much longer for the production of this play. In other words, rise up in arms and riot. And yet Mr. Storey hasn't seen the play.

"Mr. Herbert S. Johnson is quoted as saying something similar. Again we find these quiet, calm gentlemen inciting their fellow-citizens to riot and rebellion. Incidentally we find Gov. Walsh losing no opportunity to play up to the Negro. And Channing H. Cox, not to be outdone, says 'We Republicans will not allow this.' And Samuel W. McCall, not to be outdone, makes his protest, and Grafton D. Cushing makes his. What a beautiful and inspiring exhibition of graded hysteria!"

Fleischer then read from Mr. McCall's history of Thaddeus Stevens to show, he said, that Mr. McCall had written that the Negroes abused their power, when they obtained it after the civil war had freed them.

"Jews Strengthened."

Dr. Fleischer said that, as a Jew, he did not particularly enjoy the portrayal of Shylock as a typical Jew, but the Jews have stood a lot of persecution and have been strengthened by it. If a race is to be pampered and protected from criticism, it will never grow up. The Negroes, he said, have made splendid progress in the last 50 years, but the large majority are still children, "and this statement is proven by their actions in Boston," he added. This brought a hiss or two from the Negroes. "I know that is not pleasant," said Dr. Fleischer, "but it is true."

The Rev. Thomas B. Gregory of New York said everything in "The Birth of a Nation" was true.

Eugene Walter, the playwright, representing the American Dramatists and Composers' Association, opposed the bills before the committee from the authors' standpoint.

Sullivan in Opposition.

Corporation Counsel Sullivan was also heard in opposition to the Sullivan bill and all the proposed amendments except the one offered by Mr. Coggan. The term "racial and religious prejudice" is too broad and if enacted into the law will be detrimental to the interests of the great public that enjoys legitimate theatrical productions. He said that under such a law "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Merchant of Venice," "Androcles and the Lion" and countless other plays would be driven from the stage.

Later, he said that no mayor should be given power to stop a play unless the law provides for an appeal to the courts. An ignorant or unscrupulous man may be elected mayor, he said.

"How long has it been," said Mr. Sullivan, "when the demand of a large number of people is sufficient excuse for breaking the law?" He said he believed a competent censor should be appointed by the mayor, not subject to removal except for malfeasance, but he did not consider the public sentiment to be educated to that point yet.

Mr Sullivan was asked if the mayor had stated that he would stop the play if he were given the necessary authority. Mr. Sullivan said, if the mayor made such a statement it was probably before the elimination of the "Gus" incident.

POST
ress: Boston, Mass.

APR 27

Tremont Theatre

Public interest in the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, is as keen as ever, and at [illegible]y presentation the house is filled [illegible]spectators. The universal verdict [illegible]public is that it is the most wonderful exhibition of motion photography [illegible]witnessed in this city, and it is also a marvellous display of stagecraft and groupings. There are two presentations given every week day.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass. Apr 27, 1915

Fighting To Uplift Movies

Says 18 P.C. of Films Unfit

MRS. ANDREWS' BILL TO PROTECT CHILDREN

Chairman of Women's Club Federation a Leader for Clean Legislation

Women who do things for their fellow humans, whether in civic, municipal, social service or other work, are always interesting. But particularly is this true in the instances where well-nurtured, carefully reared women give up lives of ease and social position literally to roll up their sleeves and devote their lives to helping the world's unfortunates. Such a person is Mrs. Julius Andrews, chairman of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, president of the Boston Council of Jewish Women, and executive and member of many other organizations for the betterment of human-kind.

Although but one branch of her many activities, it is perhaps through her juvenile court work, in co-operation with the late Judge Baker, that Mrs. Andrews is best known to the public. But even with that, as with all her other work, it has been the work itself, rather than the worker in the foreground—for the unselfish, modest worker has ever remained "out of sight," shunning publicity.

But while her activities are legion the mass of her work may be defined in a few subdivisions, viz: legislative, wherein she represents and voices the thoughts of 60,000 members of the various women's clubs of Massachusetts at the State House; immigration work, meeting the ship loads of immigrants and directing the work of her agents who assist the unprotected immigrant landing here in every possible way, shielding them from unprincipled exploiters; educational work, in all its branches, and last, but not least, social uplift.

For 12 years Mrs Andrews has been president of the Boston Council of Jewish woman. During most of this time she has been a loyal worker for clean and efficient legislation, studying law, and the meaning of law, and its ultimate effect on the community.

During this period she has also learned much of the personal psychology of the Bay State legislator, individually and collectively.

"Yes," admitted Mrs. Andrews, rather shyly, "I have gained some knowledge of the methods of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and I think these bodies are beginning to feel that I am learning."

"Is it hard work?"

"Well, yes, it is at times. Conditions, though, are slowly but surely improving for the women who are working for right legislative laws. Of course, some of the Senators are perhaps a little petulant at times (her eyes twinkled reminiscently), but when they know and understand the deep sincerity of the women who are giving their time and energies for clean and efficient legislation they generally alter their attitude."

Mrs. Andrews is at present particularly interested in the motion picture bill ("not the so-called Sullivan bill," she emphasized), but Senate 202, which provided for state censorship of motion picture productions long before the "Birth of a Nation" or the Sullivan bill was ever thought of in Boston. Senate 202 is a good bill and designed to protect the children of Massachusetts and maintain a high, clean standard of excellence in motion picture films.

"Our bill was favorably reported by the Social Welfare Committee, and it seemed that all was well. But in the meantime 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced in Boston, class hatred fomented and Mr. Sullivan brought in his bill, raising among others a question of religion and race.

"I am afraid there is a misunderstanding in the minds if the people and that the really good bill as originally drafted, providing for a wise state control, may be lost sight of and defeated in the turmoil.

"Our bill has the unanimous support of 62,000 intelligent, cultured women. Does not that mean something?" she inquired wistfully.

"The women of Masachusetts want this state control because they believe it is for the good of their children. To them 15 p.c. of the motion pictures shown in this state are objectionable and not fit for children to see. We aim only to protect the morals of our little ones, and the little ones of future generations. We believe the bill to be of great value (please have it clear that I refer to Senate 202, not the Sullivan bill), and are working with all our strength to get it through."

(Photo by Record Photographer.)
MRS. JULIUS ANDREWS,
President of the Council of Jewish Women, who is fighting for better motion picture shows in Massachusetts.

m GLOBE
lress: Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

THE THROTTLING OF THE THEATRE

WHATEVER may be the merits or demerits of the agitation over the moving picture film depicting Reconstruction times, we know that it is contrary to our ideas of liberty and justice to increase the powers of a stage censor to the extent embodied in the petition now before the Legislature.

"Any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice, or tends to a breach of the public peace," means that any show could come under the ban of the censor or under the control of the most sensitive members of all classes, creeds, or even colleges. It was not many years ago when students committed a breach of "the public peace" because they did not like the way the leading man, in a play based on college life, played the role of a Harvard oarsman. The actions of the students should have formed, or did form, no ground for censoring the play or penalizing the producers.

Criticism, or even abuse, has been voiced against all classes and all kinds of men in the press and on the stage since those means of expressing opinion were invented. To stop the free expression of opinion by any means is to close the safety valve.

To pass the proposed legislation, which would put the control of all shows or entertainments in the hands of one official, would mean that not only his racial or religious beliefs, but also any small group of fanatical persons who chose to raise objection could control the stage. That is far different from the present. Objections can be made against anything.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

BLAMES WALSH FOR HUE AND CRY AGAINST "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Promised to Help Film Foes Without Ever Seeing Production, Says Photo Play Attorney

Gov. Walsh was sharply criticised as being responsible for much of the agitation against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," by John F. Cusick, counsel for the company producing the film, at a continued hearing conducted by the legislative committee on judiciary today, on legislation to prohibit the production of such plays in the future.

Atty. Cusick gave his version of the history of the protest against the film since it has come to Boston. He told how, after disturbances in front of the theatre where the film is being shown one Saturday night, a great many opponents of the play went to the State House the following Monday, Patriots' day, to protest to Gov. Walsh against the film.

"Gov. Walsh," continued Cusick slowly, "without seeing this play or talking with any representative of this play, told these people that if there was not law enough to stop the play he would see that a law was placed on the statute books to do so.

"There, sir, Mr. Gov. Walsh, you have caused a whole lot of this agitation and are much to blame for such a smhortsighted policy."

Big Crowd on Hand.

Another large crowd thronged today's hearing. Representative Kennard of Somerville, House chairman of the committee, presided in the absence of Senate Chairman Norwood, and, while applause or disapproval from the crowd caused him to bang a large gavel now and then, there was no disorder.

Representative Sawyer of Ware, who said he had seen "The Birth of a Nation" and considered it "unfair and unjust to the Negro," was the first speaker at today's hearing, which technically was for the benefit of the defenders of the play. Representative Sawyer was granted permission to appear, in order that he might file with the committee a bill bearing on the situation.

The Sawyer bill, briefly described, provides that on petition of 200 citizens in Boston that a play is unfair to their race, the mayor or his agent shall inspect the play and conduct a public hearing on it within 24 hours and render a decision within 48 hours. The bill provides the same procedure for cities and towns outside of Boston, except that 100 signatures are required for outside cities and 50 for the towns.

Wants Experienced Board.

J. Albert Brackett, counsel for the theatrical managers of Boston, said he believed the time was near when it would be necessary to rest the censorship of motion pictures with some public board of experience and possessing public confidence. He said, however, that in view of the lateness of the legislative session, it would be risky to pass any hurried legislation, and suggested that the whole matter go over until next year so that then there might be a thorough overhauling of the amusement laws.

Atty. Brackett, who represented the amusement producers of Boston as being willing to meet the public and authorities better than half way on legislation, said he had been inclined to agree with Hoorfield Storey, one of the prominent opponents of the film play, that the general law forbidding obscene and imoral production was broad enough to cover "The Birth of a Nation." Atty. Brackett added, though, that he deferred to the opinion of Municipal Court Judge Dowd.

Atty. Cusick, for the producing company, declared that one point he wished to bring to the attention of the committee was that some of the prominent opponents of the film play had not seen it. He mentioned Gov. Walsh, Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, Samuel W. McCall and Moorfield Storey as coming under this classification.

Cusick declared there was law enough to prevent the production of the film, if necessary, but maintained its opponents had not, and could not find, the facts necessary to make the law apply to the film.

m ADVERTISER
ress: Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

THEATRICAL MAN FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL ROOM

Claxton Wilstach, assistant manager and publicity agent of "The Birth of a Nation," the photoplay at the Tremont Theatre which has aroused a storm of protest, was found dead in his bed at the Georgian, shortly after 7 a.m. yesterday.

The body was discovered by a call boy at the hotel who went to Mr. Wilstach's room to awaken him.

Medical Examiner Leary made a preliminary examination of the body and said that death may have resulted from natural causes. The body was taken to the southern mortuary at the City Hospital, where Dr. Leary performed an autopsy later in the day.

On a table beside the bed was found a glass containing what is thought to be water, but Dr. Leary took it away for examination.

When the call boy knocked at the door of Wilstach's room he obtained no response. After hearing no noise within after continued rapping the call boy summoned the manager of the hotel. The room was forced open and Wilstach was found lifeless on his bed.

Wilstach was 42 and had been in Boston about a week. The position he had with "The Birth of a Nation" company was formerly filled by Henry McMahon. Wilstach was at one time manager for the Sothern and Marlowe company and was one of the best known theatrical men in the country. His brother, Paul Wilstach is famed as an author and he has another brother, Frank Wilstach, who is a well-known theatrical publicity man.

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

MINISTERS CONDEMN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Both the Congregational and the Baptist ministers' associations yesterday put themselves on record as being opposed to the further production of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation."

At the Congregational ministers' meeting in Pilgrim Hall, the Rev. Israel Ainsworth sharply criticised the action of the recent Episcopal convention in refusing to adopt a resolution to send a petition to Congress in favor of national prohibition.

The Rev. Mr. Ainsworth bitterly denounced the failure to adopt the resolution as "a further example of their hypocritical attitude."

Attacks upon the editorial policy of the Boston Transcript, the Boston Herald and the Boston Journal in regard to the photo-play were made by the Rev. William W. Jordan of Clinton. "Sensational evangelists" were condemned by the Rev. John G. Taylor of Arlington and the Rev. Arthur T. Kempton of Cambridge.

Both speakers said that these people would be without a job unless they depended upon sensationalism. The Rev. Mr. Kempton advocated the encouragement of love-making among the young people of the churches. He said that at the time of courtship these young people are making life decisions and that the church should help them to make these decisions wisely.

JOURNAL
ess: Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' PRESS AGENT DIED NATURALLY

Medical Examiner Leary stated late yesterday that Claxton Wilstach, publicity man and assistant manager of "The Birth of a Nation," who was found dead in his room early yesterday morning died from natural causes.

Mr. Wilstach arrived in Boston about a week ago to replace Henry MacMahan in the charge of the film at the Tremont. He took a room at the Georgian and retired Sunday night apparently in good health. Yesterday morning a bellboy attempted to arouse him and was unsuccessful. When the door was forced he was found stretched on the floor lifeless.

He had long been prominent in theatrical circles and was once with Sothern and Marlowe.

Grea... yesterday... the year. ... record was mad...

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass. Apr. 27, 15

Rep. William H. Sullivan was an active member of the Committee on Judiciary the other day when the opposition to the amendment to the censorship bill was heard. After rebuking one speaker and engaging in a controversy with the sarcastic Dr. Fleischer, he was forced to ... up against John A. Sullivan, Corporation Counsel. Although more or less successful in his former combats, Sullivan was forced to dip his colors to the ... outside the Sullivan family.

"... think that when a substantial ... of the population protest a ... could be stopped?" asked William ...

"... ly not," was the surprising and ... prompt rejoinder. "If a ... were to ask for my watch ... to give it to them, would ... ation, is property and ...

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APR 27 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" CONDEMNED BY MINISTER

The Baptist and Congregational ministers, at their meetings yesterday, decided against the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," after long debates, and each organization appointed a committee to see what can be done. The Baptists characterized it as "unhistoric" and "demoralizing."

m GLOBE
dress: Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

CLERGY OPPOSE SULLIVAN BILL

Speak in Defense of "Birth of a Nation"

Hugo Throug... Holds in the ...

M. Sumner Ogg... Substitute Measure

...

CENSORSHIP OF PLAYS

Congregational Ministers ... Committee for Conference

At the meeting of the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall yesterday the following committee was appointed to confer with committees of other denominations in ministerial associations on the feasibility of uniting in asking legislation to the Legislature asking that it be responsible for the censorship of the Birth of a Nation" and other plays detrimental to any race or nationality: Rev Israel H. Ainsworth, chairman; Rev Henry Smith, Rev ... Adams, Rev R. F. Lavell and Rev ... liam Ewing.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.

Plays That Rem...

TREMONT THEATRE ... Birth of a Nation," the ... dous photodrama ... began its third ... most yesterday ... same old story ...

...AL
...n, Mass.
APR 27 191...

...POLITICS ...RES FIGHT ...STOP PLAY

...ticizes Cushing ... McCall and ...aker Cox.

... NEGROES ...D "CHILDREN"

...l Men Oppose Sul... ...ill Before Legis... ...e Committee.

... of a continuance of the ... "The Birth of a Nation" ...ticized Gov. Walsh, Speaker ... Gov. Cushing, Samuel W. ... other public men who have ... the production be stopped ... that they were opposing the ... to further their own po... rations.

...harles Fleischer read from ... of Thaddeus Stevens," by ... McCall, to show that while ...lican candidate had placed ... record before the committee ... to the production of the film, ... was contradictory to that ...ken in his book.

"...excitable men," said Rabbi ..."have not only got the ...p in arms, but have got the ... going. The governor was ... jump in and tell the colored ...at he would be glad to help ...

...Chasing Cox, not to be out... ...ed a statement that the Re... ...would also stand up for the ... the black man.

...Cushing "Fellows Suit"

Gov. Cushing quickly followed ... the Honorable Samuel W. Mc... ...hough he could not get here ... sent a letter stating his pos...

...ving the hearing representatives ...opponents of the film had a con... ...in the Senate reading room in ...rt to prepare a bill which would ...he situation and stand the test ...ative favor. Those present were ... M. Hallowell, James A. Lowell, ... H. Lewis and William B. ...

...understood they will present a ...ch will provide for placing in the ... of the district police discretionary ... to stop the production of any ...or film of which he does not ap...

...erday's hearing was attended by ...e number of people, white and ... and as the day was to be given ... to the opponents of the Sullivan ...Chairman Norwood of the committ... ...announced at the opening that no ...nstrations would be permitted. ...e his admonition had a very good ...al effect, there was occasional hiss... ...y some of the negroes present, ... was quickly stopped by their ...re.

...es M. Hallowell, attorney for the ...ents of the film, offered a substit... ...ill at the opening of the hearing. ...provides that either the mayor of ...ief or the district police shall have ...ty to stop any production if, in ...pinion of either, it tends to im... ...ality or to create disturbance.

Calls Protest "Hysterical"

...S. Coggan, the first speaker in ...sition, said he hoped the committee ...d not approve legislation that would ...cate the property of the theatrical ...toters and reduce the photo-play to ...el that would make it uninterest...

The present agitation was purely ...sterical one, he said, and it was ...fe to pass legislation on such a ...itation. He offered a substitute bill ...ovids that the mayor should have ...r to stop a production if any part ... was obscene or immoral or tended ...ure the morals of the community. ...Also provided for an appeal to the ...or or Supreme Court. There is ...o action appended to the Coggan ...making the act operative on Aug... ...e year. He said in defense of the ...on that the theatrical year ends ...he first of August and, in justice ...he theatrical men, no radical steps ...ld be taken until that time.

Coggan said that the Indians could ...t to scalping scenes, and almost ...photo-play could be suppressed if ...Sullivan bill or any substitute ...ol by the proponents were accepted. ...declared, in answer to a question, ...he considered the law applying to ...cities outside of Boston to be ...

...r. Dr. Chauncey J. Hawkins of Ja... ...a Plain opposed what he termed ...e "Russian censorship." He said ...any race or class of people must ...up with many things that are un... ...ant for the sake of the preserva... ...of the freedom of expression ...ed to the American people. He ...should be placed by law above ...ism, he said. He declared that he ...seen the play and found nothing ...tionable in it, even before the ...' incident was removed. He said ...ld be so sensitive that it would ...be no use to have a discussion of its merits.

...BIRTH OF A NATION" CONDEMNED BY MINISTER

The Baptist and Congregational ministers, at their meetings yesterday, decided against the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," after long debates, and each organization appointed a committee to see what can be done. The Baptists characterized it as "unhistoric" and "demoralizing."

EVENIN RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

Gov. Walsh Blamed For Trouble

By Birth of Nation Lawyer

TRACES HISTORY OF FAMOUS PHOTO-PLAY

Says Negro Scenes Not Half As Bad As Actual Occurrences

The blame for the present disorder and agitation for legislation barring the photo play the "Birth of a Nation" was laid at the door of Governor Walsh by Atty. John F. Cusick, representing the producers of the play, at the continued hearing this morning, on the Sullivan amendment to the censorship law before the Committee on Judiciary.

Almost as large a crowd as on Monday turned out to hear the continued case of the opposition to the bill (the Sullivan bill) and again large numbers were unable to enter. This time it was marked with an extreme quiet on the part of the colored people with the exception of one incident where the chairman of the committee felt called upon to read the crowd a lecture and bang his gavel for a few remarks uttered by negroes in answer to Cusick.

Cusick's speech was the feature of the day, and his criticism of the Governor's attitude caused a decided sensation.

Speaking of the riot on Saturday night at the Tremont Theatre, where the play is showing, Cusick declared that the result of it was the march on the State House and the Governor by the colored people.

Says Gov. Walsh Acted Without Seeing Play

"Gov. Walsh," he shouted, "without even seeing the play or talking with any representative of the play, who was informed, told these people if there was not a law on the statute books to stop this he would see to it that a law was put on the statute books. There I say, Mr. Gov. Walsh, you are the cause of much of this agitation disorder and this short-sighted policy."

In opening Cusick declared that a condition had arisen in the state where it became necessary to state the truth, that formerly the theatrical interests had held back as a matter of discretion.

"The trouble with your situation," he said, "is that there is plenty of law on your statute books, but there are not the facts to support it. And you cannot breed facts into that picture to get enough facts to base your law upon. If the facts had been there you would have closed up the play. The reason you do not close up the play is that you have not got the facts.

"The play is running in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, and will open in Chicago. In all of these cities it was approved, and it was approved in Boston. No elimination was made from the play as right under the existing law but was made voluntarily by the management. Suggested eliminations came from one and then another until now you are saying 'Take it off the stage,' after the management has eliminated parts of the play, although not required by law. You have as sound a law in regard to these plays as any state in the country."

Cusick then read the report of the National Board of Censorship which passed on the play in New York. Dramatically, artistically and as a moving picture the committee reported it "excellent." On being questioned, he said that the vote of the committee was either 15 to 6 or 18 to 6 on this question. The committee further characterized it as a step forward in moving picture production. The moral effect they said was "good."

From this point on Cusick devoted himself mainly to the agitation and the white men urging it.

"The man who started the condition that brings us here today," he said, "had not seen the play. That man was Moorfield Storey. Your Lieutenant Governor had not seen the picture. Mr. McCall had not seen the picture, Gov. Walsh had not seen the picture, Mr. Hanan, who declared that the Ku-Klux Clan was a band of marauders, had not seen the picture."

"Yes, I did," interrupted Hanan, amid roars of laughter. Cusick apologized to him and then went on.

(Continued From Page One.)

Found Not Immoral in the Motion Picture

After reading a list of papers and writers who had commended the play, Cusick continued a history of the agitation. He told of the meeting in the aldermanic chamber at City Hall, where the Mayor tried to find a common ground with the colored people.

"There was not one word said as to obscenity," he said, "it was racial prejudice and hatred that was spoken of. One person suggested that the chase scene be cut out, another that the single throwing of the screen of the face of Gus be cut out, and another branch of the colored people stated the whole thing thrown out.

Eventually, on Friday, at [illegible] the colored people, the Mayor [illegible] the play. He also sent his [illegible] and the Police Commissioner sent his secretary, Mr. McNamara. They went there under the law.

"What happened? They reported unanimously that there was nothing obscene or corrupt or intended to corrupt morals. The Commissioner reported to the Mayor, and nothing could then be done.

"It would be thought then that the incident was closed. But it was not. Further agitation ensued, and the Mayor then sent for the management, not under the law, but in order to discuss means that might heal the wounded sensibilities of some people. As a result there were six or seven things cut out. The chase scene for one."

At this point Senator Bates interrupted to ask if the negro "Gus" was a white man. Cusick replied that he did not know, but some one connected with the film who could not be seen in the crowd said yes, that he was white. Cusick then said that all the principal actors were whites, but that hundreds of negroes were also shown in the picture.

"After this action," continued Cusick, "the agitation again started, and at once it became a political question, and the power of the ballot at once entered in. As a result, came the riot.

"The night of the riot, aged people went to the theatre with the idea of attracting attention to this agitation. Some white men even went so far as to stand on the public platform and say that if the Irish people had been shown in this picture in this light not a stone of the theatre would be left unturned.

"That is not right. That is not the way to reach people in Massachusetts."

Then came the call on Gov. Walsh, said Cusick, and followed with the criticism described above. He also described, sarcastically, the action of Commr. O'Meara in sending a sergeant to court to complain and ask for the arrest of the manager or producer on the ground of obscenity. But the court reported that there was nothing obscene, impure, immoral, lewd or suggestive in that play.

The Sullivan amendment to the 1910 act Cusick declared went too far in fact so far that it amounted to confiscation of property. It would also throw men out of a livelihood.

The truth of the picture Cusick vouched for and said that the picture does not begin to describe the real facts as vouched for by the best authorities and eye witnesses obtainable.

He quoted Mr. McCall's book on "Thaddeus Stevens" to show that the film does not exaggerate conditions in South Carolina luring the reconstruction period.

When asked if he considered it did any good to open up old sores, he replied: "In the church you have your Crucifix to remind you of the price of your salvation. The best minds in the world have decided that it is best to keep before the rising generation the experiences which show the price paid for its liberty."

Roland D. Sawyer presented another bill seeking to provide that on petition of 200 registered voters the Mayor of Boston should be required to view a film, pass upon it and order it to be stopped, if he thought it advisable, on no other grounds than the objection of the 200 voters.

If Tosca and Camille Why Not Maternity?

Judge J. Albert Brackett, representing the Theatrical Managers' Association, the Shubert interests and others, said that the same law should not be made to apply to the "movies" as applies to the production of plays.

He brought out the fact that the theatrical men had invested in Boston more than $5,000,000, and their property, he said, should not be confiscated because of an offence to a certain class of people by a motion picture film. The present law has worked very satisfactorily with regard to plays, he said.

Only five plays have been stopped by the Mayor of Boston in eight years and these have been cheerfully withdrawn by the theatrical managers even though they did not trespass the law. "The really immoral plays are not objected to at all," said Judge Brackett.

"'La Tosca' is sung here every year and no one says a word although the opera is distinctly immoral. 'Camille' is countenanced and then occasionally a play like 'Maternity' or 'Damaged Goods' meets with official disfavor."

He said in conclusion that there has been much discussion of censorship of moving pictures and he said he did not doubt that within a short time the Legislature would pass at law that would take care of the moving picture situation satisfactorily. He had nothing to say regarding the merits or demerits of "The Birth of a Nation."

Gives Report of Ku-Klux Conspiracy Probe

Mr. Cusick then handed the committee a copy of the report of the Congressional committee which investigated the Ku-Klux conspiracy in 1872. He said that report shows that in 1865 and 1866 the Ku-Klux Clan operated as a vigilance committee, and that it numbered among its members some of the best young men of the South.

The Ku-Klux outfit was disbanded in 1869, and that later several other bands of men masqueraded as members of the Ku-Klux Clan and caused a great deal of suffering and trouble.

He said the "Birth of a Nation" was true to the conditions which existed in the reconstruction period, but considerably toned down.

The Sullivan bill, Mr. Cusick declared, was unfit for Massachusetts legislation. He said it would stop all theatrical productions of any color or benefit. The Hallowell bill, he declared, would cause confusion as it gave either the Mayor or the Police Commissioner the right to suppress a play. The Coggan bill, he said, was the best one presented as it gave the producer the right to appeal to a justice of the Superior or Supreme Court from an adverse decision of the Mayor and would give Massachusetts a better system of censorship.

Frank Sanborn of Concord favored a return to the old system whereby the Mayor licensed each production.

Ignatius McNulty, John J. Barry, and William C. Franke, representing several labor unions affected, opposed the legislation on the ground that many men would be thrown out of work. Mr. McNulty said that it would be a shame to keep historical films from being shown and said that the colored people have not half the grievances on account of theatrical productions that red-haired people have.

...n ADVERTISER
...ress: Boston, Mass.
APR 27 191...
...e

UNPAID COMMISSION TO CENSOR "MOVIE" PICTURES

The Mass. Real Estate Exchange expressed its disapproval yesterday of the attempt to provide a paid board of censors for motion pictures, but also recommended an unpaid commission of three citizens to pass on such questions as have been raised by the "Birth of a Nation" production.

In the resolutions in which they express their sentiments they say:—

"That the Mass. Real Estate Exchange views with disfavor the substitution for the National Board of Censorship of a paid board of censors for motion pictures in the Commonwealth, for the following reasons:—

"Such a board would impose hardship upon Massachusetts enterprises because of the inability of such a limited board to censor the requisite number of films to meet the demand.

"Such a board would be superfluous because the National Board of Censorship already performs the necessary service adequately and without expense, while a board, less efficient because of its size, would entail considerable expense upon the Commonwealth.

"The Mass. Real Estate Exchange recommends, however, that an unpaid commission of three members of the highest type of citizenship should be appointed by the Governor, with full power to pass upon those films and plays only in any theatre, motion picture hous or place of amusement, against which questions may be raised as to whether they are immoral or obscene, or incite race or creed prejudices."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
Apr. 27, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" FILMS DRAW CROWDS

"The Birth of a Nation" continues to excite phenomenal interest. The newspaper controversy is only one side of the excitement. The Tremont Theatre, with its daily crowds, represents the other. Not that there is any trouble. All that has gone by, it seems; but there is no end of enthusiasm over the record-making film play devised by David W. Griffith. Boston is the first Eastern city, after New York, to witness this photo-spectacle. The dramatic critics would doubtless agree unanimously that it would be a pity to have any racial feelings effect the suppression of this unequaled film drama.

The controversial features are, or have been, confined to the second act. They have never affected the fact that the first-act films are the most remarkable of all, comprising as they do the vivid battle scenes and the views of Lincoln, Grant and Lee.

Morning Telegraph
N.Y.C. Apr 27, 1915

Death of Claxton Wilstach.

Claxton Wilstach, theatrical and press agent, died in Boston Sunday of heart failure. Mr. Wilstach, who had not been ailing, was found dead in his bed in the morning at the Hotel Georgian.

Wilstach, having terminated his season at the Punch and Judy Theatre, had allied himself with "The Birth of a Nation" motion picture, and had gone to Boston, where the film is being exhibited at the Tremont Theatre. News of his death, with no details, came by telegram to D. W. Griffith's office in this city later in the day.

Mr. Wilstach was the brother of Frank and Paul Wilstach, the trio of Wilstaches being among the best known and best qualified press agents in America. Claxton had represented many important attractions, and for a long time was identified with the Henry W. Savage office.

He is survived by a widow, known in vaudeville as Minnie Allen, a singing comedienne.

HERALD
...ss: Boston, Mass.
...1915

Although The Herald announced last week its inability to print letters on the "Birth of a Nation," we were receiving so many, we have decided to make an exception in the case of two communications, which appear in our columns this morning, for reasons that will readily occur to the reader.

Sun, N.Y.C.
Apr. 27, 1915

Claxton Wilstach.

BOSTON, April 26.—Claxton Wilstach, who came here from New York last week to relieve Henry MacMahon as assistant manager and publicity agent for the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," was found dead this morning in his room in the Hotel Georgian. Medical Examiner Leary said that death resulted from the breaking of a blood vessel near the heart. Mr. Wilstach, who was about 42 years old, was for several years manager for Sothern and Marlowe. His brothers, Paul and Frank Wilstach, are well known in the theatrical world.

...Mass.
MAY 2

ADVERTISER

ress: Boston, Mass.

te APR 27 1915

MINISTER HISSED BY MOVIE CROWD

OVER 2000 AT STATE HOUSE HEARING

Conference Following Hearing Expected to Result in Compromise Plan

At the close of the hearing before the committee on judiciary of the Legislature on the Sullivan bill which would bar the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," the advocates of this measure, or one similar, confessed that they were in a quandary as to what form of legislation should be finally tried.

A conference between J. Mott Hallowell, Butler R. Wilson, James A. Lowell and William H. Lewis was held and new plans for legislation which will meet the situation discussed.

The Sullivan bill goes too far in the opinion of most people and the present law is inadequate for those protesting the play. It is expected that the conference, the result of which was not announced, evolved something that will be given to the committee today or tomorrow.

Over 2000 persons, negroes predominating, attempted to crowd into the largest committee room in the State House yesterday to hear the opposition to the Sullivan bill aimed at the production of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," which came from the theatrical interests and many disinterested persons.

The doors were kept closed to 10:30 and then suddenly opened, with the result that there was a tremendous jam, which the messengers on duty were barely able to control. The crowd was extremely orderly except for one occasion, when they hissed the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church in Jamaica Plain for his remarks.

An attack by ex-Rabbi Charles Fleischer on Gov. Walsh, ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall, Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, Channing Cox, Moorfield Storey and the Rev. Herbert Johnson, for championing the case of the negro caused a slight flurry.

Fleischer termed their remarks at the previous hearing a beautiful and wonderful example of graded hysteria.

Gov. Walsh he especially condemned, because he had told his fellow Catholics that he would permit nothing while Governor of the State that would tend to arouse race or religious prejudice. Speaker Cox he ridiculed for saying, "We Republicans will see that this is not permitted."

John F. Cusick conducted the hearing for the opposition and introduced M. Sumner Coggan as representing John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre where the play the Birth of a Nation is being shown.

Coggan submitted a substitute bill for the Sullivan petition which would provide an appeal from the decision of the Mayor to the Supreme Court or the Superior Court sitting in equity.

The Mayor was to have sole authority to suspend a license of a theatre where a play is running that is in his opinion, "immoral, obscene or tending to injure public morals," the exact wording in the present statute.

Pending a court decision, however, the theatre has the right to obtain an order vacating the suspension of the license or any other interlocutory decree pending.

Menace to National Life

Rev. Chauncey Hawkins was then introduced. He declared that he was not there in the interests of the theatre or the producer, but simply in favor of a principle dear to this country, the principle of free expression. He said there were two attitudes on censorship, the Russian, which is to strike out anything that is harmful and the American, which to suffer many things for the sake of national freedom. In a moment of hysteria, he said, there is great danger that we are putting on our statute books legislation that will be later regretted.

He was then asked if he was the man quoted in a morning paper as saying that the negro was the greatest menace to our national life.

He said yes, that he had said that it was "one of the greatest menaces." There was tense silence in the room, the negroes straining to catch the answers as he was asked if several more statements to the effect that the negro as a race was the lowest in the scale of human civilization was true. Hawkins stood his ground firmly, and declared emphatically that he was. A closing question by Rep. Burr inquired if he would object to the portrayal in the moving pictures of the "horrors of the Spanish-Catholic inquisition." To this he replied in the negative.

As he left the room some of the negroes hissed loudly, but were quickly hushed by their fellows in the room.

Fleischer Attacks Hysteria

...he right of appeal to both sides, the...s and offended race, was urged by ...bbi Fleischer, who described himself as ...at pernicious personality in a community ...known as a free lance, who was menaced ...by such a law as the Sullivan bill.

Dr. Fleischer said that, as a Jew, he did not particularly enjoy the portrayal of Shylock as a typical Jew, but the Jews have stood a lot of persecution and have been strengthened by it. If a race is too tempered and protected from criticism it will never grow up.

Rev. Thomas B. Gregory of New York ...d that everything in the "Birth of a ...tion" was true. He said he had seen ...idents and knew they were true. ...ared the great trouble was that it ...necessitsible to depict all of the un... was horror of the 10 years called ...the reconstruction period.

...ter, one of America's most ...rights, representing the ...ould ...tists and Composers' As... ...the bills before the com... ...not, ...uthors' standpoint. He ...ly pr... much interested in the ...s wi... but he did want to ...ve to ...writers, who make ...re going to curtailments of drama... ...ductions but that he did not believe in condemning a performance on the grounds of racial or religious prejudice. Mr. Walter declared that the theatrical profession was not the most harmonious profession in the world and stated that if the measures before the committee were enacted into law it would be possible for a rival manager to incite agitation against some play being staged at another theatre and have that production stopped.

This state of affairs, he argued, was manifestly unfair. He reviewed the censorship of plays in England which, he said, had worked very well. He stated that the mere fact that some people protested against a production should not be deemed sufficient grounds to suppress that production, but maintained that the contention should be proved and that the management should have the right of appeal.

Corporation Counsel Sullivan was also heard in opposition to the Sullivan bills and all the proposed amendments except the one offered by Mr. Coggan. The term "racial and religious prejudice" is too broad, and if enacted into the law will be detrimental to the interests of the great public that enjoys legitimate theatrical productions. He said that under such a law "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Merchant of Venice," "Androcles and the Lion" and countless other plays would be driven from the stage.

HERALD

ss: Boston, Mass.

APR 27 1915

AGENT OF "BIRTH OF A NATION" FOUND DEAD

Room of Hotel Forced—Death Pronounced Due to Natural Causes.

Claxton Wilstach, widely known theatrical man, who came here from New York last week to relieve Henry MacMahon as assistant manager and publicity agent for the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," showing at the Tremont Theatre, was found dead on the floor of his room in the Hotel Georgian, Park square, shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday. Medical Examiner Leary, after a perfunctory examination, gave it as his opinion that death was due to natural causes.

Wilstach, who was about 42 years of age, had left a call at the hotel, and when repeated summonses failed to elicit any response, the door to his room was forced.

Claxton Wilstach was for many years manager for E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, and was one of the best-known theatrical traveling managers in the business. A brother, Frank Wilstach, was in advance of the Sothern-Marlowe show for some seasons. He is now connected with the Messrs. Shubert in a similar capacity.

At the Georgian Hotel and at the Tremont Theatre persons who knew Wilstach intimately said he had been complaining of failing health for more than a week, although his illness was at no time considered serious.

Medical Examiner Leary, after an autopsy at the City Hospital morgue, said death was due to natural causes. According to the medical examiner a large blood vessel just below the heart burst, causing internal bleeding, which led to his death.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
apr. 27, 1915

CONGREGATIONALISTS AND BAPTISTS CONDEMN PLAY

Ministers Hear Attack on Sensational Evangelists.

Congregational and Baptist ministers in their respective meetings yesterday voted to send committees to act with committees of other denominations in framing a resolution condemning the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." The Baptists, in Chipman Hall, classed the play as "unhistoric" and "demoralizing."

The Rev. Isreal Ainsworth of Revere, speaking at the Congregational gathering, attacked the Episcopal clergy for failing to pass the resolution for prohibition introduced at their convention last week. He said "they should be thanked for the further expression of their hypocritical attitude," but the resolution which he introduced was not recognized by the chair.

Speaking on "Sensationalism in the Pulpit," the Rev. William McNair of Cambridge said in part:

"Professional evangelists would be without a job but for their sensationalism. We must put up with it as we would with any other shows.

"Extravagant statements that amount to untruths, vulgar language and slang language of the baseball team, the saloon and the brothel, are not necessary in the preaching of religion. They are not necessary in order to be understood by the average man or woman or even the men and women of the street."

om EVENING TRANSCRIPT

ldress: Boston, Mass.

te APR 27 191

Tremont—The Birth of a Nation

A filmed spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass. Apr. 27, 1915

FACTS ABOUT THE KU KLUX KLAN

What the Records of the State of South Carolina Reveal About This Secret Band of Terror.

Glorification of the Ku Klux Klan in a generation that has not witnessed the robbery, arson, murder and assaults on women of which it stands convicted on the records of United States courts was criticised in a letter from Samuel W. McCall at a recent hearing of the legislative committee considering measures for the suppression of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," and similar productions stimulative of race antagonism.

Thomas Dixon yesterday replied by accusing McCall and other opponents of the photoplay based on the author's book, "The Clansman," of ignorance of the evidence brought out in the federal court trials that resulted in the imprisonment of the leaders of the Ku Klux Klan and the breaking up of the great "Invisible Empire" conspiracy to deprive Negroes of their rights as citizens, guaranteed by the 14th amendment to the constitution.

A rare volume from the library of the late N. Penrose Hallowell, who gave up his work in Harvard University to lead a colored troop in the civil war, has come into the hands of The Traveler. It contains the records of the trials of some of the most notable Klansmen of the Carolinas. This is the region chosen by Dixon for the presentation of Ku Klux activities at their noblest.

The whole purpose of the night-rider organization, as it appears from the evidence, is unlike that of the cavaliers pictured on the screen. Both the costume and the bahavior of the actors in "The Birth of a Nation" contradict the court records. They are figments of filmland, as free from the bondage of historic truth as Alice's Wonderland.

The Klansmen of the photo-play protect property. The criminals convicted by a jury in a United States court are sent to federal prisons for burning buildings and robbing the county treasury. The Ku Klux Klan of the screen is organized to protect women from degenerate Negroes. The "Impossible Empire" of history was organized to deprive Negroes of their votes and hang white men who tried to protect freedmen in the rights of citizenship.

The actors in Dixon's fiction wear the cross-emblazoned robes of crusaders, and bear aloft "the fiery cross of Scotland's hills." The men who rode by night to burn and kill wore the red robes of the stage devil, and their heads were surmounted by horns. On the screen the Negro found guilty of causing the girl's death is given a trial and hanged after conviction. In York country, South Carolina, as the records prove, a little girl was shot by the Ku Klux for refusing to tell the whereabouts of her father, who was to be hanged for voting the "radical" ticket.

Every witness of "The Birth of a Nation," no matter how well he may know the historical falsity of its action, throbs with sympathy for the men who defied an armed and enraged Negro militia, for the protection of the women of the Southland. Yet the hired attorneys defending the men of the Ku Klux Klan in court in 1871 pleaded, "In making these remarks, it is simply to express the desire that a wise and merciful discrimination should be made in favor of those who have been led, seduced or forced into an organization guilty of such inhuman atrocities."

In another case the Hon. Reverdy Johnson, attorney for the Klansmen, said: "I have listened with unmixed horror to some of the testimony which has been brought before you. The outrages proved are shocking to humanity; they admit or neither excuse nor justification; they violate every obligation which law and nature impose on men; they show that the parties engaged were brutes."

The purpose of the organization is revealed in the testimony of members of the Ku Klux Klan. One Klansman told the court, "It was for the purpose of putting down radical rule and Negro suffrage." Another swore that "They were going to carry this into effect by killing off the white radicals and whipping and intimidating the Negroes, so as to keep them from voting for any man who held radical office."

A member of Wesley Smith's Klan testified that the head of the organization had said, "I can kill and whip more damned niggers with my Klan than all the rest of York county." Another said the chief activity of his Klan was "whipping those men who belonged to the Union League." This witness told of a raid organized against a man because he "taught a nigger school and voted the radical ticket."

These defenders of purity rode through the night, crying: "Here we come—We are the Ku Klux. Here we come, right from hell." When they came to a house, they berroke its hospitality by battering the door with a rifle butt and yelling, "G—— d—— you, open the door."

After the door of one Amzi Rainey of York county had been knocked from its hinges, his child tried to protect her father. The man testified: "My little daughter—she was back in the room with the other little children— • • • ran out of the room, and says: 'Don't kill my pappy, please don't kill my pappy!' a member of the Ku Klux shoved her back and said: "You go back in the room, you G—— d—— little— I will blow your brains out!' and fired and shot her."

The jury in another case found the contention of the prosecution true, that "This organization proceeded to the house of Jim Williams, broke in his door, took him out, fastened a rope about his neck, took him to the woods near by, and hanged him until he was dead."

The crime of Jim Williams that called for such summary vengence from the Ku Klux Klan was that he commanded a regiment of state militia that kept order in his district; the only district in the county, witnesses testified, where order was kept and Negroes were safe in their homes at night. Williams was a former officer in the United States army. He was not accused of any crime against property or against women.

Not in all the ... pages of testimony and argument in these York county cases is any crime against a white woman mentioned. Quite in passing, and as though it were the commonest thing in the world, witnesses speak of the murder or mistreatment of Negro women and girls by members of the Klan. These crimes, the records indicate, were not prompted by the low desires that are mirrored on the animal face of the Negro "Gus" in "The Birth of a Nation." They were committed as a punishment on husbands and fathers who had voted the wrong ticket.

This is the sworn testimony of a colored woman who had refused to tell a party of raiding Klansmen where her husband could be found: "Well, they were spitting in my face and throwing dirt in my eyes, and when they made me blind they bursted open my cupboard; I had five pies in my cupboard and they eat all my pies up, and they took two pieces of meat; then they made me blow up the light again, cursing me; and after a while they took me out of doors and told me all they wanted was my old man to join the Democratic ticket; if he joined the Democratic ticket they would have no more to do with him; and after they had got me out of doors, they dragged me into the big road and they ravished me out there."

Q.—How many of them?

A.—There was three.

The only charges against the Negroes in this district were that they had burned stillhouses. These charges were not proved. Members of the Klan themselves testified to burning stillhouses belonging to white men who sympathized with the Negroes or refused to join the Ku Klux Klan.

Clemency was extended to scores of the convicted men because they were able to prove that they joined the outlaw organization through fear that it would carry out its threats to burn their buildings. When once the federal government began to prosecute the Ku Klux Klan in this district, its force immediately disappeared. No wave of crime followed its passing, as would have happened if it had been the real upholder of order and right that defenders pretend it was.

During the short day of its power, a witness testified, "The colored people were like the whites and the whites they were not safe in their homes at night." Another told the court that the Negroes did not dare sleep in their homes, and that not six in the whole district could be found in their homes after nightfall.

"They did not dare retire, and often waited for darkness to go to sleep in safety under the trees of the woods and along the fencerows. Now and then they would retaliate with a crime to equal the worst depredations of the Klansmen; for the most part, they were cowed as they had never been in the days of slavery.

When a slave was whipped by the overseer of a plantation he knew what he received the punishment. He knew that every drop of his blood was marked, and that the master would not stand carelessly. But in the days of the Ku Klux Klan, Negroes were flogged and hanged according to the caprice of a mob; a mob protected by the cloak and name of its powerful organization, a mob whose members were disguised from one another and went forth in hooded mask at night.

This is the history of the Ku Klux Clan as the dry, impartial old records of the courts reveal it. It is the history Thomas Dixon says the opponents of the play "dare not face."

REPUBLICAN
Springfield, Mass.
APR 27 19...

NEGROES CROWD HEARING

ON "BIRTH OF A NATION" BAN

Dr Charles Fleischer Opposes Censorship Power of Censorship—Spoken Defend Maligned Photoplay.

An enormous crowd of Negroes and a few whites packed to overflowing the largest committee room in the state house yesterday to hear the opposition to legislation aimed at the suppression of "The birth of a nation." Dr Charles Fleischer, Rev Dr Chauncey J. Hawkins, M. Sumner Coggan and others spoke against the passage of legislation such as the Sullivan petition that would bar from the hands of any one man the power to suppress any theatrical production.

As hour before the hearing began several hundred people, largely negroes, crowded around the entrances to the committee room and when the doors were finally opened, it took strenuous work on the part of Sergeant-at-Arms Bolan and his assistants to prevent some of the aged men and women in the crowd from being crushed by the hysterical throng struggling for admission. Those who could not get in sat down upon the steps outside. Senator Norwood announced that the hearing would be adjourned if the spectators indicated approval or disapproval of the remarks of the speakers, but this admonition did not prevent occasional blasts.

Mr Coggan, the first speaker, said he hoped the committee would not approve legislation that would confiscate the property of theatrical promoters and reduce the photoplay to a level that would make it uninteresting. The present petition is purely a hysterical one, he said, and it is unsafe to base legislation on such a foundation. He offered a substitute bill to provide that the mayor should have power to stop a production if any part of it is obscene or immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community. It also provides for an appeal to the superior or supreme court. There is also a section, appended to the Coggan bill, making the act operative on August 1st of this year. He said in defense of this section that the theatrical year ends on the 1st of August and in justice to the theatrical men, no radical step should be taken until that time.

Indians Might Object to Scalping

Mr Coggan said that the Indians might object to scalping scenes, and almost any photoplay could be suppressed if the Sullivan bill or any substitutes offered by the proponents were accepted. He declared in answer to a question that he considered the law applying to the city as well as the rest of Boston to be unfair.

Rev Dr Chauncey J. Hawkins of Jamaica Plain opposed what he termed as "Russian censorship." He said that no race or class of people must put up with many things that are unpleasant for the sake of the preservation of the freedom of expression so sacred to the American people. No race should be placed beyond criticism, he said. He declared that he had seen the play and found nothing objectionable in it, even before the "Ku Klux" incident was removed. No race should be so sensitive that it cannot stand a discussion of its weakness.

Dr Fleischer's Views

The next witness was Dr. Charles Fleischer. He said that he was asked in the beginning to join the protest against the "Birth of a Nation," but after seeing the play, he refused to do so because he saw nothing objectionable in it. He said he would stand all the hysteria and ridicule that will come to me for my stand on the matter if this play tends to make the North and the South face the Negro problem fairly and the South face the Negro problem fairly and squarely. He said that he was glad that the great principle of freedom of speech is being discussed by this agitation. He quoted from a speech by from Woodrow Wilson's history of the United States to show that the former President's statement, while not precisely accurate, is generally correct.

"A few carpetbag men have put ... upon the Negroes up in arms against the play, but have not the intelligent ... The governor was quick to see ... tell the colored people that ... glad to help them ... not to be outdone, ... the republicans ... the rights ...

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
apr 27, 1915

"BAD PRECEDENT TO STOP PLAY"

Pastor Declares Freedom of the Theatre Involved in Question.

That the suppression of "The Birth of a Nation" would establish a bad precedent which will lead to more trouble in the future and result in hampering the freedom of the theatre was asserted by the Rev. William M. Tufts, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Berkeley street and Columbus avenue, in a debate on the photo-play at the church last night.

Dr. Tufts declared that although he did not believe in any production that incites race hatred, in the present case "the cure might prove worse than the disease."

Secretary William Dexter Brigham of the Wendell Phillips Memorial Association was also a speaker. He advocates the complete suppression of the play.

Others speakers were E. J. Gould and Roy McLeod.

n POST

ress: Boston, Mass.

APR 27 1915

PHOTO-PLAY'S PRESS AGENT DROPS DEAD

Claxton Wilstach, 42, married, publicity man and assistant manager of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," died suddenly yesterday in his room at the Hotel Georgian. Medical Examiner Leary performed an autopsy on the body at the south morgue and found that death was due to rupture of a blood vessel attached to the heart.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

SPEECH AND THE SULLIVAN BILL

PROMINENT Southerner is presenting us, in a notable picture play, with the view of War and Reconstruction that is prevalent section. He stated his belief in our col- yesterday that his view is the pure truth. his section an opposite view has prevailed. earned at school that the birth of our nation place in 1788, if not in 1776, and that secession in 1861 was treason. Our school books d lightly over Gen. Sherman's practical ap- tions of his famous definition of war, and we taught little or nothing about the horrors econstruction in the South. What we did , we were taught to regard as a just retribu- to the South for two centuries of negro slav- and for the toll of suffering she exacted of our thern manhood by her attempt to break up Union.

Mr. Moorfield Storey, the Rev. Mr. Trotter a minority of the Boston colored people are fighting to maintain this Abolitionist tradi- , and suppress the "movie" film that is show- us the other side. What should we think of outhern city or State that forbade a film of cle Tom's Cabin" to be presented? The pression of "The Birth of a Nation" would be such a narrow act of bigotry on our part.

The truth of that vital period of our history between the two extremes. People who wish et at it would do well to read some non-parti- presentation of the facts, such as Archibald nning's "Reconstruction," or James Ford des' "History of the United States," and their own judgment. But there can be no ible harm in letting Bostonians see the South- side. Nor should race prejudice be created "The Birth of a Nation." If the colored peo- of the South, suddenly raised from a state of very to one of political supremacy over their mer masters, had not made some bad mistakes would have been more than human. The ple really responsible for the terrible condi- there that now excite our sympathy were white voters and congressmen who turned n Lincoln's scheme of reconstruction.

McCall, although he could not go here self, sent a letter stating his position. Majority of Negroes Still Children.

Dr Fleischer said that, as a Jew, he did particularly enjoy the portrayal of Shy- k as a typical Jew, but the Jews have od a lot of persecution and have been engthened by it. If a race is to be pam- ed and protected from criticism it will ver grow up. The Negroes, he said, have de splendid progress in the last 50 rs, but the large majority of them are ll children, "and this statement is proved their actions in Boston," he added. This ught a kiss or two from the Negroes. know that is not pleasant," said Dr ischer, "but it is true."

Corporation Counsel Sullivan was also rd in opposition to the Sullivan bill and the proposed amendments except the offered by Mr Cogran. The term cial and religious prejudice" is too broad. if enacted into the law will be detri- tal to the interests of the great public t enjoys legitimate theatrical produc- s. He said that under such a law ncle Tom's Cabin," "The Merchant of ice," "Androcles and the Lion," and ntless other plays, would be driven from stage.

epresentative William H. Sullivan asked corporation counsel if he did not think objections of a large body of citizens sufficient reason for stopping a play.

Certainly not," replied the corporation nsel. "If a substantial body of citizens uld demand my watch it is no reason they should have it, and a production the "Birth of a Nation" is property should not be confiscated."

ter he said that no mayor should be power to stop a play unless the law vides for an appeal to the courts. An rant or unscrupulous man may be elect- ayor, he said. When asked by a mem- of the committee whether such a man ever been elected, Mr Sullivan declined nswer.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 27, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

The third week of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," opened yes- erday afternoon at the Tremont The- tre.

The producer, David W. Griffith, has rawn on the material of most of the hase of drama in the unfolding of he story. Exciting scenes follow ach other in rapid succession. Turid nt scenes of terrific strife during the vil War, shown in settings of natural eauty and seemingly peaceful ves- ibules that stretch into fascinating vis- s and exciting features of the play. These are relieved by domestic pic- s of life, with love scenes full of in- erest. The remarkable reproduction historical incidents such as the assination of President Lincoln, the appearance of President Davis, the ory of several famous Negroes, the ters, are portrayed. Stirring martial music is supplied by an orchestra of pieces and soloists.

m AMERICAN
dress: Boston, Mass.
APR 27 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' CALLED ACCURATE

The Rev. Dr. Thomas B. Gregory, eminent author and historian, today commended "The Birth of a Nation" as a valuable historical document that accurately depicts the memorable but distressing struggle attending the reconstruction period of the South.

The Rev. Mr. Gregory came over from New York to testify to the historical accuracy of the photo-play. He has seen the play. He lived through the reconstruction period of the South. His was the first direct testimony.

"I have seen the incidents," said the Rev. Mr. Gregory, "and I know them to be true. This photo-play does not distort history. It depicts far less than actually occurred, but what it does show is absolutely true."

His testimony to the accuracy of "The Birth of a Nation" was presented to the legislative Committee on Judiciary, which is hearing the various "censorship" bills, which owe their inception to the present agitation. Various proponents of the bills have contended that the photo-play is a distortion of history and a "vile calumny" upon the colored people. It was this evidence that the Rev. Mr. Gregory combatted.

"HISTORICALLY TRUE."

"Everything portrayed by 'The Birth of a Nation' is historically true," said Mr. Gregory. "Those great facts happened; I saw them and I know them to be true."

Mr. Gregory told the committee he lived in Carolina throughout the reconstruction period, being a Southerner by birth.

"The film does not portray the whole truth. That would be impossible. No man could commit to canvas the degredations and the unspeakable horrors of that ten years of living hell known as the reconstruction period," he declared.

"It is all true. No fact should be eliminated. No scene should be erased from this valuable educational and historical document known as 'The Birth of a Nation.' Its educational value will not be appreciated, perhaps, by the present generation.

"There is no North or South today. We should not view this presentation from the viewpoint of local, geographical selfishness, but from the standpoint of true Americanism."

Representative Kennard of Somerville inquired: "Mr. Gregory, would this have a tendency to open up the scars again?"

"Absolutely not," was Mr. Gregory's quick reply. "Those things can never happen again.

"Against this valuable historical document," he continued, "we have a trivial and spasmodic agitation, which quite resembles our using Vesuvius with which to roast an egg. It is all much ado about nothing.

"SOUTH LOVES NEGRO."

"If any man says to you that the South does not love the negro, I say that man is a liar." This statement refuted the contention that the film is a forecast of a Southern propaganda to promote lynching.

In concluding, Mr. Gregory said that there should be too much rather than too little or any restricted liberty of the freedom of speech and entertainment. "Agitations of this nature," he said, "tend to the destruction of the great American principle of free thinking and free speech." He also dissipated the earlier charges that the Ku Klux Klan was a "band of murderers" by stating that the organization numbered 700,000 members, a number in excess of the aggregate numerical strength of the Army of Virginia. Mr. Gregory also impressed the committee that he holds no prejudice against the colored people, but has been a benefactor to them.

Eugene Walter, the playwright, representing the American Dramatists and Composers' Association, said that while curtailment of dramatic productions is often necessary, he did not believe in condemning a performance on the mere ground that it invited racial feeling. "The theatrical profession is not the most harmonious profession in the world," he said, "and if this bill before you is enacted into law, it will be possible for a rival manager to incite agitation against some other play being staged at another theatre. The mere fact that some people have protested against a production should not be sufficient evidence to suppress it."

Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, also heard in opposition, said that under the proposed bills, the productions could be stopped of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Merchant of Venice," "Androcles and the Lion" and other masterpieces of fiction.

EXPLAINS MAYOR'S STAND.

When asked if he thought the objections of a large body of citizens was sufficient to stop a play, he answered:

"Certainly not. If a substantial body of citizens should demand my watch, it is no reason why they should have it, and a production like 'The Birth of a Nation' is property that should not be confiscated."

Sullivan said that if Mayor Curley said he would have stopped the play if he had sufficient authority, it was probably before the elimination of the 'Klu' scene.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 27, 1915

CUSICK BLAMES GOVERNOR

Says Walsh Responsible for Much of Agitation

Over Production of "Birth of a Nation"

Audience Protests When Remark Is Made

Small Crowd at Hearing on Sullivan Bill

Fewer persons attended this morning's hearing on the Sullivan moving picture bill before the Joint Committee on Judiciary, than appeared yesterday and the room was not so jammed. The morning was given to the opposition, with comparatively few speakers, among whom were Representative Sawyer of Ware, who offered a substitute bill; Judge J. Albert Brackett and John F. Cusick, representing the Epoch Producing Corporation, which is presenting the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation."

Representative Sawyer was opposed to any censorship which did not come from the people. He thought "The Birth of a Nation" unfair to the negro, however, and thought something should be done to stop it. He, therefore, offered a bill which allowed 200 voters of Boston to sign a petition protesting against any play tending to hold a class of persons up to ridicule, and cause the mayor to hold a public meeting and render a decision within forty-eight hours after receiving the petition. Mr. Sawyer said he did not believe in censorship except by the people.

Judge Brackett, representing the Managers' Association of Boston, the Shubert interests, Mr. Cort and others, said he had no interest in the photo-play, but came to object to any change in the existing laws. After the Iroquois fire in Chicago a general shake-up in Boston theatre laws took place which put the whole power in the hands of the mayor. In 1908 the theatres objected, and the Legislature saw fit to split the authority between the mayor and police commissioner.

No two people think the same as to censorship, and everybody cannot be satisfied, whether there are one or forty censors. "Damaged Goods" and "Maternity" were not immoral, but the mayor saw fit to consider the latter so and kept it from being produced. Now this proposed law should not apply to the regular theatres, which are totally different in their nature from the moving picture. The former would entail a great loss if it were brought to Boston and then stopped, whereas a film can be brought into Massachusetts in a satchel. It would be manifestly unfair, then, to change a law satisfactory to the theatres on account of an exigency which has arisen in regard to the moving pictures. If the condition is acute enough why not pass a special law? Whatever is undertaken should be considered carefully, so as not to hamper those interests which have invested large sums and whose productions are enjoyed by most people of the Commonwealth. It must be remembered that the property alone owned by theatres in Boston is assessed at between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000, and this property should not be affected without proper consideration.

A peculiar situation exists in Boston, any way, as to censorship, for many things which are essentially immoral are allowed to run, such as "Camille" and "La Tosca," and yet when "Maternity," a moral play, is shown, it has to be withdrawn.

Mr. Cusick, representing the Epoch Producing Corporation, which is putting on the photoplay at the Tremont Theatre said that there were not facts enough to have the play stopped. It has been shown and approved in San Francisco, Chicago, New York and other large cities. Not a change has been made in that film because of any legal requirements, but voluntarily by the management.

The play was censored by the National Board of Censorship, made up of men from various walks of life, and passed as being excellent educationally, artistically and as to entertainment value, and good morally. Eighteen of the twenty-four men who viewed the film gave that report on it.

Mr. Cusick read a list of New York and Boston newspapers which had indorsed the play either editorially or in the news columns and another list of critics who indorsed it. He reviewed the protest of the negroes and the steps which they had taken in an effort to end the play. The agitation against this at once caused the whole thing to become political propaganda and the question of ballots was introduced. Mr. Cusick blamed Governor Walsh for much of this agitation when the latter promised to put a law on the statute books if there wasn't enough law at present. If the governor had not done this the whole thing would have passed by and been forgotten. At this point, there was a protest from the audience and Mr. Kennard was forced to call for order.

Mr. Cusick continued by telling the committee that this film only shows enough to demonstrate the truth about the conditions as they prevailed. If this is historically true and doesn't portray the worst characteristics, then no objection should be raised because of the possibility of inflaming race hatred. Mr. Cusick then read from documents to show the conditions as they existed during the Reconstruction Period.

That was not the fault of the negro, said Mr. Cusick, but rather the fault of the politicians in Washington who sent those "carpet-baggers" to South Carolina.

Asked if he thought it would do any [illegible] to open old sores, he thought it was [illegible] to keep before the people the price [illegible] for law and order, and teach the [illegible] those things. "You have the crucifix in your churches," he said, "as a re[illegible] of the price which your salvation

Mr. [illegible] then took up the work of the Ku Klux Clan, and said that the play did not depict the conditions so bad as they really were. Regarding the Sullivan bill, he did not think the Legislature would take it seriously. The Hallowell bill, he thought a rabie departure from the Act of 1908, in that it gave either the mayor or the chief of the district police the right to declare a production immoral. He thought the Coggan bill a good one, however, in that it put authority in the mayor with an appeal to the Supreme Court. The consorship feature of this bill is good in that the mayor might be influenced by political motives, while the judge is free from any such environgent.

Frank . Sanborn, the sage of Concord, said that he was opposed to the Sullivan bill; but favored a return to the system before 1908, when the mayor had the right to license every production which came to a theatre. He declared that this change would meet the difficulty and said that the whole play was a libel on history, and Charles Sumner, a representative of Massachusetts. If anyone wishes the truth about the Ku Klux Clan, he said, let him read the Congressiona l Records of 1872. He said that he regarded Thomas Dixon as unable to tell the truth about anything pertaining to the Civil War.

Organized Labor Protests

Ignatius MacNulty of the Boston Central Labor Union, opposed the Sullivan bill on an economic ground, in that it would injure the industry and throw many out of work; and would keep the poorer persons from learning the truth. He felt that everything shown in the film was true and of great educational value.

William C. Franke, of the motion picture operators, and John J. Barry, president of the Boston Central Labor Union and business manager of the stage employees, spoke from the point of view of organized labor. The latter said that during the past year, men had lost their positions without notice because the mayor had stopped a production. "Now, with this same proposition starin us in the face, we protest," he said. In answer to questions by the committee, Mr. Barry said that about forty people would be affected at the Tremont Theatre.

Attorney M. Sumner Coggan, representing John B. Schoefel, said that Mayor Curley had expressed his satisfaction over the bill which Mr. Coggan offered as a substitute for the Sullivan and Hallowell measures, although he did not care for the duties.

The proponents of the legislation were given an opportunity for rebuttal at three o'clock this afternoon.

NO ADEQUATE SUPERVISION

In conection with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" this statement was issued by Lieutenant Governor Cushing, this afternoon:

There seems to be a general impression that the agitation which has crystallized round the production of "The Birth of a Nation" is sudden and transient protest. As a matter of fact, there is no adequate supervision of moving pictures. The National Board of Censorship has only power of recommendation. A committee of forty citizens viewed in Boston 61 films and found that one out of every five was objectionable, either because they pictured obscenity or immorality, presented vice as attractive, portrayed scenes grossly offensive to good taste or instructive in the methods of crime. There were twenty-four murder scenes, twenty-two drinking scenes, fourteen of theft, ten of prostitution, eight of gambling, five of suicide, five of marital infidelity, five of attempted murder, etc. 140,000 children viewed these pictures.

Committees aggregating over three hundred men and women, representatives of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Massachusetts, the City Federation of Women's Clubs in Boston, the Boston Social Union, Chambers of Commerce and Men's Clubs, after twelve weeks' inspection, recently made of the character of films shown to children in sixteen representative cities and towns throughout the State, reported that in a total of 1261 films over eighteen per cent were objectionable.

CALLS IT A HURTFUL PLAY

Booker T. Washington, principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, has telegraphed his objection to "The Birth of a Nation," as follows:

Have just returned from an educational campaign through Louisiana. Did not know "The Birth of a Nation" was being played in Boston until very recently. From all I can hear it is a vicious and hurtful play. If it cannot be stopped it ought to be modified or changed materially. The best thing would be to stop it, as it can result in nothing but stirring up race prejudice. I do not believe the play will be permitted in its present form in any of our Southern cities. I am glad to hear that the people in Boston are against the play and hope their efforts to stop it will be successful. It is particularly unfortunate to have this play at the present time when we were entering upon an era of good racial feeling throughout the country, such as we have not experienced lately.

BROCKTON (Mass.) TIMES.
APRIL 27, 1915

In Boston's ugly controversy over a certain allegedly offensive film, the only people who will not be injured are the picture interests. The picture business is being advertised; its art is being praised. That there will be any legislation damaging the prospects of the movies is next to impossible.

...N (Mass.) POST
APRIL 27, 1915

PLAN NEW CENSORSHIP BILL NOW

Conference Follows "Birth of a Nation" Hearing

Following a big hearing, at which the Sullivan bill, which is aimed to prevent the production of shows such as "The Birth of a Nation," was vigorously attacked by a number of speakers, steps to draft a more workable bill were taken yesterday by a group of persons interested in new theatrical censor legislation along the lines of the Sullivan bill.

NEW BILL PLANNED

A conference was held in the Senate waiting room, with this end in view, between Butler R. Wilson, James A. Lowell, William H. Lewis and J. Mott Hallowell.

It is believed that as the result of this and probably another conference a new bill will be suggested to cover this subject.

Yesterday's hearing on the Sullivan bill was one of the largest in point of attendance held at the State House this year.

The largest hearing room at the State House was jammed full, the crowd overflowing into the corridors and stairway nearby. The big majority of those present were colored.

The hearing lasted three hours and was adjourned until 10:30 this morning, when the committee on judiciary, before which the bill is being heard, again sits.

...rage

At the same time the Senate committee on ways and means will take up another "censor" bill—that which provides that the supervision of "movies" shall be transferred from the local authorities to the State Board of Labor and Industries.

At yesterday's hearing those who spoke against the Sullivan bill included Rabbi Charles Fleischer, the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, M. Sumner Corgan, Eugene Walter and Corporation Counsel Sullivan.

Mr. Corgan, who was the first speaker, declared that the present agitation is a purely hysterical one. The Sullivan bill, he said, would provide for the confiscation of the property of theatrical men and reduce the photo-play to a level which would make it uninteresting.

The Rev. Mr. Hawkins branded the Sullivan bill as providing for what he termed "Russian censorship." He declared that all races and all classes must put up with many things that are not altogether pleasant for the sake of the preservation of the freedom of expression which is so sacred to the American people.

Dr. Fleischer said that he refused to join in the protest against "The Birth of a Nation," because he saw nothing objectionable in the show.

The Rev. Thomas B. Gregory of New York declared that everything in "The Birth of a Nation" is true. It would be impossible, he asserted, to depict all of the unspeakable horrors of the 10 years called the reconstruction period.

He was asked by Representative Kennard if he believed in opening up the scars caused by the Civil war. He replied that the things which caused the scars could never happen again. He declared that the Southerner does not despise the negro and that anyone who says so lies.

Eugene Walter, the playwright, opposed the Sullivan bill from the standpoint of an author. He believed in certain restriction of dramatic and other productions, but felt, he said, that it would be a mistake to curtail such productions on the ground of racial or religious prejudice.

Corporation Counsel Sullivan also opposed the Sullivan bill. The term "racial and religious prejudices," he said, is too broad, and would, if enacted into law, be detrimental to the best interests of the public.

Asked if he did not think that the objection of a large body of citizens was sufficient reason for the stopping of a play, Mr. Sullivan replied, "Certainly not. If a substantial body of citizens should demand my watch, it is no reason why they should have it, and a production like 'The Birth of a Nation' is property and should not be confiscated."

He said that no Mayor should be given the power to stop a play unless the law provides for an appeal to the ecurts. An ignorant, unscrupulous man may be elected Mayor, he said. He declined to answer, when asked, if such a man had ever been elected.

FALL RIVER (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 27, 1915

...OPE TO SUPPRESS "THE NIGGER."

Among the bookings announced by the Bijou theater is that of "The Nigger," the motion picture adaptation of Edward Sheldon's famous play that is now sharing attention with "The Birth of a Nation," under the title of "The New Governor."

Attorney John T. Coughlin has been retained by leaders of the negro race in Boston in an endeavor to have the production of "The Nigger" suppressed in this city.

OPPOSE CENSORSHIP

National Board Efficient, State Board Couldn't Do the Work, Declares Real Estate Exchange in Resolution

Protest was raised in several quarters last night against the Carstens bill, now before the Legislature, which would substitute for the National Board of Censorship on motion pictures a State board of three paid censors to pass upon all films shown in Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and the co-operative committee of anti-censorship, the latter claiming to be composed of representatives of film exchanges, exhibitors, organized labor and social welfare workers, took action in opposition to the bill.

In a statistical broadside against the Carstens measure, the latter committee declares that it would "seriously affect $2,000,000 of investment in the motion picture business in this State, throw out of work 4000 people with a weekly salary of $30,000, and substitute an inefficient State board of three, with its attending expense, for an efficient, competent national board of 125, which has acceptably censored motion pictures for the whole country for five years."

The Real Estate Exchange, through its executive committee, passed resolutions recommending an amendment to the Carstens bill, calling for the appointment by the Governor of an unpaid commission of three members "of the highest type of citizenship" with full power to pass only upon those films and plays against which questions may be raised as to whether they are immoral or obscene or incite race or religious prejudices.

Anti-Censorship Protest

The Real Estate Exchange committee took this action after receiving a communication from the co-operative committee of anti-censorship, composed as follows: J. A. Eslow, representing the film exchanges; Aiden Washburn and E. O. Ramsdell, representing the exhibitors; James Burke, president of the Boston Motion Picture Operators' Union, representing organized labor, and Mrs. Alice Carroll, representing social welfare work.

Calling attention to the fact that the committee of anti-censorship is in this instance attacking the Carstens bill and not referring to the so-called Sullivan bill, Mr. Eslow said of the protest last night:

"The motion picture people court censorship. They welcomed the National Board of Censorship, lest through their own greed, or the greed of producers, they might present something detrimental, something that would kill their own business. But this bill would jeopardize an immense amount of invested capital, and is likely to take away the poor man's recreation. The people do not seem to understand that their interests are already adequately protected by the censorship of the national board."

The resolution passed by the executive committee of the Real Estate Exchange was as follows:

"Voted: That the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange views with disfavor the substitution for the National Board of Censorship of a paid board of censors for motion pictures in the Commonwealth, for the following reasons:

"Such a board would impose hardship upon Massachusetts enterprises because of the inability of such a limited board to censor the requisite number of films to meet the demand.

"Such a board would be superfluous because the National Board of Censorship already performs the necessary service adequately and without expense, while a board, less efficient because of its size, would entail considerable expense upon the Commonwealth.

"The character of the National Board of Censorship is beyond question, because its personnel is derived from organizations of the highest standing in New York city, whose function it is disinterestedly to conserve the public good, and it is our belief that a local board of the character suggested could not render better service.

"The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange recommends, however, that an unpaid commission of three members of the highest type of citizenship should be appointed by the Governor, with full power to pass upon those films and plays only in any theatre, motion-picture house or place of amusement, against which questions may be raised as to whether they are immoral or obscene, or incite race or creed prejudices."

George F. Washburn, chairman of the legislative committee of the exchange, was authorized to appear before the legislative committee on ways and means and present this resolution.

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) STANDARD
APRIL 27, 1915

THEATRICAL CENSORSHIP.

The legislature had better go slow with the bill to prohibit theatrical performances that tend to create religious or racial prejudice or tend to a breach of the public peace. From all that we have read and heard of the particular photo-play which is the cause of the agitation for such a law in this state, we are inclined to believe that it is an injustice to the colored race. The author of the book upon which it is founded is a rabid Negro-hater. But having this opinion—which, be it understood, is based upon hearsay—we should be loath, even if we had the absolute power, to force it on others, or to decree that no one who sees the Negroes as Thomas Dixon, Jr., sees them should express his views. Furthermore, if it be admitted that there ought to be a law under which the exhibition of this film would be prohibited, we should not overlook the danger of framing a law which will prohibit much that ought not to be prohibited. Turn the thing around—suppose a photo-play glorifying the Negro, representing his rule in southern states during the reconstruction period as a rule of enlightenment and wisdom, and depicting the violation of young Negro women by white men—is it not likely that southern whites would find such a film as offensive as the Negroes have found "The Birth of a Nation?" It is a question whether "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would not be prohibited under the law proposed; possibly "Othello" and "The Merchant of Venice," of which the chief figures are, respectively, a black man who strangles his white wife, and a Jew who seeks to cut a pound of flesh from a Christian whom he hates. There are other Jew-baiting plays and plays which, like "The Yellow Ticket," present the Jew-haters in an offensive light.

The Standard believes firmly that the two legislative projects which have resulted from the outcry against "The Birth of a Nation" are objectionable. The bill to establish a censorship is especially mischievous because it would be an opening wedge for the censorship of all forms of expression. As for the other measure prohibiting performances that create religious or racial feeling, we fear it is entirely too broad in its scope, and that the existing statutes go as far as the legislature should go in this direction.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN

REV. DR. GREGORY CALLS 'BIRTH OF A NATION' ACCURATE HISTORY

The Rev. Dr. Thomas B. Gregory, eminent author and historian, today commended "The Birth of a Nation" as a valuable historical document that accurately depicts the memorable but distressing struggle attending the reconstruction period of the South.

The Rev. Mr. Gregory came over from New York to testify to the historical accuracy of the photo-play. He has seen the play. He lived through the reconstruction period of the South. His was the first direct testimony.

"I have seen the incidents," said the Rev. Mr. Gregory, "and I know them to be true. This photo-play does not distort history. It depicts far less than actually occurred, but what it does show is absolutely true."

His testimony to the accuracy of "The Birth of a Nation" was presented to the legislative Committee on Judiciary, which is hearing the various "censorship" bills, which owe their inception to the present agitation. Various proponents of the bills have contended that the photo-play is a distortion of history and a "vile slander" upon the colored people. Against this evidence that the Rev. Mr. Gregory combatted.

...ll never

...TICALLY TRUE."

"...t that thing portrayed by "The ...irth of a Nation" is historically ...," said Mr. Gregory. "Those ...reat facts happened; I saw them and ...know them to be true."

Mr. Gregory told the committee he ...ved in Carolina throughout the re...nstruction period, being a South...r by birth.

"...e film does not portray the ...truth. That would be impos... could counteres to con... ...tions the diche un... ...wrights ...years ...recon...

"It is all true. No fact should be eliminated. No scene should be erased from this valuable educational and historical document known as 'The Birth of a Nation.' Its educational value will not be appreciated, perhaps, by the present generation.

"There is no North or South today. We should not view this presentation from the viewpoint of local, geographical selfishness, but from the standpoint of true Americanism."

Representative Kennard of Somerville inquired: "Mr. Gregory, would this have a tendency to open up the scars again?"

"Absolutely not," was Mr. Gregory's quick reply, "Those things can never happen again.

"Against this valuable historical document," he continued, "we have a trivial and spasmodic agitation, which quite resembles our using Vesuvius with which to roast an egg. It is all much ado about nothing.

"SOUTH LOVES NEGRO."

"If any man says to you that the South does not love the negro, I say that man is a liar." This statement refuted the contention that the film is a forecast of a Southern propaganda to promote lynching.

In concluding, Mr. Gregory said that there should be too much rather than too little or any restricted liberty of the freedom of speech and entertainment. "Agitations of this nature," he said, "tend to the destruction of the great American principle of free thinking and free speech." He also dissipated the earlier charges that the Ku Klux Klan was a "band of murderers" by stating that the organization numbered 700,000 members, a number in excess of the aggregate numerical strength of the Army of Virginia. Mr. Gregory also impressed the committee that he holds no prejudice against the colored people, but has been a benefactor to them.

Eugene Walter, the playwright, representing the American Dramatists and Composers' Association, said that while curtailment of dramatic productions is often necessary, he did not believe in condemning a performance on the mere ground that it invited racial feeling. "The theatrical profession is not the most harmonious profession in the world," he said, "and if this bill before you is enacted into law, it will be possible for a rival manager to incite agitation against some other play being staged at another theatre. The mere fact that some people have protested against a production should not be sufficient evidence to suppress it."

Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, also heard in opposition, said that under the proposed bills, the productions could be stopped of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Merchant of Venice," "Androcles and the Lion" and other masterpieces of fiction.

When asked if he thought the objections of a large body of citizens was sufficient to stop a play, he answered:

"Certainly not. If a substantial body of citizens should demand my watch, it is no reason why they should have it, and a production like 'The Birth of a Nation' is property that should not be confiscated."

Sullivan said that if Mayor Curley said he would have stopped the play if he had sufficient authority, it was probably before the elimination of the "Gus" scene.

CLINTON (Mass.) ITEM
APRIL 27, 1915

Two very strong features were on the program at the Globe theater last night, one a fine Vitagraph drama in two parts, with Leah Baird and Leo Delaney, and the other a Lubin masterpiece, in two parts, with Ormi Hawley and Earle Metcalf. Miss Hawley never appeared to better advantage, the scenes are charming and the costumes elaborate. Hearst's Weekly, an extra fine chapter of "The Hazards of Helen" series, and an Essanay comedy, were also shown.

Rev. W. W. Jordan, D. D., denies the report published yesterday in Boston afternoon papers that he said at the Congregational ministers' meeting in Boston that he carried a message from Gov. Walsh to the ministers urging them to united action against the production "The Birth of a Nation." He talked with Gov. Walsh on the train concerning the matter but was misquoted by the reporters present. What he did say was that Gov. Walsh sympathizes with the protest against the play.

...Herald
Northampton Mass
April 27, 1915

NEW CENSORSHIP BILL IS BEING PLANNED FOR

Conference Comes as the Result of "Birth of a Nation" Hearing

BOSTON, April 27—Following a big hearing at which the Sullivan bill, which is aimed to prevent the production of shows such as "The Birth of a Nation," was vigorously attacked by a number of speakers, steps to draft a more workable bill are being taken by a group of persons interested in new theatrical censor legislation along the lines of the Sullivan bill.

A conference was held in the Senate waiting room, with this end in view, between Butler R. Wilson, James A. Lowell William H. Lewis and J. Mott Hallowell.

It is believed that as the result of this and probably another conference a new bill will be suggested to cover this subject.

This hearing on the Sullivan bill was one of the largest in point of attendance held at the State House this year.

The largest hearing room at the State House was jammed full, the crowd overflowing into the corridors and stairways nearby. The big majority of those present were colored.

The hearing lasted three hours and was adjourned until today, when the committee on judiciary, before which the bill is being heard, again sits.

At the same time the Senate committee on ways and means will take up another "censor" bill—that which provides that the supervision of "movies" shall be transferred from the local authorities to the State Board of Labor and Industries.

At the hearing those who spoke against the Sullivan bill included Rabbi Charles Fleischer, Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, M. Sumner Corgan, Eugene Walter and Corporation Counsel Sullivan.

n SAULE
ress PITTSFIELD, MASS.
e APR 27 1915

BOSTON—Clarion Winstach of New York, 42 years old, and publicity man and assistant manager of the film play "The Birth of a Nation," was found dead in a local hotel yesterday. The medical examiner said death probably was due to natural causes. A brother, Frank Winstach, is well known in theatrical circles.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 28, 1915

...d if you have not been mentioned for governor ...here not been interviewed on your trip to the Pacific ...coast fairs, you still have time to air your views on "The Birth of a Nation."

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 28, 1915

COMMITTEE TO FRAME A NEW CENSORING BILL

After Three Days' Hearing Measures Aimed to Stop "Birth of a Nation" and Like Offerings Are Found Unworkable

After an all day session, the committee on judiciary at the State House late yesterday closed its hearings on several bills aimed to amend the existing statute covering the censoring of theatrical attractions to make possible legal action to stop shows on grounds other than offense against morals of the community. Since none of the bills were found workable the committee is to report a bill this week in place of the measures introduced by Representative Sullivan and others.

As a result of the two days of arguments against the Sullivan amendment, this measure has come to be regarded by the proponents and the committee as possible of too broad an interpretation.

It is understood that the members of the House and the Senate are to attend a private performance of the photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," the film-play about which the arguments center, probably next Monday forenoon.

Censors Not Unanimous

It was brought out at the hearing yesterday that the national board of censorship was not unanimously in favor of the photoplay. Butler Wilson read from the dissenting opinions of the president of the board and several others who disapproved of the play.

The principal speaker for the proponents was William H. Lewis, former assistant United States attorney general. He said the question before the committee was one of property rights against human rights. Property must be used in such a way that it does no injury to our neighbors, he said. He read a telegram from Booker Washington expressing the hope that Boston would not stand for the photoplay.

Henry Sterling, representing the American Federation of Labor, was recorded as opposed to the Sullivan bill.

Butler Wilson closed for the proponents. He said they opposed the Sullivan bill, and the Cogan bill. They preferred legislation that would permit either the chief of the district police or the mayor of Boston to stop a production that was hostile to the general welfare.

The Boston Central Labor Union executive board last night voted to oppose any further legislation for the censoring of moving picture films or other theatrical engagements, as "it is believed by the members of this board that there is legislation enough now on the statute books to properly care for any question that may arise."

The Central Labor Union included in its disapproval Senate bill 200, which provides specifically for state censorship of motion pictures, and which comes up for hearing May 5.

Mr. Cushing's Statement

The present agitation for a reform in the use of motion picture films is no sudden and transient protest," says Lieut.-Gov. Grafton D. Cushing, who is president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, has made public a statement telling of investigations of motion picture films.

"Committees aggregating over 300 men and women, representatives of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Massachusetts, the City Federation of Women's Clubs in Boston, the Boston Social Union, Chambers of Commerce and Men's Clubs, after 12 weeks' inspection recently made of the character of films shown to children in 16 representative cities and towns throughout the state, reported a total of 1261 films over 18 per cent were objectionable."

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
APRIL 28, 1915

The Birth of a Nation

Every country and every race has produced its criminals, just as every country and every race has produced its saints. A well known English author, recognizing this fact, once wrote a book entitled "Twelve Good Men." He realized that what the world wanted in biography was not so much a record of sin as the record of what was best in humanity. The human mind being what it is, the inevitable followed. An author of possibly more talent, and certainly less discrimination, produced a volume which he entitled "Twelve Bad Men." The world, that is to say the reading world, determined that the second book was the better reading, and that is perhaps not so incongruous as it may seem, if the sort of qualities which humanly are often regarded as good, is taken into consideration. The chronicles of Newgate, in one shape or another, have probably found more readers than the lives of the saints. This being so it behooves everybody, who is anxious for the social and moral improvement of the world, to do what they can to hold before men's eyes "whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report," rather than to dwell upon the depraved side of human nature.

"The Birth of a Nation," which has been occupying a prominent place recently in the thoughts of the public of the United States, has made the mistake of offending in just this particular. It has portrayed certain things which were no doubt accurate in their way, when it would have been wiser to have dropped those things out of sight. It would be perfectly easy to take any other race and to do for it exactly what has been done in the case of the negro, though it must be said with probably less justification. It would be, for instance, perfectly possible to show in the history of the Hebrew race many things and many actions which it would be wiser to permit to pass into oblivion. The Jew and the negro have, however, this in common, that they have been subjected to a persecution which has tended to produce the very vices which the Christian races, if not eager, have been at all events ready to chronicle. Yet if the crimes committed by the Jew and the negro were thrown into the scales against the two crimes known as the slave plantation and the Ghetto, it can scarcely be doubted which scale would kick the beam. The negro did not leave Africa exactly of his own free will, any more than the Jew fled from city to city before the brutality of the Christian. If anybody were to expend on a picture play, representing the horrors of the slave ship and the excesses and brutalities of the plantation, or upon the slaughter and plunder of the Ghettos, to say nothing of the pogroms of today, the same ability which has been spent on "The Birth of a Nation," and then were to attempt to display those pictures in the southern states or in southern Russia, is it conceivable that less opposition would be shown to them than has been shown by the negro to "The Birth of a Nation"?

The comparison, as a matter of fact, does not end here. Imagine the passions which would be aroused by a picture play which dwelt on the hideous cruelties of the Inquisition, or which described the torture chambers of Nuremburg or Antwerp, of Rome or Madrid. There is, and this constitutes the most terrible indictment of the human mind, an almost untold field of this nature waiting exploitation, and there is not a single race or a single country which could hope to escape the scalpel of the film maker, if his attention was concentrated on it. There is nothing to choose in this matter between the pagan and the Christian, the civilized and the savage. The Confucian has vied with the Romanist, and the Indian chief with the Doctor of Divinity. In spite of all this, it by no means follows that the remedy is to be sought through legislation such as that which is proposed in Boston today, and may be demanded in London or Bombay tomorrow. You cannot, the great Duke of Wellington once declared, suppress a national strike. It is equally impossible, it may be said, with equal certainty, to censor a nation. To admit that a riot is a sufficient cause for the exercise of such a censorship, is to encourage the smallest of aggrieved minorities to create a fracas for the purpose of achieving an end. Such an arrangement would place legitimate art at the mercy, not merely of the ignorant and intolerant, but even of the blackmailer. It would enable a demand to be made for the suppression of the "Merchant of Venice," equally as a demand was made, not so very many years ago, in London, for the suppression of the "Mikado." As a matter of fact Shakespeare did not libel a nation in Shylock any more than Sir William Gilbert did in Ko-Ko. Shakespeare took an individual Jew for a definite purpose, just as he took an individual Scotsman, or an individual Roman, and just as Sir William Gilbert took a Japanese, a British General, or a Grand Inquisitor. The Hebrew race has probably felt no more aggrieved over Shylock than the Scotsman has over Macbeth, or Roman over Antony. Such characters were types taken indiscriminately, by that great portrayer of morals, from humanity without respect to race or nation.

"The Birth of a Nation" can hardly claim the protection of such an argument, nor, so far as this is concerned, does the negro need the protection of special legislation. The power of the municipal and state officials in every city and every country is perfectly strong enough to prevent the exhibition of stage or picture plays which offend against a sense of justice or propriety. No doubt officials are wisely slow to exercise such powers, and equally all races and people alike are sufficiently thick skinned not to be unduly querulous. In the instance which is before the public in Boston, however, it seems unquestionable that the sensibilities of a race have been unduly [illegible] citizens are [illegible] short, not a question of possessin[illegible]

Newspaper Cutting Bureau in the World
...m United
SPRINGFIELD, MASS
...dress
...te APR 28 1915

WALSH IS BLAMED FOR FILM TROUBLE

Cusick Attacks Governor in Hearing on Photoplay Censorship.

BOSTON, April 27.—The blame for the present disorder and agitation for legislation barring the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," was laid at the door of Gov. Walsh by Atty. John F. Cusick, representing the producers of the play, at the continued hearing this morning, on the Sullivan amendment to the censorship law before the legislative Committee on Judiciary.

Almost as large a crowd as on Monday turned out to hear the continued case of the opposition to the bill (the Sullivan bill) and again large numbers were unable to enter. This time it was marked with an extreme quiet on the part of the colored people with the exception of one incident where the chairman of the committee felt called upon to read the crowd a lecture and bang his gavel for a few remarks uttered by Negroes in answer to Cusick.

Cusick's speech was the feature of the day, and his criticism of the Governor's attitude caused a decided sensation.

Speaking of the riot on Saturday night at the Tremont Theater, where the play is showing, Cusick declared that the result of it was the march on the State House and the Governor by the colored people.

"Gov. Walsh," he shouted, "without even seeing the play or talking with any representative of the play, who was informed, told these people if there was not a law on the statute books to stop this he would see to it that a law was put on the statute books. There I say, Mr. Gov. Walsh, you are the cause of much of this agitation disorder and this short-sighted policy."

In opening Cusick declared that a condition had arisen in the State where it became necessary to state the truth, that formerly the theatrical interests had held back as a matter of discretion.

"The trouble with your situation," he said, "is that there is plenty of law on your statute books, but there are not the facts to support it. And you cannot breed facts into that picture to get enough facts to base your law upon. If the facts had been there you would have closed up the play. The reason you do not close up the play is that you have not got the facts.

"The play is running in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, and will open in Chicago. In all these cities it was approved, and it was approved in Boston. No elimination was made from the play as right under the existing law, but was made voluntarily by the management. Suggested eliminations came from one and then another until now you are saying 'Take it off the stage,' after the management has eliminated parts of the play, although not required by law. You have as sound a law in regard to these plays as any State in the country."

Rep. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware presented another bill seeking to provide that on petition of 200 registered voters the Mayor of Boston should be required to view a film, pass upon it and order it to be stopped, if he thought it advisable, on no other grounds than the objection of the 200 voters.

In connection with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" this statement was issued by Lieut.-Gov. Cushing this afternoon:

[Continued on Second Page.]

[Continued from First Page.]

There seems to be a general impression that the agitation which has crystalized round the production of "The Birth of a Nation" is sudden and transient protest. As a matter of fact, there is no adequate supervision of motion pictures. The National Board of Censorship has only power of recommendation. A committee of 40 citizens viewed in Boston 614 films and found that one out of every five was objectionable, either because they pictured obscenity or immorality, presented vice as attractive, portrayed scenes grossly offensive to good taste or instructive in the methods of crime. There were 24 murder scenes, 22 drinking scenes, 14 of theft, 10 of prostitution, eight of gambling, five of suicide, five of marital infidelity, five of attempted murder, etc. One hundred and forty thousand children viewed these pictures.

Committees aggregating over 300 men and women, representatives of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Massachusetts, the City Federation of Women's Clubs in Boston, the Boston Social Union, Chambers of Commerce and men's clubs, after 12 weeks' inspection, recently made of the character of films shown to children in 16 representative cities and towns throughout the State, reported that in a total of 1261 films over 18 per cent. were objectionable.

HERALD EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

NEGROES THRONG COURT AT FILM DISTURBANCE CASE

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

NEGROES PLACED ON TRIAL

Were Arrested at Tremont Theatre Disturbance

Two Are Found Guilty of Using Profanity

One of Them Is a Baptist Church Trustee

Trotter and Fuller Cases Come Up Last

Though he testified that he is a trustee of the Baptist Church and has been for eighteen years, and despite the fact that he claimed he had said nothing more vehemently than "My Lord," James L. Dunn of West Newton, one of the negroes arrested at the disturbance in front of the Tremont Theatre a week ago last Saturday night, in connection with the demonstration against "The Birth of a Nation," was found guilty of using profanity and fined $2 today.

Sergeant King of the Lagrange street station, who arrested him, testified that he said "the cops" were "foreign —— —— white trash." Fred Banks, another negro arrested at the same time and in the same locality and charged with using profanity, was found guilty and his case was placed on file. A third negro, John C. Hinds, a waiter at the Hotel Haywood, charged with loitering, was discharged.

The cases, of which there are about a dozen, were put on trial in a special sitting of the Municipal Court presided over by Judge Brackett and held in the grand jury room. Though the room is a fairly large one, it was not sufficiently commodious to accommodate all the negroes who wished to enter, and many stood in the anteroom and in the corridor all through the session. Only three cases were finished when the morning session adjourned, and at that time three more were on trial. These were Mrs. Clara Foskey, charged with assault and battery on a police officer, and James T. Bivens and Stephen Massey, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner. The cases of William Monroe Trotter and Rev. Aaron W. Fuller, considered the most important, will not be tried until the last, probably not before late this afternoon or tomorrow. These men are charged, in addition to disorderly conduct, with inciting a riot.

The case of Banks was taken up first and Sergeant King was the principal witness. It was quickly disposed of, the defendant being found guilty and the case filed.

John C. Hinds was the next defendant called. He is a waiter at Hotel Haywood. Sergeant George W. Burgess of the Lagrange street station testified that the defendant was standing near the corner of Tremont and Avery streets Saturday night. Asked if an effort when he asked him to move on he said he wouldn't. He asked him once or twice more and finally arrested him.

Hinds was then put on the stand and examined by Edgar P. Benjamin, counsel for the defense. He said he was at work in the hotel when a message was brought to him that his wife had been caught in the crowd at the Tremont Theatre, had been pushed off the sidewalk and had sprained her right wrist in the vicinity of the Tremont Theatre and was standing on a corner waiting for his wife when he was told to move on. He replied that he was not loitering. The officer did not tell any of the white people who were near him to move. He was cross-examined by John A. Graham for the Government. Hinds's wife testified as to her injury and at intermission for her husband and Mr. F. H. Cumming testified to attending the trials.

The court discharged Hinds.

James L. Dunn, charged with profanity, was defended by F. W. Benjamin. Sergeant King said he arrested him about eleven o'clock. He was walking along Tremont street, making gestures and swearing. He said he was a citizen and that the negroes were oppressed. While Dunn was on the witness stand Assistant District Attorney William H. Cahill questioned him closely to Sergeant King.

Dunn, when placed on the stand, said he lived in West Newton, which had been his home for many years. He came to Boston Saturday night with four friends to see the picture. He said he was a member of the Baptist Church and had been for eighteen years and denied that he had used the language attributed to him by the police officer. He said he was a trustee

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

Find Two Guilty In Riot Case

Eight More Birth of Nation Cases to Be Tried

A hearing on the continued cases of 11 persons arrested Saturday night, April 17, in connection with the miniature riot in the vicinity of Tremont Theatre, resulting from the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," began today before Judge Brackett in a special session of Municipal Court.

Fred Banks, arrested on a charge of profanity, was found guilty and his case was placed on file.

John M. Hines, a waiter at the Heywood Hotel, was found not guilty of a charge of disturbing and loitering wilfully and unreasonably, and was discharged.

His defense was that he had received a telephone message while on duty at the hotel to the effect that his wife had been injured in the pushing and shoving of the crowd on the street near the theatre, and that he was looking for her when placed under arrest.

James L. Dunn, a trustee of a Baptist church for colored persons in West Newton, was found guilty of a charge of profanity and was fined $2.

Charles P. Ray, charged with malicious injury to property in hurling an egg against the screen on the stage of the Tremont Theatre, pleaded guilty. He was placed on probation after agreeing to pay the theatre owners $10 in damages. A charge against him of disturbing a public assembly was dismissed for want of prosecution.

The case of Mrs. Clara Fosky, charged with assault and battery on Patrolman Van Lanningham of the City Hall ave. station, was called along with those of Stephen Massey and James T. Birena, who are charged with attempt to rescue her from the officers. Patrolman Thomas Dowling testified that the woman drew a hatpin on him, and that she later punched Patrolman Van Lanningham in the stomach. This case was still on when a recess was called.

By agreement of counsel, the case of William Monroe Trotter, publisher of a paper for colored persons, and that of Rev. Dr. Aaron Puller, pastor of a church for colored people in the South End, will be the last ones to be called. They are charged with inciting riot and disturbing the peace.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 28, 1915

JOURNAL MAIL BAG

Southerner Finds Worth in "Birth of a Nation"

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

Recently it was my privilege to see the play "The Birth of a Nation." To one who has never lived in the South the real merit of such lessons as a play of this character intends to teach is largely lost.

But when one remembers that there are parishes and counties in which there are 20 negro men and their families to that of a single white man, one can readily see the reason for alertness on the part of Southern whites to maintain Southern white supremacy.

Then, one must not fail to remember that multitudes of the colored race were little better and not far removed from animals in training and manner of thinking after the war. The rape scene is as essential to the lesson intended and taught by the "Birth of a Nation" as any part there represented. The love of and tenacity with which the Southern women cling to their inalienable right, that of their virtue, could not otherwise so well be represented. Nor could the heroic uprising and indignation of the white men at the demolition of all authority and legislation by the ignorant blacks.

Only those who have gone through the Reconstruction period of 1870 can rightly appreciate the truthfulness and worth of such lessons as this play rightly sets forth.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 28, 1915

MAKE LAST PLEAS ON FILM BILL

"Birth of a Nation" Attacked and Defended

Earnest pleas by prominent Boston colored men yesterday closed the long struggle which has been waged before the legislative committee on judiciary over a proposed new law to prohibit the production on the Massachusetts stage of "The Birth of a Nation" and similar shows.

APPEAL BY LEWIS

A white man and woman, Frank Hammond, a Boston attorney, and Adeline Moffatt, an artist, assisted William H. Lewis and Butler Wilson in the closing session of the fight for new theatrical censor legislation.

While Attorney Wilson closed the case for those in favor of legislation, it was William H. Lewis, former Assistant Attorney-General of the United States and old Harvard football star, whose plea for justice for his people was the feature of the session.

Without a trace of malice or bitterness in his manner or speech, and apparently moved chiefly by sadness that he and his are regarded by some as a menacing problem he moved many of his audience to tears by his address.

He started out by saying that the question before the committee was one of property rights against human rights. Property, he said, should be used in such a way that it does not injure our neighbors. Then he read a telegram from Booker Washington expressing the hope that Boston would not permit the further production of "The Birth of a Nation."

What the Film Means

He went on, "they say that no offence is meant by this film. They depict my brothers as being hung without a trial, they attempt to take away the ballot from us, and then add that no offence is meant.

"The 'Gus' scene is worse now than it was before they changed it. I am sorry that Dr. Fleischer has taken the stand he has," he said, with deep feeling. "He has always been our friend. He said that he is glad that we are being forced to face the negro problem. I am not.

"Why should I be a problem to any man? I am a problem only to the man who seeks to take away my rights as a human being and to such a man the negro must be a problem. They have accused the proponents of playing politics. Twenty years ago when we came to Governor Russell for the 'equal rights legislation,' he stood by us and now Governor Walsh takes a similar stand. He has proven himself worthy of his office.

"Do you think Sam McCall, who has stood with us in Congress for 20 years, is playing politics? How about Grafton Cushing, who was born over here on what is called 'Nigger Hill'? He was brought up with us and has always stood straight. As for your Speaker, I will leave it to your own judgment.

"They say that this film does not portray half of the real conditions. It does not. There is not a single thing about the actions of the Southern white man." Mr. Lewis read several documents illustrative of the real activities of the Ku Klux Klan and denounced it bitterly. As to the stand of the labor men, he said they had exaggerated the importance of the effect of the proposed legislation on the workingmen. Only a very few men would lose positions, he said.

Butler Wilson said they objected also to the Cogan bill because it would not take effect until August. They prefer, he stated, legislation which will permit either the chief of the district police or the Mayor to stop a production that is obscene, immoral, hostile to the welfare of the general public or tending to injure the morals of the community.

Mr. Cogan stated that he would agree to have the Aug. 1 section stricken from his bill.

Mr. Hammond declared that under the libel law motion pictures tending to hold anyone up to public hatred should not be permitted. Pictures of some scenes attendant upon the Lawrence strike, he said, could not be shown in Lawrence, while some of the war pictures could not be shown in Milwaukee.

Adeline Moffett asserted that the "Birth of a Nation" film was disappointing from an artistic point of view. She branded it as "poisoned recreation" and said that for every white woman insulted by a negro in the South a thousand black women are outraged by white men.

Attack on Governor

At the morning hearing a feature was an attack on Governor Walsh by Attorney John F. Cusick, representing the concern producing "The Birth of a Nation."

He said: "Governor Walsh without seeing the play or talking with anybody connected with it, said to agitators: 'If there is not enough law on the statute books to stop this play, I will see that there is such a law passed.' This attitude on the part of Governor Walsh is responsible for a lot of this agitation and disorder. Finally the court ruled the play was all right. The remonstrants have determined that the play is well within the law and should drop the matter there."

He said that many others responsible for the trouble over the show have not seen the picture. He named Moorfield Storey, Lieutenant-Governor Cushing, ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall as among these.

Mr. Cusick branded the Sullivan bill as unfit for Massachusetts legislation he declaring that it would stop all theatrical productions of any color or benefit. The Cogan bill he said was the best one presented as it gave the producer the right to appeal to the Superior or Supreme Court from an adverse decision of the Mayor and would give the State a better system of censorship.

Representative Roland D. Sawyer presented a new bill to provide that on the petition of 200 citizens the Mayor should be required to view and pass on a film.

Judge J. Albert Brackett, representing the Theatrical Managers' Association, the Shubert interests and others, declared that the same law should be made to apply to "movies" as to other plays. He favored the present censor law, saying that the theatrical men have invested $35,000,000 in Boston property and that their property should not be confiscated. He said but eight plays had been stopped by the Mayor and these had been cheerfully withdrawn, even though they did not trespass the law. He asserted that the really immoral plays are not objected to, placing "La Tosca" and "Camille" in this class.

Ignatius McNulty, John J. Barry and William C. Franke, representing labor unions, opposed the proposed legislation on the ground that many men would be thrown out of work by it. Frank Sanborn of Concord favored the return to the old system whereby the Mayor licensed each production.

BOSTON TRAVELER
APRIL 28, 1915

HOPE TO BAR RACE FILM BY BROADER VIEW OF IMMORAL

An amendment to the Hallowell bill, as submitted by Butler R. Wilson, attorney and member of the American Bar Association, to the legislative committee on judiciary, in the fight against the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," enlarging the meaning of the word "immoral" so as to include not only sexual immorality but all other forms of immorality, is regarded by Wilson and other opponents of the protested film as likely to receive favorable consideration. If such action is taken the committee, is is believed, will report a bill either embodying the Wilson amendment or the idea contained in the amendment, and pressure will be brought to bear to bring about an immediate passage.

The Hallowell bill would eliminate the Commissioner of Police from the censorship of plays and movies, vesting sole authority with the Mayor, and, by the Wilson amendment, enlarge this power, and also would give the state police power to censor plays and photoplays on week days, whereas under the present law their activities solely are confined to Sunday performances.

Attorney Wilson today said he was confident of favorable action by the committee and felt certain the desired legislation would be forthcoming without delay. By granting the Mayor the power to eliminate plays under the broader interpretation of the word "immoral," the protestants are certain "The Birth of a Nation" will be doomed, so far as further presentation in Boston is concerned.

Confident of Victory.

Consideration of the Wilson amendment to the Hallowell bill was taken up by the committee at the close of the public hearing yesterday afternoon, and while no official report has been forthcoming, there is a feeling among its supporters that favorable consideration is assured.

It was agreed even before the public hearing closed yesterday, that the Sullivan bill, relative to racial and religious productions was "impossible." All of the protestants agreed to this, and while the Cogan bill, presented for the theatrical interests, was regarded as a feasible substitute, this measure met with opposition on the part of Wilson and his followers. Practically all of yesterday afternoon was devoted to the final arguments of the objectors

TIMES
...ress GLOUCESTER, MASS.
...e APR 29

WHO IS SUFFICIENT?

There seems to be something like general agreement that there should be some kind of censorship of moving pictures in this state. As to just what should be censored, there is even now violent differences of opinion, and in the days to come might possibly be more still. For instance, the films showing "The Birth of the Nation" have their ardent defenders even as they have their warm opponents. Just what principle should be employed in censoring films of this character is debatable.

The Sullivan bill which would forbid "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice," does not seem very good. For such prejudices are excited in very different degree in different people, and such a law might forbid the production of historical plays which are really very desirable. There are some rights which belong to people as a whole which must be regarded when anything like a cenorship is proposed.

But even if the principle is agreed upon, there comes the very critical question as to who shall be the censors. The members of the State Board of Labor and Industries are suggested as censors, although it is difficult to see why, by virtue of their position, they should have any particular qualifications for this task. But people differ very much. And even those who intend to be perfectly fair are influenced by suggestions and prejudices of which they are hardly aware themselves. To give fallible men such arbitrary power over what people shall see in pictures or on the stage is to surrender to a few rights which are commonly thought of as belonging to the many. This question of the men who shall make up such a board is therefore exceedingly important. The whole success or failure of a system of censorship indeed depends upon it.

We have a way of trying to regulate everything by law. But there are decided objections to this way. And there are even greater objections to surrendering our rights into the hands of a few men.

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 28, 1915

WHO IS SUFFICIENT?

There seems to be something like general agreement that there should be some kind of censorship of moving pictures in this state. As to just what should be censored, there are even now violent differences of opinion, and in the days to come might possibly be more still. For instance, the films showing "The Birth of a Nation" have their ardent defenders even as they have their warm opponents. Just what principle should be employed in censoring films of this character is debatable.

The Sullivan bill which would forbid "any show or entertainment which tends to excite racial or religious prejudice" does not seem very good. For such prejudices are excited in very different degree in different people, and such a law might in time forbid the production of historical plays which are really very desirable. There are some rights which belong to people as a whole which must be regarded when anything like ... citizens are ...

But even if the principle is agreed upon, there comes the very critical question as to who shall be the censors. The members of the State Board of Labor and Industries are suggested as censors, although it is difficult to see why, by virtue of their position they should have any particular qualifications for this task. But people differ very much. And even those who intend to be perfectly fair are influenced by suggestions and prejudices of which they are hardly aware themselves. To give fallible men such arbitrary power over what people shall see in pictures or on the stage is to surrender to a few rights which are commonly thought of as belonging to the many. This question of the men who shall make up such a board is therefore exceedingly important. The whole success or failure of a system of censorship indeed depends upon it.

We have a way of trying to regulate everything by law. But there are decided objections to this way. And there are even greater objections to surrendering our rights into the hands of a few men.

...Mass.
...AY 2

Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

MAKES STIRRING PLEA ON BEHALF OF THE NEGRO

Atty. Lewis Declares at Film Hearing That Race Asks Only Justice.

The legislative committee on the judiciary closed its hearings on the bills to-day on "The Birth of a Nation," yesterday afternoon. All that remains now is the framing of a bill to meet the situation and its presentation to the Legislature.

It was agreed some before the hearings closed that the Sullivan bill relating to moral and religious performances would be impossible. Butler R. Wilson, W. H. Lewis and Frank R. Sanborn all admitted that. The Cogan bill, presented for the theatrical people, which would give the chief censor, with appeal to the courts, is regarded as a good measure, but the objectors to the film are not satisfied with that by any means.

The afternoon was given over to the hearing of final arguments of the objectors and of opposing counsel.

The dramatic feature of the day went to Mr. Lewis, speaking against the film.

"I am not a politician, but people are not a problem," he said. "Except when they attempt to deprive us of our rights. We do not ask favors, we only ask for justice in this matter.

"This is a case of property rights, human rights. The property owners must be used in such a way as not to injure to our race." He read a telegram from Booker T. Washington expressing the hope that Boston would not stand for photo-play.

Plea for His People.

"They say that no offense in this film," he continued, "can be one of being a rapist, that any protests are being issued through racial prejudice, they attempt to take away our right from us, and then add that no offense is meant.

"They have assumed the proponents of playing politics. Twenty years ago when we came to Gov. Russell for the equal rights legislation, he stood by us and now Gov. Walsh takes a similar stand. He has proved himself worthy of his office. Do you think Sam McCall, who has stood with us in Congress for 16 years, is playing politics? How about Grafton Cushing, who was born here on what is called 'Nigger Hill'? He was brought up with us and has always stood straight. As for your speaker, I will leave it to your own judgment."

Butler Wilson for the proponents, said they opposed the Sullivan bill, and objected to the Cogan bill because it would not take effect until Aug. 1. They preferred legislation that would permit either the chief of the district police or the mayor of Boston to stop a production that was obscene, immoral, "sexually or otherwise," hostile to the welfare of the general public or tending to injure the morals of the community.

Representatives of labor unions had the floor directly in advance of Messrs. Lewis and Butler. They raised the argument that the shutting off of plays threw them out of work and that there was no reason why they should be made the persons to suffer.

Criticises Governor.

Gov. Walsh was sharply criticised as being responsible for much of the agitation against the photoplay by John F. Cusick, counsel for the company producing the film, at the opening of the hearing.

Atty. Cusick gave his version of the history of the protest against the film since it has come to Boston. He told how, after disturbances in front of the theatre where the film is being shown one Saturday night, a great many opponents of the play went to the State House the following Monday, Patriots' day, to protest to Gov. Walsh against the film.

"Gov. Walsh," continued Cusick slowly, "without seeing this play or talking with any representative of this play, told these people that if there was not law enough to stop the play he would see that a law was placed on the statute books to do so.

"There, sir, Mr. Gov. Walsh, you have caused a whole lot of this agitation and are much to blame for such a short-sighted policy."

Sawyer Offers New Bill.

Representative Sawyer of Ware, who said he had seen "The Birth of a Nation" and considered it "unfair and unjust to the Negro," was the first speaker at the hearing, which technically was for the benefit of the defenders of the play. Representative Sawyer was granted permission to appear, in order that he might file with the committee a bill bearing on the situation.

The Sawyer bill, briefly described, provides that on petition of 200 citizens of Boston that a play is unfair to their race, the mayor or his agent shall investigate the play, and conduct a public hearing on it within 24 hours and render a decision within 48 hours.

Albert Brackett, [illegible] for the theatrical managers of [illegible] said the time was [illegible] necessary to the [illegible] of motion pictures [illegible] Board of experience [illegible] confidence. He [illegible] representing [illegible] and Compo [illegible] while curtailing productions is [illegible] not believe in [illegible] formance on the [illegible] invited racial feeling. The theatrical "value" of the production, and had also stated: "This should prove a great step forward in motion picture development." The minority made no report.

Cusick then criticised Gov. Walsh, Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, Samuel W. McCall and Moorfield Storey for protesting against the play without seeing it. Cusick added the name of Secretary Frank Hammond of the executive committee of the Boston bar Association to this list, but was immediately corrected by Mr. Hammond, who stated he had seen the play before expressing an opinion on it. Cusick apologized, and then went on to give a list of names of prominent public men, writers and critics who had indorsed the play.

Opposes Sullivan Bill.

The Sullivan bill, Mr. Cusick declared, was unfit for Massachusetts legislation. He said it would stop all theatrical productions of any color or benefit. The Hallowell bill, he declared, would cause confusion, as it gave either the mayor or the police commissioner the right to suppress a play. The Cogan bill, he said, was the best one presented, as it gave the producer the right to appeal to a justice of the superior or supreme court from an adverse decision of the mayor and would give Massachusetts a better system of censorship.

Frank R. Sanborn, "The Sage of Concord," favored a return to the old system whereby the mayor licensed each production. He said that Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," was "unable to tell the truth" about civil war history.

Ignatius McNulty, John J. Barry and William C. Franke, representing several labor unions affected, opposed the legislation on the ground that many men would be thrown out of work. Mr. McNulty said it would be a shame to keep historical films from being shown, and said the colored people have not half the grievances on account of theatrical productions that red-haired people have.

Scions Invited to View Film.

The Governor and Legislature have been invited to witness the play at a special performance on Monday next.

Lieut.-Gov. Cushing, who is president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, issued a statement yesterday in which he said there is no adequate supervision of motion pictures, and that the national board of censorship only has power of recommendation. He said committees aggregating more than 200 men and women, representatives of state and city organizations, had investigated 1261 different films and photo-plays shown to children in 16 representative cities during a period of 12 weeks, and that they had reported more than 18 per cent. were objectionable.

The agitation which is the result of the production of "The Birth of a Nation," the statement says, simply emphasizes this necessity.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

NEWS OF THE THEATRES

The Ending Season Here in Boston—The Films of the Future—Forbes-Robertson's Tour of New England—Miss Kingston in New York—Items and Announcements

IT is to be observed with interest that not a few who warmly applaud President Lowell's letter about freedom of speech at Harvard over the war are bitterly opposed to a like freedom of speech on the stage in "The Birth of a Nation" about the Reconstruction Period in the South. In the one case the freedom accords with their opinions and prejudices, but in the other it does not. Therefore away with it. Much akin is the solemnly shamming debate about the extension of the meaning of the word "immoral" as applied to representations in the theatre. In that usage it has long signified only the individual dislike of the writer or the speaker for the play or spectacle to which he applied it.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

LEGISLATORS TO SEE PHOTO-PLAY

Hearing Closes on 'The Birth of a Nation.'

Bill Less Drastic Than the Sullivan Measure Expected.

W. H. Lewis Praises Stand Taken by Gov Walsh.

The hearing before the Legislative Committee on Judiciary on the several bills seeking to amend the existing statutes regarding public amusements and affecting the moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" in particular was closed at the State House yesterday afternoon after an all-day session.

The committee is likely soon to report a bill, possibly today or tomorrow. It is not expected that it will be as drastic as the Sullivan measure, but will undoubtedly define more clearly the character of entertainment that the existing authorities have the right to prohibit.

It is understood that the members of the Senate and House will attend a private view of the picture at the Tremont Theatre Monday morning.

Yesterday afternoon's session closed with a dramatic speech by William H. Lewis in answer to the charge that there was politics in the attitude of Gov Walsh. Hon Samuel W. McCall, Lieut Gov Cushing and Speaker Cox. Mr Lewis likened the Governor to Gov Russell, who during his administration took a stand in opposition to discrimination against the negro. He declared Gov Walsh "worthy of the place" and worthy to sit in the seat of Gov Andrew, who had "said he never hated any man because his color was black."

When the afternoon session opened Henry Sterling, representing the American Federation of Labor, was recorded as opposed to the Sullivan bill.

Argument of W. H. Lewis.

Frank Hammond, a Boston attorney, argued that under the theory of the libel law, motion pictures tending to hold anyone up to public hatred should not be permitted.

Adeline Moffatt, an artist, gave the opinion that the film is disappointing from an artistic point of view. She characterized it as "poisoned recreation." She declared that J. Wilkes Booth is still considered a hero in the South and that the 'Birth of a Nation' attempts to leave that impression of him.

That the National Board of Censorship was not unanimously in favor of the photoplay was brought out by Butler Wilson, who read from the dissenting opinions of the president of the board and several others who disapproved of the play.

The principal speaker for the proponents was Mr ewis. He said the question before the committee was one of property rights against human rights. Property must be used in such a way that it does no injury to our neighbors, he said. He read a telegram from Booker Washington expressing the hope that Boston would not stand for the photoplay.

The "Gus" scene, Mr Lewis asserted, is worse now than it was before they changed it. "I am sorry that Dr Fleischer has taken the stand he has," he said with deep feeling.

"They have accused the proponents of playing politics," he said, continuing his argument. "Twenty years ago, when we came to Gov Russell for the 'equal rights' legislation, he stood by us, and now Gov Walsh takes a similar stand. He has proven himself worthy of his office.

"Do you think Samuel McCall, who has stood with us in Congress for 16 years, in playing politics? How about Grafton Cushing, who was born here on what is called 'Nigger Hill'? He was brought up with us and has always stood straight. As for your speaker, I will leave it to your own judgment.

"They say that this film does not portray half of the real conditions. It does not. There is not a single thing about the actions of the Southern white man."

Mr Lewis read several documents illustrative of the real activities of the Ku Klux Klan and denounced it bitterly. As to the stand of the labor men, he said they had exaggerated the importance of the effect of the proposed legislation on the workingmen. Only a very few would be affected, he declared.

Closes for Proponents.

Butler Wilson then closed for the proponents. He said they opposed the Sullivan bill and objected to the Cogan bill because it would not take effect until Aug 1. They preferred legislation that would permit either the chief of the district police or the Mayor of Boston to stop a production that was obscene, immoral, hostile to the welfare of the general public or tending to injure the morals of the community.

The hearing was closed, after a brief statement by Mr Cogan that he would consent to have the "Aug 1" section stricken from his bill.

Cusick Puts Blame on Gov Walsh.

At the morning session Judge J. Albert Brackett, representing the management of a number of Boston theatres, said his clients were not directly concerned with "The Birth of a Nation," but in all laws governing the theatrical business. The present censorship, he said, works very well, and since 1909, when the present law was enacted, the Mayor's office has objected to several plays, all of which the theatre owners were only too glad to withdraw.

The advent of the moving pictures had caused this discussion, he said, not the "legitimate" stage.

"I think you should differentiate between the regular theatre and the moving picture film," he declared in conclusion.

John F. Cusick, attorney for the Epoch Film Company, owners of "The Birth of a Nation," who spoke next, said the film had been shown in San Francisco for several weeks, in Los Angeles several weeks, in Chicago and New York.

"It has been approved by the duly constituted authorities in Boston," declared Mr Cusick.

"Moorfield Storew hasn't seen the picture; Lieut Gov Cushing hasn't seen the picture; Mr McCall hasn't seen the picture and Gov Walsh hasn't seen the picture," asserted Mr Cusick.

He reviewed the history of the production of the film in Boston from the first time it was shown. His point was that the law had been complied with, but that agitators kept insisting that the pictures be barred, with the result that it had become a political question.

He told of the protest of colored people made to the Governor and the Governor's promise, which was, according to Mr Cusick: "If there is not a law on the statute books to stop this play I'll put one there."

Continuing, Mr Cusick said: "And I say, therefore, to Gov Walsh: 'You have caused a whole lot of trouble and are much to blame.'"

He said "The Birth of a Nation" was true to the conditions which existed in the reconstruction period, but considerably toned down. He also stated that 95 percent of the people who have seen the film want to know what all the fuss is about.

The Sullivan bill, Mr Cusick declared, was unfit for Massachusetts legislation. He said it would stop all theatrical productions of any color or benefit. The Hallowell bill, he declared, would cause confusion, as it gave either the Mayor or the Police Commissioner the right to suppress a play. The Cogan bill, he said, was the best one presented.

Frank Sanborn of Concord favored a return to the old system whereby the Mayor licensed each production. Ignatius McNulty, John J. Barry and William C. Franke, representing several labor unions affected, opposed the legislation on the ground that many men would be thrown out of work. Mr McNulty said that it would be a shame to keep historical films from being shown, and said that the colored people have not half the grievances on account of theatrical productions that red-haired people have.

TEMPLETON (Mass.) RECORDER
APRIL 30, 1915

The protest of the colored people of Boston against the picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," seems to be a sign for all the gubernatorial aspirants to get onto the band wagon in bid for the negro vote. First the Governor received a delegation of 2000 colored people at the State House on Patriots' Day and assured them of his interest and sympathy. Thursday afternoon the Lieutenant Governor, not to be outdone, appeared at a monster hearing in Room 240 before the committee on Rules, at which over 600 colored people were present, and although he admitted he hadn't seen the play he thought it ought to be stopped. And finally at the hearing before joint judiciary Friday a letter from ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall was read scoring the treatment of the play and raising his protest in defense of the negro race. As a matter of fact "The Birth of a Nation" is a most wonderful production. The first act deals with the war, the second the conditions in the South [after the war]. In picturing the conditions existing in the South during the Reconstruction period, when the "carpetbagger," "scalawag" and negro were in the saddle, and rode during five short years they literally the shoulders of the taxpayers in the Southern states debts aggregating nearly $300,000,000, it touches upon a sore spot in American history. But throughout the play there is not a slur cast upon the Union cause. If the negro is shown at his worst, he is also shown at his best in the person of the old family servants who stood by their masters and mistresses in every hour of danger and disaster. The character of Lincoln is painted at its best, and the surrender at Appomattox and the tragedy in Ford's Theatre are depicted with wonderful vividness and accuracy. It is really to be regretted that the crowd of leading citizens who have appeared in opposition to the play have not one has seen it produced. Judge [illegible] before whom the matter came last week Wednesday, seems to have known about the only prominent person who and see the play that he might know what he was judging. It is a most dangerous thing to stop a picture play simply because it defends women's prejudices. The margin is very narrow between interfering with a film production and abridging the [illegible] of one of the arts.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

SAYS REGULATION IS NEEDED

Statement of Lieut Gov Cushing on Movie Productions — Report on Study of Films in Boston.

Lieut Gov Grafton D. Cushing, who is president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, made yesterday the following statement in regard to "The Birth of a Nation" and the supervision of the "movies" as a whole:

"There seems to be a general impression that the agitation which has crystallized round the production of 'The Birth of a Nation' is sudden and transient protest. As a matter of fact, there is no adequate supervision of moving pictures.

"The National Board of Censorship has only power of recommendation. A committee of 40 citizens viewed in Boston 614 films and found that one out of every five was objectionable either because it pictured obscenity or immorality, presented vice as attractive, portrayed scenes grossly offensive to good taste or instructive in the methods of crime.

"There were 24 murder scenes, 22 drinking scenes, 14 of theft, 19 of prostitution, eight of gambling, five of suicide, five of marital infidelity, five of attempted murder, etc., and 10,000 children viewed these pictures.

"Committees aggregating more than 200 men and women, representatives of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Massachusetts, the City Federation of Women's Clubs in Boston, the Boston Social Union, Chambers of Commerce and men's clubs, after 12 weeks' inspection recently made of the character of films shown to children in 16 representative cities and towns throughout the State, reported that in a total of 1261 films over 18 percent were objectionable.

"It is conviction from personal experience of a large number of citizens in cities and towns of the State that in the light of these disclosures the control of the exhibition of moving picture films throughout the State is not adequate for protecting the child, but, instead, thousands of children are daily exposed to the harmful influences of such types of film as above described, and that there must be some proper regulation of the exhibition of motion picture films in Massachusetts.

"The agitation which is the result of the production of 'The Birth of a Nation' simply emphasizes this necessity."

ADVERTISER
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

PROPERTY RIGHTS VS. HUMAN RIGHTS

ARGUMENT OF THOSE FAVORING FILM CENSO

Heated "Birth of Nation" Hea ing Continued at the State House

A defense of Gov. Walsh, Lieut.-Gc Gushing, and Samuel W. McCall for the action in seeking some means of stopping "The Birth of a Nation" formed the ma theme of the rebuttal of William H. Lew for the colored men before the Committee on Judiciary yesterday afternoon at t continued hearing on the Sullivan bill.

"They have accused the proponents playing politics," said Lewis. "Twen years ago, when we came to Gov. Rus for the "equal rights legislation," he stoo by us, and now Gov. Walsh takes a simili stand. He has proven himself worthy o his office.

"Do you think Sam McCall, who ha stood with us in Congress for 20 years is playing politics. How about Grafto Cushing, who was born over here on wha is called 'Nigger Hill'? He was brought u with us and has always stood straight. A for your Speaker, I will leave it to you own judgment."

He said the question before the commit tee was one of property rights against human rights. Property must be used i such a way that it does no injury to ou neighbors, he said. He read a telegra from Booker Washington expressing th hope that Boston would not allow th photoplay.

Frank Hammond, a Boston attorney argued that under the theory of the libe law, motion pictures tending to hold any one up to public hatred should not be per mitted.

Butler Wilson then closed for the pro ponents. He said they opposed the Sulli van bill, and opposed the Coggan bill because it would not take effect until Aug. 1.

They preferred legislation that would permit either the Chief of the District Police or the Mayor of Boston to stop a production that was hostile to the genera welfare.

The blame for the present disorder and agitation for legislation barring the photo play the "Birth of a Nation" was laid a the door of Governor Walsh by Atty. John F. Cusick, representing the producers o the play, early in the continued hearing.

Cusick's speech was the feature of the day, and his criticism of the Governor' attitude caused a decided sensation.

Speaking of the riot on Saturday night at the Tremont Theatre, where the play is showing, Cusick declared that the result of it was the march on the State House and the Governor by the colored people.

Without Seeing Play

"Gov. Walsh," he shouted, "without ever seeing the play or talking with any representative of the play, who was misformed, told these people if there was not a law on the statute books to stop this he would see to it that a law was put on the statute books. There I say, Mr. Gov. Walsh, you are the cause of much of this agitation disorder and this short-sighted policy."

In opening Cusick declared that a condition had arisen in the state where it became necessary to state the truth, that formerly the theatrical interests had held back as a matter of discretion.

"The trouble with your situation," he said, "is that there is plenty of law on your statute books, but there are not the facts to support it. And you cannot breed facts into that picture to get enough facts to base your law upon. If the facts had been there you would have closed up the play. The reason you do not close up the play is that you have not got the facts."

Why Not Maternity?

Judge J. Albert Brackett, representing the Theatrical Managers' Association, the Shubert interests and others, said that the same law should not be made to apply to the "movies" as applies to the production of plays.

Only five plays have been stopped by the Mayor of Boston in eight years and these have been cheerfully withdrawn by the theatrical managers even though they did not trespass the law. "The really immoral plays are not objected to at all," said Judge Brackett.

"'La Tosca' is sung here every year and no one says a word although the opera is distinctly immoral. 'Camille' is countenanced and then occasionally a play like 'Maternity' or 'Damaged Goods' meets with official disfavor."

Frank Sanborn of Concord favored a return to the old system whereby the Mayor licensed each production.

Ignatius McNulty, John J. Barry, and William C. Franke, representing several labor unions affected, opposed the legislation on the ground that many men would be thrown out of work. Mr. McNulty said that it would be a shame to keep historical films from being shown and said that the colored people have not half the grievances on account of theatrical productions that red-haired people have.

SOMERVILLE (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 30, 1915

THEN AND NOW.

One circumstance conpected with the agitation over the production in Boston of "The Birth of a Nation," which has been apparently overlooked, is that Governor Walsh followed precisely the precedent set a few years before by Lieutenant-Governor Robert Luce concerning the admission to the State House of an overwhelming crowd of men, without even a ripple of criticism from the newspapers or the public.

IS FIGHTING TO UPLIFT THE MOVIES

MRS. ANDREWS' BILL FOR PROTECTION OF CHILDREN

Chairman of Women's Club Federation Says 18 P.C. of Films Are Unfit

Women who do things for their fellow humans, whether in civic, municipal, social service or other work, are always interesting. But particularly is this true in the instances where well-nurtured, carefully reared women give up lives of ease and social position literally to roll up their sleeves and devote their lives to helping the world's unfortunates. Such a person is Mrs. Julius Andrews, chairman of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, president of the Boston Council of Jewish Women, and executive and member of many other organizations for the betterment of human-kind.

Although but one branch of her many activities, it is perhaps through her juvenile court work, in co-operation with the late Judge Baker, that Mrs. Andrews is best known to the public. But even with that, as with all her other work, it has been the work itself, rather than the worker in the foreground—for the unselfish, modest worker has ever remained "out of sight," shunning publicity.

Activities Begun

But while her activities are legion the mass of her work may be defined in a few subdivisions, viz: legislative, wherein she represents and voices the thoughts of 60,000 members of the various women's clubs of Massachusetts at the State House; immigration work, meeting the ship loads of immigrants and directing the work of her agents who assist the unprotected immigrant landing here in every possible way, shielding them from unprincipled exploiters; educational work, in all its branches, and last, but not least, social uplift.

For 12 years Mrs. Andrews has been president of the Boston Council of Jewish woman. During most of this time she has been a loyal worker for clean and efficient legislation, studying law, and the meaning of law, and its ultimate effect on the community.

During this period she has also learned much of the personal psychology of the Bay State legislator, individually and collectively.

"Yes," admitted Mrs. Andrews, rather shyly, "I have gained some knowledge of the methods of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and I think these bodies are beginning to feel that I am learning."

"Is it hard work?"

"Well, yes, it is at times. Conditions, though, are slowly but surely improving for the women who are working for right legislative laws. Of course, some of the Senators are perhaps a little petulant at times (her eyes twinkled reminiscently), but when they know and understand the deep sincerity of the women who are giving their time and energies for clean and efficient legislation they generally alter their attitude."

In Film Hearing

Mrs. Andrews is at present particularly interested in the motion picture bill ("not the so-called Sullivan bill," she emphasized), but Senate 202, which provided for state censorship of motion picture productions long before the "Birth of a Nation" or the Sullivan bill was ever thought of in Boston. Senate 202 is a good bill and designed to protect the children of Massachusetts and maintain a high, clean standard of excellence in motion picture films.

"Our bill was favorably reported by the Social Welfare Committee, and it seemed that all was well. But in the meantime 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced in Boston, class-ified fomented and Mr. Sullivan brought in his bill, raising among others a question of religion and race.

"I am afraid there is a misunderstanding in the minds if the people and that the really good bill as originally drafted, providing for a wise state control, may be lost sight of and defeated in the turmoil.

"Our bill has the unanimous support of 62,000 intelligent, cultured women. Does not that mean something?" she inquired wistfully.

"The women of Massachusetts want this state control because they believe it is for the good of their children. To them 18 p.c. of the motion pictures shown in this state are objectionable and not fit for children to see. We aim only to protect the morals of our little ones, and the little ones of future generations. We believe the bill to be of great value (please have it clear that I refer to Senate 202, not the Sullivan bill), and are working with all our strength to get it through."

When the colored people assembled at the State House to protest to the governor concerning the production of the photo play, the governor, after considerable delay, admitted a delegation of sixty. The rest remained outside. This procedure was apparently recognized as proper by every one and no complaint was made.

When, however, the marching Boston Elevated strikers desired to enter the State House to impress the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration with their numbers, and Lieutenant-Governor Luce, then acting governor, ruled that only so many of the men should be admitted as could be accommodated in the largest hearing room in the State House, (capable of holding possibly 500) a storm of denunciation broke upon him. His action was made an issue of the following campaign, and undoubtedly assisted in his defeat which folllewed in the fall.

The conclusion is obvious either that the newspapers and public now realize that Lieutenant Governor Luce's action was just and proper, or that it makes a difference which citizens are kept out of the State House.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 28 1915

BLAMES GOVERNOR FOR PHOTO-PLAY AGITATION

Cusick Accuses Walsh of Causing Much of the Protest Against "Birth of a Nation"—Committee Closes Its Hearings—Report May Be Made This Week.

After devoting three full days to the advocates and opponents of legislation which would stop "The Birth of a Nation" and like productions, on the ground that they tend to arouse racial prejudices, the committee on judiciary closed its hearing yesterday afternoon and will take the matter up in executive session.

Whether or not the committee will file its report this week is a question. The theatre management has extended invitations to Gov. Walsh and the members of the Legislature to witness a private performance of the photoplay and action by the committee may be deferred until the invitation has been either accepted or turned down.

If proper arrangements can be made the management hopes to give its performance for the State officials next Monday morning.

Yesterday's hearing was featured by the statement of Attorney John F. Cusick, counsel for the film company, that Gov. Walsh is responsible for much of the agitation against the photoplay.

Scores Gov. Walsh

"Gov. Walsh," said Cusick, "without seeing the play or talking with any representative of this play, told these people that if there was not law enough to stop the play he would see to it that a law is placed on the statute books to do so.

"Therefore, Mr. Gov. Walsh, you have caused a whole lot of this agitation and are much to blame for such a short-sighted policy.

"This play is being given at present with great success in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, Kansas City and Chicago, and has been sanctioned by the authorities in all of these cities."

"Many of the men responsible for this condition have not seen the picture," continued Mr. Cusick, "Moorfield Storey, Lieut. Gov. Cushing, Samuel W. McCall and Gov. Walsh all admit that they have not seen the play"

He quoted McCall's book on "Thaddeus Stevens" and several history books to show that the film does not exaggerate conditions in South Carolina during the Reconstruction period.

When asked if he considered it did any good to open up old sores, he replied: "In the church you have your crucifix to remind you of the price of your salvation. The best minds in the world have decided that it is best to keep before the rising generation the experiences which show the price paid for its liberty."

Pleads for Theatres

Judge J. Albert Brackett, representing the Theatrical Managers' Association, the Shubert interests, and others, said that the same law should not be made to apply to the "movies" as applies to the production of plays. He brought out the fact that the theatrical men have invested in Boston more than $35,000,000, and their property, he said, should not be confiscated because of an offense to a certain class of people by a motion picture film. He had nothing to say regarding the merits or demerits of "The Birth of a Nation."

Ignatius McNulty, John J. Barry and William C. Franke, representing various labor organizations, appeared in opposition on the ground that many men would be thrown out of work by the stopping of the production.

McNulty said the colored people have not half the grievance against theatrical productions that red haired men have.

At the afternoon session Henry Sterling of the American Federation of Labor was recorded in opposition to the legislation.

William H. Lewis, Butler Wilson and other proponents of the legislation were heard briefly in rebuttal before the hearing was closed.

Telegram From Washington

A telegram from Booker Washington, expressing the hope that Boston will not stand for the photo-play, was read by Mr. Lewis. Continuing, Mr. Lewis said:

"They say that no offense is meant by this film. They accuse me of being a rapist, they depict my brothers as being hung without a trial, they attempt to take away the ballot from us, and then add that no offense is meant.

"The 'Gus' scene is worse now than it was before they changed it.

"I am sorry that Dr. Fleischer has taken the stand he has. He has always been our friend. He said he is glad that we are being forced to face the negro problem. I am not. Why should I be a problem to any man? I am a problem only to the man who seeks to take away my rights as a human being, and to such a man the negro must be a problem.

"They have accused the proponents of playing politics. Twenty years ago, when we came to Governor Russell for the 'equal rights legislation,' he stood by us and has always stood straight. As for your Speaker, I will leave it to your own judgment.

"They say that this film does not portray half of the real conditions. It does not. There is not a single thing about the actions of the Southern white man."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 29, 1915

The Judiciary Committee is not likely to make any report on the bill to stop "The Birth of a Nation" until after the legislators have had an opportunity to witness the performance as the guests of the theatre management next Monday.

The committee is also waiting for the result of conferences between representatives of the colored people and Police Commissioner O'Meara before taking any definite action on the bill.

WORCESTER (Mass.) GAZETTE
APRIL 29, 1915

"THE ESCAPE" SHOWN AT PLAZA THEATRE

"The Escape," which makes its first claim to fame because it is the work of D. W. Griffith whose other production, "The Birth of A Nation," has created so much talk, opens at the Plaza today. Its subject deals with a social problem in every phase of life.

BROCKTON (Mass.) TIMES.
APRIL 29, 1915

MOVIE AGITATION

A flood of bills dealing with the difficulties occasioned by the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" threaten the legislature. The agitation is being taken advantage of by aspirants for political advancement, as well as those who have the interests of the colored people at heart. There seems to be a wide diversity of opinion on the matter among the legislators. With a view to assist the members of both branches to form an intelligent opinion as to the merits of the picture, the management of the theater where it is being produced has invited the legislators to attend a special performance Monday [illegible]

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

Fourth "Birth Of Nation" Bill Is Presented

Would Give Censorship to Chief of State Police Instead of Boston Authorities

A bill granting to the chief of the district police the power of censorship of moving pictures and theatrical performances now vested by statute in the Mayor of Boston and the Police Commissioner, was submitted to the joint legislative committee on judiciary by J. Mott Hallowell.

This is the fourth bill aimed at the "Birth of a Nation" motion picture film now before the committee. This bill goes farther than most of the other bills in granting additional reasons for suspension of a license by the chief of police. It provides that when a performance is "obscene or immoral, whether sexually or otherwise immoral, or tends to injure the morals of a community, or tends to encourage, incite or cause lawlessness or a breach of the peace, and is not eliminated at his request, he may suspend the license."

An appeal to the Supreme Court is allowed the theatrical manager or licensee. Commenting on the bill, Hallowell said:—

"The bill is permissive and not mandatory. It would not be exercised therefore unless a legitimate cause existed. It omits all racial and religious matters.

"Theatrical exhibitions and photo-plays are not like the free press or free speech. No such exhibitions have been allowed in this Commonwealth without first obtaining a license. The State confers the right and the State has the same authority on proper occasion to revoke or suspend the right.

"Such exhibitions in Boston are patronized by all the cities and towns around Boston. The power of revocation or suspension should be exercised by an authority having wider jurisdiction than a municipal officer of Boston. The chief of the district police is suggested because that officer already has supervision of Sunday exhibitions; although any officer with equally wide jurisdiction will be acceptable to the petitioners."

Boston, Mass.
MAY 2

New York City

APR 2 2 1915

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 29, 1915

OPPOSE LEGISLATORS ATTENDING PHOTO-PLAY

The following letter was sent to members of the Legislature by the Equal Rights League last night:

To the Honorable Members of the Massachusetts Legislature:

Gentlemen—In the Boston Globe of yesterday evening, April 27, as a part of the report of the closing session of the joint judiciary committee on the Sullivan and Hallowell bills proposed for the purpose of stopping the performance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," based on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, Jr., of South Carolina, appeared these words: "It was stated unofficially in the hearing room that both branches of the Legislature are to be invited to attend a private performance of the film at the Tremont Theatre Monday morning."

The Sullivan bill was admitted to the Legislature after the time limit for the introduction of bills by a suspension of the rules as an emergency measure, to stop the "Birth of a Nation." The rules committee of the House through its chairman stated to the chairman of the delegation of the Massachusetts branch of the National Independent Equal Rights League, which conducted the hearing, that the committee wished to hear arguments proving the exigency and the inadequacy of present laws to meet that exigency. We respectfully request and petition you against this reported invitation of the theatre manager on the ground. First, that it would be the acceptance of a gratuity from interested parties who have appeared before the judiciary committee through counsel and others in opposition to this legislation as injuring their business; Second, because the date set would be an unwarranted delay for legislation to meet an exigency and would defeat that object as every performance of this photo-play is a serious injury and menace to the colored citizens of this Commonwealth.

E. T. Morris, Cambridge, chairman; M. W. Thurston, Boston, chairman of executive committee; Benjamin W. Swain, executive committee; W. M. Trotter, secretary.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 19

FROM TRAVELER READERS

From a Boston Lawyer.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

It is time we did a little clear thinking about the pass to which the citizens of Boston have been brought by the continued production of "The Birth of a Nation."

This play has now been given twice daily to large audiences for more than three weeks and the law as interpreted by the mayor and the police commissioner is such that in their opinion they have no power to stop it. The play must go on unless the Legislature grants relief. Meanwhile the sense of outrage, of insult and of humiliation has grown wider and deeper among the very large population of Negroes of Greater Boston. Rightly or wrongly they believe, and this belief is becoming stronger and more passionate every day—that the play is a libel on their race, and that it holds them up to public hatred, contempt and ridicule.

How will the situation develop? What will be the outcome? If the worst happens and there is rioting, public disorder, destruction of property, perhaps loss of life; if the hearts of our colored fellow-citizens are permanently embittered and a legacy of hate handed on to our children and theirs, how will the public authorities and the Legislature escape the responsibility for their failure to prevent such a disaster? What will be gained for so much lost? A theatrical exhibition which its promoters had no right to give, except by grace of the public authorities, has been continued for the great profit of its producers at the cost of all the citizens of Boston, white and colored, and at the expense of the good name of their city and the reputation of this commonwealth for decent and orderly government. Is the game worth the candle? I think not.

There is a well known principle which has been applicable in the law for centuries and which ought to be invoked in the present crisis. If a man libels or slanders another with malice, he is amenable to the criminal law. And it is no defence that the thing said or written is true. Why is this a crime punishable as such? Hear what Chief Justice Parsons said more than a century ago:

"A libel is a malicious publication expressed either in printing or writing or by signs and pictures, tending either to blacken the memory of one dead, or the reputation of one who is alive and expose him to public hatred, contempt or ridicule. The crime why libelous publications are offences against the state is their direct tendency to a breach of the public peace by provoking the party injured and their friends and families to acts of revenge which it would not be easy to restrain were offences of this kind not severely punished." (Commonwealth v. Clap, 4 Mass. 163.)

Note, then, that holding persons up to public hatred, contempt and ridicule is a crime, because it tends to acts of revenge and breaches of the peace. The play—it is believed generally by the colored citizens of Boston—holds the whole race, and therefore themselves, up to hatred and contempt. Many white persons—including myself—share in this belief. Is the commonwealth to fix on American the individual shadow to cause, forsooth, his victims may, in revenge, give him a deserved but wholesome thrashing; and at the time permit the maker of films to insult and libel a whole body of citizens and arouse them to acts a thousandfold more destructive of public order and decency?

No question of censorship is involved in the present situation. What is involved is the fair treatment of a very considerable body of citizens of Massachusetts and the maintenance of public law and order. It is said that our press must be free. Since when have we been required in the name of freedom to permit our theatres to sow the dragon's teeth in our midst? Our press, that we like so well to believe to be "free," can be called to account for criminal libel. Why not our theatres as well?

FRANKLIN J. HAMMOND.
Pemberton Building, Boston.

HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 191

NEGROES HEARD IN FILM CASES

Three Persons Guilty, Two Are Convicted and One Is Discharged.

Hayward, charged with loitering, explained that he had heard that his wife was injured in the crush and quit work to go to her side. Standing in front of the theatre, he said, a patrolman singled him out of a group of white persons standing around and ordered him to move. There was a short discussion and the officers arrested him.

E. P. Benjamin, his attorney, brought out that the patrolman had not told his client to move on seven minutes before the arrest, so the defendant was dismissed.

Fred Banks denied profanity, and the court said that he believed Banks was telling the truth, as he remembered it. Still, there was evidence that Banks had lost control of his tongue, and after a finding of guilty, the case was placed on file.

When the hour for adjournment came the court was taking evidence to the complaints against Mrs. Clara Fosky (charged with assault on Patrolman Van Laningham), Mrs. Eugenia Foster, James T. Bivens and Stephen Massey, charged with attempting to rescue Mrs. Fosky from the patrolman.

Policemen testified that Mrs. Fosky was arrested after she had hit Van Laningham three times with her fist, and as she was being taken down the street, the other defendants tried to interfere with the arrest. The defendants denied Mrs. Fosky's assault, and said that they laid their hands on the patrolman's arm, entreating him to let her go, as she was ill.

SLOW PROGRESS ON FILM BILL

No Action Likely Until Legislature Views "The Birth of a Nation."

Little progress has been made in the framing of a law to meet the situation which has developed by reason of the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation," according to reports.

Senate Chairman Norwood and House Chairman Kennard yesterday admitted that they were anxious to dispose of the matter with all possible speed, but that they had doubts as to whether anything could be done this week. It is understood now that the performance of the photo-play to which members of the Legislature have been invited will be given next Monday morning, and up to that time it is felt no special step can be taken.

"I am informed," said Senator Norwood, "that Butler R. Wilson has been in consultation with Police Commissioner O'Meara, and other steps are being taken to reach a settlement and an understanding as to what is best."

Mr. Wilson, it is said, is hoping that an interpretation of the word "immoral," so it shall cover such forms of immorality as Mr. Wilson believes are in evidence in the protested film, may

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 191

MINISTERS' RESOLUTIONS.

Representatives of Six Denominations Adopt Document to Be Presented to Legislative Committee.

Clergymen representing six Protestant denominations, for the most part committees appointed at ministers' meetings, met in conference yesterday afternoon in the Congregational House and adopted resolutions deprecating the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and recommending censorship legislation.

These resolutions will be presented today to the Legislative Judiciary Committee, which is now framing a bill for the Legislature, by a committee composed of Rev. Ansel E. Johnson of Everett, chairman of yesterday's conference, and Dr. D. H. Spaulding of the Baptist Publication Society.

At the meeting yesterday were present clergymen of the Baptist, Methodist, Episcopal, Congregational, Unitarian and Universalist communions of Greater Boston.

Two resolutions, presented respectively by Dr. Alexander Mann of Trinity Church and Dr. C. H. Spaulding, were adopted unanimously. They read:

"At a time when race prejudices and hatred are being deepened and intensified in Europe we deplore the public presentation of a play that tends to arouse such feelings among different races of American citizens. For this reason we are opposed to the presentation of the photo play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' and believe it to be contrary to good morals and sound public policy and we favor substantially the 'Hallowell bill,' which is intended to forbid such presentations.

"That we deem it of the highest importance that such a censorship of theatrical exhibitions and photo plays be constituted as will adequately protect the moral interest of the Commonwealth. We are, therefore, heartily in sympathy with the aim of Senate bill be found acceptable. This would mean amending the draft of the Hallowell bill which has already been submitted to the committee.

The Hallowell bill would eliminate the Commissioner of Police from the censorship of plays and movies, vesting sole authority with the Mayor, and, by the Wilson amendment, enlarge this power, and also would give the state police power to censor plays and photoplays on week days, whereas under the present law their activities solely are confined to Sunday performances.

GLOUCESTER, MASS.
APR 29 191

OPPOSE SENSATIONALISM.

Congregational Ministers Think It Out of Place in the Pulpit.

After an animated discussion at the Congregational Ministers' meeting in Pilgrim Hall, Boston, recently, a committee was appointed to confer with committees of other denominations, in ministerial session, as to the feasibility of uniting in sending a resolution to the Legislature, asking that body to be responsible for the censorship of "The Birth of a Nation," now being produced in Boston, and similar plays that are likely to arouse prejudice, or be detrimental to any race, creed or nationality. The members of the committee consists of Rev. Ansel E. Johnson, chairman; Rev. Henry Smith, Rev. Henry H. Adams, Rev. R. F. Leavitt and Rev. William Ewing. The discussion was opened by Rev. William W. Jordan of Clinton, who said that when speaking of Gov. Walsh His Excellency said that he was in favor of action being taken in regard to passing a law that will [illegible]

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.

Mae Marsh Favorite With Film Folk

Does Fine Acting in "The Birth of a Nation"

MAE MARSH.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 29 1915

FIND TWO GUILTY IN TREMONT ST. RIOT CASE

A [illegible] on the continued cases of 11 persons arrested Saturday night, April 17, in connection with the ministers' riot in the vicinity of Tremont Theatre, resulting from the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," began yesterday before [illegible] Court [illegible] a special session of Municipal Court.

Fred Banks, arrested on a charge of profanity, was found guilty and his case was placed on file.

John M. Hines, a waiter at the Haywood Hotel, was found not guilty of a charge of loitering and loitering wilfully and unreasonably, and was discharged.

"Used in the Pulpit," and the speakers were Rev. Dr. John G. Taylor of Arlington, Rev. Dr. Arthur T. Kempton of Cambridge and Rev. Dr. Wilson McNair of Cambridge.

Dr. Taylor said that "most professional evangelists would be without occupation if they were not sensational. It's their drawing card. In this case we may put up with it, but it is quite a different matter in the pulpit. People may be fascinated by sensational language for a brief time, but they discover sooner or later that the speaker has sought to feed them on husks will rather than win their confidence by the truth. A sensationalist is a [illegible] ster posing as an angel of light. He may play the game so skilfully as to regard himself as one sent from God to right the world. The crowd is not important, 50 men squaring their lives at home and abroad by Jesus would do more to transform the world into a bit of heaven than 1000 shouting Hallelujah in response to a lurid description of hell or a portrayal of Heaven.

Rev. Mr. Kempton did not believe that sensationalism, but he said that ministers make a mistake when they do not have as creative service on Sunday that will attract the [illegible] people.

Rev. Mr. McNair also spoke of the great good that can be accomplished by the preacher if he delivers the message of the Gospel in attractive language, but he added: "[illegible] may surprise his listeners by the [illegible] instructions of his address, and [illegible]

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

JOURNAL MAIL BAG

Mr. Trotter Replies to Editorial in Journal

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

While every editorial in any reputable Boston newspaper which upholds the photo-play "Birth of a Nation" slinks like the point of a digger into the heart of the colored American who sees in the continuance of the production the "Assassination of a race," his own race, permit me to say that the tone and spirit of your editorial of today is not disagreeable or rasping. As you call for fairness and truth, let me point out some possible errors. You say a "Minority of the Boston colored people" are fighting this photo-play. It is a fact that while two colored persons have been published as favoring the play and they have both publicly denied it, that all former factional lines are obliterated in opposing the play, leaders of the former feuds working side by side, that never before did enough people attend a protest meeting in Faneuil Hall to provide an outdoor overflow meeting, never before did enough colored people attend a protest meeting at any colored church to provide two overflow meetings as at the African Zion Church Sunday night; never before did even one-fourth as many colored people go to the State House to protest as on Patriots' day.

You ask "What should we think of a Southern city that would forbid 'Uncle Tom's Cabin'?" The white people of Atlanta, Ga., did forbid it. It was not permitted until the name was changed and all features representing cruelty to slaves eliminated, the opposition, headed by the Daughters of the Confederacy, stating: "Nobody has any right to come here and stir up sectional prejudice by offering such a play. The play recalls all the things we have been trying to forget."

If the South stops "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which helped free a race, written by the noble, responsible Harriet Beecher Stowe, why should Boston stop "The Birth of a Nation," whose author's admitted design is to cause the deportation of this race from its native land? Finally you say that if the newly enfranchised colored people had not made some bad mistakes "they would have been more than human." We will admit they made some bad mistakes, but not that of preying upon defenseless white women. "There's the rub," and the lie and the excitation of race prejudice.

You counter upon Mr. McCall, quoting his book against Reconstruction. In all his extravagant censure of that epoch, nowhere is there any hint of colored men preying upon, assaulting or forcibly marrying white women. None of the historians of that day who condemned Reconstruction charged the freedmen with crimes against white women. The "Birth of a Nation" pictures the all-absorbing passion of the colored man when granted citizenship as desire for white women. This is made a characteristic race trait by the half-decimated "Gus" scene, the commission of rape is the unescapable inference. Nothing stirs up racial hatred among white men and women so much as a representation of black men forcing white women into marriage and assaulting white girls. Remember, "Birth of a Nation" claims to be not a fiction, but fact. Hence the street talk of a lynching on Boston Common.

No play should be permitted which represents the men of one race as assaulters of the women of the other races in a country where all must live together. As you have given two columns to the author of "The Clansman," I believe you will give to me, your fellow-townsman and constant reader of your paper, whom you criticised, the justice of the publication of an answer to your editorial.

WM. MONROE TROTTER.
49 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.
April 28, 1915.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

Perhaps Mayor Thompson of Chicago will stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation," which is announced to be shown at a theatre there at $1 prices, beginning May 2, but it has got by the Chicago Board of Censors. The film was passed a month ago "by executive order" after it had been viewed privately by Mrs Carter H. Harrison and Charles C. Fitzmorris, then the Mayor's secretary.

MILFORD (N. H.) CABINET
APRIL 29, 1915
Boston

If Boston's fight for legislation will result in a closer censorship of the moving picture films, the "Birth of a Nation" may indirectly have accomplished a great good. Mrs. Andrews, one of Massachusetts best type of women, who has devoted her life to social uplift, says "10 per cent of the films are unfit for children to see."

POST
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

MOVIE RIOT CASES HEARD

Trotter and Puller Trials to Come Today

The cases of four of the 10 colored persons who were arrested on the night of April 17 in connection with the disturbances outside the Tremont Theatre in a protest against the showing of the film, "The Birth of a Nation" were disposed of yesterday by Judge Brackett in a special session of the Police Court.

Charles P. Ray, who was charged with throwing a decayed egg at the stage screen, pleaded guilty to the charge of malicious mischief. The charge of creating a disturbance, also brought against him, was dismissed. He was placed on probation with the understanding that he pay $20, the extent of the damage done to the screen.

James L. Dunn, a trustee of a church in Newton, charged by Sergeant King with using profanity, was found guilty and fined $2.

John Hines, head waiter in the Hayward cafe, was found not guilty of sauntering and loitering.

Fred Banks, charged by Sergeant King with using profanity, was found guilty, and his case was placed on file.

The cases of Mrs. Clara Fosky, charged with assaulting a police officer, and James T. Bivens, Stephen Massey and Louginia Foster, attempting to rescue Mrs. Fosky, were unfinished when court adjourned last night. It is expected that they will be finished this forenoon.

The cases of William Munroe Trotter and the Rev. Aaron Puller, charged with disturbing the peace and also with inciting a riot, will be heard today. The defendants will be tried together.

ADVERTISER
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

FIND TWO GUILTY IN TREMONT ST. RIOT CASE

Outgrowth of "The Birth of a Nation" Trouble Before Judge Brackett

A hearing on the continued cases of 11 persons arrested Saturday night, April 17, in connection with the miniature riot in the vicinity of Tremont Theatre, resulting from the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," began yesterday before Judge Brackett in a special session of Municipal Court.

Fred Banks, arrested on a charge of profanity, was found guilty and his case was placed on file.

John M. Hines, a waiter at the Haywood Hotel, was found not guilty of a charge of sauntering and loitering willfully and unreasonably, and was discharged.

His defense was that he had received a telephone message while on duty at the hotel to the effect that his wife had been injured in the pushing and shoving of the crowd on the street near the theatre, and that he was looking for her when placed under arrest.

James L. Dunn, a trustee of a Baptist church for colored persons in West Newton, was found guilty of a charge of profanity and was fined $2.

Charles P. Ray, charged with malicious injury to property in hurling an egg against the screen on the stage of the Tremont Theatre, pleaded guilty. He was placed on probation after agreeing to pay the theatre owners $20 in damages. A charge against him of disturbing a public assembly was dismissed for want of prosecution.

The case of Mrs. Clara Fosky, charged with assault and battery on Patrolman Van Lanningham of the City Hall ave. station, was called along with those of Stephen Massey and James T. Bivens, who are charged with attempt to rescue her from the officers. Patrolman Thomas Dowling testified that the woman drew a hatpin on him, and that she later punched Patrolman Van Lanningham in the stomach. This case was still on when a recess was called.

By agreement of counsel, the case of William Monroe Trotter, publisher of a paper for colored persons, and that of Rev. Dr. Aaron Puller, pastor of a church for colored people in the South End, will be the last ones to be called. They are charged with inciting riot and disturbing the peace.

WESTBORO (Mass.) CHRONOTYPE
APRIL 30, 1915

FRIDAY, APRIL 30, 1915

In attempting to suppress the "Birth of a Nation" we see another of those attempts on the part of a small faction of people to stop that which seems to be offensive to them. Should they succeed in their attempt it will be setting a bad precedent, for should every class feel that certain pictures or plays are offensive to the ir own particular class it will not be long before the picture companies and actors are thrown out of business. It may be well to suppress certain forms of drama, but when it is necessary to cater to any specific race or faction it is carrying the point a little too far.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

NEGRO RIOTERS FINED AND PUT ON PROBATION

Alleged Trustee of Newton Church Pays $2 for Profanity During Disturbance Over "Birth of a Nation"—Trotter and Puller Up Today.

At dusk last night the hearings of the negro men and women arrested outside the Tremont Theatre on Saturday night, April 17, during a demonstration against the film, "The Birth of a Nation," had not been completed. When court adjourned some of the defendants, who were charged with assault on an officer and attempting to rescue a prisoner, were on the stand in their own behalf. The cases of W. M. Trotter and Rev. Aaron Puller had not been called. Of four cases tried, one defendant was found not guilty and the other three either pleaded guilty or were convicted.

Because of the crowd, Judge Brackett took the cases up stairs into the grand jury room for the session. John Hines, a waiter at the Hayward, was first called, charged with sauntering and loitering. He told the court he went to the vicinity of the theatre in response to a telephone message which said his wife had been injured. He said at the time he was arrested he was still unsuccessfully looking for his wife. Justice Brackett discharged him.

The court held that Fred Banks was guilty of profanity, but placed his case on file. On the same offense, James L. Dunn, said to be a trustee of a Baptist church in Newton, was found guilty and fined $2. When Charles P. Ray was called to answer the charge of throwing an egg at the screen while in the theatre, he pleaded guilty. Upon agreeing to reimburse the theatre $20 for damages, he was placed on probation. The court ordered a charge of disturbing a public assembly dismissed for want of prosecution.

Clara Fosky, James T. Bivens, Stephen Massey and Louginia Foster were next called, the former charged with assault and battery with a hat pin on Patrolman Van Lanningham, and the others with attempting to rescue her after she had been placed under arrest. Patrolman Dowling testified that the woman threatened to use the pin on him and then struck Van Lanningham in the stomach. The latter's testimony had to do with the assault. The defendants had not completed their testimony when court adjourned for the day.

As District Attorney Pelletier has set tonight as the time limit for using the grand jury room, it is probable that the cases will be finished today. The charges against Trotter and Puller will be heard when those against the other four are disposed of. There was a big audience present throughout the hearing, which started at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

CHURCHES PROTEST "BIRTH OF NATION"

Clergy Representing Six Communions in Favor of the Hallowell Measure.

Resolutions protesting "The Birth of Nation" and also one in support of the Hallowell bill, which is aimed at this film, were adopted yesterday afternoon by clergymen representing the Baptist, Methodist, Unitarian, Universalist, Episcopal and Congregational communions of Greater Boston.

The meeting was held at the Congregational House on Beacon street. The resolution against the picture was framed by Dr. Alexander Mann, while the one surporting Senate bill 202, which provides for a new censorship of plays and moving pictures in Boston, was framed by the Rev. C. H. Spaulding of the Baptist Publication Society. The resolutions are as follows:

"At a time when race prejudices and hatreds are being deepened and intensified in Europe, we deplore the public presentation of a play that tends to arouse such feelings among different races of American citizens. For this reason we are opposed to the presentation of the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' and believe it to be contrary to good morals and sound public policy and we favor substantially the 'Hallowell bill,' which is intended to forbid such presentations."

This additional resolution was adopted:

"That we deem it of the highest importance that such a censorship of theatrical exhibitions and photo-plays be constituted as will adequately protect the moral interest of the Commonwealth. We are therefor heartily in sympathy with the aim of Senate bill No. 202."

ADVERTISER
Boston, Mass.
APR 29 1915

MINISTERS EXPRESS THEIR DISAPPROVAL OF PLAY

Meet and Draft Resolutions Favoring The Hallowell Bill

Ministers of several denominations gathered yesterday afternoon to express their disapproval of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." Those present represented the Baptist, Methodist, Unitarian, Universalist, Episcopal and Congregational communions of greater Boston. The statement they adopted was:—

"At a time when race prejudices and hatreds are being deepened and intensified in Europe, we deplore the public presentation of a play that tends to arouse such feelings among different races of American citizens. For this reason, we are opposed to the presentation of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation,' and believe it to be contrary to good morals and sound public policy, and we favor substantially the 'Hallowell Bill," which is intended to forbid such presentations."

The following resolution was also adopted:—

"That we deem it of the highest importance that such a censorship of theatrical exhibitions and photo-plays be constituted as wil ladequately protect the moral interest of the Commonwealth. We are therefore heartily in sympathy with the aim of Senate Bill, No. 202."

Both these resolutions were passed unanimously.

The chairman of the meeting, Rev. Ansel E. Johnson of Everett, and Dr. C. H. Spaulding of the Baptist Publication Society were instructed to present both these resolutions in person to the Joint Judiciary Committee, which is now framing a bill to be presented to the legislature.

JOURNAL
Boss: Boston, Mass.
APR 30

CONSIDER PLAY IN EXECUTIVE SESSION

Committee Receives New Bill Making State Police Chief Censor.

The committee on the judiciary, which at first announced it would take no action on the bills presented to stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" until after the members of the Legislature had witnessed a performance at the theatre Monday morning, will take up the various propositions in executive session today.

In addition to the bills which have already been submitted and heard, the committee yesterday received another measure from J. M. Hallowell, which would place censorship of photo-plays in the hands of the chief of the State police, the official who has the final say as to what may and may not be produced in the moving picture theatres on Sunday.

There were several conferences at the State House yesterday between Attorneys Cusick and Coggan, representing the picture management, and Attorneys Hallowell and Butler Wilson, representing those who protest against the production.

No compromise was effected, however, and the judiciary committee will have to thrash out the matter from the various bills before the members.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
APR 30

Fined for Row Over 'Birth of Nation'

As a result of hearings of negro men and women arrested outside the Tremont Theatre on Saturday night, April 17, during a demonstration against the film, "The Birth of a Nation," Fred Banks was found guilty of profanity, but Justice Brackett placed his case on file. On the same offence James L. Dunn, said to be a trustee of a church in Newton, was found guilty and fined $2. Charles P. Ray, for throwing an egg at the screen while in the theatre, pleaded guilty. Upon agreeing to reimburse thetheatre $20 for damages he was placed on probation. Other cases were to come up today.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
APRIL 29, 1915

MINISTERS APPROVE THE HALLOWELL BILL

Half Dozen Denominations Protest 'The Birth of a Nation.'

At a meeting of clergymen, representing the Baptist, Methodist, Unitarian, Universalist, Episcopal and Congregational Communions of Greater Boston, held yesterday afternoon in the Congregational House, the following statement was adopted:

"At a time when race prejudices and hatreds are being deepened and intensified in Europe, we deplore the public presentation of a play that tends to arouse such feelings among different races of American citizens. For this reason we are opposed to the presentation of the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' and believe it to be contrary to good morals and sound public policy, and we favor substantially the 'Hallowell bill,' which is intended to forbid such presentations."

The following resolution was also adopted: 'That we deem it of the highest importance that such a censorship of theatrical exhibitions and photo-plays be constituted as will adequately protect the moral interest of the commonwealth. We are, therefore, heartily in sympathy with the aim of Senate bill No. 202."

Both resolutions were passed unanimously.

The chairman of the meeting, the Rev. Ansel E. Johnson of Everett, and Dr. C. H. Spaulding of the Baptist Publication Society were instructed to present both these resolutions in person to the joint judiciary committee, which is now framing a bill to be presented to the Legislature.

Herald - Lagamore Apr. 30

FIRST PARISH CHURCH

"The Birth of a Nation" is the subject for Sunday morning. The sermon will deal with the photo-play now on exhibition in Boston, and will raise the question: "Is this an immoral exhibition?"

Boston, Mass.
MAY 2

(Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 29, 1915

MAN WHO THREW EGG IS FINED $20

"Birth of a Nation" Cases Partly Disposed Of.

Trotter and Several Others Will Have Their Hearings Today.

A special session of the Municipal Court in the Grand Jury room before Judge Brackett yesterday took up the cases of the colored people arrested April 17 in connection with the disturbances around the Tremont Theatre, where the film-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was playing.

Charles P. Ray, charged with throwing an egg at the screen in the theatre, pleaded guilty, and was placed on probation with the understanding he shall pay a fine of $20. James L. Dunn, charged with using profanity, was fined $5. Fred Banks, charged with profanity, was found guilty and his case placed on file. John Hines was found not guilty of sauntering and loitering.

Mrs Clara Fosky, charged with assaulting an officer, Luginia Foster, James T. Bevens and Stephen Massey, charged with attempting to rescue a prisoner, were still on trial when court adjourned last evening. Their cases, and the cases of Rev Aaron Pullen and William Monroe Trotter, charged with inciting a riot, will be before the court today.

MINISTERS' RESOLUTIONS.

Representatives of Six Denominations Adopt Document to Be Presented to Legislative Committee.

Clergymen representing six Protestant denominations, for the most part committees appointed at ministers' meetings, met in conference yesterday afternoon in the Congregational House and adopted resolutions deprecating the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and recommending censorship legislation.

These resolutions will be presented today to the Legislative Judiciary Committee, which is now framing a bill for the Legislature, by a committee composed of Rev Ansel E. Johnson of Everett, chairman of yesterday's conference, and Dr D. H. Spaulding of the Baptist Publication Society.

At the meeting yesterday were present clergymen of the Baptist, Methodist, Episcopal, Congregational, Unitarian and Universalist communions of Greater Boston.

Two resolutions, presented respectively by Dr Alexander Mann of Trinity Church and Dr C. H. Spaulding, were adopted unanimously. They are:

"At a time when race prejudices and hatred are being deepened and intensified in Europe we deplore the public exhibition of a play that tends to arouse such feelings among different races of American citizens. For this reason we are opposed to the presentation of the photo play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' and believe it to be contrary to good morals and sound public policy and we favor substantially the 'Halliwell bill,' which is intended to forbid such presentations.

"That we deem it of the highest importance that such a censorship of theatrical exhibitions and photo plays be constituted as will adequately protect the moral interest of the Commonwealth. We are, therefore, heartily in sympathy with the aim of Senate bill [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 29, 1915

MASS MEETING TONIGHT

The Massachusetts branch of the National Equal Rights League will hold a mass meeting tonight at the South Baptist Church on Shawmut avenue to protest against the acceptance by the Legislature of a free invitation to attend the "Birth of a Nation." A lively meeting is expected.

EVENING RECORD
ess: Boston, Mass.
APR 30 1915

New Bill Gives Three Power to Stop Any Performance

Unlimited authority to censor all theatrical performances is conveyed [illegible] upon the Mayor of Boston, [illegible]mire, Commissioner and the [illegible]rance [illegible] the Municipal Court [illegible] to the [illegible] Am [illegible] is favorably reported [illegible] the hearing Committee on Judiciary [illegible] the play. Reporting. The action [illegible] granted permission [illegible]ult of the activity [illegible] that he might file [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] The Sawyer bill [illegible] provides that on petitions of the bill, [illegible] Boston that a public hearing [illegible] decision of this [illegible] the mayor [illegible] the play, and the unanimous [illegible] ing on it within [illegible] there is no [illegible] a decision within [illegible] a hearing, [illegible] Albert Brackett, [illegible] the discretionary managers of themselves.

[illegible] the time was [illegible] the old [illegible] be necessary to [illegible] Commission [illegible] of motion pictures [illegible] joint- [illegible] Board of experience [illegible] only [illegible] ra confidence. He [illegible] In view of the latenes [illegible] im- [illegible] session, it would [illegible] pro- [illegible] any hurried legislation [illegible]

CONGREGATIONALIST
BOSTON, MASS.
APR 29 1915

The Growth of an Indignation

We believe in free speech, and that is the constitutional right under which protection is claimed for Thomas Dixon and D. W. Griffith in putting what they please into the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation." But we suggest that there is a point in the exercise of any kind of freedom where liberty becomes license, where the weak become victims of the strong—a point where law must say, Stop, or liberty becomes tyranny, outrage and anarchy. Existing laws, as interpreted, have proved too weak to secure justice for the colored people in California, New York and Massachusetts, when a fight has been made against the falsehood, vilification and immorality of "The Birth of a Nation."

The rapidly gathering storm of indignation in Boston, supported valiantly by Governor Walsh and later by Lieutenant Governor Cushing and many other prominent people of Massachusetts, including Hon. Samuel W. McCall, the Congregational ministers and other clergy and laity, has been demanding the passage of a law to stop this show.

Should law be invoked to stop such a play as "The Birth of a Nation"? The motive back of a questionable play is important. Thomas Dixon has frankly stated to us his motives in this play. It is to teach the whole country his radical Southern doctrines with reference to colored Americans. He wishes to show them in such a light that they shall be driven from the country. He glorifies in the play the mob murder of the Ku Klux Klan, and there and elsewhere advocates absolute white supremacy and the removal of all colored people from the United States.

Must colored American citizens submit to such propaganda? Shall we who love liberty, justice and truth submit to the attempted tyranny, injustice and falsehood that thus threaten the foundations on which our nation rests? Not only in Boston, but throughout the United States the time has come for such action as shall drive from our theaters—stage and screen—any propaganda of immorality, race hate and contempt for law.

ATHOL (Mass.) CHRONICLE
APRIL 29, 1915

THE protest of the colored people of Boston against the picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," seems to be a signal for all the gubernatorial aspirants to get onto the band wagon in a bid for the negro vote. First the Governor received a delegation of 2000 colored people at the State House on Patriots' Day and assured them of his interest and sympathy. Thursday afternoon the Lieutenant Governor, not to be outdone, appeared at a monster hearing in Room 21[illegible] before the committee on Rules, at which over 600 colored people were present, and although he admitted he hadn't seen the play he thought it ought to be stopped. And finally at the hearing before joint judiciary Friday a letter from ex-Congressman Samuel W. McCall was read scoring the teachings of the play and raising his protest in defense of the negro race. As a matter of fact "The Birth of a Nation" is a most wonderful production. The first act deals with the war, the second the conditions in the South after the war. In picturing the conditions existing in South during the Reconstruction period, when the "carpetbagger," "scalawag" and negro were in the saddle, and when during five short years they piled upon the shoulders of the taxpayers in nine Southern states debts aggregating nearly $300,000,000, it touches upon a sore spot in American history. But throughout the play there is not a slur cast upon the Union cause. If the negro is shown at his worst, he is also shown at his best in the person of the old family servants who stood by their masters and mistresses in every hour of danger and disaster. The character of Lincoln is painted at its best, and the surrender at Appomattox and the tragedy in Ford's Theatre are depicted with wonderful vividness and accuracy. It is really to be regretted that of the crowd of leading citizens who have appeared in opposition to the play hardly one has seen it produced. Judge Dowd, before whom the matter came last week Wednesday, seems to have been about the only prominent person to go and see the play that he might know what he was judging. It is a rather dangerous thing to stop a picture play simply because it defends somebody's prejudices. The margin is very narrow between interfering with a film production and abridging freedom of speech or of the press.

MANCHESTER (Mass.) BREEZE 518
APRIL 30, 1915

THERE IS NO DOUBT in the minds of most people that a certain film that has been exposed in Boston contained features that were objectionable from many points of view. It would be interesting, however, to learn who the advertising agents who was clever enough to carry his scheme to completion. By the time the film has been suppressed or expurgated the "movie" will have made an unusual "run" and netted a pretty penny for those concerned.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 29, 1915

'NATION' FOES NOW DISCARD SULLIVAN BILL

Discarding the Sullivan censorship bill as an ineffectual weapon with which to drive "The Birth of a Nation" out of Boston, opponents of the photo-play have shifted their interests to the Wilson bill.

The Sullivan bill has fizzled out.

Its tentacles were too apparent and its danger was written all over it, in bold, legible type.

Accordingly, the agitation has been transferred to the Wilson bill, which would accomplish the same purpose as the Sullivan document, but the designs of which are cloaked in less turbulent language.

Incidentally, this swapping of horses has aroused a sullen opposition in the Committee on Judiciary.

Outspoken opposition to the entire program and all its drastic provisions has developed in the committee.

"The committee, composed entirely of lawyers, is supposed to sit as a judicial body and pass upon the evidence for legislation presented to it," said one of the members, "but when the proponents of legislation present such a divided front as in this case the committee ceases to be impressed [illegible] attitude."

When the Sullivan bill was filed for consideration and was accorded its first hearing its principle was heartily indorsed by the opponents of the photo-play. When it became evident that the Sullivan bill was regarded as a dangerous document, striking at the American doctrine of free thinking and at the same time serving to impair the value of property and business, the switch was made to the Wilson bill.

Under the Wilson bill, interpretation of the word "morals" in the present statutes is so broadened as to include the conditions that were sought in the Sullivan bill. Its purpose, however, was cloaked in a more subtly drawn petition, which on its face was apparently harmless. The scope is further extended to remove immoral entertainments and to place arbitrary power in the Mayor of Boston.

Further extending the attack upon "The Birth of a Nation," the Wilson bill also distributed power to suppress a play to the acting chief of the district police. Whether by chance or not, this official has expressed some disapproval of the photo-play.

Another offshoot of the agitation has vested its support in the J. Mott Halliwell bill, which would enlarge the arbitrary powers of local officials and designate a man or two to pass upon the morals of the entire State.

PRINCIPLES AFFECTED.

It is this failure to agree upon a separate petition, coupled with the more imposing fact that the entire mass of legislation against a single motion picture strikes at the cardinal doctrine of free thinking and speech, that has aroused the ire of individual members of the committee.

Incidentally an argument recently advanced by Chairman Frederick P. Fish of the State Board of Education upon a proposition which has no relationship to the picture agitation has, however, impressed itself upon the Judiciary Committee. Speaking upon the fact that Orleans has become a refuge for tax-dodgers, Mr. Fish declared, "It is not the duty of this Legislature to legislate upon episodes. You are legislating for all time and not upon individual cases."

The fact that the immediate drive against "The Birth of a Nation" would ultimately result in breaking down sturdy principles of government has been seriously considered by the committee.

But the committee has been presented with the further contention that "The Birth of a Nation" itself does not warrant legislative action.

Moorfield Storey, an opponent of the picture play, admitted to the committee that there was sufficient law upon the books to stop the play. William H. Lewis and Butler R. Wilson, the colored leaders, made the same admission. Deputy Chief Neal of the State Police agreed with them and with Mr. Storey.

By the official findings of the municipal authorities of Boston charged with the enforcement of the law, the picture play was found not to be a violation of law. The play was viewed by Judge Thomas H. Dowd and in his judicial finding there was found no cause to stop the play.

"PORTRAYS HISTORY."

Dr. Charles Fleischer and other clergymen went before the committee voluntarily and testified that they had witnessed the picture and that they regarded it as a valuable historical and educational entertainment.

Perhaps the most convincing testimony was submitted by the Rev. Dr. Thomas B. Gregory, the eminent author and historian. Dr. Gregory has seen the play. He lived through the reconstruction period of the South. He declared that the picture does not distort history. He asserted that it portrays history with a remarkable accuracy.

This evidence is regarded by the committee as completely refuting the hearsay evidence of Mr. Storey, Lieutenant-Governor Cushing and Mr. McCall, who have not seen the play. It was Mr. McCall in his literary effort, "Thaddeus Stevens," who condoned the distr[illegible] days of the reconstruction [illegible] but at that time [illegible] of running [illegible] tisfied

[illegible] Boston, Mass. [illegible] to be outdone, [illegible] Commissioner [illegible] Mayor [illegible] Chief Justice [illegible] Municipal Court [illegible] Police Commissioner [illegible] Boston

EVENING RECORD
ess: Boston, Mass.

APR 30 1915

Photo Play Not Barred

The management of "The Birth of a Nation" Co. have issued this statement: "In reference to circulated statements that 'The Birth of a Nation' had been barred in the states of Rhode Island and Ohio, we beg to say that Mr. Griffith's play has not been offered in either of those states to theatre managements, censor bodies or in any other manner whatsoever. Therefore the talk of its having been barred in those states is ridiculous. California, New York, Massachusetts and Illinois are the only states where arrangements have so far been entered into to produce it, and it has passed the censorship in each of those states and likewise in Philadelphia. The above statement is based on accurate information which we have just obtained from our New York headquarters."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 30, 1915

COMMITTEES
...ion ... Judiciary committee. Executive session of committee to consider matter today.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 30, 1915

CONSIDER PLAY IN EXECUTIVE SESSION

Committee Receives New Bill Making State Police Chief Censor.

The committee on the judiciary, which at first announced it would take no action on the bills presented to stop the production of "The Birth of a Nation" until after the members of the Legislature had witnessed a performance at the theatre Monday morning, will take up the various propositions in executive session today.

In addition to the bills which have already been submitted and heard, the committee yesterday received another measure from J. M. Hallowell, which would place censorship of photo-plays in the hands of the chief of the State police, the official who has the final say as to what may and may not be produced in the moving picture theatres on Sunday.

There were several conferences at the State House yesterday between Attorneys Cusick and Coggan, representing the picture managements, and Attorneys Hallowell and Butler Wilson, representing those who protest against the production.

No compromise was effected, however, and the judiciary committee will have to thrash out the matter from the various bills before the members.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 30, 1915

FOURTH "BIRTH OF NATION" BILL IS PRESENTED

A bill granting to the chief of the district police the power of censorship of moving pictures and theatrical performances now vested by statute in the Mayor of Boston and the Police Commissioner, was submitted to the joint legislative committee on judiciary by J. Mott Hallowell.

This is the fourth bill aimed at the "Birth of a Nation" motion picture film now before the committee. This bill goes farther than most of the other bills in granting additional reasons for suspension of a license by the chief of police. It provides that when a performance is "obscene or immoral, whether sexually or otherwise immoral, or tends to injure the morals of the community, or tends to encourage, incite or cause lawlessness or a breach of the peace, and is not eliminated at his request he may suspend the license."

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
APRIL 30, 1915

Deny States Bar 'Birth of Nation

The management of "The Birth o... Nation" Company states in deni... circulated statements that "Th... of a Nation" had been barred ... the States of Rhode Island and ..., that Mr. Griffith's play has not ... offered in either State. Cali... nois are the only States where ar... ements have so far been entered ... to produce it, and it has passed ... censorship in each of those States ... likewise Pennsylvania.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 30, 1915

NEW BILL ON "BIRTH OF NATION"

Governor and Legislature Invited to Special Performance

A new bill to provide for censorship of such plays as "The Birth of a Nation" will be considered today by the legislative committee on judiciary this morning.

Yesterday afternoon Senator F. Augustus Norwood, chairman of the committee, and Senator James F. Cavanagh held conferences with leaders of the opposing forces on this subject.

At the conference held with Mott Hallowell and Butler R. Wilson, a new bill was submitted to cover the viewpoint of the colored people and others.

SWEEPING IN SCOPE

This bill is even more sweeping than the Sullivan bill, which has been discarded. It provides that the licensing and censoring power respecting theatrical productions shall be taken out of the hands of the Mayor and police commissioner and given over to the chief of the State police. It also provides that licenses may be suspended for additional reasons to those named in the present law.

The new bill strikes out sections 2 and 3 of chapter 494 of the acts of 1909 and substitutes therefor the following:

The New Bill

"Section 2. If at any time under a license granted hereunder there shall be given a theatrical production, public show, moving picture, photo-play or other pictorial representation, public amusement or exhibition any part of which in the opinion of the chief of the Massachusetts district police is obscene or immoral, whether sexually or otherwise immoral, or tends to injure the morals of the community or tends to encourage, incite or cause lawlessness or a breach of the peace, and is not eliminated at his request he may suspend the license for such particular representation.

"Section 3. The licensee, if aggrieved by any action taken under section 2 of this act may at any time within 10 days appeal by petition to the Supreme Judicial Court setting forth the proceedings and the reasons for the appeal. The proceedings upon said petition shall be summary and shall be entered and heard in the county of Suffolk."

Attorney John F. Cusick, representing the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" and others who also had a conference with Senators Norwood and Cavanagh objected to this new bill. They favored legislation that would only permit the suspension of theatrical licenses if, in the opinion of the licensing authority, a production is "obscene or immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community."

Differences of Opinion

In addition to these differences of opinion as to proposed legislation there are those who believe that the theatrical license law applying to all other cities and towns in the Commonwealth except Boston should apply to Boston. This would give the licensing authority the right to suspend a theatrical license for any reason whatever. The committee has been urged to favor the law for Boston.

There are not any serious differences between the warring forces as to what officials shall be given the licensing authority. The breadth of the scope of authority to revoke licenses is the only real issue.

Senator Norwood stated last night that he expects his committee to take some definite action on this matter at its meeting this morning.

Monday morning at 10:30 a special presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" will be given at the Tremont Theatre for the benefit of the Governor, members of the Executive Council and members of the Legislature.

Invitations have been sent to these officials by the producers of the show. It is expected that most of the members of the Legislature will be present at the performance.

DENIAL BY MANAGERS

"Birth of a Nation" Not Offered in Rhode Island or Ohio, They Say

The management of "The Birth of a Nation" Company issued the following statement from the Tremont Theatre last night:

"In reference to circulated statements that 'The Birth of a Nation' had been barred in the States of Rhode Island and Ohio, we beg to say that Mr. Griffith's play has not been offered in either of those States to theatre managements, censor bodies or in any other manner whatsoever. Therefore, the talk of its having been barred in these States is ridiculous.

"California, New York, Massachusetts and Illinois are the only States where arrangements have so far been entered into to produce it, and it has passed the censorship in each of those States and likewise in Pennsylvania. The above statement is based on accurate information which we have just obtained from our New York head quarters."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 30, 1915

DENY BARRING OF 'BIRTH OF NATION

Photo-Play Not Offered in Rhode Island, Says Management.

Despatches from Providence yesterday to the effect that the police commissioners of that city will not allow the production there of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" brought out the following statement from the management of the play last evening:

"In reference to circulated statements that 'The Birth of a Nation' had been barred in the States of Rhode Island and Ohio, we beg to say that Mr. Griffith's play has not been offered in either of those States to theatre managements, censor bodies or in any other manner whatsoever. Therefore the talk of its having been barred in these States is ridiculous.

"California, Massachusetts and Illinois are the only states where arrangements have so far been entered into to produce it, and it has passed the censorship in each of those States and likewise in Pennsylvania. The above statement is based on accurate information which we have just obtained from our New York headquarters."

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 30, 1915

TO DRAFT THEATRE CENSOR BILL TODAY

Several Measures Before Judiciary Committee.

Little Hope for Sullivan Plan—Near Against "Birth of Nation."

The Legislative Committee on Judiciary, which has been conducting public hearings this week on several bills to control theatrical productions, will hold a private session at 10 a.m. today to agree on a measure. Whatever the result may be, a change in the present form of censorship in Boston is more than probable.

At present the authority to forbid a play is divided between the Mayor and Police Commissioner. Neither, it is understood, is eager to assume the entire responsibility, although firmly believing the power should be vested in one man.

Those who want "The Birth of a Nation" stopped submitted to the Committee on Judiciary yesterday a bill placing the censoring in the hands of the Chief of the State Police, and giving the amusement proprietors the right of an appeal to the Supreme Court. Another bill, favored by the theatrical interests, gives the Mayor the sole authority to censor plays and the amusement proprietors the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

Neither touches the racial or religious questions—two features of the Lawis-Sullivan bill which, by the way, will receive scant attention from the committee, because of its drastic provisions.

It is interesting to note in connection with the bill providing that the Chief of State Police be made censor, that the present acting head of that department, Deputy Chief George C. Neal, has forbidden Sunday performances of "The Birth of a Nation" (such matters being within his jurisdiction), and has further stated that if he had his way the picture would never be exhibited.

Yesterday the legislators received neatly engraved invitations from the management to attend a private performance of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont theatre Monday morning at 10:30.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
APRIL 30, 1915

NEGROES CHARGE AN ATTEMPT TO BRIBE SOLONS

Protest Invitation to Attend "Birth of a Nation" Production.

BIG MASS MEETING HELD IN CHURCH

Pass Resolutions Asking Legislature to Pass Hallowell Bill.

Charges that the producers of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," were attempting to bribe the Legislature were made last night at a big mass meeting of colored citizens in the Twelfth Baptist Church, Roxbury.

The meeting was called to protest against the invitation extended to the members of the Legislature to attend a private exhibition of the picture Monday morning, together with Gov. Walsh and the executive council. This, the negroes asserted, was "bribery."

The meeting was held under the auspices of the National Equal Rights League, and was still in session at an early hour this morning. Emery T. Morris of Cambridge acted as chairman, and the speakers were mostly colored ministers, business men, lawyers and other professional men, although the members of the audience, which numbered several hundred, were allowed to air their views at the close of the meeting. The names of Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner O'Meara were roundly hissed, although Governor Walsh was eulogized and applauded every few minutes.

Scores Legislators

William D. Brigham, the only white man who spoke, told of the hearings at the State House before the legislative committees on the bills aimed to stop the production. He termed the films the "Curse of a Nation" and "The Death of a Nation." He also scored the legislators and their attitude at the hearing.

The Rev. Benjamin F. Swain, colored, asserted that Gov. Walsh was one of the best friends of the colored race in the country. This statement was warmly applauded.

Joshua Crawford, a colored lawyer, scored the invitation of the producers of the photo-play which had been extended to the members of the General Court to witness the films. "To accept these tickets for this private exhibition is to accept a bribe," he asserted.

The Rev. Samuel A. Brown, colored, characterized the State House hearing as a "tricky, unfair and negarious on the part of the members of the committee and the people interested in the play." He also introduced a petition, which will be presented to Gov. Walsh Saturday by a committee of 100 colored men to send a special message to the Legislature to urge them not to attend the free exhibition of the pictures. Those present were requested to sign.

Prof. Whe...

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 30, 1915

DECIDE ON "MOVIE" BILL

Members of Judiciary Committee Will Report Measure Allowing Mayor, Police Commissioner and Chief Justice of Municipal Court to Revoke Licenses at Will

A decision has been reached by the members of the joint Committee on the Judiciary in regard to the bill for the censorship of the moving pictures, and about which there has been such agitation because of the production of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation." Representatives Abbott and Bowser will be recorded as dissenters. Although no bill has been drafted yet by the committee, which met this morning, the measure will provide substantially that the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the Municipal Court of Boston may, at their pleasure, revoke the license of any theatre. The order to revoke, however, must be unanimous, and there is to be no right of appeal to any court by the theatre whose license is revoked.

The committee has decided to eliminate from the bill any words containing the grounds for which the license might be revoked, such as "immoral, obscene, etc."

The committee came to this decision after having had submitted to it four measures. Two came from J. Mott Hallowell. The first of these gave the mayor of Boston and the chief of the district police the right to revoke a license if the production which was being shown at the theatre tended to incite riot or cause public disquiet. The second bill gave the chief of the district police the right to revoke the licenses, but the theatres had the right to appeal to the courts.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 30, 1915

CHARGED WITH INCITING A RIOT

Trial of Rev Aaron Puller and W. M. Trotter Begun.

King Says They Urged Colored People to Stay Around Tremont Theatre.

When Judge Brackett adjourned court in the Grand Jury room of the Courthouse yesterday afternoon the cases of William Monroe Trotter and Rev Aaron Puller, charged with inciting a riot and disturbing the peace at the Tremont Theatre, in connection with the production of the "Birth of a Nation," April 7, were being tried.

Sergt King of the Lagrange-st Station, chief witness for the Government, testified that the two defendants were asked to leave the theatre, and not only refused to go but urged several hundred other colored people to stay, as they had a right to see the show. The officer testified that he told them there were no more tickets for sale, but they refused to believe him. The officer in cross-examination said that he had booked both defendants for disturbing the peace and had placed the other charge later under instruction.

Earlier in the day Mrs Clara Fosky, charged with assaulting an officer, was fined $15; Mrs Lugenia Foster was fined $5 for attempting to rescue Mrs Fosky and $1 for hitting an unknown man; Stephen Massey was fined $5 for attempting to rescue Mrs Fosky and Jas Bevins charged with the same offense was found not guilty.

The defendants who were fined appealed through attorney Benjamin and were allowed to go on their personal recognizance in $100 each.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
APRIL 30, 1915

FILM RIOT HEARING IS CONTINUED

JUDGE BRACKETT GETS PHOTO-PLAY EVIDENCE

Cases of W. Monroe Trotter and Rev. Aaron Puller Called in Special Session

The cases of William Monroe Trotter, publisher, and Rev. Aaron Puller, pastor of a South End church, were called late yesterday afternoon at the special session of Municipal Court, Judge Brackett presiding, to hear cases resulting from the near riot Saturday, April 17, growing out of the presentation of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre.

Trotter and Dr. Puller are charged with inciting riot and disturbing the peace, a were two of 11 persons arrested on the night for various alleged offenses in vicinity of the theatre. Their cases were still on when court adjourned for the day and the hearing will be resumed this morning.

Sergt. King, of the Lagrange st. station, who made the arrests, was the first and only witness heard yesterday. He testified as to the crowds about the theatre on the night in question, and said that when both defendants were requested to leave the lobby they refused to do so, and that they told several hundred other colored persons present at the time not to go. They refused to go, he said, on the ground that they were waiting to purchase tickets and that they had a right to see the show. They were informed that there were no tickets on sale, but they refused to believe this statement. As a result of their refusal to leave the lobby, and urging others not to obey the police orders to leave, Sergt. King said that a disturbance followed.

He admitted, under cross-examination that on the night the arrests were made he only made a charge of disturbing the peace and that, under orders, he placed the additional charge of inciting riot, later next day.

Mrs. Clara Fosky, charged with assault and battery on Patrolman Van Lannham, of the City Hall ave. station, was found guilty and fined $15.

Mrs. Lugenia Foster was fined $5 for attempt to rescue Mrs. Fosky from the resting officers, $1 for hitting a man, whose identity is unknown, with her bag.

Atty. Benjamin, who appeared for defendants in the case, thanked Brackett for the leniency shown where defendants were found appealed from the decision of the saying that he intended to take the as far as possible in the courts in deavor to clear the defendants of reputations. The defendants were to go in personal recognizance each case.

NO. ATTLEBORO (Mass.) CHRON.
APRIL 30, 1915

—Gov. Walsh and the members of the legislature have been invited to attend a special performance of "The Birth of a Nation," to be given for their observation next Monday morning at 10.30.

FALL RIVER (Mass.) HERALD
APRIL 30, 1915

A new bill designed by the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" was filed with the committee on judiciary yesterday. It would give to the chief of the district police the power of censorship over moving pictures produced on week-days, just as he is empowered at the present time to stop the production of such photoplays on Sundays. The measure will be taken up by the committee in executive session today. Gov. Walsh and the members of the Legislature have been invited to attend a private performance of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont theatre Monday morning and it was the original intention of the judiciary committee not to take any action on the bills presented until after that performance.

FITCHBURG (Mass.) SENTINEL
APRIL 30, 1915

The point has been made against [illegible] seeing a "the Birth of a nation" by the legislature Monday forenoon that there will be bribery of the members. But that is an extreme view and no man of common sense will so regard it. Most [illegible]

MAY 2

Representative ... other petitioners ... stop the fourth week of ... of a Nation," ... submitted to ... engagement ... Coggan, counsel ... theatre chain, ... this gave the ... revoke the ... ever, the ... Court.

FITCHBURG (Mass.) NEWS
APRIL 30, 1915

Movies Managers Here To Start Campaign For Three Days

It has been decided by the motion picture exhibitors of Fitchburg and Leominster that a campaign lasting until Monday will be conducted against the Sullivan photo play censorship bill, at the meeting held last Wednesday night.

Petitions have been started in both this city and Leominster. Hundreds of circulars, containing a coupon to be signed, protesting against state or federal censorship, have been distributed to patrons of the theatres.

It was stated today that this same campaign was being carried on all over the state and that thousands of prominent doctors, lawyers, business men, and some ministers, as well as the many working men and women of the state employed in lesser trades, have already signed and returned the coupons.

Boards of trade are taking up the fight and it is expected that when the bill comes up next Tuesday, it will be overwhelmingly defeated as the senators are now becoming aware of the sentiment that is said to be aroused against the proposed measure, which is wide in its scope.

It is stated that the bill would prevent the showing of any deaths, violent or otherwise, any love making scenes, any daring jumps, thrilling situations, etc., to such an extent that were the bill to become a law, the photo plays would be killed entirely.

It is believed that the controversy in Boston over the production of "The Birth of a Nation," has done much to arouse agitation in certain quarters. One of the exhibitors in this city said today: "The Birth of a Nation' has had much to do with this hysteria. It has given a few politicians a chance to frame up another deal that will prove, this time, to be their ruination. 'The Birth of a Nation' is not anywhere near as bad as it is pictured. The hysteria that has been aroused, if paid attention to, will result in the abolition of free speech.

"But as far as the Sullivan bill is concerned. That is another piece of crazy legislation being attempted, in my opinion. It will be the end of the motion picture interests in this state, if passed. Photoplays are at present censored by the National Board of Censorship. This is a voluntary organization of 101 men and women of the highest moral standing. They treat all manufacturers of films alike and it is wrong to suppose that everything gets by them. That is not true, for they have refused to put their official O. K. on films that have been shown without it and passed by state boards.

"The state of Massachusetts cannot afford to experiment with anything of this sort. In this state there are millions of dollars invested in the film exhibitions, theatres and exchanges. Thousands are given work and we pay heavy taxes. We have opened up the desolate small towns and thus reduced the percentage of insanity—which is causd, we are officially informed, by the lack of entertainment and diversion in small towns.

"The liquor interests are fighting us, tooth and nail. We have hurt the liquor business to some extent. We have attracted welfare legislation to the pictures and we have given dollar for dollar in entertainment to the thousands who formerly used to ask diversions on the streets.

"It is right in the hands of the people. They can kill this bill and I think they will do so. It is an absurd as the famous Witch laws and as I see it, it is not framed, I do not honestly believe because of any paternal interest in the morals of the state."

'BRIBE" TALK WITH REGARD TO FILM SHOW VISIT FAR-FETCHED AND CRUDE

Plan of Legislators to See "Birth of a Nation" Pictures on Monday Arouses Ire of Equal Rights League and Starts Some More Intemperate Talk.

The charge made by the Massachusetts Equal Rights league that the Tremont theatre was "bribing" the legislature by extending an invitation to attend a private performance on Monday, May 3, at 10.30 in the forenoon, has had quite a different effect upon the senators and representatives than was evidently expected.

There have been many quiet chuckles around the State house at the idea that the invitation to see a film—the utmost cost of the seat at a public matinee performance being $1—was a bribe to the solon who accepted it.

This is not the first time the legislators have looked at films or lantern slides in connection with pending legislation. Some were shown before the committee on mercantile affairs at the State house. The legislators must necessarily collect information of all kinds. Members of committees go out on trips of inspection and receive the courtesies of chambers of commerce and boards of trade and even yacht clubs and resort organizations. The matter of the courtesies received is so petty that nobody has heretofore commented upon it until the wonderfully acute legal minds that are prompting the so-called Equal Rights league sensed the "scandal" in the private performance proposition. The invitation was open and above board.

There is no extra expense to the theatrical company in running off the film three times on Monday, instead of twice.

The private view is to be given so that the opinion of the legislators may not be affected nor distorted by demonstrations on the part of an audience. Everybody is going to the special performance with his mind free and open and prepared to judge the merits of the outcry that demands special enactment in order to drive this one film off the boards. The bribe talk is altogether a joke. Viewed seriously, it is an insult to senators and representatives to try to degrade them to the level of bribe takers for going about their business and collecting proper information in the customary manner.

If they were investigating packing house and factory conditions, they must necessarily be made free of the works they visit. They must see what is going on or they cannot judge. Would the Equal Rights league have the state of Massachusetts solemnly make an appropriation for a batch of legislators' tickets for "The Birth of a Nation"? Would it do any good to make such an appropriation. The public performances are being sold out to capacity well in advance, both matinee and night. So the only thing to do is to give a private exhibition. All people of common sense know that the matter of the minor courtesies will not affect the broad decision as to the future of the films in this state either one way or the other.

There have been unmistakable evidences that the public is getting mighty tired of the self-constituted activities of "reformers," white and colored, springing into the limelight over the issue of this play. We believe every newspaper in Boston has denounced the attempts to put a bar upon racial and religious discussion on the stage, or to make a case of ticticuffs in the lobby sufficient cause for suppressing a play in the theatre where such incident occurs. Recently the opponents of the play changed their tactics. Their latest was an attempt to broaden the dictionary meaning of immorality by a new idea—seeking to extend it practically to whatever the objectors [illegible] in dramatic form. This [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
APRIL 30, 1915

WILL APPEAL FINES IN THEATRE DISTURBANCE

Cases of Wm. M. Trotter and Rev. Mr. Fuller Are Begun.

Mrs. Clara Fleaky, one of the women arrested April 12 during the disturbance at the Tremont Theatre, was fined $5 by Judge Sproiett yesterday for assaulting Patrolman Van Leinghaven. Mrs. Lucinda Fuller, who was with Mrs. Fleaky, was fined $5 for attempting to rescue Mrs. Fleaky from the police, and $5 for hitting an unknown man with her hand bag. Stephen Massey was fined $5 for attempting to rescue Mrs. Fleaky and James Ewing, charged with a similar offense, was found not guilty. Atty. Benjamin thanked Judge Sproiett for the court's leniency in hearing of the cases, but said that he proposed to go as far as he could in the courts with these cases before these people were sent away with suited expressions, as the people found guilty would appeal. They were allowed to go on personal recognizance for $100 on the appeals.

An hour before court adjourned the cases of William M. Trotter, editor, and the Rev. Aaron Fuller, charged with inciting a riot and disturbing the peace, were begun. Sergt. King testified that both men were asked to leave the theatre lobby with several hundred Negroes, and that these two told the others not to go; that they had a right to see the show. King said there were no tickets on sale, but they said they did not believe it. King admitted under cross-examination that he arrested Trotter for disturbing the peace and passed the "inciting a riot" charge against him the next day under instructions.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
APRIL 30, 1915

RESENTED BY NEGRO RACE.

Invitation to [illegible] Attend "Birth of Nation" Performance Denounced and Spiked.

The action of the management of "The Birth of a Nation" in inviting members of the Legislature to witness the picture show was characterized as "an insult to the lady and also to the nature of an attempted bribe" by a speaker at a mass meeting of the colored people last evening in the Twelfth Baptist Church on Shawmut av.

The meeting was called to order by Edward E. Morris, who explained that it was assembled to protest against [illegible] and Friday facing imposed by the film-play management on [illegible] legislation which the [illegible] are applying for.

[illegible] will be sent to the Legislature requesting it to "spank the [illegible] getting the [illegible] interested. A committee of [illegible] was appointed to wait upon the [illegible] Saturday morning with [illegible]

[illegible] Rev. W. H. Brisbane, Rev. J. A. Cromwell, Rev. [illegible] Rev. A. C. Garnett, Rev. [illegible] Rev. [illegible] Rev. [illegible] and W. D. [illegible]

[illegible] Accused of Larceny.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
APRIL 30, 1915

WILSON DENIES INDORSEMENT

Formally for President, Says That Although "Birth of a Nation" Was Once Shown at the White House, the President Was Unaware of Its Character

Special to the Transcript.

Washington, April 30. Official denial that the President has ever indorsed "The Birth of a Nation" was issued from the White House today by direction of the President, in the form of a letter addressed by the Secretary to Representative Gardner of Massachusetts.

Regarding the circumstances of the recent showing of the motion picture at the White House, it can now be known, although it is the custom not to make public the engagements of the President, that the showing took place at the request of Thomas Dixon, author of the book and play, "The Clansman," on which the picture is based, and Dr. Dixon was accompanied by a party of friends, including Miss Mary Johnston, author of "The Long Roll" and "Cease Firing," and Miss Elsie Ferguson, actress. The latter is a native of Staunton, Va., where the Wilson family formerly resided, and Miss Johnston is also a Virginian.

[illegible] UNREASONABLE PROTEST

In both cases the protest has been unreasonable. Why should the "Afro-Americans" of northern cities in our time consider themselves responsible for the crimes and follies of the ignorant ex-slaves of the south when these were placed in control of the southern governments through the disfranchisement of a large majority of the whites? Why should they regard themselves reflected upon by a dramatic representation of what occurred? While their disrelish for such a spectacle can be understood, it does not follow that they have any just right to demand the suppression of such an adaptation of historical fact.

The blame for the horrors of "reconstruction" properly rests upon a misguided and radical government at Washington. With power suddenly thrust into their hands by the gift of universal manhood suffrage and the disfranchisement of fourteen classes of southern white men, the negroes of the southern states did only what might have been expected of an unfettered, semi-civilized people just out of slavery. It was as inevitable that unprotected white women should not be safe as that the public treasuries should be looted. The famous night-riding Ku Klux Klan came into being in order to grapple with such a situation in the only way then possible. This organization, which has been quite termed "a terrible symptom of a still more terrible disease," at first [illegible] included the better element of white men who acted in order to defend their firesides. The abuse of the Ku Klux Klan idea in later times, when there was no longer need of terrorizing the blacks and when the better element of the whites frowned upon further activities along this line, does not undermine the proof that [illegible] aim was the protection of [illegible] and that thus it was a deeper [illegible] toward a good and the save [illegible] of civilization from threatened [illegible]

PRACTICAL POLITICS (Boston) 38
MAY 1 1915

CLIPPER
New York City
MAY 1 1915

BOSTON.

MONT (Jno. B. Schoeffel, mgr.)—Third week
The Birth of a Nation." Hundreds are being AY daily. Norma
R PHOTOPLAY, "The Birth of a Nation," has been the cause of much controversy, continue to be given at the Tremont without ference, but with a single scene cut out—showing the negro, Gus, pursuing a twelve-old white girl until she jumps over a cliff cape his attack. Judge Dowd decided, after ing the picture, he would not issue summonses
Jno. B. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont, for J. J. McCarthy, representing the film er, provided they agreed to eliminate the e mentioned.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS
New York City
MAY 1 1915

Y TO BLOCK EXHIBITION OF "NATION" IN BAY STATE

Should an attempt be made to show the ch disputed film, "Birth of a Nation," Massachusetts theatres outside the Bosmetropolitan district, opposition of the te police is expected, because of the ief's refusal to allow the film to be own on Sunday in Lynn.

Despite opposition, carried before Gov-nor Walsh himself, the film, with elisions manded by Mayor Curley, is on daily hibition at the Tremont Theatre in oston. The state police chief's attitude garding the Lynn application for a Suny showing, is believed to foreshadow re-sal of permission for the picture to be ken to any city other than Boston.

In Boston itself the opposition has not given up hope of driving the picture from he local screen. Meanwhile the film draws ig crowds. As a result a mass meeting f colored people has been held, at which Cambridge business man went so far as o urge his fellows to war on the whites.

Billboard Cincinnati
5-1-15

BIRTH OF A NATION

he poor bonbs and slimps that got themselves en up arrestid and fined at Boston last k in the "race riots" over that film, The th of a Nation, will never be persuaded that were the victims of mental suggestion ished by a press agent.
ut they were.
here is absolutely nothing in the film that ny mind can object to.

STON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
MAY 1, 1915

nt—The Birth of a Nation

limed spectacle of unusual mag-and scope. The earlier reels scenes and incidents from the War—Sherman's march to the sea, ttle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, assassination of Lincoln—on a scale bers, diversity and vividness new to pictures in America. Then follows rial chronicle of conditions in the during the days of Reconstruction, arpet-baggers and Ku-Klux Clan, g from intimate domestic life to tur-episode. Finally comes an apothef the United States. Into all this is sentimental adventure between a e of the North and a woman of the Music accompanies the whole spec-

GFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
MAY 2, 1915

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
New York City
MAY 1 1915

Small Riot Over Film

Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" Gets Boston Colored Folks Excited—Many Police on Hand Avert Serious Disturbance—Handing Out of Already Reserved Tickets Misunderstood by Negroes Who Suspected Discrimination.

By Edwin H. McCloskey, New England Correspondent of Moving Picture World.

THE presence of three hundred police officers undoubtedly prevented a serious race riot at the Tremont theater, Boston, where the Griffith spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" is playing, on Saturday night, April 17, when several hundred negroes stormed the box office and demanded tickets.

As a result of the turbulance in the lobby and in front of the theater before, during and after the performance, eleven persons were placed under arrest. Among the prisoners were William Munroe Trotter, editor of the Guardian, a colored publication, who was publicly rebuked by President Wilson last November, and who has been the leader in the movement to prevent the production of the film in this city and the Rev. Aaron W. Puller, colored pastor of the People's Baptist Church, Boston.

The theater management had learned that there was an organized plot to fill the house with negroes, destroy the films and stop the play. Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley was communicated with and assumed personal charge of the police detail. Policemen in civilian dress were stationed in different parts of the theater and were ordered to arrest anybody making a disturbance.

The trouble started in the lobby of the theater before the opening of the performance. The lobby was jammed with both whites and blacks. Half an hour before the scheduled time for the film to be screened, the sale of tickets was stopped. The house and company representatives say that the ticket rack was clean and that they couldn't sell any more standing admissions. Patrons, who had ordered tickets in advance, kept coming to the window and getting them. Others were buying for future dates. The colored persons who were gathered in the middle of the lobby evidently thought that discrimination was being exercised against them for that night, for suddenly there was a general move towards the ticket office and a demand that tickets be sold.

Earlier in the week, Governor David I. Walsh requested Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara to meet him at the State House as a result of many complaints that have been received regarding the production.

The conference lasted over an hour during which the production and the offence it has given many people was discussed from its various angles. The commissioner was asked by the governor if there was any legal way in which the commissioner might act to prohibit the production. The commissioner replied that none exists. While the governor has no power to act in the matter, it is known that he is deeply concerned over the production.

Deputy Chief George C. Neal of the state police has placed a ban on the exhibition of the production on Sundays in the state. The management of the film states that it was well aware that such a production on Sunday was not in conformity with the state regulations, but that upon request, the production was offered to the Lynn Lodge of Elks.

WALTHAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS
MAY 1, 1915

The colored people of Boston have wrought themselves up to such a pitch regarding the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation" that they are entirely unreasonable. It requires a very vivid imagination to see any bribery in the invitation of the theatre management to the Legislature to see what it is desired to kill before sentence of death is pronounced. In the meantime this agitation is giving the theatre people an immense amount of very valuable advertising which they are getting without expense.

BANGOR (Me.) COMMERCIAL
MAY 1, 1915

About Boston

WM. H. LEWIS SEES THE PRESIDENT ABOUT FILM

Washington, May 1.—W. H. Lewis, a Boston negro and former assistant attorney general of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters of the African Methodist Episcopal church of New Jersey, called at the White House Friday to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his endorsement to a moving picture film, depicting scenes during the reconstruction period, in a manner distasteful to negroes.

Secretary Tumulty showed them a letter to H. R. Thatcher of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House [illegible] Presidents, the President was unaware of its character and has at no time expressed approbation of it.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

Mrs. Carter Harrison says now that she did not approve the film of "The Birth of a Nation" and that she believes it should not be shown. Mr Harrison, however, is no longer Mayor of Chicago.

"The Birth of a Nation" has trouble in Boston. Local colored folks protest against it. Like New York, however, Boston is turning out in great numbers to see the Griffith masterpiece.

NEWS Bureau
BOSTON, MASS.
MAY 1 1915

AT THE STATE HOUSE.

Boston—In relation to the controversy over the "Birth of a Nation" film, legislative committee on judiciary reported in the House a censorship bill for vesting authority of censorship in the mayor, the police commissioner and the chief justice of the Boston Municipal Court. The bill provides that the censors shall have absolute authority to prevent any play or film being shown, but requires that adverse action must be unanimous. There is no appeal from decision of proposed tribunal.

DRAMATIC NEWS
New York City
MAY 1 1915

A Boston judge has ordered one of the scenes cut out from the picture The Birth of a Nation, holding that the episode of the renegade negro is immoral. This scene shows a negro pursuing a white girl, who hurls herself to death over a cliff.

m JOURNAL
dress: Boston, Mass.
ate MAY 1 1915

If the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" knew as much about statesmen as they should know, they would know that no self-respecting legislator would permit himself to be bribed by a complimentary ticket.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

FILM MEN FIND OBJECTIONS TO COMPROMISE CENSOR BILL

Motion picture producers who have $25,000,000 or more invested in the film industry in Greater Boston are as much opposed to the compromise measure drafted by the Legislative Committee on Judiciary as they were to the vicious Sullivan censorship bill which, with kindred measures, met a merited death.

Exhibitors and theatrical interests generally, consider the product of yesterday's executive session as outrageous and menacing as were several of the batch rejected.

The bill reported by the Judiciary Committee is considered less desirable than the present statute (Chapter 494, Acts of 1908) in that it would permit an enlarged board of three censors to suspend a performance or revoke a theatre license for any cause that might satisfy the whim or caprice of the triumvirate.

The compromise bill adds the chief justice of Boston Municipal Court as a censor and his views and those of the Mayor and police commissioner, who are the censors under the present law, must be unanimous. From their triple decision there is no appeal for the aggrieved theatre manager of film owner.

But the most amazing feature of the new draft is the elimination of the words "obscene" and "immoral" and other specific cause and the vesting of authority to censor or banish a show of any kind for any of a thousand reasons that might suggest themselves to the censors. The new bill provides a latitude that is limitless and as variable as the temperaments, emotions and views of the judges might prove.

POINT OUT DANGERS.

Its constitutional qualities are questioned. It gives the three censors the power to condemn a photoplay or any other public performance without ascribing any reason and without giving the persons whose interests, contracts and production are at stake, a chance to remedy or expurgate certain parts.

It bestows an authority as unjust and dangerous as it is elastic. It might be argued in defence of the judiciary joker that unanimous judgment by a board to which the chief justice of a court has been added, insures the rights of the producer, but producers question this.

Section 1 of the present law deals with the granting of licenses and Section 2 reads:

"If at any time under a licence granted hereunder, there shall be given a theatrical exhibition, public show, public amusement or exhibition, any part of which, in the opinion of both the Mayor and police commissioner of Boston, is obscene or immoral or tends to injure the morals of the community and is not eliminated at the request of the Mayor, then he may suspend the license."

Here then, under the law in operation, are specific reasons for a censorship or suspension, but the proposition of the Judiciary Committee would enable the censors to obstruct for a wide variety of reasons. Here motives might creep in, making the bill as hazardous as the Sullivan and the other measures.

Should the three censors by the accident of election or appointment be of the same race or religious persuasion their views might be objected to by producers offering films or any other style of public entertainment hostile to the tenets or tastes of the censor trio.

It is for this reason that the motion picture producers prefer the Coggan bill which would leave the judging to the Mayor and police commissioner, but would give the theatre managers and film owners the right to appeal to a Superior or Supreme Court sitting in equity.

All was not smooth sailing in the star chamber session of the Judiciary Committee. There was friction and difference of opinion. Two members dissented from the report on the compromise drifts—Essex S. Abbott of Haverhill and Eben K. Bowser of Wakefield. Senator W. J. Sullivan of South Boston threatens to introduce a counter bill.

Attorney John F. Cusick, counsel for "The Birth of a Nation," declined today to discuss the bill submitted by the Judiciary Committee, other than to say he preferred the Coggan bill and did not relish the striking out of the "immoral" and "obscene" clause. He said:

"The Coggan bill would furnish the ends desired by the theatres and motion picture producers. It would give them a chance to appeal from a hasty or unjust decision by a Mayor or police commissioner and would give a justice who is not so apt to be swayed by public sentiment to determine the merits of the case.

SPEAKS FOR PRODUCERS.

"In a Mayor we have the choice of the majority. He is in a position to feel the public pulse, as is the police commissioner. Both represent active life in the community while a court justice is less apt to be influenced by multiple elements.

"It was for that reason we felt the Coggan bill would guarantee fair play and justice to the motion picture men and show interests generally giving them a chance to have a full court hearing, which is their constitutional right and privilege, to correct any mistake that might be made by faulty censorship.

"Right of appeal is never dangerous and is often of tremendous benefit to parties that may have been deliberately or innocently wronged. Motion picture producers are careful of the public morals and proud of the influence of photo-plays. They are eager to comply with the laws to co-operate with local authorities in developing the educational powers of the film.

"They are jealous of their growing industry and anxious at all times to do anything that will improve and uplift the community and enrich its amusement advantages."

LAWRENCE (Mass.) SUN-AMERICAN
MAY 1, 1915

In relation to the controversy over the "Birth of a Nation" film, legislative committee on judiciary reported in the House a censorship bill for vesting authority of censorship in the mayor, the police commissioner and the chief justice of the Boston Municipal court. The bill provides that the censors shall have absolute authority to prevent any play or film being shown, but requires that adverse action must be unanimous. There is no appeal from decision of proposed tribunal.

GLOBE
ss: Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

The film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," continues at the Tremont Theatre.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
ss: Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

WITH THE MOVIES.

David W. Griffith's vast spectacle of civil war and reconstruction days, "The Birth of a Nation," entered upon its fourth week at the Tremont Theatre today. As a love story in a wonderful historical setting, the play has a great appeal to all the young people. Older heads are interested in the realistic depiction of civil war, of the big moments like the surrender of Lee and the death of Lincoln, and in the disclosure of how the Ku Klux Klan in the South uprose and threw off the carpet-bagger yoke. As the run progresses, it is noticed that there are many "Birth of a Nation" fans, namely, persons who enjoy the film so much that they come again and again. There are two presentations daily.

BIRTH OF A NATION" DRAWS BIG HOUSES

p to date the receipts of "The h of a Nation" are said to have ed the $100,000 mark in Gotham.
o will dare assert in the face of fact that it doesn't pay consistently knocked

SPRINGFIELD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 2

REPUBLICAN
ess: Springfield, Mass.

MAY 2 - 1915

D. W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is preparing a special set of films of that picture to be deposited in the congressional library and to remain one of the records of the government. The film will differ from the ordinary films of commerce in that it will be made of a more enduring composition.

REPUBLICAN
ess: Springfield, Mass.

MAY 2 - 1915

President Wilson and Rev Thomas Dixon were classmates at Johns Hopkins university, and they attended together at the White House a performance of Dixon's picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the request of Mr Dixon, who did not disclose before securing consent what the nature of the picture was, nor has the president at any time expressed his approval of it. With this information, from Secretary Tumulty, the incident connecting the president with the much-debated film may be regarded as closed.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
MAY 2, 1915

President Wilson and Rev Thomas Dixon were classmates at Johns Hopkins university, and they attended together at the White House a performance of Dixon's picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the request of Mr Dixon, who did not disclose before securing consent what the nature of the picture was, nor has the president at any time expressed his approval of it. With this information, from Secretary Tumulty, the incident connecting the president with the much-debated film may be regarded as closed.

MAY 2 1915

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN

'Birth of a Nation' Comedy Appreciated

A great deal of film comedy is horse-play, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre proves that quiet, refined comedy is a big laugh-maker and pleases people better than the old style crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the lovesick sentry in the hospital scene, gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is on the "sure fire" order, for never does an audience miss the point. Paul LeBlanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans Creole and played comedy roles with Mme. Bernhardt before going to Los Angeles, where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864. Miss Lillian Gish wears costumes of Civil War and Reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family.

Clip.
Telegram
Worcester Mass
Date 5-2-15

tranquil

RISE IS RAPID.

Mae Marsh Forges Ahead by Perseverance and Ability.

Mae Marsh, whose spectacular rise to the head of the ranks of motion picture actresses is generally attributed to the training of D. W. Griffith, is possessed of natural capacities of a pre-eminent order, according to Mr. Griffith himself.

"If I have done anything," the great director says, "I have shown this remarkable girl how to get the best out of the unusual talent which is hers. Today she is, perhaps, the best we have. But she owes her success as much to her own perseverance and determination as to other quality."

Miss Marsh's star has been rising since the production a year ago of "The Birth of a Nation." Her two recent appearances in the Mutual masterpictures, "The outcast," by Thomas Nelson Page, and "The outlaw's revenge in the Birth of a new republic," as well as the electric performance she gave on the film in "The birth of a nation," have established her fame securely. To those who remember her as an awkward schoolgirl who followed her sister to the studio two years ago, the transformation seems almost impossible. Under the tight-coiled hair, D. W. Griffith, however, saw what is now conceded to be the most perfectly shaped head in the pictures. She has been a mimic since childhood. For Griffith the rest was York, Mass. [illegible] where arrangements have so far been entered into to [illegible] it, and it has passed the censorship in each of those states and likewise in Pennsylvania. The above state-

[illegible] JOURNAL
[illegible], 1915
[illegible] play, and [illegible]
[illegible] on it within [illegible] a decision within [illegible] F. F. Franklin, Albert Brackett, [illegible]amara saw the [illegible]trical managers of [illegible]rth of a Nation" [illegible] the time was [illegible] be necessary to [illegible]tre, Boston, [illegible] motion pictures [illegible] Board of experience [illegible]ra confidence. He [illegible] a view of the latest [illegible] session, it would [illegible] any hurried legislation

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
MAY 2 1915

HIGH PRAISE FOR 'BIRTH OF NATION'

"See It and Become a Better American," Dorothy Dix Declares.

By DOROTHY DIX

I am a Film Fan, but I never had the slightest conception of what could be done with the moving pictures as an art until I saw "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont.

I had considered the moving picture interesting, instructive, amusing, diverting, beautiful, spectacular, but I had believed that the silent drama never could touch the emotions very deeply. I had thought that to grip an audience, to melt it to tears with pathos, to thrill it with right heroic sentiment, required the spoken word and the magic of the human voice.

"The Birth of a Nation" disproves all of this theory. Here is a war play, the like of which never has been presented on any stage before, that played upon the heart as upon a harp of a thousand strings; that worked the audience up into a perfect frenzy; that mingled pathos and humor, tragedy and glory; at which people wept and laughed, and yet not one word was spoken on the stage.

CALLS IT FASCINATING.

The whole thing was fascinating, yes, terrible beyond belief, because you saw, as the angels looking down from heaven must have seen, all of the causes that led to the Civil War, the bloody struggle in which brother fought against brother, and the ghastly aftermath of the conflict in which, for awhile, the black heel was set upon the white neck of a conquered people.

"The Birth of the Nation" begins with the introduction of African slavery into the United States through New England, the sale of the slaves to Southern planters, and traces the abolition movement. It then passes on to the declaration of war, and shows the conflict between the blue and the gray in the most wonderful series of battle scenes that have ever been depicted.

Then comes a magic series of pictures showing Sherman's devastating march to the sea, with cut-in-pictures of the devastation and poverty he left behind. Then comes an historically accurate reproduction of the assassination of Lincoln, showing Ford's Theatre as the stage was set on that fatal night, the President and Mrs. Lincoln entering the box, while the audience rose to cheer them, and the act of the madman, Wilkes Booth, as he shot Lincoln and then leaped to the stage with his melodramatic cry, "Sic semper tyrannis."

TERRIBLE AFTERMATH.

Then comes the final battle of the war, the surrender of Lee and the pathetic going back to their ruined homes of the broken Confederate soldiers. What followed in the days of reconstruction is the blackest page in American history, a story so horrible that it has never been adequately told until in these pictures.

"The Birth of a Nation" is history vitalized and made living. Go and see it because of the wonder of the pictures themselves, and the marvel of this new art of film-making, of which it is the last word.

And finally go and see it because it will make a better American of you, for out of the baptism of blood of the Civil War was born the new nation, one and indivisible.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICA
MAY 2, 1915

D. W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is preparing a special set of films of that picture to be deposited in the congressional library and to remain one of the records of the government. The film will differ from the ordinary films of commerce in that it will be made of more enduring composition.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
MAY 2, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"
Pictures at the Tremont

The fourth week of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre shows the houses as crowded as ever at each of the daily matinees and nights. It is significant that the people always applaud one of the opening titles written by Mr. Griffith, claiming for the motion picture the same freedom of expression and interpretation as is given to the printed book or the "flesh-and-blood" play.

The whole entertainment, with its marvelous depiction of Civil War battle scenes and memorable events and its thrilling love story interwoven with the subsequent troublous times of reconstruction holds absorbed attention. Nearly 75,000 Bostonians have now seen the spectacle.

"The Birth of a Nation" engagement here is favored with some of the most artistic work in musical accompaniment that has been heard anywhere. Under Director Arundel's baton the 40 players express the spirit of the martial or romantic tunes with excellent effect.

LIGHT. San Antonio
MAY 2 1915

The success of David W. Griffith's marvelous film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," presented at first-class theatrical prices, is not confined to New York City, for another company of equal excellence is playing a capacity engagement at the Tremont Theater, Boston, Mass. The same prices as in New York are charged, namely, $2.00 for the best seats.

MARLBORO (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
MAY 1, 1915

PLAYING TO CAPACITY HOUSES EVERY NIGHT

D. W. Griffith's magnificent historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," enters upon the second big month of its run at the Tremont theatre, Boston, next Monday afternoon. The play is the most widely discussed topic in this state and for a fortnight has overshadowed even the European war and the Roosevelt-Barnes trial as a front page feature. On Monday morning at 10.30 o'clock a special performance is to be given with the members of the legislature and other officials as invited guests.

Mr. Griffith's production has developed an enormous number of friends in greater Boston and all the surrounding places. It has now been viewed by more than 75,000 patrons. Their support, with that of those who sympathize with them, outweighs the opposition. The issues of freedom of dramatic speech is involved in the play's continuance. It is hoped a wise and reasonable censorship bill will be passed that will not curtail the privileges of stage producers nor render nugatory such wonderful art achievements as the one Mr. Griffith has accomplished.

Public performances are given at the Tremont theatre twice daily at 2.10 and 8.10 p. m. except on Sundays. The prices range from 25c to $2.00 evenings and Saturday matinee, and 25c to $1.00 the other matinees. Mail orders when accompanied by check and stamped self-addressed envelope are promptly filled. The run is proving the most extraordinary one in the history of Boston theatricals, all the performances up to date having been absolute capacity.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 2, 1915

Tremont Theatre

The fourth week of "The Birth of a Nation" engagement at the Tremont Theatre shows the enthusiasm of spectators at high tide and the houses as crowded as ever at each of the daily matinees and nights. It is significant that the people always applaud one of the opening titles written by Mr. Griffith, claiming for the motion picture the same freedom of expression and interpretation as is given to the printed book or the "flesh-and-blood" play. The whole historical entertainment, with its marvelous depiction of civil war battle scenes and memorable events and its thrilling love story interwoven with the subsequent troublous times of reconstruction, meets with appreciation and approval. Nearly 75,000 Bostonians have now seen the spectacle. Forty players express the spirit of the martial or romantic tunes with verve. The mechanical effects are extraordinary, particularly in the battle pictures and during the Ford Theatre scene.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
MAY 2, 1915

Tremont Theatre

The fourth week of the "Birth of a Nation" engagement at the Tremont Theatre shows the enthusiasm of spectators at high tide, and the houses as crowded as ever at each of the daily matinees and nights. It is significant that the people always applaud one of the opening titles written by Mr. Griffith, claiming for the motion picture the same freedom of expression and interpretation as is given to the printed book or the "flesh-and-blood" play. The whole historical entertainment, with its marvellous portrayal of Civil war battle scenes and memorable events and its thrilling love story interwoven with the subsequent troublous times of reconstruction, meets with the most whole-hearted appreciation and approval. Under Director Arundel's baton the 40 players express the spirit of the martial or romantic muses with wonderful elan and verve. The mechanical effects are also extraordinary, particularly the ones in the battle pictures and during the Lincoln-Ford's Theatre scene.

PRACTICAL POLITICS (Boston)
MAY 1 1915

STATE GOVERNMENT

SETTLE FILM CONTROVERSY.

The committee on the judiciary is to be congratulated upon its most happy solution of the legislative problem presented by those who have objected to the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in Boston, and none is more entitled to credit than Rep. Arthur E. Burr, of Boston; in fact, the 11th Suffolk district ought to feel certain that in selecting Rep. Burr to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of former Speaker Cushing it made no mistake.

ARTHUR E. BURR

The bill reported is a strictly common sense measure; it provides that if a disinterested tribunal, consisting of the mayor of Boston, the police commissioner of Boston, and the chief justice of the Boston municipal court, agree that any particular play should be stopped, they shall have authority to prevent further productions. They are not to be required to find that the play is immoral, that it is indecent, or that it may lead to religious or racial strife; if for any reason they think a play should be stopped, it will stop.

It is in the selection of the members of the supervisory tribunal that the committee has been particularly fortunate. The mayor of Boston, whoever he may be, can always be depended upon to give a heedful ear to the protests of any considerable number of the population of the metropolis; the police commissioner, sworn to maintain peace and good order, will be anxious at all times to prevent any production which is likely to incite riot, and at the same time, because of his appointment from the governor, will have an eye to the interests of all the people of the state, as well as those of Boston.

The chief justice of the municipal court, however, gives to the tribunal the judicial balance which it has heretofore lacked. Being responsible neither to the people nor to any appointing power, he will decide each case upon its real merits.

The filing of the report yesterday, for which Rep. Burr likewise was responsible, was also a master stroke, for by so doing the committee has escaped any possible charge that its action was influenced by the "benefit performance" which is to be given at the Tremont theatre on Monday morning.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 2, 1915

WILL ATTACK "BIRTH OF NATION" ON THE COMMON

Permission was granted yesterday by Acting Mayor Coleman to the Rev. M. A. Neil Shaw, Negro pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church on Shawmut avenue, to conduct religious services on the Charles street mall of Boston Common between 6 and 7 P. M. today.

Upon receiving the permit Mr. Shaw admitted that the meeting was to be in protest to the "Birth of a Nation" from the religious [illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 2, 1915

WILL DISCUSS UNPAID MOVIES COMMISSION

Suggested by [illegible] Exchange in Opposing Carstens Bill.

The co-operative anti-censorship committee of representatives of the Negroes of Boston will hold a conference tonight at 90 Washington street to protest against the production of "The Birth of a Nation." The recommendation of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange for the appointment of an unpaid motion picture commission will be discussed. The suggestion is contained in a resolution of the exchange against the Carstens bill, which provides for a paid state board of three censors under the jurisdiction of the state board of labor and industries. The action of the real estate men has been endorsed by the anti-censorship committee, the Boston Central Labor Union and the Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
MAY 2, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" continues to fill the Tremont, and while the controversy is still rife there seems to be little doubt but that the enormous patronage will be maintained. I am informed that tomorrow morning, bright and early, namely at 10:30 o'clock, there will be a private presentation of the photo-drama for the benefit of the members of the Legislature, and no one will have access to the auditorium save the Solons of both branches of the Great and General Court. The lawmakers will then be able to judge for themselves and not be influenced by hearsay evidence. Which lawyers tell me is not valid in court.

I wonder what would be the effect if a bill should be passed which made it possible to stop a theatrical performance containing anything calculated to arouse racial or religious prejudice? Speaking offhand, scarcely any play would escape if the law was held to the letter. You know the late Thomas Addison, who was quite a critic and essayist in his day, and whose opinion was held by his contemporaries in the highest esteem, once remarked that practically all laughter was caused by the misfortune of others, and when one pauses to contemplate the statement he will realize its truth.

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
MAY 2 1915

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 3 1915

FROM TRAVELER READERS

An Emphatic Protest.

To the Editor of The Traveler:

I add my protest against that contemptible anti-race film, "The Birth of a Nation." Representative Cross, in his letter to Mr. Wilson, spoke of a "supersensitive element in Boston. Yes, we are sensitive. When a picture like "The Birth of a Nation" is put on the American stage, and the author of the book on which it is based declares his intention in presenting this picture as for the especial purpose of arousing in the hearts of the white people of this country such a feeling against the colored people that will cause them to be deported from this country, I think it is time we were getting sensitive. Had that picture been against any other than the colored race it would not have been allowed to be shown. There is altogether too much of that sentiment that anything which is done to the Afro-American is all right. Yes, we are sensitive, and I only hope that the race will continue to grow more sensitive. We have sat down under insult and injury too long. I want Mr. Cross to know that it is not a supersensitive element protesting against this picture, but every man, woman and child who realizes what this picture means to them. I would say to the colored race all over this country: "Take a stand for your rights; this is your country."

Our forefathers shed their blood for this country in every war it has ever had. A Negro was the first to shed his blood for the freedom of this country from England. We do not ask this country to treat us any better than any one else, but we do ask it to treat us as well.

Mrs. E. T. SANDRIDGE.
413A Dudley street.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
May 3 1915

MINISTERS SET SUNDAY, MAY 23, AS "RACE" DAY

Ministers and other speakers are asked to emphasize on Sunday, May 23, "the perils and superficiality of race distinctions, the mischief of race antagonism," and to point out the "great responsibility of the American people to bring them all to one mind and righteous citizenship."

The request is made by the joint committee of Congregational, Episcopal, Universalist and Unitarian ministers, who last week passed resolutions in connection with the protest against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," in which they favored regulation of productions tending to create race feeling.

At the meeting of the Congregational ministers today the project of setting aside a short period May 23 for this purpose was approved unanimously. Other bodies are expected to act similarly. The resolution of the joint committee was unanimously approved.

Dr. Walter E. Fernald, superintendent of the Massachusetts School for Feeble Minded at Waverly, speaking on "The Care of Feeble Minded," said the system of committing criminals to jail, to be released after a certain period without learning whether they are responsible for their action, is "illogical." He predicted that a mental examination would be an important part of court procedure within a few years.

"I am convinced that nearly 90 per cent. of the persons punished for crime and immorality should have other form of care than going to jail. I believe that nearly this proportion are feeble minded irresponsibles who need other form of permanent care."

Trotter Tells of Mix-up at Theatre Over Race Film

William M. Trotter, editor, told the witness stand today before Judge Brackett, who has been hearing the evidence in the cases against Trotter and the Rev. Aaron Puller, charged with inciting a riot and disturbing the peace at the Tremont Theatre the night of April 17. Trotter said he saw white people get tickets after colored people had been refused tickets at the ticket window.

"I was struck on the jaw by a man in civilian clothes," he testified. "Afterward I learned the man who struck me was Officer Dennis Harrington." He told of demanding Harrington's arrest in vain. He heard much loud shouting from the officers, hearing Sergt. King cry, "Get out! Clear out! Clear out of here!"

He denied kicking an officer and said he never uttered the words "showing them they were not in Georgia," attributed to him by a government witness. He said, under cross-examination, he had been an enthusiastic worker against "The Birth of a Nation." Sergt. King had told him "he would consider him inciting a riot," he testified, and then at his arrest had told him he was arresting him for disturbing the peace. He saw colored people pulled from the ticket line, he said.

The case will probably be concluded, although arguments may carry it over another day.

BOSTON (Mass.) AMERICAN
MAY 3, 1915

FILM PROTESTS WAX VIGOROUS

The protest of Boston's colored population against "The Birth of a Nation" photo-play gained volume by sermons in many churches, but especially at the big mass meetings held in Tremont Temple and on Boston Common.

Excitement rose to fever height on the Common when colored clergymen addressing a big gathering, shouted that the hysteria charged against the negro would change to bombs if the photo-play were not suppressed. The Rev. B. W. Swain intimated that a negro Ku Klux Klan might result, and the Rev. William Thornton announced the negroes of Boston would choose the hospital, the jail, death even, rather than endure the "Birth of a Nation."

At the Tremont Temple mass meeting Rolfe Cobleigh, the assistant editor of the Congregationalist, made the charge that Thomas Dixon, author of the "Clansman" admitted to him that his real purpose was to secure the banishment of the negro from the land.

Mr. Cobleigh said: "I suggested to Mr. Dixon the difficulty of deporting 10,000,000 American citizens to Africa as he proposed, but he seriously argued that it could be done. He hopes to create such public sentiment that a substantial beginning can be made in the near future, and that the task can be completed within a century."

This declaration by Mr. Cobleigh created something of a sensation, and following speakers, especially Judge Philip Rubenstein of the Juvenile Court, and Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, devoted considerable attention to it.

The audience numbered about 2,000, mainly negroes, and the other speakers were: Dr. Francis W. Rowley, who presided; Mrs. Susan W. Fitz-Gerald, the Rev. S. M. Crothers, the Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Professor Henry G. Pearson, M. I. T., and Miss Adalene Moffat.

Judge Rubenstein said that he came not to represent the judiciary, nor the Jewish race, "yet in view of the reference of my connection to the Juvenile Court, ought I not to feel a grave interest in films shown to the public, open to children, that such films should be irreproachable, and not tending to excite race prejudice or [illegible]"

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
MAY 3, 1915

CALLS PLAY UNPATRIOTIC.

Rabbi Harry Levi in Address, Says "The Birth of a Nation" Should Be Barred.

At Temple Israel, Commonwealth av, yesterday morning, Rabbi Harry Levi spoke on "The Birth of a Nation."

Rabbi Levi said in part: "The measure of this play's effectiveness is the measure of its responsibility and also the measure of its vicious influence. It presumes to teach us history. But much that it offers is absolutely unhistoric, and much that it presents as history is so distorted as to lose its historic value. Much of it is also untrue.

"Either as an expression of blind hate or to achieve mercenary ends, it paints falsely the conditions of yesterday, and then failing to see that with the passing of time all conditions change it would have us believe that what was, still obtains. Because at one time some negroes were bad, it would insist that today all black men are bad. By the same token because a white man commits a murder, murder is a characteristic of the Caucasian race. It would awaken a prejudice which has been gradually dying and which should have died long ago. It gives new life not only to race hatred but that sectional feeling that was born of the Civil War and which happily has been passing away.

"And that is why with all its pretensions, it knows nothing of patriotism. He who would incite one section of a people against another is a traitor. It should be not merely expurgated but barred in Massachusetts and every other State of the Union."

BOSTON (Mass.) EVE. GLOBE
MAY 3, 1915

BOSTON GLOBE—M

HIT BY OFFICER, TROTTER SAYS

He Names Harrington as the Man.

Claims He Tried to Buy Ticket for "Birth of Nation."

Told Colored Men to Get Into the Line.

William Munroe Trotter, the colored editor, charged with inciting a riot and raising a disturbance around the Tremont Theatre on April 17, in connection with the production of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," took the stand in his own defense when the case was called before Judge Brackett in a special session of the Municipal Court this morning. Trotter is charged jointly with Rev Aaron Puller.

Trotter said he went to the theatre with the intention of seeing the show. There was only a small crowd outside, he said. Some colored people told him they had been refused tickets, and Trotter told them to get into line; that if tickets were being sold colored people were entitled to buy them.

Witness said he got into line himself. He saw Sergt King, he said, pushing persons, assisted by employes of the theatre. One or two civilians put their hands on him, witness said, and he warned them not to assault him.

"Just then a man in civilian clothes struck me on the jaw," he said. "I learned later that this man was patrolman Harrington. When I was struck I requested Sergt King and another uniformed officer to arrest that man. The man said he had not struck me. A woman bystander stepped up and said, 'You are not telling the truth. I saw you strike Mr Trotter.'

"The officers said they couldn't arrest him because he was a police officer. I replied they should arrest him just the same. A man near me said if I had done anything wrong or unlawful I should be arrested, not assaulted. Dr Lattarmore gave my assailant a card and asked him to write his name. The man wrote the name 'Denis Harrington' on the card. Some officer in crowd said: 'Well take him if you men will go to the station and make a complaint.'"

Witness said Sergt King accused him of being in the lobby to incite a riot. Trotter didn't see Dr Puller at all and saw no one purchase tickets that night and go to the theatre. He denied kicking an officer.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 3 1915

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
May 3- 1915

LEGISLATORS SEE 'BIRTH OF NATION' WITH 'GUS' SCENE

Practically the whole State House went to the Tremont Theatre this morning to witness a special private performance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," by invitation of the theatre management.

Because the widespread protest against the play has resulted in a demand for legislation to prohibit the production of this and similar plays, the invitation was issued to the members of the Legislature, in order that they might see the play to be guided in passing upon the proposed legislation.

But in addition to members of the Legislature, there were present state officials, clerks, State House messengers and other attaches, lobbyists and reporters, most of them being accompanied by their wives.

The orchestra and first balcony seats were crowded and many stood.

Walsh Absent.

Neither Gov. Walsh nor anyone from his office was at the performance, and President Coolidge of the Senate and Speaker Cox of the House were also among the absentees.

One of the features of the special performance was the showing of the so-called "Gus" scene, in which a renegade Negro is shown making advances to a white girl, who eludes him by leaping to death fromb a precipice. This scene was cut out of the film by order of Municipal Court Judge Dowd, who pronounced it "immoral and obscene," but was shown at the request of a "committee," presumably the legislative committee on judiciary. Announcement to this effect was made during the intermission between the first and second parts of the show by the press representative.

Another scene, which had been eliminated by consent of the management, was also shown. In this one a mulatto Lieutenant-Governor of the state where the scenes take place, is shown proposing marriage to the daughter of his white patron, and when she spurns him is shown grabbing her and carrying her into a bedroom, when she is rescued.

Applaud Ku Klux Scenes.

Both of these scenes were shown after the performance as given to the public, had been produced. There was considerable applause at several scenes in the second part of the play showing the masked white Ku Klux Klan riders effecting rescues. A small detail of police was in the lobby of the theatre as those who saw the special performance filed out and as those waiting for the afternoon and regular perfomance were standing in line for their tickets.

The performance was a quiet one, without accident. Legislators were chary about expressing an opinion about the show, many praising its artistic quality and general interest, some holding the opinion that it produces a psychological impression of dislike against the Negro.

BOSTON (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
MAY 3, 1915

Negroes --- State

TROTTER ON THE STAND

Denies Making Tremont Theatre Disturbance

But Asserts He Was Struck by a Policeman

Declares He Did Not Address the Crowd

Says Whites Bought Tickets to Show

William Monroe Trotter, publisher of the Guardian, and one of the negroes who was arrested in the Tremont Theatre lobby in the evening of April 17, when there was an alleged disturbance there, testified today in "The Birth of a Nation" case.

Mr. Trotter denied that he committed any act at the theatre that night that was not within the law; and he said that, on the contrary, he was hit in the jaw by a policeman in civilian's clothes, and that nobody arrested the policeman. It was charged that Trotter created a disturbance, and an additional charge of inciting a riot was placed against him later. The defendant said that he went to the theatre that night to see if the play had been "cut." He got there at about 7.30 and saw a few people in the lobby. There was no particular crowd outside. As he approached the box office, not in line, however, he saw that negroes were being refused tickets. He, therefore, got in line and told other people to do so.

"While I was standing in line," continued Mr. Trotter, "a man in civilian clothes hit me in the jaw. I told him to take his hands off me, and asked Sergeant King to arrest him. Somebody said, referring to my assailant: 'We can't arrest him; he's a policeman.' I learned later that he was a policeman by the name of Harrington. After that I worked towards the box office. I asked for a ticket, and in a general way I was refused, for the ticket seller was repeating: 'The tickets are all gone.' I stayed near the box office and at length the police began to drag the people away from there. Sergeant King said to me: 'I charge you with inciting a riot and I'll arrest you for disturbing the peace.'"

Trotter's arrest followed, and he went to the station, without making any trouble, he asserted. He denied that he had said: "I dare any policeman to strike me on the jaw," and he testified that he did not make any address to the people, either outside or inside the theatre. He protested, he declared, when he was hit on the jaw and told the theatre people that they should hang out a sign if all the seats for that show were sold. He saw tickets handed to white people from the box office after negroes had been refused, and even assisted in delivering two seats to a white man who was outside the rail in front of the box office. Those particular seats, however, the witness said, were for some evening the following week.

In cross-examination, Mr. Trotter said that he had worked earnestly, but not "enthusiastically," to have "The Birth of a Nation" suppressed, that he had occasionally been termed an "agitator," but that when he went to the Tremont Theatre on the night of April 17 he had not been advised that the negroes were going to make a demonstration. When it was decided to clear the lobby the police "charged" on the people, he testified. There were perhaps 125 people in the lobby at that time, many of them negroes. The witness said that they were orderly and that there was no occasion for clearing the lobby.

John Graham, counsel for the Government, submitted a copy of The Guardian, in which the term "near riot" was used in connection with the affair at the theatre. The witness said that this was merely a quotation from another newspaper, and that he himself had not expressed an opinion on the alleged disturbance in The Guardian, because he was under a criminal charge.

Andrew B. Lattimore, M. D., a witness for the defence, testified that he was twice refused a ticket at the theatre on the night of April 17, but that afterwards he bought a ticket through the medium of a white man. Mrs. Susan G. Craig declared that negroes were "pushed back" when they tried to get into the lobby, but that white people were allowed to enter. She saw Mr. Trotter near the box office and at that time saw a white man buy "two tickets for tonight." When Rev. Aaron Puller was arrested, Mrs. Craig said she heard somebody exclaim: "Kill the 'nigger.'" She tried to buy tickets but was told they were all gone. She testified that later she saw white people buy tickets.

NO INJURY TO THE BLACKS

Dr. C. W. Eliot Is in Doubt Whether "The Birth of a Nation" Should Be Stopped—In Any Case, He Finds It Injures the Whites If Anybody

Tremont Temple was crowded with negroes Sunday afternoon, who listened to a discussion by a number of white speakers on "The Birth of a Nation;" and later, two thousand persons, both black and white, gathered on the Common, where the photo-play was roundly scored.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, speaking at Tremont Temple, said he was not sure that the play should be stopped; and in any case, he felt that it injured the whites more than the blacks.

"This play's purpose," said Dr. Eliot, "is to present the thesis that the Ku Klux Klan was an inevitable end, on the whole, a righteous thing. Now that argument reminds me of nothing so much as the argument of German rulers today that a conquest may be torn up and utterly disregarded 'because of military necessity.' No [illegible] can be put before the [illegible] the teaching of the play

"There is enumerated as one of the objects of the play the suggestion that the whole colored race should be removed from this country and carried to some unoccupied and barbarous land. It is not conceivable that they should go except under compulsion, by force of arms. What an abominable outrage that would be to be perpetrated by the white people of this country! How did the colored people come here? Who brought them here What have been their sufferings while here? Whose children are many of them today? The American people will never think of perpetrating that outrage of transportation across the seas.

"I don't feel clear as to whether it is the interest of the white people to have this play suppressed—I am sure it is not the interest of the colored people. I had to say to the colored people here, you had better not feel insulted.

"I am in doubt as to what had better be done. It is true that there has been a growing indifference among white people to all the questions of liberty and justice in the conduct of public affairs. This play will draw the attention of great multitudes all over the country.

"If presentation of the play is everywhere accompanied by true exposition of what the American people stand for, I am not sure it will not have a very useful result, one worth having."

Rev. Samuel M. Crother, D. D., of Cambridge, said that the moral idealism of Boston fifty years ago is being tested today. "When one dares to throw upon the screen quotations from President Wilson and purports to write the history of the nation, it will be accepted as the feeling of the times unless it is protested," he continued.

"I know of no way to preserve a state of peace save when one party, race or sect has been insulted, if all others shall say 'You have struck me.' The Christian church should rise to the thought of its master, and say, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"

Rolfe Cobleigh, editor of the Congregationalist, contended that the producer of the play "has achieved dazzling success in the propaganda of falsehood. The cherished tradition of this State and of American liberty is at stake. In these days, shall this ideal be held less faithfully? Shall dazzling motion-pictures falsify history, create race prejudice and still be allowed to continue?"

Miss Adeline Moffat, a Southern woman, declared that a minority in the South is attempting to emancipate the whites from fear of slavery, and that this minority needs the backing of the North. The movement in the South is being undermined, however, by the production of "The Birth of a Nation," which the speaker termed an "insidious attempt to demoralize a whole people."

Rev. M. W. Thornton, pastor of the Charles Street African Methodist Episcopal Church, a speaker on the Common, said that the public should be watchful, lest this "so-called hysteria should turn into a bomb. If 'The Birth of a Nation' continues, something similar to the human barbecues of the South is goig to happen on yonder hill. The pulpits are hypocritical and the press is not helping us. Shame on the press of a great city that attempts to take advantage by silence just because the producers have bought a lot of space."

In pulpits of Greater Boston, ministers preached upon the much-discussed photo-play, many of them denouncing it, but here and there upholding it or asserting that it was receiving more attention than it deserved.

LEGISLATORS ATTEND PLAY

Tremont Theatre Crowded for Special Performance of "The Birth of a Nation"—State Business at a Standstill

Members of the Legislature and their friends filled almost the entire orchestra and first balcony of the Tremont Theatre this morning to witness the special performance of "The Birth of a Nation" in response to an invitation from the management. The members were first shown the film as it is being shown to the public today, following which the parts, which have been cut out at the request of the city authorities and municipal court, were thrown upon the screen.

The legislators applauded when the Ku-Klux Clan riders were shown rushing to the rescue of Elsie Stoneman, as she is about to be forced into marriage with the mulatto, Silas Lynch. Handclapping also occurred in a few other cases, but not to any extent.

Neither Speaker Cox of the House, President Coolidge of the Senate nor Governor Walsh was present.

Mr. Cox called the House to order promptly at one o'clock. At that time, the regular hour for beginning the Monday session, about fifteen of the 240 members were in their seats. The House went through the calendar without debate, and then started for a second time. After several matters had been passed, Mr. Sherburne of Brookline moved that the sergeant-at-arms be instructed to procure a quorum, and that a recess be taken meantime. The recess lasted from 1.15 until 1.45, when a sufficient number of members had returned from the theatre to begin consideration of the State business.

Since it is asserted that Thomas Dixon says his real purpose in producing "The Birth of a Nation" is "the achieving of white supremacy and the getting rid of the colored people," those who have been insisting that it was with the mercenary aim of making money will have to apologize for their hasty and

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
MAY 2

Tremont Theatre.
The fourth week of "The Birth of a Nation" engagement at the Tremont Theatre [illegible] of spectators at [illegible] houses as crowded [illegible]

ELIOT SAYS PLAY FALSIFIES HISTORY

"Birth of a Nation" More Harmful to Whites Than Blacks, Declares Harvard President Eneritus

A mighty protest against the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" was sounded yesterday from pulpits and at mass meetings held in Tremont Temple and on Boston Common. Thousands of people, white and colored, attended these demonstrations and signed their names to a written protest that will be sent to the Legislature.

Colored clergymen addressing a meeting on Boston Common gave warning of trouble unless the play is stopped. One speaker shouted that hysteria, with which the colored people have been charged, might change to bombs, and bombs are dangerous. The Rev. B. W. Swain intimated that a colored Ku Klux Klan might result. The Rev. William Thornton declared that the negroes would choose the hospitals, jails, and even death, rather than to have "The Birth of a Nation" continue its production.

NO HURT TO COLORED RACE

One of the most effective arguments of the day came from the lips of Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, who styled not consider the production of the play as a thing injurious to the black race.

Harvard's president emeritus declared that "The Birth of a Nation" was the most mischievous teaching in a free commonwealth. "One of its objects is to suggest to the people that the 14th and 15th amendments to our Constitution ought to be repealed," he said. "Are we going to suffer these recommendations to be set forth all over the United States without seeing to it that the antidote for that poison is applied? It is also a plan to maintain the thesis that the Ku Klux Klan was a necessary defence of the South against himself an educator. Before a gathering that thronged Tremont Temple yesterday afternoon he declared D. W. Griffith's production to be a very strong misrepresentation of "the birth of this nation."

MASS MEETING ON COMMON.
for more than an hour to give expression to indignation against the "Birth of a Nation."

colored legislators. That reminds me of a German assertion that a contract may be destroyed because of military necessity. The grievances of the South may have been great, but they did not sanction lawlessness.

"This play teaches that lawlessness is admirable and the Ku Klux Klan instils that feeling. It also suggests that the whole colored race be moved to Africa or some other barbarous place. They would have to be driven by force of arms. It is inconceivable, monstrous. It suggests that the colored race would find happiness in a Liberia.

"How did the colored people come here? Who brought them here? Whose children are many of them today? The American people will never think of such an outrage as this transportation across the seas would mean.

"The colored people need not feel insulted. The progress of the colored people in 60 years is the most stupendous thing in our whole civilization. The negro race can take care of itself, and has proved wonderfully capable of doing so. It's the white people that I am concerned about.

"This false teaching of history and perversion of American ideals is my concern and also the growing indifference among young people to the serious questions of the day. If the presentation of the play were accompanied by an exposition showing that it falsifies history and is not true to American ideals, I am not so sure that it might not result in good and be useful after all.

"Any law that might be made as a result of this production should not be based on this particular incident in Boston, but should have a general application against unwise, untrue, unpatriotic and immoral plays which pervert the American ideal of liberty, justice for all men and universal brotherhood."

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
MAY 3, 1915
1709

g on Common

The entire audience stood up when Dr. Eliot was introduced. From the galleries colored women waved their handkerchiefs and cheered him. Especially warm was the applause when he spoke of the inscription which he wrote for the back of the Shaw Memorial on the Common.

Subtle Defamation

Dr. Francis H. Rowley presided. All of the speakers were white and a majority of the audience was colored. The mass meeting opened with the singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The presiding officer began the first attack on the photo play. "As I saw it, it seemed to be a subtle and malicious plan to defame the negro and produce in the North that unholy race prejudice which has stirred white men in the South to deeds of shame and murder."

Continuing he told of an instance where a young man exclaimed: "I wish I could kill every —— nigger in the United States," after he had seen the production of the play. "Yet they tell us there is no danger or peril to the morality of this city," said the speaker. "How clever it all is!"

Dr. Samuel M. Crothers of Cambridge stated that the moral idealism of Boston 50 years ago is being tested today. "When one dares to throw upon the screen quotations from President Wilson and purports to write the history of the nation, it will be accepted as the feeling of the times unless it is protested," said Dr. Crothers.

Christian Spirit Should Rule

"I know of no way to preserve a state of peace save when one party, race or sect has been insulted, if all others shall say 'You have struck me.' The Christian church should rise to the thought of its Master, and say, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of one of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.'"

"Truth is ever the truth when it unveils a greater truth," said the Rev. Henry Francis Smith. "My heart was filled with sadness after the first indignation passed, when I saw this play, I wondered how Abraham Lincoln would feel if he could have seen the play.

"It breaks the Ninth Commandment—'Thou shalt not bear false witness.' It does bear false witness against the colored man, against Charles Sumner and the fear that hangs over white mothers, not because of people with black skin, but of people with black hearts."

Bolfe Cobleigh, editor of the Congregationalist, revealed the purpose of the photo-play as told to him by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which novel the play is founded. "He came to my office to convince me that the play is all right," said Mr. Cobleigh. "And I learned the motives behind it. D. W. Griffith, the producer, has achieved dazzling success in the propaganda of falsehood.

Dixon's Deportation Plan

"Mr. Dixon wants to teach the children of the United States his version of the reconstruction period. He wants us to believe that the Ku Klux Klan was made up of Christians. He said his father, a Baptist minister, left the church to join the Klan.

"The official records show wholesale murder and a real reign of terror in the history of this organization. There are no authoritative events in the last part of the play flashed on the screen. He wishes to create abhorrence in the hearts of white women against the black man. The play shows the colored people giving vent to all forms of savagery. No more subtle way can be imagined to induce race hatred.

"Although I suggested that it would be a difficult thing to deport 10,000,000 colored citizens to Africa, Mr. Dixon seriously argued that he hoped to create such public sentiment that it will begin in the near future and be completed in a century. The cherished traditions of this State and of America are at stake—liberty, justice and equal rights. In these later days shall these ideals be held less faithfully? Shall dazzling motion pictures falsify history, create race prejudice and still be allowed to continue?"

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 3 -

Trotter Tells His Own Story

Denies Inciting to Riot

More vivid descriptions of the "near riot" at the performance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont Theatre, April 17, were given the air in the Municipal Court today.

At the resumption of the special session, Judge Brackett presiding, William Monroe Trotter, publisher, took the stand in his own behalf. He flatly denied that he had made any address to people inside or outside the lobby or that he did anything to incite riot. The continued session of the court today heard cases growing out of the "near riot."

Trotter, with Rev. Aaron Puller, are charged jointly with inciting riot and disturbing the peace. In direct examination Trotter said he went to the theatre that night with the intention of seeing the play. He went alone, arriving at the theatre about 7:30, he said. There were a few people in the lobby at the time, both white and colored, but not enough on the outside "to attract any attention at all." He greeted some persons whom he knew, bidding them the time of day. Some person, he said, talked with him about whether or not they would be able to get tickets.

Told Negroes They Had Right to Tickets

Trotter said he recognized Sergt. King ...nding outside the rail near the box ... Some colored persons told the wit... they had been refused tickets to ...trical ...mance. "I told them to get in ...ued ti...e, "and that if they were willing be none ...anybody else they should sell ...g motion ...persons.

...oard of ex...myself. At that time there ...rs conden...d I got in well down to... From view of the ... proceeded ...with ...e session. It ... a ... loud ... any hurried legi... ...reed.

"I looked up and saw Sergt. King pushing and advancing on the people. Attaches of the theatre, dressed in apparently confederate uniforms, civilians, and officers were assisting him. One or two civilians put their hands on me and I warned them not to assault me. Just then a man in civilian clothes struck me on the jaw.

"I learned later that this man was Patrolman Dennis Harrington, in plain clothes. When I was struck I requested Sergt. King and another officer in uniform to 'arrest that man.' This man said that he had not struck me. A woman who had been standing to my right stepped up and said, 'You are not telling the truth. I saw you strike Mr. Trotter.'

Wanted Policeman Arrested for Blow

"The officers said they couldn't arrest him because he was a policeman, but I said that they should arrest him just the same. A man near me said that if I had been doing anything wrong or unlawful I should be arrested, not assaulted. Some officer in the crowd said, 'We will take him if you men will go to the station and make a complaint.'

"Then I stepped to the left into the line going toward the ticket office. A man in civilian clothes was standing at the rail blocking the crowd. The man inside the box office was saying, 'We have no tickets.'

"White people were coming up and getting tickets across the single line. A white man came up alongside the line and said 'I want to get some tickets. Get out of the line to buy tickets and that they wouldn't get out of the way until a sign was put up declaring that all tickets were sold out.

BOSTON (Mass.) FREE PRESS
MAY 1, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

The Maverick Men's Club will have a real live debate at the Maverick Church on Wednesday evening, May 5. The debate will be about "The Birth of a Nation," and will be debated on by two men who know more about this picture than any others. They are Butler Wilson, the father of the Wilson Bill upon which the opponents of the photo-play base their hopes, and John F. Cusick, the attorney for the producers of the play.

BROOKLINE (Mass.) CHRONICLE
MAY 1, 1915

The Rev. Dr. Ambrose W. Vernon referred to the censorship of such things as "The Birth of a Nation," at the vesper services Sunday afternoon in Harvard Church. "The great issue," he said, "is between absolute freedom of speech and freedom of art and the effect of that freedom upon the fanning of the flames of race prejudice. The spectacle in Europe is showing what race prejudice can do when started, and our own country is a mosaic of different races." Dr. Vernon praised Governor Walsh and Lieut.-Gov. Cushing and former Congressman Samuel McCall for the stand they had taken.

Southern Woman Condemns Play

Miss [illegible] Moffat, a Southern woman, stated that a minority in the South is striving to emancipate the whites from fear of slavery. "We need backing and support in the North, and this is being undermined by the dastardly play called 'The Birth of a Nation.' It is amazing insolence to bring this play in the shadows of the Shaw Memorial and picture villains in federal uniform. Southerners resent that. The black soldier has not disgraced his uniform any more than any other soldier.

"The young men and women of the South are being brought up in the school of dishonesty and political corruption. The day of reckoning is coming, and a large proportion of whites will be found siding with the blacks. The photo-play is an insidious attempt to demoralize a whole people."

Judge Philip Rubinstein and Rabbi M. M. Eichler told of the ridicule which the Jewish people have been subjected to in plays and its results. The former stated that the photo-play under discussion does not depict one particular wrong-doer but leads the audience to despise a whole race. Rabbi Eichler pledged the support of all Jewish people to pass a law that would stop this production.

Attorney Butler R. Wilson read a letter from President Wilson's secretary to the effect that the President never indorsed the photo-play and that a private exhibition was given in the White House as a courtesy to a friend of President Wilson. Professor Henry G. Pearson and Mrs. Susan FitzGerald were the last speakers.

Mass Meeting on Common

The meeting on the Boston Common was conducted by colored people of various denominations. Few white people were present. Here a tirade was given by colored clergymen against legislators and the press. The Rev. D. O. Walker of Chelsea, who presided, declared that the fight against the photo-play will not stop at any cost and that a temporary truce is merely to give the Legislature a chance.

"We have asked for fish and they have given us a serpent," he stated, in expressing disapproval over the present bill before the Legislature.

"Somebody had better watch out unless this so-called hysteria turns into a bomb," shouted the Rev. William Thornton. "That Ku Klux horse parading around the streets to advertise the show is a terrible thing to tantalize us with. I've got something to hand that horse when I meet it. Keep your eyes on me, S. P. C. A. There is enough manhood and womanhood under these mixed skins to rise up.

"There is no negro policeman in this city, nor is there a negro in the Legislature. We have no voice. You whites have been playing with us in this city. In this land of the free and brave you have 10,000,000 submissive citizens almost muzzled. Some day these chains are going to snap.

Wishes Press in Purgatory

"If 'The Birth of a Nation' continues, something similar to the human barbecues of the South is going to happen on yonder hill. The religious pulpits are hypocritical, and the press—I wish it in purgatory. The press could have settled this controversy long ago. Shame on the press of a great city that attempts to take advantage by silence, just because the producers have bought up a lot of space.

"You reporters over there will only write what is detrimental about our meeting." This attack on the press caused derisive laughter in the gathering of several thousand colored people. The reporters held their ground and continued taking notes.

"There is Jew, Irish and Scandinavian blood in us," continued the speaker. "Because some of us have bleached out more than others, we were able to see the play. Don't stir up all these different races in our blood. The difference between the courts here in and Georgia is that in Boston they say 'Mister' to the defendant, and in Georgia they say 'Nigger.' The justice is about the same." In closing he paid tribute to Governor Walsh, whose name was cheered by the assemblage.

DORCHESTER (Mass.) BEACON
MAY 1, 1915

TREMONT THEATRE.

D. W. Griffith's magnificent historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," enters upon the second big month of its run at the Tremont Theatre next Monday afternoon. The play is the most widely discussed topic in this State and for a fortnight has overshadowed even the European war and the Roosevelt-Barnes trial as a front page feature. On Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock a special performance is to be given, with the members of the Legislature and other officials as invited guests.

Mr Griffith's production has developed an enormous number of friends in Greater Boston and all the surrounding places. It has now been viewed by more than 75,000 patrons. Their support, with that of those who sympathise with them, outweighs the opposition. The issue of freedom of dramatic speech is involved in the play's continuance. It is hoped a wise and reasonable censorship bill be passed that will not curtail the prerogative of stage producers nor render unsatisfactory such wonderful art-achievements as the one Mr Griffith has accomplish-

THE UNION CAUSE VILIFIED.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Having seen the moving-picture show called, The Birth of a Nation, and found it to be very different from what I had been led to expect, I am strongly impressed that the controlling reason why it ought to be excluded from exhibition in Massachusetts has not been brought out as it should be.

I supposed its most offensive feature to be its defamation of the Negro, such as I object to this, on grounds both of justice and policy, the fundamental objection to this play lies deeper. It is covert, but most skilful and insidious defamation of the Union cause, and apotheosis of slavery and rebellion. We of the white race should be first to rise against it, and we do ourselves no credit by leaving it to our colored fellow-citizens in protest. With the exception of the Lincoln episodes, where it cunningly defers to a sentiment that cannot safely be trifled with even in the law-abiding North—though it is impossible to overlook a touch of coarse caricature in the face of the Lincoln—it is, from the rising of the curtain unto the going down of the same, a pack of pictured lies so grotesquely false that but for their malice and their power of mischief, as addressed to the eyes of a generation comparatively uninformed, they would be simply laughable. Of some of the displayed incidents most calculated to exalt rebellion and excite sympathy for the (white) victims of reconstruction, probably there is not one authenticated instance in the whole history of the war and reconstruction period. Purporting to be historical, it is history upside down, a complete inversion of historical truth. If special pains are taken to vilify the Negro, it is because he is the special object of the propaganda for repeal of the 14th and 15th amendments of which this play is unquestionably a part and if tolerated will be a subtle and effective instrument. The most amazing feature of the whole performance is the glorification of the Ku Klux Klan, for which alone it might have been composed. Fancy a depiction of that "secret, black and midnight" horde of lawless ruffians whose career of outrage and murder is unhappily part of the history of the country, as arising out of a chivalrous purpose to protect white women against Negro lust, drawing applause, probably sincere, from an honest Massachusetts audience! Yet they emerge at the end with the principal honors of the piece.

This pictorial recrudescence of the rebellion is a gross libel upon the Union cause, upon its public leaders, Lincoln only excepted, upon every soldier, living or dead, who fought for it, and upon the whole people who supported it. Slavery and rebellion were right, the South was outraged by emancipation, the attempt to secure the Negro in his freedom was a crime for which wholesale murder was the proper remedy, the Negro was unfit for freedom and is unfit for civil rights, the Yankees were vandals, the rebels the true chivalry, and the Ku Klux Klan the heroes of the whole drama. This is the moral of the tale, conveyed with skilful innuendo and most consummate art. It gambles on the public ignorance of our own history, and as a vast majority of people are more impressed by what they see than by what they read or hear, it is liable to win by permanently lodging a radically false conception in the public mind.

The selection of Massachusetts as the field for the introduction of this spectacle to the public, impudent as that is, affords the opportunity to deal with it here as it deserves. In the South, with conditions reversed, such a show and its perpetrators would be lynched. This is not the Massachusetts way. But unless we find a way to effectively resent this libel alike upon our citizenry and our history, let us destroy our soldiers' monuments, give the battle-flags at the State House to the dust heap, abolish our Memorial day, and confess ourselves unfit to inherit the traditions of Massachusetts, in our impotence to vindicate them or the memory of the men who made them.

Boston, May 2. A. E. PILLSBURY.

TREMONT THEATRE REPLY TO MR. A. E. PILLSBURY.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I have seen a copy of Mr. Pillsbury's letter to the newspapers. His missive is a special brief to cover up the mistakes of his partisans in this matter. They first charged "The Birth of a Nation" with being immoral and obscene, then shifted the attack to the alleged prejudice they said it exhibited against the Negro. They were unable to win over the body of Boston opinion to their views on these grounds. Now Mr. Pillsbury steps to the front and takes a fresh line of attack by denouncing it as "a covert but most skilful and insidious attack on the Union cause and an apotheosis of slavery and rebellion"!

Is Mr. Pillsbury still living in and dwelling among the sectional hates of the era of "slavery and rebellion"? It seems to us he is a veritable Rip Van Winkle of long-bygone animosities. Does he not know that Unionism is held as devotedly by the people of the South as by the people of the North, by Mr. Griffith, the author of this film, as by Mr. Pillsbury himself and his followers? The blood of northern and southern men was spilt together in the Spanish-American war. Another struggle with a foreign power, should this nation again be dragged into war, would again prove the southrons' whole-hearted, passionate loyalty. Why, then, this talk about "insidious attack on the Union cause"? The men and women connected with [illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation" play do not yield, in their love of the Union, even to Mr. Pillsbury. As a matter of fact, they regard his aspersions as unthinkable. Sons of Union veterans work for the film company, and among the many letters of commendation received by the management there is no line of demarcation between those who wore the blue and those who wore the gray.

If our opponent could rid himself of his Rip Van Winkle mental attitude, he would see "The Birth of a Nation" as it really is—a historico-fictional romance of the Lost Cause. His attitude is as absurd as that of a Hanoverian protesting Sir Walter Scott's Waverly on the fancied ground of its inciting the restoration of the Stuart kings. Scott shed the halo of romance over a broken dynasty and the long-since-reconciled rebel Highlanders of 40 years previous. Mr. Griffith has done much the same. Of some of the "displayed incidents" in the story, Mr. Pillsbury tells us there is no historical basis. What of it? Has not every writer of historical novels drawn on imagination to some extent? The letter-writer's misstatement that "The Birth of a Nation" is a "pack of pictured lies" can be readily disproved by reference to Woodrow Wilson's and Fleming's chapters on Reconstruction, and to the voluminous congressional reports on the Ku Klux Klan. The latter are a special object of Mr. Pillsbury's ire. His characterization of them as a "secret, black and midnight horde of lawless ruffians" is far wider of the truth than any fictionist's glorification of them as protectors of oppressed Southern whites, which in very many instances they actually and undoubtedly were.

"Attack on the Union cause!" Mr. Pillsbury's frenzied phase should make men laugh and the gods weep. The glorification of Unionism in the play includes (1) the reverent treatment of President Lincoln (notwithstanding Mr. Pillsbury's silly sneer; (2) the apotheosis of Daniel Webster and the filming of his immortal sentiment; (3) the dignity and moral grandeur of Grant; (4) the heroism of the Stoneman boys, the protagonists of Northern chivalry; the depiction of the wonderful bravery and knightly qualities of all the Union fighters; the scenes in the federal hospital and the executive mansion; the death of Lincoln represented as the loss to the South of its best friend; the final soul-reunion of the nation after troublous reconstruction, in the bonds of love and peace. Such are but a few of the many points that could be cited to prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that the realization of national unity, as the title indicates, are the very breath and life of the drama.

The producers of "The Birth of a Nation" are not trying for a repeal of the 14th and 15th amendments. They are not insidiously attempting to bring back slavery (the very thought provokes a smile!) and they are not actuated by political motives. They do not share Mr. Dixon's radical view of a future Liberia for American Negroes; over against the imaginative scene of the great Liberia once dreamed of by Lincoln is displayed the happy recount of Negro progress and prosperity since the war. And any schoolboy could have told Mr. Pillsbury that the depiction of the antics and excesses of recently freed Negroes, as shown in the play during Reconstruction times, does not in any manner indict or malign the advanced Negro of today.

In conclusion, we resent the unfounded, biased and prejudiced attempt to impugn the motif and purposes of this art-work of Mr. Griffith's. Our actions and activities have all been lawful and honorable; we have obeyed every request made to us by the properly constituted authorities, and we are exhibiting a play which has already been witnessed and enthusiastically applauded and indorsed by many thousands of Bostonians. To drive "The Birth of a Nation" out of Boston would mean that no different interpretation of Reconstruction times could obtain free speech in this city save that which is Mr. Pillsbury's, and that of his co-workers in this matter, who we are convinced do not represent any considerable fraction of the citizenship.

J. J. McCARTHY,
General Manager of "The Birth of a Nation" company.
Boston, May 4.

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass. May 3.

Film Play Day of Prayer

Advocated by Hub Ministers

What laws have failed to do, prayer may accomplish.

It was with this idea in mind, that a committee of ministers, representing the Baptist, Episcopal, Congregational, Methodist, Unitarian and Universalist communions, suggested that Sunday, May 2, be set aside as a day "for the consideration and fostering of friendly relations between all races." The suggestion was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall.

The committee was appointed to consider legislation concerning the "Birth of a Nation," the photo-play now being shown in the Tremont Theatre, which has aroused such a storm of protest from the colored people of Boston.

Wednesday, the ministers advocated legislation which would effectually censor plays reflecting on race questions. The amendment to the report made public today advocates a day of prayer to bring about the desired condition of peace between the colored and white races.

"The committee of ministers of various denominations are not satisfied merely with repressive measures," says the report. "They advise the appointment of Sunday, May 2, as a day for the consideration and fostering of friendly relations between all races.

"They suggest that ministers and other public speakers bring to light the wide range of facts showing the perils and the superficiality of race distinctions, and especially the mischief of race antagonism, and, on the other hand, the wonderful and beautiful illustrations of the working among all peoples of the principles of common intelligence, humanity and devotion.

"They ask specific reference at this time to the relations between the white and colored people, wherein we are still paying atonement for the evils of slavery, and which demand the utmost sympathies on all sides, but chiefly toward those who, through our national laws, were made the victims of an injustice.

"If the 'Birth of a Nation' has given a perverted and one-sided view of the cruel and degrading results of slavery to both races, the committee hopes that the day may be so used as to dispel bitterness, bigotry, prejudice and angry feelings; to express our humanity and to draw together all the elements of our people in the attitude of friendliness."

Eliot Advocates Suppression of Birth of Nation

Protest against the exhibition of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," as well as the spirit actuating its presentment in various sections of the country, was voiced at two largely attended meetings yesterday afternoon. The first was held at Tremont Temple and was under the auspices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the second being called by the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, pastor of the 12th Baptist Church.

The speakers at the Tremont Temple meeting called the presentment of the play as being "unfair, un-American and not in accord with the principles of liberty as guaranteed under the Constitution." The audience at both meetings was largely composed of colored people, but there was a fair sprinkling of whites at each meeting place.

Perhaps the most important speech of the afternoon was made by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard University. He spoke at the Tremont Temple meeting, and on being introduced by Dr. Francis H. Rowley, who presided, declared that he had not seen the much discussed motion picture.

He advocated the suppression of the film, however, but not on the same grounds as those who were gathered at the meeting. He said, "I do not favor the suppression of the picture because of the claim that it misrepresents or belittles a particular race or creed. It is on other grounds that I protest against the exhibition of the picture.

"The picture has been misnamed and misinterprets history. The nation was not born with the beginning of the reconstruction period. This nation was born with the signing of the constitution.

"The Civil War only placed a new interpretation on the constitution. It told the South as well as all the world that the Constitution was a contract not to be broken." At this juncture he compared the sacredness of the constitution as a contract, with the German military view as to what a contract stood for.

Continuing he said: "I view the matter as an educator and teacher. The coming generations should not be taught that the 'Birth of the Nation' began with the reconstruction period. The picture from this viewpoint is false, and furthermore, the children should not be taught that the Ku Klux Klan, which grew out and for the purpose of violence, is something of which the people of this country should be proud." He concluded his address by paying his respects to and confessing admiration for the vast progress made by the colored race in this country.

BOSTON TRAVELER
MAY 3, 1915

Since it is asserted that Thomas Dixon says his real purpose in producing "The Birth of a Nation" is "the achieving of white supremacy and the getting rid of the colored people," those who have been insisting that it was with the mercenary making money will have to apologize for their hasty and [illegible] clusions.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
MAY 3, 1915

NEGROES FLYING FLAG OF TRUCE THEY DECLARE

Denounce 'Birth of Nation' at Big Mass Meeting on Common.

INDIRECT THREATS OF VIOLENCE MADE

Photoplay Also Scored by Speakers in Tremont Temple.

Declaring that the negroes of this city have simply put up a flag of truce during pending legislation anent the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," several colored pastors of negro churches in Boston, addressing a mass meeting in protest of more than 1000 negroes on the Common yesterday afternoon, bitterly denounced the production and made indirect threats of violence unless the film is stopped by legislation.

The permit for the use of the Common was obtained from the police on the pretext that a religious meeting was to be held. But the speakers immediately launched into expositions of about everything else but religion. From time to time a speaker, realizing how far away from religious topics he was straying, would cite a scriptural quotation and laughingly remark he would use it as a text.

Text From Coin

One of the speakers after this fashion said he knew of no better text than that found on coins, "In God We Trust." His choice was greeted with applause and laughter.

The meeting on the Common followed a meeting which crowded Tremont Temple earlier in the afternoon, at which many prominent white people of Boston, including Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard were the speakers.

An appeal was made on the common asking 500 negroes to visit Governor Walsh this morning and petition him to send a special message to the Legislature requesting effective legislation to suppress "The Birth of a Nation."

The speakers on the Common accused the Boston newspapers of being "bought up" by advertising, declared that certain public officials did not stop the play because they had been "greased," and threatened that if the play was not stopped by legislation it will be stopped by violence.

Flag of Truce

They asserted that the negroes have simply put up a flag of truce during pending legislation about the play, and that the fight to stop it is still on in full swing. "The Birth of a Nation' must go," was the slogan reiterated in their addresses by all of the speakers.

Addressing his audience as "mixed white folks," the Rev. William M. Thornton said: "We are supposed to be in a state of hysteria, but hysteria sometimes turns to bombs, and bombs are dangerous. We have been humble and peaceful, but all the volumes of peace have been exhausted and we are liable to go crazy some morning. You know crazy people are not responsible for their actions."

The Rev. D. O. Walker, pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of Chelsea, urged the negroes of this city to compel the suppression of the play even at the cost of their lives.

That a "negro Ku Klux Klan" might be formed in Boston was asserted by Rev. B. W. Swain, pastor of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, Columbus avenue.

The Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, pastor of the Twelfth Baptist Church, scored the Boston newspapers and asserted that reports of the protest meetings were not printed because the papers were bought up with the advertising of those producing the photoplay.

"A Shame to Boston"

"In this city, where one can hardly walk without stumbling over some monument dedicated to liberty and equality the colored people are goading under enslavement. And something is going to snap soon.

"This thingh as become unendurable and there is enough manhood and womanhood under these mixed skins to resent it. To permit the production is a shame to Boston. The entire history of this nation testifies to the sacrifice of the negro and the way he has helped the white race in its progress. And now we merely ask a law on the books that will be greater than Dixon and his clan."

"If all the white people are not angels they certainly are not devils," said Dr. Shaw. "As a matter of fact the majority of the white people are with us in this fight.

"The question would never have arisen at all if the pulpits had not been filled with hypocrites. Such a production could have been attacked from a religious standpoint as violating all the ideals of true Christianity."

[illegible] Tremont Temple [illegible]

The meeting in Tremont Temple addressed by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, Dr. Samuel W. Crothers, Rolfe Cobleigh, Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald, Butler R. Wilson, the Rev. Henry F. Smith, Judge Philip Rubenstein, Rabbie M. M. Eichler, Miss Adeline Moffat, Professor Henry G. Tearson and Dr. Francis H. Rowley, who presided.

Dr. Eliot characterized the play as "a strong representation of a misrepresentation of the birth of this nation." He asserted that the false feeling aroused by the play will not effect the colored people, but will have a bad effect on the white people of this country.

He urged the passage of a law to apply to all such "unwise, unpatriotic and un-American productions."

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
MAY 3, 1915

PRES. ELIOT SCORES "BIRTH OF A NATION"

TERMS PROTESTED FILM FALSE IN ITS TEACHINGS

Klu Klux Klan Should Not Be Held Up as Something Worthy

Protest against the exhibition of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," as well as the spirit actuating its presentment in various sections of the country, was voiced at two largely attended meetings yesterday afternoon. The first was held at Tremont Temple and was under the auspices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the second being called by the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, pastor of the 12th Baptist Church.

The speakers at the Tremont Temple meeting called the presentment of the play as being "unfair, un-American and not in accord with the principles of liberty as guaranteed under the Constitution." The audience at both meetings was largely composed of colored people, but there was a fair sprinkling of whites at each meeting place.

Perhaps the most important speech of the afternoon was made by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard University. He spoke at the Tremont Temple meeting, and on being introduced by Dr. Francis H. Rowley, who presided, declared that he had not seen the much discussed motion picture.

He advocated the suppression of the film, however, but not on the same grounds as those who were gathered at the meeting. He said, "I do not favor the suppression of the picture because of the claim that it misrepresents or belittles a particular race or creed. It is on other grounds that I protest against the exhibition of the picture.

"The picture has been misnamed and misinterprets history. The nation was not born with the beginning of the reconstruction period. This nation was born with the signing of the constitution.

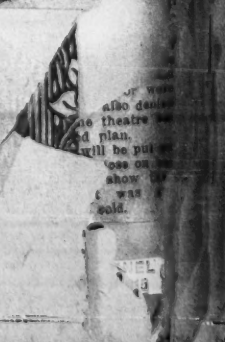
"The Civil War only placed a new interpretation on the constitution. It told the South as well as all the world that the Constitution was a contract not to be broken." At this juncture he compared the sacredness of the constitution as a contract, with the German military view as to what a contract stood for.

Continuing he said: "I view the matter as an educator and teacher. The coming generations should not be taught that the 'Birth of the Nation' began with the reconstruction period. The picture from this viewpoint is false, and furthermore, the children should not be taught that the Ku Klux Klan, which grew out and for the purpose of violence, is something of which the people of this country should be proud." He concluded his address by paying his respects to and confessing admiration for the vast progress made by the colored race in this country.

Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist, told of a conversation he had with Thomas Dixon, author of the "Clansman," on which story the photo-play was based. He said that the author of the story told him the picture was being presented for the purpose of showing the colored people as they really were, and declared that Mr. Dixon suggested to him that it would be better for all concerned, if the colored people of the United States were sent to Africa or some other place.

Frequently the speakers were interrupted by applause when points against the motion picture were scored. The other speakers, all of whom condemned the film, included Dr. Samuel M. Crothers, Rev. Henry F. Smith, Miss Adeline Moffat, Judge Philip Rubenstein, Mrs. Susan F. FitzGerald, Prof. Henry G. Pearson of M. I. T. and Rabbi M. N. Eichler.

The speakers on the Common, included M. W. Thornton, pastor of the Charles st. A. M. E. Church, Boston; Rev. T. E. Auten, pastor of Rush Zion Church, Cambridge, and Rev. D. O. Walker, pastor [illegible] Church, Chelsea.



BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD 17
MAY 3, 1915

DECLARES DIXON AIMS TO DEPORT ALL NEGROES

Editor Cobleigh Tells Tremont Temple Audience That Author of "The Clansman" Admitted to Him That He Wished to Get Rid of the Colored People Within a Century.

At the Tremont Temple mass meeting of citizens yesterday afternoon, to protest against "The Birth of a Nation," Rollin Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist, made the direct charge against Thomas Dixon that he revealed to Mr. Cobleigh the real motive of the production: "The achieving of white supremacy and the getting rid of the colored people."

Mr. Cobleigh said: "I suggested to Mr. Dixon the difficulty of deporting 9,000,000 American citizens to Africa, as he proposed, but he seriously argued that it could be done. He hopes to create such public sentiment that a substantial beginning can be made in the near future, and that the task can be completed within a century."

This declaration by Mr. Cobleigh created something of a sensation, and following speakers, especially Judge Philip Rubenstein of the juvenile court, and Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, devoted considerable attention to it.

The audience numbered about 2000, mainly Negroes, and the other speakers were: Dr. Francis W. Rowley, who presided; Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald, the Rev. S. M. Crothers, the Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Prof. Henry G. Pearson, M. I. T., and Miss Adalene Moffat.

Ovation for Dr. Eliot.

Dr. Eliot received a great demonstration of applause, everybody rising when he was introduced. He said that he does not look on the play as primarily insulting or injurious to the black race —"although it may be, I haven't seen it. What interests me most, as an educator, is what effect the play is likely to have when exhibited all over the United States, upon white people, especially the rising generation." Dr. Eliot called it a "very extraordinary misrepresentation of the birth of a nation," and said that while it is a favorite statement that the nation came into existence after the civil war, it is untrue, for the nation came into existence when the constitution was adopted. Only the new view was obtained that the contract is indestructible, and that the union is indissoluble.

"A more dangerous false doctrine taught by the play is that the Ku-Klux-Klan was on the whole a righteous and questions of liberty and justice; but will not his play call attention to this fact?"

Dr. Eliot suggested that, provided an antidote be supplied in a true exposition of American history and ideals, the play after all might serve some useful purpose; and closed by urging that the new statute petitioned for be of a general nature, universal in application against what is unpatriotic and unsuitable. It gave him great satisfaction to remember that he wrote the inscription on the Shaw monument because it testifies to what the colored race did for the American people in the cause of liberty.

Editor Cobleigh.

On Dr. Eliot's resuming his seat, Dr. Rowley, before introducing the next speaker, remarked that there would be general willingness to have "the antidote" administered, as suggested by Dr. Eliot, but "the danger would be that the 'it' would get the poison while one continued to get the antidote."

Rollin Grant Editor Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, whose remarks created a sensation, said: "While my friends are expressing disturbing disapproval of Thomas Dixon, I ask the right to say a word of appreciation that night with a service that he rendered the play. He went to the play before his play was produced in Boston. He removed from the theatre about 7 o'clock that A had had access to the box office a few minutes before the performance began, and both of us had seen the play. He explained to me what he was trying to accomplish by its influence on the country. It is of great importance to us in judging the play to know the motives back of it, to learn about what the promoters are trying to get at. Dixon came to my office for the purpose of convincing me that the play was all right. He did not convince me that his purpose in it was all wrong, but my conviction was strengthened by a view of the picture at Tremont Theatre, which indicated to me that D. D. Griffith had produced a dazzling success in telling Mr. Dixon's story in the most startling and impressive way, presenting the overwhelming hands of falsehood and prejudice in which Mr. Dixon had admitted to me was the real purpose he had in view. [illegible] Board of [illegible] Anywise, at [illegible] confidence I got in [illegible] his view of the [illegible] proceeded [illegible] session. It [illegible] and a [illegible] any hurried [illegible]

Told New York Right [illegible]

Ku Klux Real Terrorists.

"Mr. Dixon, says that he wants to teach the children of the United States his version of the history of the reconstruction period, that the Ku Klux was a chivalric army of crusaders, inspired by pure religion, and made up of the best white men of the South, organized to avenge assaults of colored men upon white women, and to protect their virtue, to protect property and personal rights, and to regain the white man's control of the ballot, all of which he represents had been menaced or lost in a reign of terror caused by vicious colored people, whom he would have us believe were the only kind of colored people except the ignorant and servile who 'knew their place.' He says that his father was a Baptist minister in North Carolina, and left the church to join the Ku Klux, remaining with it till it was disbanded, so Thomas Dixon knows what he is talking about.

"But authoritative history tells me that the Ku-Klux were guilty of treason, wholesale murder, and other crimes, and that the real reign of terror was caused by the Ku-Klux, and that white men who would not vote with the oligarchy, as well as Negroes, were innocent victims." The speaker concluded with the assertion that the play, instead of history, presented fiction, and contended that the scenes of the chase of white women not only by "Gus" but also by the lieutenant-governor, who is a mulatto, shows the intent to convict the whole race, even though educated, of lust and baseness. Recounting Mr. Dixon's scheme to get rid of the whole race of negroes, the speaker said: "If we are to accept such a social and political propaganda against any race in our mixed population, where will it end?"

Judge Rubenstein.

Judge Rubenstein said that he came not to represent the judiciary, nor the Jewish race, "yet in view of the reference of my connection to the juvenile court, ought I not to feel a grave interest in films shown to the public, open to children, that such films should be irreproachable, and not tending to excite race prejudice or wrong thought?" He was surprised, he said, to learn the real motive of the author—"to incite race hatred against the Negro." As for the argument of property rights in the play, which ought to be protected, every day men come forward in the attempt to use property for improper purposes, and every layman knows that property rights are subordinate to human rights. He said the effect of the play upon the beholder is that of horror as well as antagonism to the Negro, especially because the play represents a whole city full of riotous and criminal negroes, and urged that the law should be changed so that inspirations to hatred and fury may be prohibited, and instead there be produced plays appealing to the instincts of the brotherhood of man.

Prof. Pearson said that the effect of the play is to lead the beholder to despise his fellowman, and to believe it really right to cherish such feelings.

The Rev. S. M. Crothers predicted that the conservative sentiment of the community in the future will be against such productions. He pronounced it a "wicked thing to revive all that is hateful and ignorant in a period 50 years ago," and criticised the effrontery of quoting President Wilson (untruthfully) as indorsing the play.

The Rev. Henry Francis Smith evoked much applause when he stated that he had preached his morning sermon against the play, and induced a large number of parishioners to sign an appeal to the Legislature.

Women Protest.

Miss Adalene Moffat, a Southern woman engaged in social work in the South, said that the play brings out a very real peril to the nation, because the South is still obsessed with the sense of fear of the Negro, and young men are being brought up in an atmosphere of justification of political corruption, intimidation and dishonesty; and such plays by their insidious appeal tend to demoralize the North, as well, into accepting any means to justify an end.

Mrs. FitzGerald, a suffrage orator, declared that the refusal of the management to sell tickets to Negroes, and the admission that trouble was feared, proved that it was expected that incitement to race hatred would result.

Rabbi M. M. Eichler brought the greetings of the Jewish people and assurances from a race which had known oppression, that they stand with the Negro in this crisis.

Butler R. Wilson read a letter from George Foster Peabody declaring that his attitude had been misrepresented, and that he disapproves of the play; also a letter from former Congressman Thacher inclosing correspondence with the White House showing that President Wilson denies he indorsed the play, and also showing that Mr. Thacher disapproves of it.

NEGRO CLERGYMEN SPEAK AT MEETING ON COMMON

Gathering Favors Hallowell Censorship Bill.

Following the protest meeting at Tremont Temple against "The Birth of a Nation" yesterday afternoon a mass meeting was held on the baseball field of the Common under the auspices of the Negro churches of Greater Boston. There were 3500 persons gathered at 5 o'clock when the meeting was opened by the chairman, the Rev. D. O. Walker of the Bethel Church, Chelsea.

He announced that the meeting was a religious demonstration against the photoplay. The speakers introduced were all clergymen, including the Rev. Montrose W. Thornton of the Charles Street A. M. E. Church; the Rev. Walter McClane of St. Bartholomew's Church, Cambridge; the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Boston, and the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain of the Zion A. M. E. Church, Columbus avenue.

The assembled men and women sang many hymns, including the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and other patriotic airs. It was resolved that the Hallowell bill should be substituted for the bill reported by the judiciary committee in the Legislature.

CAMBRIDGE PASTOR DEFENDS PHOTO-PLAY

Declares Boston Is Having a Tempest in a Teapot.

"The present agitation over the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' probably is caused by some unscrupulous white politicians," declared the Rev. E. A. E. Palmquist, pastor of the North Avenue Baptist Church of Cambridge last night in his sermon.

"Boston is having a tempest in a teapot," said he. "The tempest is caused by kindling a fire by inflaming the minds of our colored brethren. New England is like an old maid. If you want to know how to bring up children ask an old maid. If you want to know anything about handling the Negro ask the people of New England.

"The colored people are merely children and if the people of Boston are to allow them to close 'The Birth of a Nation' they will be sowing the seed that will bring forth a harvest similar to the harvest in the South at the close of the civil war. The photo-play should arouse no prejudice in the heart of the Negro. It has a great value as a splendid historical production." Mr. Palmquist told his congregation that he formed his opinion after seeing the photo-play for himself.

NEGRO EDITOR QUESTIONS PASTOR IN PULPIT

Denies Statements by the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins.

When the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain, finished his sermon on the Negro problem last night his statements were challenged by J. Thomas Harrison, editor of the Advocate, a paper published in Cambridge, who had listened to the sermon.

Mr. Harrison took exception to the clergyman's statement that 95 per cent. of the prisoners of Alabama were Negroes, and that there were fewer skilled workmen among the Negroes of the South today than there were 10 years before the civil war, and that the Negro race had not produced great men.

Mr. Harrison denied the statement regarding the percentage of Negro crime in Alabama, and demanded that Mr. Hawkins tell his congregation in a future sermon of some of the great Negro leaders, such as Maceo, Booker T. Washington and Fred Douglass. He declared the relationship between Negroes and whites in the South today is closer than ever before, and that within 50 years the Negroes have advanced from slavery until today they are paying taxes on property valued at $700,000,000.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" CALLED "DAMNABLE LIE"

Dorchester Pastor Says There Is Enough Race Prejudice.

The photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" was described as a "damnable lie" by the Rev. J. Noble Pierce in his sermon last night at the Second Congregational Church, Dorchester. "It is a lie in not so much what it says, but what it leaves unsaid," he added.

"We have enough race prejudice without augmenting it with a play not wholly true and if it works for race hatred it should not be given. The photo-play is spectacular, magnificent. It is not indecent or immoral in the strictest sense. We see vividly and accurately the assassination of Lincoln. We see the Southern Legislature. We see the renegade who fastens his lustful eyes on one of the most beautiful characters of the play, a southern lassie.

"We see the educated Negro who fastens his eye on another beautiful character and we see the clansmen and many other things which stir the blood. It is a magnificent spectacle, but a lie, and just because it is so magnificent, so attractive, it is all the more a damnable lie."

RABBI ATTACKS MOOTED PLAY

Levi Declares Production Is Menace to Welfare of Community.

In a scathing arraignment of the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," before a large congregation at the Temple Israel yesterday morning, Rabbi Harry Levi declared the production not only a menace to the welfare of the community, but that its influence is more vicious than the red flag, and that it ought to be taken off the stage.

"If we were nearly as well educated or half as religious as we claim to be, we would not allow such a play to be produced," said Rabbi Levi. "It teaches and foments hatred, and is an obstacle to the religious unity of the country.

"The real far reaching significance of this photo-play has not yet been realized. I think it directly affects the welfare of the community and that every citizen ought to know about it. Gov. Walsh has been severely criticised by the proponents of the play, because they asserted he should have seen it first before forming a judgment. For my part, I do not think that anyone needs to see it before making up one's mind on the subject.

"False and Unhistoric."

"Much of the play is absolutely false and absolutely unhistoric, and much of it that is historically correct is so distorted that it creates an entirely unjust impression."

Rabbi Levi in giving his opinion of the play from the standpoint of plot construction and historical significance, stated that he had witnessed it because he did not wish to subject himself to the criticism levelled at Gov. Walsh. As a spectacle, he said, he had seen nothing to compare with it.

"The play wishes us to believe that the Ku Klux Klan was formed for no [illegible] purpose than to protect white [illegible] and ravage. It in-

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD 1709
MAY 2, 1915

DEPICT GRANT AND LEE IN APPOMATTOX SCENE

Work of Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp in "Birth of a Nation" Seen at Tremont Theatre Complimented for Faithfulness.

Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant.

Among all the film actors playing historical characters in the "Birth of a Nation" spectacle at the Tremont Theatre, Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp have received the most compliments on the faithfulness of their work, the one as Gen. Robert E. Lee and the other as Gen. U. S. Grant.

The picture shows Gen. Lee surrendering to Gen. Grant in the Wilmer-McLean mansion at Appomattox Court House, Va., April 9, 1865. It is a faithful reproduction of all the personages in the great historic scene. Many supporters of the defeated confederacy wished to prolong the struggle by means of a guerilla warfare similar to that used by the Boers. John Wilkes Booth supposed that in killing President Lincoln he would have the support of the South in a new struggle. But Gen. Lee was of a different temper. He realized the South had been beaten in a fair struggle on the fields of battle and that prolonging the fighting would merely add to the horrors and misery endured by his people. Therefore after the battle of Five Forks he opened negotiations with Grant, and on the morning of April 9, under the budding apple trees of an Appomattox orchard, were informed the terms of peace which were formally written down at the Wilmer-McLean house in the afternoon.

Lee had dressed for his last public occasion with great care. Grant on the contrary lacked his full dress and appeared in the "fatigue" and dusty jacket of the hard campaign. Strangely enough Lee had no pencil to write with. A pocket inkstand and pen were handed by an officer of the general staff, and it was with these that the document of surrender was written. Afterward all effort was made to arrest and indict Lee for treason, but Grant, who knew Lee's nobility of character, and how he had fulfilled to the letter all the surrender obligations, prevented any such disgraceful sequel.

TRAVELER
MAY 3 1915

DIXON'S PROPAGANDA IN "BIRTH OF A NATION" EXPOSED BY EDITOR

Cobleigh Tells Author Admitted His Purpose Was to Stir up Feeling That Would End in the Deportation of Negroes.

...acterizing the photo-play, "The ...th of a Nation" ... extra-...nary representation of actual con-...ditions as they existed during the re-construction period following the civil war, but asserting that he does not look upon the play as primarily insulting or injurious to the Negro race, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, in an address before the mass protest meeting in Tremont Temple yesterday afternoon, said that what interested him most, as an educator, was the effect its presentation would have on the people of the country. Dr. Eliot was one of a number of speakers who addressed the 2000 or more who attended the meeting to voice their sentiment against the protested play.

Dr. Eliot said that while it is a favorite statement that the nation came into existence after the civil war, it is untrue, for its real birth was at the time of the adoption of the constitution. Only the new view was obtained that the contract is indestructable and the Union is indissoluble.

Rollo Cobleigh, assistant editor of the Congregationalist, created somewhat of a sensation when he made a charge against Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," from which the photo-play was written, that he had revealed to him (Cobleigh) the real motive of his production: "The achieving of white supremacy and the getting rid of the colored people."

Continuing, Mr. Cobleigh said, speaking of Mr. Dixon:

"He said he hoped to create sentiment

(Continued on Page Nine, Column 4.)

BRITISH ROUT GERMANS IN TWO ATTACKS

...LONDON, May 3—A British official ...tement dated today says:

"At 7 P. M., May 1, the Germans at...ked Hill No. 60, southeast of Ypres, ...yesterday evening they attacked in ... neighborhood of St. Julien. These ...icks were both repulsed. We lost no ...und and inflicted heavy casualties on ... enemy, in spite of the fact that he ...in used poisonous gases emitted ...h from tubes in the trenches and ...m specially manufactured shells.

"A German aeroplane yesterday afternoon was chased by one of our ma...nes to within rifle range of our ...nches, and then brought down by our ...."

(Continued from Page One.)

...hich would start this movement im...diately and accomplish the deporta...n of all the Negroes within a con...y."

Dr. Eliot received a great demonstra... of applause, everybody arising when ... was introduced. He said:

"A more dangerous false doctrine ...ught by the play is that the Ku-Klux...an was on the whole a righteous and ...ecessary society for the defence of ...uthern white men against a black ...gislature led by Northern white men. ...is the same sort of argument ... used by the Germans today that a ...ntract may be destroyed as a mil...y necessity. Undoubtedly, grievous ...nditions existed in the South, but ...y did not justify the utter lawless...ss and atrocities which marked the ...ll of the Ku-Klux. There can be ... worse teaching, no more mischiev... doctrine than this; that lawlessness ...s justified as necessary."

Comments on Motive.

Dr. Eliot also pointed out that the ...ther lesson was taught that the 13th ...d 14th amendments to the United ...tes constitution should be repealed ... the amendments which secure to all ...rties and peoples, and particularly ... recently emancipated slaves, the or...ary rights of personal freedom and ...blic justice. Are we going to allow ...s to be set forth in every community, ...less the antidote to the poison is ...o supplied?"

Dr. Eliot commented at length on the ...l motive of the production, as re...led by Mr. Cobleigh's talk with the ...thor, pronouncing it "inconceivable, ...strous, that the whole colored race ...uld be removed to Africa, or ... ...er unoccupied or barbarous country ...y won't want to go. They'll have to ... driven by force of arms. What an ...minable outrage that would be to be ...petrated by white people on colored ... represented that they might find a ...radise in Liberia, and that this is a ...ite man's country, better off without ... presence of colored people.

"Now let us recall—how did the col...d people come here? Who brought ...m here? What have been their suf...ngs here? Whose children are many ...hem today? The very worst feature ...southern legislation, except the slav... legislation, was that which provided ...t the child of a white man by a ...k mother should be his slave! The ...erican people will never think of ... an outrage as transporting a whole ... beyond the seas!

Not Clear as to Course.

"I don't feel clear," continued Dr. Eliot, "that it is in the interest of the white ...ple to have the play suppressed. It ...surely not in the interest of the col... people to have it suppressed. It is ... to insult the colored people. I say ... had better not feel insulted; they ...t be insulted; for the progress they ...e made in the last 50 years is one of ...most stupendous phenomena in the ...le history of civilization. My inter... is not at all as to the effect of the ... on the Negro race, for it has proved ... to take care of itself. It's the white ... I'm concerned about, as in the ef... of the false teachings of history ... the perversions of the ideals of life ... and justice. Here my doubt comes ... to what should be done. It is quite ... there is a growing incitement, es...ally among young people, to the ...ctions of liberty and justice, but why ... we pay all attention to the ...

...antidote be supplied in a true exposition of American history and ideals, the play after all might serve some useful purpose; and closed by urging that the new statute petitioned for be of a general nature, universal in application against what is unpatriotic and unsuitable. It gave him great satisfaction to remember that he wrote the inscription on the Shaw monument because it testifies to what the colored race did for the American people in the cause of liberty.

Editor Cobleigh.

On Dr. Eliot's resuming his seat, Dr. Rowley, before introducing the next speaker, remarked that there would be general willingness to have "the antidote" administered, as suggested by Dr. Eliot, but "the danger would be that 10,000 would get the poison while one would get the antidote."

Assistant Editor Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, whose remarks created so great a sensation, said: "While many of my friends are expressing their disapproval of Thomas Dixon, I feel that I ought to say a word of appreciation for a service that he rendered to me the day before his play was first presented in Boston. He removed every doubt that I had had as to the right or wrong of 'The Birth of a Nation.' He explained to me what he hoped to accomplish by its influence throughout the country. It is of great service to us in judging the play to learn the motives back of it, to learn just what the promoters are trying to do. Mr. Dixon came to my office for the purpose of convincing me that the play was all right. He did convince me that his purpose in it was all wrong, a conviction strengthened by a view of the picture at Tremont Theatre, which proved to me that D. D. Griffith had achieved a dazzling success in telling Mr. Dixon's story in the most startling and impressive way, presenting the propaganda of falsehood and prejudice which Mr. Dixon had admitted to me was the real purpose he had in view.

Ku Klux Real Terrorists.

"Mr. Dixon says that he wants to teach the children of the United States his version of the history of the reconstruction period, that the Ku Klux was a chivalric army of crusaders, inspired by pure religion, and made up of the best white men of the South, organized to avenge assaults of colored men upon white women, and to protect their virtue, to protect property and personal rights, and to regain the white man's control of the ballot, all of which he represents had been menaced or lost in a reign or terror caused by vicious colored people, whom he would have us believe were the only kind of colored people except the ignorant and servile who 'knew their place.' He says that his father was a Baptist minister in North Carolina, and left the church to join the Ku Klux, remaining with it till it was disbanded, so Thomas Dixon knows what he is talking about.

"But authoritative history tells me that the Ku-Klux were guilty of treason, wholesale murder, and other crimes, and that the real reign of terror was caused by the Ku-Klux, and that white men who would not vote with the oligarchy, as well as Negroes, were innocent victims." The speaker concluded with the assertion that the play, instead of history, presented fiction, and contended that the scenes of the chase of white women not only by "Gus" but also by the lieutenant-governor, who is a mulatto, shows the intent to convict the whole race, even though educated, of lust and baseness. Recounting Mr. Dixon's scheme to get rid of the whole race of negroes, the speaker said: "If we are to accept such a social and ...

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
MAY 2 1915

...as the ... against ... on our united population, where will it end?

"Although I suggested that it would be a difficult think to depot 10,000,000 colored citizens to Africa, Mr. Dixon seriously argued that he hoped to create such public sentiment that it will begin in the near future and be completed in a century. The cherished traditions of this state and of America are at stake—liberty, justice and equal rights. In these later days shall these ideals be held less faithfully? Shall dazzling, motion pictures falsify history, create race prejudice and still be allowed to continue?"

Judge Rubenstein.

Judge Rubenstein said that he came not to represent the judiciary, nor the Jewish race, "yet in view of the reference of my connection to the juvenile court, ought I not to feel a grave interest in films shown to the public, open to children, that such films should be irreproachable, and not tending to excite race prejudice or wrong thought?" He was surprised, he said, to learn the real motive of the author—"to incite race hatred against the Negro." As for the argument of property rights in the play, which ought to be protected, every day men come forward in the attempt to use property for improper purposes, and every layman knows that property rights are subordinate to human rights. He said the effect of the play upon the beholder is that of horror as well as antagonism to the Negro, especially because the play represents a whole city-full of riotous and criminal negroes, and urged that the law should be changed so that inspirations to hatred and fury may be prohibited, and instead there be poduced plays appealing to the instincts of the brotherhood of man.

Prof. Pearson said that the effect of the play is to lead the beholder to despise his fellowman, and to believe it really right to cherish such feelings.

The Rev. S. M. Crothers predicted that the conservative sentiment of the community in the future will be against such productions. He pronounced it a "wicked thing to revive all that is hateful and ignorant in a period 50 years ago," and criticised the effrontery of quoting President Wilson (untruthfully) as indorsing the play.

The Rev. Henry Francis Smith evoked much applause when he stated that he had preached his morning sermon against the play, and induced a large number of parishioners to sign an appeal to the Legislature.

Women Protest.

Miss Adalene Moffat, a Southern woman engaged in social work in the South, said that the play brings out a very real peril to the nation, because the South is still obsessed with the sense of fear of the Negro, and young men are being brought up in an atmosphere of justification of political corruption, intimidation and dishonesty; and such plays by their insidious appeal tend to demoralize the North, as well, into accepting any means to justify an end.

Mrs. FitzGerald, a suffrage orator, declared that the refusal of the management to sell tickets to Negroes, and the admission that trouble was feared, proved that it was expected that incitement to race hatred would result.

Rabbi M. M. Eichler brought the greetings of the Jewish people and assurances from a race which had known oppression, that they stand with the Negro in this crisis.

Butler R. Wilson read a letter from George Foster Peabody declaring that his attitude had been misrepresented, and that he disapproves of the play; also a letter from former Congressman Thacher inclosing correspondence with the White House showing that President Wilson denies he indorsed the play, and also showing that Mr. Thacher disapproves of it.

3500 in Protest Meeting on Common

Following the protest meeting at Tremont Temple against "The Birth of a Nation" yesterday afternoon a mass meeting was held on the baseball field of the Common under the auspices of the Negro churches of Greater Boston. There were 2500 persons gathered at 8 o'clock when the meeting was opened by the chairman, the Rev. D. O. Walker of the Bethel Church, Chelsea.

He announced that the meeting was a religious demonstration against the photoplay. The speakers introduced were all clergymen, including the Rev. Montrose W. Thornton of the Charles Street A. M. E. Church; the Rev. Walter McClane of St. Bartholomew's Church, Cambridge; the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Boston, and the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain of the Zion A. M. E. Church, Columbus avenue.

The assembled men and women sang many hymns, including the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and other patriotic airs. It was resolved that the Hallowell bill should be substituted for the bill reported by the judiciary committee in the Legislature.

Pastor Calls "Birth of a Nation" a "Damnable Lie"

The photo-play "The Birth of a Nation" was described as a "damnable lie" by the Rev. J. Noble Pierce in his sermon last night at the Second Congregational Church, Dorchester. "It is a lie in not so much what it says, but what it leaves unsaid," he added.

"We have enough race prejudice without augmenting it with a play not wholly true and if it works for race hatred it should not be given. The photo-play is spectacular, magnificent. It is not indecent or immoral in the strictest sense. We see vividly and accurately the assassination of Lincoln. We see the Southern Legislature. We see the renegade who fastens his lustful eyes on one of the most beautiful characters of the play, a southern lassie.

"We see the educated Negro who fastens his eye on another beautiful character and we see the clansmen and many other things which stir the blood. It is a magnificent spectacle, but a lie, and just because it is so magnificent, so attractive, it is all the more a damnable lie."

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
MAY 2 1915

HIGH PRAISE FOR 'BIRTH OF NATION'

"See It and Become a Better American," Dorothy Dix Declares.

By DOROTHY DIX

I am a Film Fan, but I never had the slightest conception of what could be done with the moving pictures as an art until I saw "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont.

I had considered the moving picture interesting, instructive, amusing, diverting, beautiful, spectacular, but I had believed that the silent drama never could touch the emotions very deeply. I had thought that to grip an audience, to melt it to tears with pathos, to thrill it with right heroic sentiment, required the spoken word and the magic of the human voice.

"The Birth of a Nation" disproves all of this theory. Here is a war play, the like of which never has been presented on any stage before, that played upon the heart as upon a harp of a thousand strings; that worked the audience up into a perfect frenzy; that mingled pathos and humor, tragedy and glory; at which people wept and laughed, and yet not one word was spoken on the stage.

CALLS IT FASCINATING.

The whole thing was fascinating, yes, terrible beyond belief, because you saw, as the angels looking down from heaven must have seen, all of the causes that led to the Civil War, the bloody struggle in which brother fought against brother, and the ghastly aftermath of the conflict in which, for awhile, the black heel was set upon the white neck of a conquered people.

"The Birth of the Nation" begins with the introduction of African slavery into the United States through New England, the sale of the slaves to Southern planters, and traces the abolition movement. It then passes on to the declaration of war, and shows the conflict between the blue and the gray in the most wonderful series of battle scenes that have ever been depicted.

Then comes a magic series of pictures showing Sherman's devastating march to the sea, with cut-in-pictures of the devastation and poverty he left behind. Then comes an historically accurate reproduction of the assassination of Lincoln, showing Ford's Theatre as the stage was set on that fatal night, the President and Mrs. Lincoln entering the box, while the audience rose to cheer them, and the act of the madman, Wilkes Booth, as he shot Lincoln and then leaped to the stage with his melodramatic cry, "Sic semper tyrannis."

TERRIBLE AFTERMATH.

Then comes the final battle of the war, the surrender of Lee and the pathetic going back to their ruined homes of the broken Confederate soldiers. What followed in the days of reconstruction is the blackest page in American history, a story so horrible that it has never been adequately told until in these pictures.

"The Birth of a Nation" is history vitalized and made living. Go and see it because of the wonder of the pictures themselves, and the marvel of this new art of film-making, of which it is the last word.

And finally go and see it because it will make a better American of you, for out of the baptism of blood of the Civil War was born the new nation, one and indivisible.

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

AMERICAN
Boston, Mass.
MAY 2 1915

CUSHING HAS YET TO SEE 'MOVIES'

Urges Film Censorship but Opposes Judiciary Committee Bill; Urges Right of Appeal.

Grafton D. Cushing, Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, blue blood, social worker, lawyer, teacher and bachelor, has never gone to the "movies." He confessed it himself in a speech before the Twentieth Century Club yesterday, when he said:

"I have never been to a motion picture house to see a film, yet I believe the interest aroused by "The Birth of a Nation" put us in the position to discuss legislation. There ought to be a board of censorship, composed of two men and one woman, to pass judgment on every film used. Their seal of approval ought to appear on every film. If their decision is unreasonable, there should be the right of appeal to the Supreme Court.

Lieutenant-Governor Cushing in his address made it clear that he thought motion picture managers should have the right to appeal.

"The members of the Judiciary Committee do not," he said, "or they would not have reported the compromise measure adding the Chief Justice of the Boston Municipal Court as a censor with the Mayor and Police Commissioner, and insisting that their decision in correcting or suppressing a photo-play or entertainment of any sort, must be unanimous.

"The most dangerous flaws in their measure are denial of appeal and permitting the triumvirate to reject a film or show, not for the specific causes of immorality and obscenity as defined by the present law, but for any reason that might pop into their heads.

"Little wonder that theatre managers and motion picture producers are attacking the Judiciary Committee bill with a solid front. And it is notable and not a little odd to learn that the colored race are opposed to the compromise bill also, in spite of the fact that it is likewise objectionable to the exhibitors of 'The Birth of a Nation' and film producers generally.

"In the lame apology substituted by the Judiciary Committee the public and theatre interests see a graver danger and no relief. It is the popular opinion that the present statute is preferable."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
MAY 3, 1915
1703

SEES INSULT TO ARMY IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Albert Bushnell Hart Declares Dixon Has Pictured Soldiers and U. S. Officials as "Fiends" and That Picture Will "Brutalize Communities."

To the Editor of The Boston Journal:

Is it a moral duty for every respectable person in Massachusetts to pay his dollar for a indifferent seat in order to view the "moving spectacle by flood and field" humorously entitled "The Birth of a Nation?"

If you believe the advertisements, you must go. If you believe the tearful, injured letter to The Journal by Thomas Dixon, the author, you are neglecting your soul's welfare if you stay away. To be sure, this show does not describe the birth of a nation; it does not give a true impression either of the ante-bellum period, the Civil War, or Reconstruction; it contains unforgiveable slanders upon some Northern statesmen and upon the United States Army; it is based upon the most hideous of crimes; and is calculated to arouse passionate and destroying race hatred wherever it is produced.

Otherwise, it includes many pictures of pretty girls and handsome youths and stately mansion, besides thick layers of cannon smoke and human gore. American audiences have become accustomed to "movie" highway robberies, beatings, stabbings, whippings and shootings, and little children take pleasure in such diversions. But in the capacity to saturate the ordinary mind with the foulest and basest of crimes, and to fix the stigma of hatred upon innocent persons, the "Birth of a Nation" is in a class by itself.

Merely a Catchword

The title is, of course, merely a catchword, unless by Birth of a Nation the author means the rending a nation in twain, and its reconstitution in a way which he obviously thinks undesirable. As a faithful statement of historical truths, it deserves a place alongside Weems' Life of Washington. One can fancy the states-rights naivete of Cornwallis at Yorktown "surrendering to the individual States." It is a scream to see the joyous frolics of the slaves in their "two-hour rest" in a workday extending from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Everybody knows that wage laborers in factories and workshops then worked from 12 to 14 hours a day, and slaves surely did not have a better time. If Thomas Dixon, in any one of the 4000 volumes which he boasts of reading, can point to a single authentic contemporary statement that on any plantation, in any slave State, the regular working hours were 10 a day, I will cheerfully admit that there is one historical truth in the piece.

A prime objection to the whole thing is its caricature of the Union army and Union soldiers; and particularly its absolutely unfounded series of pictures intended to leave upon the mind the conviction that in Reconstruction times negro soldiers freely plundered and abused the white people of the South, and were encouraged so to do by their white officers.

"Insult to President"

No such thing ever occurred in the whole history of Reconstruction. The wearers of the blue were not all saints, but most of them were white, and they were all subject to court-martial. It is an insult to President Johnson, to the secretary of war, to every commanding general and to every officer and soldier in the army in the South, to lead people to believe that the U. S. A. was the remorseless tool of negro adventurers directed by Northern haters of the Southern people.

Mr. Dixon is here and elsewhere the mouthpiece of the theory that in Reconstruction it was the deliberate purpose of Charles Sumner, Henry Wilson, H. B. Anthony, E. D. Morgan, Simon Cameron, George F. Edmunds and scores of others to turn the Southern whites over to negro domination and vengeance as a punishment for secession. True enough, Thaddeus Stevens did hate the slaveholders and was anxious to turn them out of political life. Perhaps for this offence, apparently, Stoneman (who is Thaddeus Stevens' prototype in the show) is endowed with a mulatto housekeeper of a particularly odious and suggestive kind. Whatever the mistakes of Reconstruction on the Northern side—and there were many—there were also some on the Southern side; and the North has a right to assert that it was never the wish of the Northern Republican voters to destroy Southern civilization or to pollute Southern homes.

Smoke Now Cleared Away

Both sides came out of the war terribly excited; each side believed that the other side had been devilish through Reconstruction. The smoke is at last cleared away. Northerners can now clearly see the difficulties of the situation for their Southern brethren, and can regret that harsh measures were used; they know that the frenzied scenes of this play are fanciful. Most Southern writers continue to deny human kindness or righteousness to their Northern brethren of the same period? Are Northern people to visit and support a spectacle of which one of the main purposes is to throw all the responsibility and error of that distressed period upon them?

How many people would turn out in Atlanta or Memphis to support a set of moving pictures which was designed to show that the Ku Klux Klan was, from start to finish, an infamous attempt to whip, torture and murder innocent people, white and black, and thereby to restore the negroes to practical slavery? The Ku Klux Klan were by no means angels, but they made a needed protest that was heard in Washington.

An appalling thing about the so-called "Birth of a Nation" is its presentation of the rape of a white child by a negro. The word and the thought are repugnant to every right-minded person. But the thought, if not the word, is the incident toward which the whole show leads up; and it cannot be discussed without calling a spade a spade.

Pictures Skilfully Drawn

In his previous books, "The Leopard's Spots" and "The Clansman," the author has used the same machinery and has dwelt upon the same incident. In recent performances in Boston the operator, for reasons not revealed to the audience, features the printed description of two reels, but cuts them out. Doubtless the omitted pictures are skilfully drawn so as to suggest the crime and to leave the rest to the imagination. But why must it be suggested?

Dixon defends it in his letter to The Journal because he says the incident has occurred. Doubtless; yet it is one of the rarest of all crimes, and least needs to be kept in the public mind. During the last 50 years the rape of white women by negroes has occurred 10 to 30 times a year. That is, the chance that any particular Southern negro will commit the crime is not [illegible] lifetime may be a victim is less than one to 20,000. This number of crimes would by mass reduced by the taste of lynching nearly every such criminal, and thus spreading abroad the details to the winds.

"Brutalizes Community"

In not a single Northern community can the dwelling upon such a horrid crime in public exhibitions be necessary to arouse public opinion; for that particular crime has hardly been known in the North in half a century. Therefore, such pictures simply help to brutalize every community in which they are exhibited. Perhaps some of the people who read this letter are shocked by the frankness of its language, but it is not one-tenth as frank or as permanent as the pictures which are spread before men, matron, tender maiden and artless child.

What is the object of the show? Why should a man like Dixon, against whose private character there are no charges, spend a lifetime in sowing fire brands throughout his country? It is impossible to be sure of the motives, but the effects are perfectly clear whether they were so intended or otherwise. The "Birth of a Nation," like the novels, "The Clansman," upon which it is founded, and "The Leopard's Spots," inculcates a gospel of hate toward the colored race.

Most of the negroes presented in these moving pictures are brutal in face, figure and behavior. Men of the same type as Col. Shaw's soldiers, pictured in that magnificent monument opposite the State House, are presented to you as unworthy of their uniforms! Not once, but twice, in the spectacle a brutal negro attempts to possess himself of a sweet and beautiful white girl.

Brings "Poisonous Distrust"

Nobody who supposes these pictures to be a fair representation of things that actually happened can go away without carrying a poisonous distrust toward the negro—toward the negroes in his own neighborhood, toward the negroes all over the land, toward communities of negroes, who reprehend these dreadful crimes as much as any white man.

The country has already seen the effects of familiarizing growing boys and girls with road agents and escaped convicts and hold-up men and stage detectives. Yet, after all, you can see a man killed in a moving picture fight without much emotion; there is no soot or smirch in it; you do not lay the crime to a single race. Rape, with all its horrors, is perfectly well known to white communities, and in numerous cases white men are the criminals. Yet nobody tries to fix upon a particular white race or community the responsibility for that crime. Nobody except the authors of such shows and such books (whether they mean it or mean something else) has such success in inducing thousands of their fellow-citizens to look with hate and apprehension upon a large class of their neighbors.

In some similar pictures, perhaps in the omitted reels, you get the smoke of the lynching and the charred stake, surrounded with its awful evidence that a crime has been committed by lynchers as well as by the negro.

Dixon Within Law

Mr. Dixon is certain that the courts of Massachusetts "have sustained the play squarely on its merits." The courts have done nothing more than to show that the law of Massachusetts is defective. It ought to be the law that no play, spoken, acted or pictured, should be admitted to any stage if it tends to incite public hatred against an innocent section of the community in which it is played. Mr. Dixon thinks that such a principle would have suppressed Uncle Tom's Cabin. It would have suppressed it, and did suppress it, in the Southern States where the slaves might possibly have been aroused against their masters. It did not suppress it in the North, where there were no slaves or slaveholding class to be aroused.

The influence of such an appeal to race passion is wide. Boston is not likely to be aroused to a lynching by any means as this, but the "Birth of a Nation" showed in Coatesville, Penn., or Springfield, O., or Springfield, Ill., might again literally kindle the fires of race hatred which have so disgraced these places. In Indianapolis, or even on the West Side of New York, it might easily bring about a terrible race riot, because both the negroes and those who hate them are numerous in those cities.

Mr. Dixon's letter to The Journal contains a number of statements which might be put upon an examination in American history, for the pupils to point out the misstatements. As a maker of a book for moving pictures, Mr. Dixon is highly successful; if he would only leave the lust and the passion out, his show would be worth seeing. As an historian, he hardly invites dissent. Nobody will believe surely because he says so, that Thaddeus Stevens threatened to hang Andrew Johnson from the balcony of the White House; or that he set up Ben Wade to be dictator—how Ben Wade would have sworn at the idea that Thaddeus Stevens could create him! Probably nobody in the world except Dixon believes that all the laws made by the Reconstruction legislators of the South were drafted by the Freedmen's Bureau.

Nevertheless, it seems proven by the attendance on this play that Dixon was right in thinking that Massachusetts people would take pleasure in seeing their soldiers represented as robbing and murdering the Southern whites, and that it would give us pleasure to see our negro neighbors, who have been a law-abiding people, bracketed with savage fiends.

That is the real trouble with the play. It is not, as Dixon claims, "the faithful record of the life of 50 years ago." It includes many sweet sentimental episodes, a selection of some of the most unusual and dreadful things in the history of mankind, and other incidents which never occurred on the globe. It has been a great financial success because thousands of people would rather be thrilled than instructed, and to that end are willing to have their own heroes and friends portrayed as hideous monsters.

ALBERT BUSHNELL HART.
Cambridge, May 1.

ATHOL (Mass.) TRANSCRIPT
MAY 4, 1915

The Transcript

Athol, Mass., May 4, 1915.

"The Birth of a Nation."

The famous moving picture drama "The Birth of a Nation," which has been presented in Boston, has caused intense discussion in that city, and leading men of the state, from the Governor down, have expressed their views concerning it, pro and con. The production has encountered the most virulent hostility of the colored people of the city, their claim being that it misrepresents and villifies them and their character as law-abiding people. They have threatened to burn the theatre in which the play is given. If it is not suppressed, and have crowded the legislative hearings to register their protest against the continuance of the show. They, and their white friends, insist that it is a degradation of their race, false in the assumption which the drama conveys, and unworthy of presentation in a decent public play house. As was to be expected, the affair has "got into politics," because the negroes have votes, and Gov. Walsh, Mayor Curley, Samuel W. McCall, Gardner Cushing, Channing Cox, President Emeritus Eliot, and a great host of ministers about Boston have given their opinions for or against the production. The press is well disposed towards the play, and many of the ablest papers in Boston, like the Herald, Globe, Transcript and Journal, commend it and declare that the demand for its suppression is a blow at the liberty of the press, freedom of speech and freedom of the stage. Mayor Curley takes the same view, but Gov. [illegible] objectionable in it. "I can stand all the mysteria and vilification that will come to me for my stand on this matter if this play tends to make the North and the South favor the Negro problem. I am glad the play is being given," he said. He said that he felt that the great principle of freedom of speech is being threatened by this agitation. If a man is to be pampered and protected from criticism it will never grow up. The Negroes, he said, have made splendid progress in the last 50 years, but the large majority of them are still children, "and this statement is proved by their actions in Boston," he added. This brought a hiss or two from the Negroes. "I know that is not pleasant," said Dr. Fleischer, "but it is true." The Journal, in its vigorous endorsement of the play, says:

"The Birth of a Nation" goes further in genuine constructive work by means of photographic films than any of its predecessors have gone or tried to go. It deserves the unqualified support of those who seek something better and more satisfactory than a few hours of enjoyment and who can appreciate the zeal and energy, the intelligence and patriotism, that are so happily blended in Mr Griffith's masterpiece. No man or woman can see "The Birth of a Nation" without rejoicing that he or she is part of that nation and a sharer in its glorious heritage.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 8 1915

DIXON'S PURPOSE IN FILM SHOWN UP BY EDITOR

[illegible]ment of Rolfe Cobleigh, editor of The Congregationalist, to [illegible] the mass meeting at Symphony Hall last night to protest against the motion-play, "The Birth of a Nation," by Thomas Dixon, had told the purpose of the play was to bring about the deportation of all Negroes, caused a sensation in [illegible]

[illegible] said that Dixon, author of "The Clansman," from which the motion-play was written, had revealed to him in Cobleigh the real motive of his production, namely, the believing of white supremacy and getting rid of the colored people."

Rev. Mr. Cobleigh said, speaking of Mr. Dixon:

"He hoped to create sentiment [illegible]

(Continued from Page One.)

which would start this movement immediately and accomplish the deportation of all the Negroes within a century."

Dr. Eliot received a great demonstration of applause, everybody arising when he was introduced. He said:

A more dangerous false doctrine taught by the play is that the Ku-Klux-Klan was on the whole a righteous and necessary society for the defence of Southern white men against a black Legislature led by Northern white men. This is the same sort of argument being used by the Germans today that a contract may be destroyed as a military necessity. Undoubtedly, grievous conditions existed in the South, but they did not justify the utter lawlessness and atrocities which marked the trail of the Ku-Klux. There can be no worse teaching, no more mischievous doctrine than this; that lawlessness was justified as necessary."

Comments on Motive.

Dr. Eliot also pointed out that the further lesson was taught that the 13th and 14th amendments to the United States constitution should be repealed —"the amendments which secure to all parties and peoples, and particularly the recently emancipated slaves, the ordinary rights of personal freedom and public justice. Are we going to allow this to be set forth in every community, unless the antidote to the poison is also supplied?"

Dr. Eliot commented at length on the real motive of the production, as revealed by Mr. Cobleigh's talk with the author, pronouncing it "inconceivable, monstrous, that the whole colored race should be removed to Africa, or some [illegible] unoccupied or barbarous country. They won't want to go. They'll have to be driven by force of arms. What an abominable outrage that would be to be perpetrated by white people on colored. It is represented that they might find a paradise in Liberia, and that this is a white man's country, better off without the presence of colored people.

"Now let us recall—how did the colored people come here? Who brought them here? What have been their sufferings here? Whose children are many of them today? The very worst feature of southern legislation, except the slavery legislation, was that which provided that the child of a white man by a black mother should be his slave! The American people will never think of such an outrage as transporting a whole race beyond the seas!

Not Clear as to Course.

"I don't feel clear," continued Dr. Eliot, "that it is in the interest of the white people to have the play suppressed. It is surely not in the interest of the colored people to have it suppressed. It is said to insult the colored people. I say they had better not feel insulted; they can't be insulted; for the progress they have made in the last 50 years is one of the most stupendous phenomena in the whole history of civilization. My interest is not at all as to the effect of the play on the Negro race, for it has proved able to take care of itself. It's the white race I'm concerned about, as to the effects of the false teachings of history and the perversions of the ideals of liberty and justice. Here my doubt comes as to what should be done. It is quite true there is a growing indifference, especially among young people, to the questions of liberty and justice; but will not his play call attention to this fact?"

Dr. Eliot suggested that, provided an antidote be supplied in a true exposition of American history and ideals, the play after all might serve some useful purpose; and closed by urging that the new statute petitioned for be of a general nature, universal in application against what is unpatriotic and unsuitable. It gave him great satisfaction to remember that he wrote the inscription on the Shaw monument because it testifies to what the colored race did for the American people in the cause of liberty.

Editor Cobleigh.

On Dr. Eliot's resuming his seat, Dr. Rowley, before introducing the next speaker, remarked that there would be general willingness to have "the antidote" administered, as suggested by Dr. Eliot, but "the danger would be that 10,000 would get the poison while one would get the antidote."

Assistant Editor Cobleigh of the Congregationalist, whose remarks created so great a sensation, said: "While many of my friends are expressing their disapproval of Thomas Dixon, I feel that I ought to say a word of appreciation for a service that he rendered to me the day before his play was first presented in Boston. He removed every doubt that I had had as to the right or wrong of 'The Birth of a Nation.' He explained to me what he hoped to accomplish by its influence throughout the country. It is of great [illegible] for us in judging the play to learn the motives back of it, to learn just what the promoters are trying to do. Mr. Dixon came to my office for the purpose of convincing me that the play was all right. He did convince me that his purpose in it was all wrong, a conviction strengthened by a view of the picture at Tremont Theatre, which proved to me that D. D. Griffith had achieved a dazzling success in telling Mr. Dixon's story in the most startling [illegible] impressive way, presenting the propaganda of falsehood and prejudice which Mr. Dixon had admitted to me was the real purpose he had in view.

Ku Klux Real Terrorists.

"Mr. Dixon says that he wants to teach the children of the United States his version of the history of the reconstruction period, that the Ku Klux was a chivalric army of crusaders, inspired by pure religion, and made up of the best white men of the South, organized to avenge assaults of colored men upon white women, and to protect their virtue, to protect property and personal rights, and to regain the white man's control of the ballot, all of which he represents had been menaced or lost in a reign or terror caused by vicious colored people, whom he would have us believe were the only kind of colored people except the ignorant and servile people 'who knew their place.' He says that his father was a Baptist minister in North Carolina, and left the church to join the Ku Klux, remaining with it [illegible] it was disbanded, so Thomas Dixon knows what he is talking about.

"But authoritative history tells us that the Ku-Klux were guilty of treason, wholesale murder, and other crimes, and that the real reign of terror was caused by the Ku-Klux, and that white men who would not vote with the oligarchy, as well as Negroes, were innocent victims." The speaker concluded with the assertion that the play, instead of history, presented fiction and contended that the scenes of the chase of white women not only by "Gus" but also by the lieutenant-governor, who is a mulatto, shows the intent to convict the whole race, even though educated.

Recounting Mr. Dixon's scheme to get rid of the whole race of negroes, the speaker said: "If [illegible] political propaganda against any race in our mixed population, where will it end?

"Although I suggested that it would be a difficult think to deport 10,000 colored citizens to Africa, Mr. Dixon seriously argued that he hoped to create such public sentiment that it will begin in the near future and be completed in a century. The cherished traditions of this state and of America are at stake—liberty, justice and equal rights. In these later days shall these ideals be held less faithfully? Shall dazzling motion pictures falsify history, create race prejudice and still be allowed to continue?"

Judge Rubenstein.

Judge Rubenstein said that he came not to represent the judiciary, nor the Jewish race, "yet in view of the reference of my connection to the juvenile court, ought I not to feel a grave interest in films shown to the public, open to children, that such films should be irreproachable, and not tending to excite race prejudice or wrong thought?" He was surprised, he said, to learn the real motive of the author—"to incite race hatred against the Negro." As for the argument of property rights in the play, which ought to be protected every day men come forward in the attempt to use property for improper purposes, and every layman knows that property rights are subordinate to human rights. He said the effect of the play upon the beholder is that of horror as well as antagonism to the Negro, especially because the play represents a whole city full of riotous and crimhal negroes, and urged that the law should be changed so that inspirations to hatred and fury may be prohibited, and instead there be produced plays appealing to the instincts of the brotherhood of man.

Prof. Pearson said that the effect of

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
MAY 4, 1915

EGISLATORS SEE PHOTO-PLAY

ttend Special Performance of "
Birth of a Nation" as Guests

Members of the Legislature and t friends were the guests of the manage ment of the "Birth of a Nation," at t Tremont Theatre, yesterday morning, the special performance, in response to invitation from the management.
Two members were first shown the fi as it is now being shown to the publ following which the parts, which have be cut out at the request of the city autho ities and Municipal Court, were throw upon the screen.
The legislators applauded when the Ku Klux Klan riders were shown rushing the rescue of Elsie Stoneman, as she about to be forced into marriage with t mulatto, Silas Lynch. Handclapping al occurred in a few other cases, but not any extent.
Neither Speaker Cox of the House, Pre dent Coolidge of the Senate nor Going Walsh was present.

MINISTERS ADVOCATE FILM PLAY SUNDAY

What laws have failed to do, prayer may accomplish.
It was with this idea in mind, that a committee of ministers, representing the Baptist, Episcopal, Congregational, Methodist, Unitarian and Universalist communions, suggested that Sunday, May 2, be set aside as a day "for the consideration and fostering of friendly relations between all races." The suggestion was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
MAY 4, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" was played actically continuously yesterday at the mont Theatre from 10:2 o'clock in morning until 11 o'clock at night.
Members of the Legislature, their ves, families and friends to the num-r of about 1200 persons, attended a cial morning performance which last until after 1 o'clock. There were wded audiences at the public matinee rformance and likewise at the evening rformance, so that approximately 35 ople saw the Griffith spectacle in the urse of the day. The regular matinee d evening hours are 2:10 and 8:10 spectively.

the play is to lead the beholder to despise his fellowman, and to believe it really right to cherish such feelings.

The Rev. S. M. Crothers predicted that the conservative sentiment of the community in the future will be against such productions. He pronounced it a "wicked thing to revive all that is hateful and ignorant in a period 50 years ago," and criticised the effrontery of quoting President Wilson (untruthfully) as indorsing the play.

The Rev. Henry Francis Smith evoked much applause when he stated that he had preached his 'morning sermon against the play, and induced a large number of parishioners to sign an appeal to the Legislature.

Women Protest.

Miss Adalene Moffat, a Southern woman engaged in social work in the South, said that the play brings out a very real peril to the nation, because the South is still obsessed with the sense of fear of the Negro, and young men are being brought up in an atmosphere of justification of political corruption, intimidation and dishonesty; and such plays by their insidious appeal tend to demoralize the North, as well, into accepting any means to justify an end.

Mrs. FitzGerald, a suffrage orator, declared that the refusal of the management to sell tickets to Negroes, and the admission that trouble was feared, proved that it was expected that incitement to race hatred would result.

Rabbi M. M. Eichler brought the greetings of the Jewish people and assurances from a race which had known oppression, that they stand with the Negro in this crisis.

Butler R. Wilson read a letter from George Foster Peabody declaring that his attitude had been misrepresented, and that he disapproves of the play; also a letter from former Congressman Thacher inclosing correspondence with the White House showing that President Wilson denies he indorsed the play, and also showing that Mr. Thacher disapproves of it.

3500 in Protest Meeting on Common

Following the protest meeting at Tremont Temple against "The Birth of a Nation" yesterday afternoon a mass meeting was held on the baseball field of the Common under the auspices of the Negro churches of Greater Boston. There were 3500 persons gathered at 5 o'clock when the meeting was opened by the chairman, the Rev. D. O. Walker of the Bethel Church, Chelsea.

He announced that the meeting was a religious demonstration against the photoplay. The speakers introduced were all clergymen, including the Rev. Montrose W. Thornton of the Charles Street A. M. E. Church; the Rev. Walter McClane of St. Bartholomew's Church, Cambridge; the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw of the Twelfth Baptist Church, Boston, and the Rev. Benjamin W. Swain of the Zion A. M. E. Church, Columbus avenue.

The assembled men and women sang many hymns, including the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and other patriotic airs. It was resolved that the Hallowell bill should be substituted for the bill reported by the Judiciary committee in the Legislature.

LYNN (Mass.) TELEGRAM
MAY 4, 1915

Rep. Charles McGlue of Lynn was among the persons attending the special performance of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre in Boston, Monday morning.

BOSTON (Mass.) ADVERTISER
MAY 4, 1915

DENY CHARGES OF INCITING TO RIOT

WITNESSES IN 'THE BIRTH OF A NATION' CASE ON STAND

William M. Trotter and Rev. Aaron Puller Present Their Side of Affair of April 17

Rev. Aaron Puller, who, with William Monroe Trotter, is charged with inciting riot and disturbing the peace at Tremont Theatre, April 17, where the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation" is being presented, testified yesterday afternoon to having been knocked down by an officer, and to being choked and roughly treated after being placed under arrest by Sergt. King and four other officers.

He denied, as had Trotter earlier in the day, having incited a riot or caused a disturbance, and said that he knew nothing about any pre-arranged plan for a demonstration at the theatre on that night in opposition to the presentation of the play.

After several other witnesses for the defense had testified as to the alleged sale of tickets to white persons, after colored persons had been refused and told that there were no more tickets, court adjourned until 9.30 a.m. today.

Rev. Dr. Puller testified to getting in line shortly after arriving at the theatre, and being told that there was "nothing doing" when he asked for a ticket for that night's performance at the box office. He then left the line and made no further attempt to get a ticket, leaving the lobby immediately.

He testified that Sergt. King came up to him and in a quiet, low voice, told him to "go tell those people that there are no more tickets; tell them to go home." He spoke to several persons, telling them what Sergt. King had told him. Then he heard some one say, "O! what a shame. An officer struck that woman." This woman pointed back to an officer when he asked her who had struck her.

"I then took out a calling card and started to write down the number of the officer she had pointed out. An officer standing close to me on the sidewalk struck me on the neck with his hand and I fell down. I don't recall whether he was smooth shaved or not. I knew he was an officer by his uniform.

"My left arm struck the curbstone when I fell. Two officers grabbed me by the coat and dragged me up to the sidewalk. There were four other officers beside Sergt. King. Two of them grabbed me by the throat, another by the back of the neck, Sergt. King by one arm and another officer by the other arm. The officers that had me by the throat were choking me in such a manner that I couldn't remember anything. After I got as far as Boylston st. with the officers I wasn't conscious of much that went on, but I think the officers who had me by the neck and throat let go at Boylston st."

He testified that at no time that night did he hear loud talk. That the crowd did not push him, and that at no time did he ask the crowd to "come on into the theatre." He heard some one make such a remark, in a low tone of voice, but he didn't make it.

After returning home that night, he said, he suffered from headache and pains, and was treated by a physician. In reply to a question by Atty. Graham, for the Government, he said that he had made no complaint to anyone in authority about the conduct of Sergt. King or the other officers, "as yet."

Others who testified were Mrs. Elizabeth King, Dr. Silas F. Taylor, Mrs. Jane W. Posey, Robert F. Crosey and Rev. Samuel A. Brown.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 4, 1915

LEGISLATORS SEE FILM PLAY

Private Performance Include Scenes Cut Out in Response to Protests.

LEGISLATIVE

Practically the whole State House went to the Tremont Theatre yesterday morning to witness a special private performance of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," by invitation of the theatre management.

Because the widespread protest against the play has resulted in a demand for legislation to prohibit the production of this and similar plays, the invitation was issued to the members of the Legislature, in order that they might see the play to be guided in passing upon the proposed legislation.

Neither Gov. Walsh nor anyone from his office was at the performance, and President Coolidge of the Senate and Speaker Cox of the House were also among the absentees.

One of the features of the special performance was the showing of the scenes which have been cut out of the film by orders of Mayor Curley and Judge Dowd.

The performance was a quiet one, without accident. Legislators were chary about expressing an opinion about the show, many praising its artistic quality and general interest, some holding the opinion that it produces a psychological impression of dislike against the Negro.

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
MAY 4, 1915

ROUGHLY USED BY POLICE NEGROES TESTIFY IN COURT

Rev. Aaron Puller Choked by Officers, He Testifies, on Night of Alleged Riot Over "Birth of a Nation." Trotter Also Charges He Was Struck.

W. M. Trotter and the Rev. Aaron Puller, who are charged with inciting riot and disturbing the peace at the Tremont Theatre on the night of April 17 in connection with the presentation of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," both testified, at the special session of the Municipal Court yesterday to having been struck and roughly used by police officers.

Following the testimony of several witnesses for the defense relative to seeing tickets sold that night to white persons after negroes had been refused and told that tickets were all sold out, court adjourned until this morning.

Deny Inciting Riot

Both Dr. Puller and Trotter denied having incited riot or disturbing the peace, or having any knowledge of any pre-arranged plan for a demonstration at the theatre that night in protest over the presentation of the play.

Dr. Puller testified to having been struck and knocked down while standing on the outer edge of the sidewalk near the theatre, and to being choked and roughly handled after being placed under arrest by Sergt. King and four other officers.

After getting in line and being told at the box office that there was "nothing doing," he said he left the lobby at once, and made no further attempt to purchase a ticket. When he reached the curbstone, he testified, Sergt. King requested him to "tell those people that there are no more tickets; tell them to go home." He testified that he had given this information to several persons when he heard someone say, "An officer struck that woman. What a shame!"

Struck In Neck

"I then went to the side of this woman," he said, "and taking out a calling card started to take down the number of the officer whom she alleged had struck her, and whom she pointed out to me. As I was writing down the number an officer near me on the sidewalk struck me on the neck with his hand, and I fell down. I can't recall whether or not he was smooth shaven, but I knew he was an officer by his uniform.

"My left arm struck the curbstone as I fell. Two officers grabbed me by the coat and dragged me up to the sidewalk. Sergt. King then said, 'lock that nigger up.' There were four other officers beside Sergt. King. Two of them grabbed me by the throat, another by the back of the neck—ripping my collar—Sergt. King by one arm and another officer by the other arm.

"The officers that had me by the throat were choking me in such a manner that I couldn't remember anything. After I got as far as Boylston street with the officers I wasn't conscious of much of anything that was taking place, but I think the officers who had me by the neck and throat let go at Boylston street. After being booked and held at the station for a while I was bailed out."

Heard No Loud Talk

He further testified that at no time during the night did he hear loud talk in the crowd; that the crowd did not push him, and that at no time did he turn to the crowd and say "come into the theatre." He heard someone make such a remark in a low tone, but he did not make it.

He suffered from headache and pains after arriving home that night and was treated by a physician. In reply to a question by Attorney Graham, appearing for the government, he said "as yet" he had made no complaint to anyone in authority relative to the alleged rough usage he received that night by Sergt. King and the other officers.

Among those testifying to the alleged sale of tickets to white persons after negroes had been refused and told that tickets were all sold out were Elizabeth King, Dr. Silas F. Taylor, Jane W. Posey, Robert F. Crosey and the Rev. Samuel A. Brown.

FITCHBURG (Mass.) SENTINEL
MAY 4, 1915

The Birth of a Nation.

Yesterday forenoon there was general acceptance by the legislature of the special invitation from the Tremont theater in Boston to witness the production of "The birth of a nation." All of the play was given as it is now presented to the public and then there was given the part which has been ordered to be cut out. As to the production as a whole, it is really wonderful. It has its vital relation to today in its furiously realistic scenes of the Civil War. Such scenes, only probably tenfold more furious, are being enacted far and wide in Europe. We can get an idea of the shock and terror of war in a wonderful degree and the play is well worth seeing. It is one of the strongest possible arguments for peace.

But there is another side of the story. The colored people are amply justified in their protest against the films which represent some of their men as doing the most repulsive acts of threat and violence against white women in order to induce them to enter the marriage relation. There is nothing vicious or salacious in the films. But it is the pursuit of white women by black men proposing legal marriage and trying measures of force which tend to stir the wrath of the spectators against the negroes. A white man, using similar means, would be similarly execrated. But every white man in the play from the South is pictured as a hero.

From beginning to end the play is thoroughly Southern. It has not a note of sympathy with the Northern point of view. It presents the Kuklux Klan as a most praiseworthy organization. Yet it is a fact of history that the Kuklux were an order of midnight murderers who, by widespread slaughter of negroes, overthrew political negro supremacy. This a further fact that the entire presentation of the negro race in the play is such as to create a decided feeling against them. With the solitary exception of the two family servants who are loyal to their masters and owners—and even these servants are gross caricatures on decent human nature—there is not a negro in the play who has any noble quality whatever. This is a miserable apology to put on the screen the statistics which show the worderful progress of the negro race since the war in education, in creation of property and in social advancement. Tables of statistics do not appeal to the imaginative like moving pictures. As the play stands it is a reflection upon the negro race and it tends unjustly to stir up race feeling. The entire first part of the play, dealing with the Civil War is unobjectionable, but the reconstruction period is so represented as to be untrue to history as a whole and it ought to be further modified by some representation of negro valor, fidelity and patriotism, of which there are ample illustrations.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 4, 1915

TREMONT THEATRE

"The Birth of a Nation" was played yesterday from 10:20 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. Members of the Legislature, their wives, families and friends to the number of about 1200 persons attended a special morning performance which lasted until after 1 o'clock. There were crowded audiences at the public matinee performance and likewise at the evening performance, so that approximately 3500 people saw the spectacle in the course of the day. The regular matinee and evening hours are 2:10 and 8:10 respectively. Prompt attendance is requested, both for one's own sake and to obviate discomfort to one's neighbor.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
MAY 4, 1915

Tremont Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation" was played practically continuously yesterday from 10:20 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. Members of the Legislature, their wives, families and friends to the number of about 1200 persons attended a special morning performance which lasted until after 1 o'clock. There were crowded audiences at the public matinee performance, and likewise at the evening performance, so that approximately 3500 people saw the Griffith spectacle in the course of the day.

BOSTON (Mass.) POST
MAY 4, 1915

PULLER AND TROTTER ON THE STAND

Both Deny Charge of Inciting a Riot

Both William Munroe Trotter, colored editor, and the Rev. Aaron Puller, also colored, testified yesterday in the special session of the Police Court before Judge Brackett, that they had been assaulted and roughly handled by police officers when arrested on the night of April 17 during the trouble at the Tremont Theatre over the showing of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation."

DENIED TICKET

The Rev. Mr. Puller stated that he went to the theatre alone to purchase a ticket to see the play, but could not buy one. Just as he was leaving the window, he heard a woman say, "Oh, what a shame. That policeman just struck a woman."

The Rev. Mr. Puller stated that he started back, believing that he recognized the woman's voice, when he was met by Sergeant King. The sergeant escorted him to the sidewalk and told him to tell the colored men and women gathered outside the theatre to go home.

Before the minister could carry out the request, he said, a police officer struck him in the back of the neck and knocked him to the sidewalk. He fell with his left arm on the curbing.

When he got on his feet he took out a card to get the name of the officer when Sergeant King said, "Lock that nigger up."

Two police officers grabbed him by the throat, another by the back of the collar, tearing it free, and Sergeant King and another officer each took him by an arm.

Has Made No Complaint

To the best of his memory the officers released their grips on his th[roat] when they reached Boylston stree[t].

The Rev. Mr. Puller stated that [he] had not as yet made any complai[nt] against any officers to persons in a[u]thority.

At the morning session Editor Tro[t]ter testified that after he had been r[e]fused tickets, two civilians put th[eir] hands on his arms and he told th[em] to be careful and not assault him. T[hen] then a man in civilian clothes str[uck] him a powerful blow on the jaw. Tr[o]tter stated that he afterwards learn[ed] that the man was a policeman nam[ed] Dennis Harrington. He said that [he] requested Sergeant King and anoth[er] officer to arrest the man who struc[k] him on the jaw. The man denied that he struck him. A woman at that point said: "You are not telling the truth. I saw you strike Mr. Trotter."

The officers, he stated, claimed that they could not arrest the man because he was a police officer.

Secured Officer's Name

Dr. Lattimore, the witness said, gave the officer who assaulted him a card to write his name. The man wrote "Dennis Harrington."

Another officer then spoke up and said: "We will take him if you men will go to the station and make a complaint."

Both Trotter and the Rev. Mr. Puller denied that they saw each other at the theatre that night. They also denied that they had incited a riot or were disturbing the peace. They also denied that they had gone to the theatre because of any prearranged plan.

A number of witnesses will be put on the stand before the cases close on [the] half of the defendants to show [the] tickets were sold after it was a[n]nounced that all had been sold.

FRANKLIN (Mass.) SENTINEL
MAY 4, 1915

Sentinelettes.

"The birth of a natio[n]" has [a] birth to something decidedly pleasant, and the end is not ye[t]

N (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
MAY 4, 1915

FULLER AND TROTTER ON WITNESS STAND

Each Declares Policemen Roughly Handled Him.

Deny Having Done Anything to Incite Riot in Theatre Trouble.

That they had been more or less manhandled by the police was claimed by Both Rev Aaron Puller and William Monroe Trotter, who took the stand in their own defense before Judge Brackett in a special session of the Municipal Court yesterday.

They are charged with inciting a riot at the Tremont Theatre, April 17, in connection with the production of "The Birth of a Nation."

Each defendant claimed that he went to the theatre without any idea that the other was there. Both denied having done anything to incite a riot.

Dr Puller said he was refused a ticket. As he was leaving the window he heard a woman's voice, saying "O, what a shame! That policeman just struck a woman."

He started back and was met by Sergt King, who escorted him to the sidewalk and instructed him to tell the colored people gathered there to go home. Before he could do so, witness claims, he was struck in the back of the neck and knocked down.

Getting to his feet he took out his cardcase, and was about to get the name of the officer he thought assaulted him, when Sergt King said, "Lock that nigger up," according to the witness.

Dr Puller testified that two policemen then grabbed him by the throat, a third by the collar, which was torn off, a fourth by one arm and Sergt King by the other arm. He claimed he was practically dragged to the Lagrange-st Station.

William Monroe Trotter, the colored editor, testified that he was struck on the jaw by a man whom he later learned was patrolman Dennis Harrington, in plain clothes. Trotter asked that his assailant be arrested and was told that was impossible because Harrington was a policeman.

An officer said, "We'll take him if you men will come to the station and make a complaint," witness claimed.

Six witnesses were put on by the defense to show that tickets were sold to white people after colored people had been refused. The cases will continue today, and it is possible that the arguments may be made this afternoon.

LEGISLATORS SEE FILM.

Even Two Scenes Censored Out Are Presented at Special Performance of "The Birth of a Nation."

A large audience assembled in the Tremont Theatre yesterday morning to witness the special performance of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," given for the members of the Legislature. The film was presented as it is shown each day at the regular performances and at the conclusion of the the final part the two scenes which have been censured were reproduced.

Hearty applause for the thrilling scenes in which the Ku Klux Klan figured marked the presentation and some of the comedy business evoked laughter, but for the most part the play was received with quiet, though profound attention.

Neither Pres Coolidge of the State Senate nor Speaker Cox of the House attended the performance, having already witnessed the film.

The matter was on the calendar of the House yesterday, but was not reached.

OPPOSE THE PRESENTATION.

Congregational Ministers Declare It Against Public Policy.

The Congregational ministers at their meeting yesterday in Pilgrim Hall went on record as opposed to the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" on the ground that it is contrary to good morals and sound public policy. Rev Dr Ansel E. Johnson of Everett, the newly elected moderator, presided.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) JOURNAL
MAY 1, 1915
722

Hall Given Over

OBJECT TO FILM PLAY

A number of representatives of the colored people, accompanied by counsel, ex-Mayor John T. Coughlin, called on Mayor Kay at City Hall yesterday and entered a protest against the presentation at a local theatre next week of a film play, which they allege does an injustice to the colored people, and incites race prejudice. The Mayor heard the complaint and also the statement of the theatre people, and will make his decision [illegible] before the date of the presentation.

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) TRIBUNE
MAY 1, 1915

At a mass meeting of colored women in the Twelfth Baptist Church, Roxbury, on Sunday, to protest against "The Birth of a Nation," Rev. Theodore A. Auten, of this city, opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. Auten read a poem. Other speakers were Mrs. Mary Chapman and Clement G. Morgan. A new protective league was formed and Mrs. Auten was elected vice-chairman of the vigilance committee.

[illegible] Dixon: [illegible] he hoped to create sent[illegible]

Continued on Page Nine, Column 4.

GLOBE
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

SAY BOX OFFICE DISCRIMINATED

Two Witnesses Heard in Negroes' Behalf.

Mitigating Circumstance, but Not a Defense, Court Rules.

Woman Alleges Threat for Asking About Trotter.

More than 100 witnesses may appear in the defense of Rev Aaron Puller and William Monroe Trotter in a special session of the Municipal Court before Judge Brackett, according to attorney Benjamin. The men are accused of causing a riot in the Tremont Theatre, April 17.

The Government rested its case yesterday, and in his opening statement, attorney Benjamin said that practically all the spectators in the court-room would be called as witnesses for the defense. Only two had been heard when court adjourned yesterday.

Attorney Benjamin said that the defense expects to prove that on April 17 tickets for "The Birth of a Nation" were sold to white people, but were refused colored people; that white people afterward bought tickets for some colored people; that tickets sold to colored people were not honored, some being taken back.

The attorney argued that discrimination is forbidden by law, and that if these contentions were proven, the alleged rioting was caused, not by the colored people, but by the theatre people.

Judge Brackett said that if such sales were proved he would consider it a mitigating circumstance, but not a defense in case the men were found guilty of causing the disturbance.

The court then directed attorney Benjamin to "select a reasonable number of witnesses who can state calmly and clearly just what happened in and about the theatre on the night in question."

Some 40 witnesses were called and sworn, and from these attorney Benjamin selected three for the defense. When these have testified the attorneys and the court will decide whether the other witnesses are necessary.

Mrs Mary E. Moore of 36 Warwick st, Roxbury, took the stand first. She testified that she was refused a ticket at the box office, although a white woman directly in front of her bought one, and she saw other whites obtain tickets after she had been refused. A white woman later bought a ticket for Mrs Moore, she said, and she saw the performance.

She testified she saw Trotter ask for tickets some 10 minutes after she had received hers and heard Treas Sheehan tell Trotter the house was sold out. Trotter asked the box-office man why no sign was posted to that effect, and the treasurer replied they didn't have a sign.

When Trotter was placed under arrest she asked Sergt King what he was arrested for, and was told to "Shut up" or she'd be arrested, she went on. She said she was not interested in having the show stopped previous to seeing the performance, but now is.

Charles P. Ray, who pleaded guilty Thursday to a charge of throwing an egg in the theatre, then took the stand. He said he heard the man in the box office tell a colored couple no more tickets were for sale, and later saw a white couple buy two 50-cent tickets. Then he went up to the box office and got a ticket, he said.

Shortly afterward he saw Trotter, under arrest, being taken from the lobby. He admitted buying "fresh" eggs to throw at the screen, and also four boxes containing odoriferous bombs. He said the latter were "to create a peaceful disturbance."

He admitted throwing missiles at the screen until he was arrested.

THREE CENSORS PROPOSED.

Legislative Committee Would Require Unanimous Agreement of Board to Stop Any Theatrical Production.

A three-sided censorship, made up of the Mayor, the Police Commissioner and the Chief Justice of the Boston Municipal Court, to have unlimited power over all theatrical productions in this city, is proposed in a bill which the Legislative Committee on Judiciary yesterday voted to report.

The only restriction on the exercise of the censorship power is that action by the three must be unanimous. The bill does not provide for any appeal.

Representative Burr of Ward 11 was instructed to report the bill, to which Representatives Abbott of Haverhill and Bowser of Wakefield are the present dissenters. Indications are that others of the 15 members of the committee will dissent and the bill is expected to cause a big debate when it gets into the House.

The new measure is entirely distinct from any of the other seven which were presented to the committee by those desiring to stop "The Birth of a Nation" or those interested in the production.

The only similarity between it and the so-called Sullivan bill is that the three censors may stop a performance on any grounds they choose so long as they agree that it is injurious to public morals. Religious, racial or other questions may be the reason, but they need not be stated.

WILSON DENIES APPROVAL.

President Writes Congressman Thacher That He Saw "Birth of Nation" but Did Not Indorse It.

WASHINGTON, April 30—In reply to a protest made today by W. H. Lewis of Boston against the alleged indorsement by President Wilson of the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," the White House today made public a letter recently written by Sec Tumulty at President Wilson's direction to former Representative Thacher, denying any such indorsement. The letter was as follows:

"My Dear Mr Thacher—Replying to your recent letter and inclosures, I beg to say that it is true that "The Birth of a Nation" was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance. Sincerely yours,

"J. P. Tumulty,
"Secretary to the President."

Lewis and Bishop A. Walters of New Jersey, another negro, left at the White House a copy of a petition presented to Mayor Curley, urging him to prohibit the production of the play. In this petition it is alleged in effect that extracts from President Wilson's history of the American people are thrown upon the screen "to make it appear that the recent statements from the President indorsing the play."

During his service in the cabinet Mr Thacher was regarded by the negro [illegible] as an active champion of the negro [illegible]

ADVERTISER
ess: Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

FILM RIOT HEARING OVER TILL MONDAY

Witnesses for William M. Trotter and Rev. Aaron Puller Begin Testimony

TELL OF ACTION IN THEATRE LOBBY ON NIGHT OF TROUBLE

Defense to Claim That Alleged Disturbance Was Caused by Managers of Performance

The government rested its case yesterday afternoon in the special hearing of Municipal Court, Judge Brackett presiding, on the charges preferred against William Monroe Trotter, editor, and Rev. Aaron Puller, alleging that they caused a disturbance and incited a riot at the Tremont Theatre where the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," was being presented, on the night of April 17.

After rtwo witnesses, Mrs. Mary E. Moore of 36 Warwick st., Roxbury, and Charles P. Ray, cashier at Hotel Melbourne, had testified for the defense, the hearing was adjourned until 9:30 a.m. Monday.

In opening for the defense, Atty. Benjamin announced that practically all of the 100 or more persons in the court room were witnesses. He said that the defense expects to prove that on the night in question, despite the fact that whoever was in authority at the theatre ordered that no tickets be sold, that tickets were sold; that tickets for the performance that night were sold to white persons; that colored persons desiring to purchase tickets were refused; that after colored persons were refused, tickets were bought for them by white persons; that tickets were sold to some colored persons who were not recognized as such; that some tickets were taken back, or withdrawn, from some colored persons who were not recognized as such when they asked for tickets.

Witnesses Sworn

Atty. Benjamin then called the names of about 40 witnesses, who stood and were sworn. At Judge Brackett's suggestion three were selected as what Atty. Benjamin deemed his best witnesses. When they have all testified and have been cross-examined the attorneys and Court will endeavor to determine whether or not it will be necessary to hear more witnesses in the case.

Mrs. Mary E. Moore, 36 Wardick at., Roxbury, the first witness to take the stand for the defense, couldn't seem to remember detailed happenings of the night. The principal point of her testimony was to the effect that she was refused a ticket at the box office window although a white woman directly in front of her in the line purchased one, and that she saw tickets sold to other white persons after she had been refused.

When Mrs. Moore asked for "the best 50-cent ticket," she testified that Mr. Sheehan, who was in the box office, at first started to hand her one, but that "when he looked up into my face he said that the house was all sold out." At that time he had a ticket in his hand which he had taken from the ticket rack when she asked for a 50-cent ticket.

When Trotter was placed under arrest by Sergt. King of the Lagrange st. station and "a plain clothes man" she said she asked Sergt. King what he was arresting Trotter for, and was told to "shut up or I'll arrest you." She followed after them to the station house.

Charles P. Ray, who on Thursday pleaded guilty to a charge of malicious mischief and had his case placed on file, with the understanding that he would reimburse the theatre management for damage to the screen to the amount of $20, was the next and last witness of the day. He testified as to events of the evening.

When the hearing was resumed at 2 p.m., after a recess, the government put on their final witnesses in the case. They were Patrolman Herbert L. Wingate of the Lagrange st. station, Patrolman William W. Dunn of the Boylston st. station, Frank V. Bruno, proprietor of a barber shop directly over the Tremont st. entrance to the theatre, and Miss Margaret T. Fallon, employed as a manicurist in the barber shop.

NEW BILL GIVES POWER TO STOP ANY PERFORMANCE

But Mayor, Police Head and Chief Justice Must Agree

Unlimited authority to censor all theatrical performances is conveyed jointly upon the Mayor of Boston, the Police Commissioner and the Chief Justice of the Municipal Court by a bill which was favorably reported by the House Committee on Judiciary, yesterday. The action comes as the result of the activity of the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" production.

One of the provisions of the bill, however, is that the decision of this censoring board must be unanimous, and from the decision there is no appeal and no right for a hearing, this matter being left to the discretion of the censors themselves.

Under the provisions of the old law, the Mayor and Police Commissioner were empowered to act jointly, but they could stop a play only when they considered it either immoral or obscene. Under the provisions of the bill favorably reported they may [illegible] a theatrical production for any reason [illegible]

POST
ess: Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 191[illegible]

NEW BILL PROVIDES 3 CENSORS

Can Stop Play for Any Cause They See Fit

Provision is made for a new Board of Censors for theatrical and "movie" productions in Boston, in a bill which was reported favorably in the House of Representatives yesterday by the legislative committee on judiciary.

THE NEW BILL

The new bill which was the result of a protest against the producing of "The Birth of a Nation" by the colored people and others, provides that the chief justice of the Municipal Court, the Mayor and the police commissioner shall constitute this board of censors, and may for any reason satisfactory to them revoke any license that has been granted for theatrical exhibitions, public shows, public amusements and exhibitions of every description.

It is provided in the bill that the Mayor, as now, shall issue licenses for such shows, but that to revoke or suspend such license all of the members of the proposed new board must act unanimously and "so order. Thus if two of the three believed that a license should be revoked and the third did not, the show could continue.

The bill does not give the show producers any right to appeal to the courts nor does it bind the censors to the passing simply on the question of whether a show is morally moral or not, as does the present law.

Senator William J. Sullivan and Representatives Bowser and Abbott of the committee dissent from the committee's report.

Senator Sullivan will introduce a substitute bill, while the other two dissenters are opposed to any change in the present law.

The bill reported by the committee is different from any bill that was suggested at any of the public hearings on the matter.

The only change in the present law is that it adds the chief justice to the censors the present law provides, and it permits the censors to stop a show for any reason they may see fit.

The new censor bill was colored after a hard battle in the committee. For some time the committee was deadlocked over the question as to whether any legislation should be passed, there being a tie vote of 7 to 7 on the question.

The so-called Hallowell-Wilson bill which was submitted to the committee Thursday, and which gave the censoring of shows into the hands of the chief of the district police, had few if any friends in the committee.

Trotter Defence Opens

Disorder Alleged Caused by Discrimination Against Colored People in Sale of Tickets

The government late yesterday rested its case in the prosecution of William Munroe Trotter, editor, and the Rev. Aaron Fuller, charged with having a riot and disturbing the peace of the Tremont Theatre, where the photo play "The Birth of a Nation," was shown, on the night of April 17.

Two witnesses for the defence were heard and then Judge Brackett adjourned the cases until Monday.

Attorney Benjamin, in opening for the defence, declared that 100 persons present would be called as witnesses. He hoped to prove, he said, that on the night in question tickets were sold for the performance that night to white persons, but that colored persons desiring tickets were refused, and that after said people were refused tickets were sold to white persons for them. Some tickets, he said, were sold to colored persons whose color was not detected at first, and tickets were withdrawn when the color was recognized.

He called attention to the fact that the law forbids the discrimination in the sale of such tickets. The alleged disturbance and rioting was caused not by the police but by the theatre people.

AVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' FOES FIGHT UNANIMOUS VOTE PROVISO IN CENSOR BILL

Object to Measure of Legislative Committee Because Two of Three Authorities Provided Hold Appointive Offices.

Opponents of the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," are not satisfied that the bill favored by a majority of the legislative committee on judiciary would bar the exhibition of the film. A conference of the leaders in the fight against the production this morning resulted in an agreement to favor the judiciary committee's bill with an amendment making it possible for two of the proposed censors to forbid the presentation in Boston of any play. With this amendment they expect the bill to become a law.

The measure would place practical control of all theatrical affairs in the hands of a board of censors composed of the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court. Under the committee's bill a unanimous decision of these officers would be required to stop the performance of a play or exhibition of a film.

Butler R. Wilson, a leading attorney in the legal battle to drive "The Birth of a Nation" from Boston, pointed out this morning that two out of these three censors hold appointive offices and are not subject to direct control of the people. There would not, he said, be any effective method to force these men to exercise their office in accordance with the wishes of the public. The censorship would be a more unwieldy affair than it is at present.

(Continued from Page One.)

Wilson favors the remaining provisions of the bill. "It gives Boston," he said this morning, "a power now possessed by every other city and town in the Commonwealth, the power of suspending a license without assigning a reason therefor. I think this uniformity is a desirable thing in legislation.

"I do not think the measure is fair in demanding the unanimous action of the censors. The decision of a majority ought to rule. With this and other minor changes the bill appeals to my sense of fair play for the theatre people and the public."

J. Mott Hallowell, another active opponent of the Dixon-Griffith film, says: "I have entire confidence in the public officials in whom this bill would vest the power of suspension. A majority ought, however, to have the ruling voice. It does not strike me as fair to allow a film manager to prevail by persuading only one of the tribunal while the opponents are compelled to obtain an agreement by all three."

The mayor's position in case the committee's bill becomes law, is a subject of wide speculation. Mayor Curley has refused to use his present powers to suspend the license to produce "The Birth of a Nation," and might not be inclined to make a different use of the wider powers granted by the new measure.

Opponents of the film plan an impressive demonstration against the film tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Tremont Temple. A mass meeting of all those opposed to the further exhibition of the disturbing picture will be held to discuss means of impressing the mayor and the Legislature with the breadth and genuineness of the opposition.

White House Denies Wilson Indorsed Race Play

(Special Dispatch to The Traveler.)

WASHINGTON, May 1—President Wilson, through Secretary Tumulty, has let it be known that he has not given his personal approval to the picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," just because it has been produced at the White House, and he would have the inference left that if he had known of the features in the play that have been found objectionable he would not have permitted the exhibition of the production at the White House.

"The President has at no time expressed his approbation of it," said Secretary Tumulty today, speaking for the President.

The matter came to a head at the White House yesterday when W. H. Lewis of Boston, formerly an assistant attorney-general of the United States, called with Bishop A. Walters of the A. M. E. Zion Church of New Jersey, to protest against the play and any alleged indorsement of it by the President.

Previously the President had received many letters protesting the play, and especially from former Congressman Thacher of Massachusetts. The visitors mentioned left at the White House the copy of a petition presented to the mayor of Boston, urging him to prohibit the production of the play. In this petition it is stated that extracts from President Wilson's "History of the American People" are thrown upon the screen to make it appear that they are recent statements from the President indorsing the play. These passages, it is stated, place the President in the position of indorsing mob violence against the colored race.

The visitors mentioned were shown a letter written to former Congressman Thacher by Secretary Tumulty as of April 28, the letter being:

"My Dear Mr. Thacher: Replying to your recent letter and inclosures, I beg to say that it is true that 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 1, 1915

OPPOSES "THE CLANSMAN."

To the Editor of The Herald:

The virulent opinion about the Negro reported conspicuously this morning in The Herald, from an address by the Rev. Mr. Hawkins of Jamaica Plain, is not wholly without value in the present discussion.

The opinion bears, of course, the well-known hall mark of the Negro-phobist novelist, Thomas Dixon, a man condemned by the best people of the South as a venomous mischief-maker, and whose play, "The Clansman," is ruled off the stage in southern cities as riot-producing.

But if the Mason and Dixon line is happily abolished as far as judgment of "The Clansman" is concerned, we seem to have in the address already referred to what may be called a Hawkins-Dixon line on the meaning and intended effect of the reconstruction film in the "Birth of a Nation."

There are no apologies or explanations or qualifications, but Mr. Hawkins frankly rejoices in the motion picture because it reveals the "animalism" of the Negro race and holds it up to public scorn," and because it voices an "appeal" from "the South to the nation." His only regret is that the "attempt-at-rape" picture had been forced off the stage.

And he also remarks in substance that only a "baby race" would object to having its bad features held up to "public scorn," it being simply the courageous white man's attempt at Christian "uplift."

Now, may I say two things in closing? First—If Mr. Hawkins finds in the film his appeal of the South to the nation and this valuable showing up of the "animalism" of the "overwhelming majority" of the colored people in the country, is it altogether strange that the colored people of Boston and many of their friends and fellow-citizens should discover the same thing and should be a bit stirred up and be unable to take it altogether detached and aesthetic point of view, or if they are wondering just where the wise and just limit to the freedom of the stage comes in?

Second—The fact that this moving picture is so good is what makes it bad. It is wonderful as a show and therefore wonderfully misleading. Its valuable feature, it reveals the tragedy of war and pays a touching tribute to Lincoln. It has no emphasis and no thrills over the Negro except what is in the Negro. But if I remember rightly in the old days poison was sometimes cunningly mixed with the "wine" that "maketh glad the heart of man," and even with the "bread that "strengthens man's heart."

This film in the second part contains poison—Mr. Dixon's prejudice and misrepresentation made one thousand times more effective and given unexampled range by all the resources of modern art.

PITT DILLINGHAM
178 Commonwealth avenue, April 2

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 191

Pair of Sixes," at the Wilbur; "Common Clay," at the Castle Square; "The Birth of a Nation," at the Tremont; "The Eternal City," at the Boston. The last two are film things.

Report Triple Play Censorship Bill in House

The legislative committee on judiciary has reported in the House a bill to vest unlimited censorship of all plays in Boston with the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court. The measure was based on the several bills before the committee intended to prohibit further production of "The Birth of a Nation" and the showing of similar plays.

The bill provides, however, that before the new censorship triumvirate can stop the production of a play, its decision must be unanimous. No provision is made in the bill for an appeal from the decision of the censors.

At present, censorship of plays in Boston is vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner, but their authority is limited in that they cannot stop the production of a play unless it is obscene or immoral.

Representatives Abbott of Haverhill and Bowser of Wakefield and Senator W. J. Sullivan will be recorded as dissenters to the bill.

Representative Burr of ward 11 was instructed to report the bill in the House.

The fact the new bill continues the police commissioner as a censor caused some surprise, as Police Commissioner O'Meara is reported to be desirous of being elminated as a censor in Boston.

To Show Reasons Why Film Is Menace Tomorrow

Reasons why thousands of Boston people believe the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," is detrimental and a menace, not only to the Negroes but to the white people of the country, will be advanced in the Tremont Temple at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, at what promises to be the biggest mass protest meeting yet held in connection with the fight against the film. Speakers of wide prominence will give their views, and it is expected sweeping resolutions against any further showing of the protested play in Boston will be adopted.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Boston branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has sent out what it terms an "emergency call." Every citizen, irrespective of creed or color, is urged to attend and give free expression of his or her views. The Negroes believe that without infringing on the liberty of dramatic art, or establishing a dangerous censorship, a way can be found to put a stop to "The Birth of a Nation," and to prevent any further exhibition of plans calculated, if not deliberately intended, to stir up class hatred.

The executive committee in charge of the mass meeting comprises Francis J. Garrison, Horace Bumstead, Miss Adelene Moffat, the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, Butler R. Wilson, Joseph P. Loud, Miss Maria L. Baldwin, Mrs. Mary Hollowell Loud and George G. Bradford.

TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Boston, Mass.
APR 30 1915

AGREE ON TRIPLE FILM CENSORSHIP BOARD FOR BOSTON SHOWS

Legislative Committee to Report Bill Giving Power to Mayor, Police Head and Judge—Unanimous Vote Necessary to Kill Bill.

The legislative committee on judiciary, after deliberating at length in executive session today on the various bills to prohibit the production of "The Birth of a Nation" or similar plays, voted to report a bill vesting the censorship of all plays in Boston with the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court and giving them unlimited power.

The bill provides, however, that before the new censorship triumvirate can stop the production of a play, its decision must be unanimous. No provision is made in the bill for an appeal from the decision of the censors.

At present, censorship of plays in Boston is vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner, but their authority is limited in that they cannot stop the production of a play unless it is obscene or immoral.

Representatives Abbott of Haverhill and Bowser of Wakefield will be recorded as dissenters to the bill.

Representative Burr of ward 11 was instructed to report the bill in the House.

The fact the new bill continues the police commissioner as a censor caused some surprise, as Police Commissioner O'Meara is reported to be desirous of being elminated as a censor in Boston.

M. Sumner Coggan, counsel for the Tremont Theatre, where "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, declined to express an opinion on the bill until he had had an opportunity to study it.

The bill agreed by the judiciary committee is entitled "An act relative to the licensing of theatrical exhibitions, public shows and amusements in the city of Boston." It amends sec. 1 of chap 494 of the Acts of 1908 (the present law) so as to make it read as follows:

"Section 1—The mayor of Boston, except as provided in sec. 46 of chap. 106 of the Revised Laws, shall grant a license for theatrical exhibitions, public shows, public amusements and exhibitions of every description, to which admission is obtained upon payment of money or upon the delivery of any valuable thing, or by a ticket or voucher obtained for money or any valuable thing, upon such terms and conditions as he deems reasonable, but there shall not be charged a fee exceeding $100 for such license when the entertainment, exhibition, or show is given in a building licensed as a theatre. A license to be exercised in a building licensed as a theatre shall be for a theatrical season and shall expire of the first day of August of each year. The mayor and the police commissioner of Boston and the chief justice of the municipal court of the city of Boston, acting unanimously, may revoke or suspend such license at their pleasure."

Sec. 2 of chap 494 of 1908 is repealed.

The act takes effect upon its passage.

Senator William J. Sullivan will join with Representatives Bowser and Abbott in dissenting from the report of the committee.

Representatives Bowser and Abbott are dissenting, it is said, on the ground that there should be no legislation whatever. Senator Sullivan will offer a substitute bill similar to the Hallowell bill, he announced in the Senate.

Put Film Protest up to Curley Again Today

Once again the fight to bar the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," from further showing in Boston, will be put up to Mayor Curley. A committee of 100 citizens, led by the Rev. Samuel A. Brown, as chairman, today will call upon the executive, and urge him to stop the play at once, this action being the outcome of a mass meeting held last night in the Twelfth Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue, Roxbury.

Early today a sub-committee of the main body will call on the mayor and request him to fix a time when it will be convenient for him to receive the larger committee. The committeemen will invade the mayor's sanctum armed with a mass of protests and denunciations of the photoplay and will use every effort to induce him to put an immediate stop to further showing of the film in the Tremont Theatre.

More than 700 citizens attended the meeting in the Roxbury church last night. Emery F. Morris of Cambridge presided. Many of the speakers characterized as "an attempt at bribery," the invitation of the theatre and photo-play management to the members of the Legislature to witness a free private showing of the film on Monday morning. The Rev. Dr. Brown said it was evidently the purpose of the theatre management and the film producers, to influence the legislators to pass a law that should be favorable to the protested play, and that such [illegible] was in the nature of a bri[illegible]

What is believed by opponents of the photo-play will be one of the largest and most enthusiastic mass gatherings yet held in protest of "The Birth of a Nation" will take place at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Tremont Temple. The speakers have not as yet been decided upon, but it is announced they will be men of state and national prominence, whose support in the crusade against the film has been enlisted, and who will wax eloquent in their condemnation of the play.

The announcement late yesterday that the legislative committee on judiciary would take up the new Hallowell bill in executive session today was greeted as cheering news by the opponents to the play. The proposed measure would eliminate the commissioner of police from participating in the censorship of plays and photo-plays, vesting the mayor with entire authority, and also would give the state police, through its chief, power to exercise its censorship on week days as well as on Sundays.

J. Mott Hallowell, framer of the new bill, and many of his supporters look for favorable action on the part of the Judiciary committee. What is especially gratifying to them is that the committee has decided to take action without waiting for the private showing of the play which has been arranged for next Monday.

Individual protests against their viewing the film Monday as the guests of the management were entered last night with each member of the Legislature by Butler R. Wilson, attorney, who addressed to each of the legislators a letter in which he denounced the invitation as nothing more than an attempt to influence legislation.

Take Theatre Mix-up Trial to Bigger Room

The grand jury room was evacuated today by Judge Brackett, and those interested in the so-called "Birth of a Nation" trials, as a larger court room, the second session of the superior criminal court was available. The cases of the Rev. Aaron Puller and W. M. Trotter, charged with disturbing the peace and inciting a riot, were continued before a large gathering of spectators.

A. L. Gray, business manager of the film company, said he heard Trotter ask for tickets on the night of April 17, and heard the agent say there were no tickets for sale. Albert W. Scott, a ticket taker, heard the expression "stand for your rights" from the crowd of colored people in the theatre lobby, and heard much noise.

Proprietor John B. Schoeffel of the Tremont Theatre testified he ordered the ticket agent to stop selling tickets at 7:20, and asked Sergt. King to clear the theatre lobby at 7:25. He had picked up a pepper box some one threw, he said, also. It came from the direction of the Rev. Mr. Fuller, but he did not believe the minister had thrown it.

"Colored people play a prominent part in the production, dont they?" asked Atty. Benjamin.

"Yes, sir."

"You weren't surprised, then, on this night to find colored people much interested in the show, were you?"

"Yes sid, I was."

Henry J. McMahon, press agent, told of making his way "squirming" and "shouldering" through the crowd of colored people to get into the theatre. When asked if he had some difficulty, he said he wouldn't call it that, because he was husky and enjoyed pushing his way along. The two defendants, Puller and Trotter, are sitting with their counsel, taking notes and assisting with suggestions in the cross-examination.

Lewis Calls to See if Wilson Indorsed Film

WASHINGTON, April 30—W. H. Lewis of Boston, former assistant attorney-general of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of New Jersey, called at the White House today to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his endorsement to a moving picture film depicting scenes during the reconstruction period of the South, in a manner distastful to Negroes.

Secretary Tumulty showed them a letter to Representative Thacher of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House as a courtesy to a former classmate of the President's, the President was unaware of its character, and at no time has expressed approbation of it.

BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. HERALD
MAY 1, 1915

VOTE FOR THREE MOVIE CENSORS

Legislators of Judiciary Committee Will Report Bill to House.

The legislative committee on judiciary, after deliberating at length in executive session yesterday on the various bills to prohibit the production of "The Birth of a Nation" or similar plays, voted to report a bill vesting the censorship of all plays in Boston with the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court and giving them unlimited power.

The bill provides, however, that before the new censorship triumvirate can stop the production of a play, its decision must be unanimous. No provision is made in the bill for an appeal from the decision of the censors.

At present, censorship of plays in Boston is vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner, but their authority is limited in that they cannot stop the production of a play unless it is obscene or immoral.

Representatives Abbott of Haverhill and Bowser of Wakefield and Senator W. J. Sullivan will be recorded as dissenters to the bill.

Representative Burr of ward 11 was instructed to report the bill in the House.

The fact the new bill continues the police commissioner as a censor caused some surprise, as Police Commissioner O'Meara is reported to be desirous of being eliminated as a censor in Boston.

Amends Existing Law.

The bill agreed to by the judiciary committee is entitled "An act relative to the licensing of theatrical exhibitions, public shows and amusements in the city of Boston." It amends sec. 1 of chap 494 of the Acts of 1908 (the present law) so as to make it read as follows:

"Section 1—The mayor of Boston, except as provided in sec. 46 of chap. 106 of the Revised Laws, shall grant a license for theatrical exhibitions, public shows, public amusements and exhibitions of every description, to which admission is obtained upon payment of money or upon the delivery of any valuable thing, or by a ticket or voucher obtained for money or any valuable thing, upon such terms and conditions as he deems reasonable, but there shall not be charged a fee exceeding $100 for such license when the entertainment, exhibition, or show is given in a building licensed as a theatre. A license to be exercised in a building licensed as a theatre shall be for a theatrical season and shall expire on the first day of August of each year. The mayor and the police commissioner of Boston and the chief justice of the municipal court of the city of Boston, acting unanimously, may revoke or suspend such license at their pleasure."

Sec. 2 of chap 494 of 1908 is repealed.
The act takes effect upon its passage.

Will Join In Dissent.

Senator William J. Sullivan will join with Representatives Bowser and Abbott in dissenting from the report of the committee.

Representatives Bowser and Abbott are dissenting, it is said, on the ground that there should be no legislation whatever. Senator Sullivan will offer a substitute bill similar to the Hallowell bill, he announced in the Senate.

LEWIS CALLS TO SEE IF WILSON INDORSED FILM

WASHINGTON, April 30—W. H. Lewis of Boston, former assistant attorney-general of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters of the African Methodist Episcopal church of New Jersey, called at the White House today to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his endorsement to a moving picture film depicting scenes during the reconstruction period of the South, in a manner distasteful to Negroes.

Secretary Tumulty showed them a letter to Representative Thacher of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House as a courtesy to a former classmate of the President's, the President was unaware of its character, and at no time has expressed approbation of it.

ADMITS HE HAD EGGS AND OTHER AMMUNITION

Witness Heard for Defence in "Birth of Nation" Case.

Men connected with the Tremont Theatre and "The Birth of a Nation," appearing before Judge Brackett in the municipal court yesterday, described the scenes in the lobby during the outburst against the film on April 17. They were witnesses against William Munroe Trotter and the Rev. Aaron Puller, who are charged with disturbing the peace and inciting a riot.

John L. Schoeffel, manager of the Tremont Theatre, said that he ordered the sale of tickets stopped at 7:20 P. M., and five minutes later told Sergt. King of the police to clear the lobby. He picked up a pepper box, he said, that came from the direction of the Rev. Mr. Puller, but he did not believe that the minister threw it.

"Co[illegible] people play a prominent part [illegible]action, do they not?" asked [illegible]

"[illegible]," said the manager.

"[illegible]ere not surprised to see [illegible]olored people attending [illegible]ing, Mr. [illegible] you?"

Dixon: [illegible]he hoped to create

Page Nine, Columns 4.)

EVENING RECORD
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 19[illegible]

Tremont Theatre

David W. Griffith's vast spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, "The Birth of a Nation," entered upon its fourth week at the Tremont Theatre today, for on Saturday, April 10, it was first publicly performed there. As a love story in a wonderful historical setting, the play has a great appeal to all the young people. Older heads are interested in the realistic depiction of Civil War, of the big moments like the surrender of Lee and the death of Lincoln, and in the disclosure of how the Ku Klux Klan in the South uprose and threw off the carpet-bagger yoke.

As the run progresses, it is noticed that there are many "Birth of Nation" fans, namely, persons who enjoy the film so much that they come again and again. Some are professional students of film art, but the great majority of the fans are simply people who have been thrilled by the play and who want to renew the charm and romance of it all.

There are said to be 200,000 historical details in the picture, so that it is a perfect mine of interest, entertainment and instruction. The skillful mechanical effects behind the scenes and the delightful interpretation of the music by the 40 members of the orchestra under Director Arundel's baton, contribute (it is said) 40 p.c. to the worth of the whole.

m GLOBE
ress: Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

BASED ON COMMON SENSE.

OUT of all the agitation over a motion picture film has come a good suggestion. Hereafter, it is proposed by the Legislative Committee on Judiciary, the propriety of stage productions will be determined by three level-headed men, the Police Commissioner, the chief justice of the Municipal Court and the Mayor. Their decision must be unanimous.

The question of propriety and impropriety is left to the common sense of the board. The religious issue fortunately has been ignored. There are also no binding definitions of morality or immorality. Such matters are left to common sense.

The three members of the board ought always to be competent to exercise common sense in dealing with stage productions. If the Mayor of Boston, the civilian head of the police force and principal judge of the lower courts could not show common sense, then the city would have more to worry about than what was happening merely upon the stage.

If all three of these men decide that a production is so evil that it is contrary to public welfare, then we may expect that their verdict is correct. If these three men cannot see whereby a production is damaging to the public, then we may rest assured that nothing seriously harmful is being put before those who wish to see it.

In putting the control of theatrical productions into the hands of an impersonal and nonpartisan board the Legislative committee showed an appreciation of the fact that this Nation was founded on political freedom and that free speech and a free press must be allowed. The stage is likewise a free institution of great educational possibilities.

JOURNAL
Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

ALLEGED NEGRO RIOTERS ARE PLACED ON TRIAL

Trotter and Puller Charged With Inciting Crowd at the Tremont Theatre—Woman Tells of Efforts to Buy Tickets for Photo-Play.

Yesterday afternoon the State concluded its presentation of evidence in the cases of W. M. Trotter, negro editor, and the Rev. Aaron Puller, who are being tried before Judge Brackett in a special session of the Municipal Court on the charge of disturbing the peace and inciting to riot outside the Tremont Theatre on the night of April 17. Two witnesses for the defense had been heard yesterday afternoon when Judge Brackett ordered the case adjourned until Monday morning.

In his opening, Attorney Edgar Benjamin said a majority of the 100 negroes who were in the room were to be called as witnesses. He said the defense expects to prove that after the management of the theatre had said there were no more tickets for sale, that tickets were sold to white people, and that after negroes had been refused tickets white people bought them for the negroes; that tickets had been sold to negroes who had not been recognized as such and that some tickets were taken back at the door from negroes who had managed to purchase them through the failure of the ticket sellers to recognize their color.

He contended that the law forbids discrimination, and if it is proved that there was discrimination, the alleged disturbance and rioting that night was caused by the theatre management. In reply, Judge Brackett stated that if such evidence were introduced he would consider it in the light of mitigating circumstances, but would not take it as a defense.

Forty negroes were then called and sworn, and on Judge Brackett's suggestion, three were selected by Benjamin as his best witnesses. It was agreed that after they had testified and been cross-examined, the court and attorneys will decide as to whether or not it will be necessary to call the others.

Mary E. Moore of 36 Warwick street, Roxbury was called first, but didn't seem to remember clearly all that happened. She did recall having been refused a ticket, although a white woman directly in front of her purchased one. She claimed tickets were sold to other white persons after she had been refused.

Later, the white woman who had gotten a ticket purchased one for 50 cents for her at her request. She saw the picture. Two negro women who had been ahead of her were also refused. She said she asked for the best 50-cent ticket and the seller had one in his hand to give her when he looked into her face and saw she was a negro.

After receiving her ticket she stood in the lobby and 10 or 12 minutes later heard Trotter ask for tickets, only to be told there were no more. She said when Sergt. King placed Trotter under arrest she asked him the reason and was told to shut up or be arrested too.

Charles F. Ray, who, Mr. Thacher pleaded guilty to throwing an egg at the screen, said he arrived in the theatre at 1:30 and saw a white man and woman purchase a loge ticket for 75 cents and soon after got one himself at the same price. He saw negroes refused and heard white people telling them to get out of line, as they had no chance to buy tickets.

The final witnesses for the government were Patrolmen Wingate of Lagrange street and Dinn of Boylston street; Frank P. Bruno, proprietor of a barber shop over the theatre entrance, and Miss Margaret E. Fallon, manicurist in the shop.

JOURNAL
ess: Boston, Mass.
MAY 1 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IN ITS FOURTH WEEK

David W. Griffith's sensational spectacle of Civil War and reconstruction days, "The Birth of a Nation" will enter upon its fourth week at the Tremont Theatre today. As a love story in a wonderful historical setting, the play appeals to all the young people. Older heads are interested in the realistic depiction of Civil War, of the big moments like the surrender of Lee and the death of Lincoln, and in the disclosure of how the Ku Klux Klan in the South uprose and threw off the carpet-bagger yoke.

As the run progresses, it is noticed that there are many "Birth of a Nation" fans, or persons who enjoy the film so much that they come again and again. Some are professional students of film art, but the great majority of the repeaters are simply people who have been thrilled by the play and who want to renew the sensations of it all over again.

There are said to be 200,000 historical details in the picture, so that it is a perfect mine of interest, entertainment and instruction. The skilful mechanical effects behind the scenes and the pleasing interpretation of the music by the 40 members of the orchestra under Director Arundel's baton contribute much to the success of the exhibition. Daily matinees as well as daily evening performances are given except on Sundays.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
MAY 1, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Bill Reported.

Mr. Barr of Boston for the judiciary committee reported a bill to prevent the performance of plays likely to excite race or religious prejudice. Senator Sullivan of Suffolk and Messrs Abbott of Lawrence and Bowser of Wakefield dissent. The bill is entitled "An act relative to the licensing of theatrical exhibitions, public shows and amusements in the city of Boston." It amends section 1 of chapter 494 of the Acts of 1908 so as to make it read as follows:—

"Section 1. The mayor of Boston, except as provided in section 46 of chapter 106 of the Revised Laws, shall grant a license for theatrical exhibitions, public shows, public amusements and exhibitions of every description, to which admission is obtained upon payment of money or upon the delivery of any valuable thing, or by a ticket or voucher obtained for money or any valuable thing, upon such terms and conditions as he deems reasonable, but there shall not be charged a fee exceeding $100 for such license when the entertainment, exhibition, or show is given in a building licensed as a theater. A license to be exercised in a building licensed as a theater shall be for a theatrical season and shall expire on the 1st day of August of each year. The mayor and the police commissioner of Boston and the chief justice of the municipal court of the city of Boston acting unanimously, may revoke or suspend such license at their pleasure."

Messrs Bowser and Abbott are dissenting, it is said, on the ground that there should be no legislation whatever. Senator Sullivan will offer a substitute bill, he announced, in the Senate.

BROOKLINE (Mass.) CHRONICLE
MAY 1, 1915

Tremont Theatre.

The historic film, "The Birth of a Nation," a spectacle of unusual magnitude, is being given at the Tremont Theatre. Scenes and incidents from the Civil War are shown, followed by a chronicle of the era of Reconstruction. A story of romantic interest between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South is mingled with the historic episodes. Music accompanies all the scenes.

BOSTON (Mass.) COURIER
MAY 1 1915

TREMONT THEATRE.

D. W. Griffith's magnificent historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," enters upon the second big month of its run at the Tremont Theatre next Monday afternoon. The play is the most widely discussed topic in this State and for a fortnight has overshadowed even the European war and the Roosevelt-Barnes trial as a front page feature. On Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock a special performance is to be given, with the members of the Legislature and other officials as invited guests.

Mr Griffith's production has developed an enormous number of friends in Greater Boston and all the surrounding places. It has now been viewed by more than 75 000 patrons. Their support, with that of those who sympathize with them, outweighs the opposition. The issue of freedom of dramatic speech is involved in the play's continuance. It is hoped a wise and reasonable censorship bill be passed that will not curtail the privileges of stage producers nor render nugatory such wonderful art-achievements as the one Mr Griffith has accomplished.

BOSTON CHRIS. SCIENCE MONITOR
MAY 1, 1915

MASS MEETING TO DISCUSS HOW TO STOP FILM

Society for Advancement of Colored People Believes "The Birth of a Nation" Can Be Removed With Censorship

Stating its belief that "The Birth of a Nation," a film play now being produced in Boston, is a menace to white people as well as to negroes of the country and should be stopped, a special mass meeting has been called for tomorrow afternoon in Tremont Temple at 3 o'clock by the Boston Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The announcement states that the executive committee believes a way can be found to stop the play, and prevent the exhibition of "plays calculated if not deliberately intended" to stir up race prejudice. The committee believes that this may be accomplished without infringing on the liberty of dramatic art, or establishing an irksome censorship.

The announcement is signed by Francis J. Garrison, Horace Bumstead, Miss Adeline Moffat, the Rev. Samuel A. Brooks, Joseph P. Lund, Miss Mary L. Baldwin, Mrs. Mary Hallowell Lord, George G. Bradford, Butler R. Wilson, executive committee.

Trial On

More than 100 witnesses may appear in the defense of Rev. Aaron Puller and William Monroe Trotter in a special session of the municipal court before Judge Brackett, according to Attorney Benjamin. The men are accused of causing a riot in the Tremont theater, April 17. The government rested its case yesterday.

Attorney Benjamin said that the defense expects to prove that on April 17 tickets were sold to white people, but were refused negroes; that white people afterward bought tickets for some negroes; that tickets sold to negroes were not honored, some being taken back.

The attorney argued that discrimination is forbidden by law, and that if these contentions were proven, the alleged rioting was caused, not by the colored people, but by the theater people.

Judge Brackett said that if such facts were proved he would consider it a mitigating circumstance, but not a defense in case the men were found guilty of causing the disturbance.

President Didn't Approve

It has developed that President Wilson has never commended "The Birth of a Nation," although he has frequently been credited with having done so by the outgivings of persons favoring the show.

Secretary to the President Joseph P. Tumulty, writing for Mr. Wilson, wrote a letter to Congressman Thacher of Massachusetts to this effect. The film was presented before the President in a private exhibition at the White House before being shown to the general public, permission for the exhibition having been granted at the earnest solicitation of the author, who was a classmate of the President at the Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore.

The letter to Congressman Thacher read as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Thacher:

"Replying to your recent letter and inclosures, I beg to say that it is true that 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and his family at the White House but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented and has at no time expressed approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance.

"Sincerely yours,

"J. P. TUMULTY,
"Secretary to the President."

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
MAY 1, 1915

1703

If the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation" knew as much about statesmen as they should know, they would know that no self-respecting legislator would permit himself to be bribed by a complimentary ticket.

NGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICA
MAY 1, 1915

WEEKLY BOSTON LETTE

SSUE OF THE PHOTO-PLAY

Argues, the Newspapers Adver- and Dodge the Real Issue—ressent Politics—Prohibition ncing—New Haven Versus and Maine—Dr Briggs and ot Will—Prison Reform—s and Statutes—Personal.

r Special Correspondent.

BOSTON, Thursday, April 29.

y talks" is one of the shortest of
, but always long in its applica-Perhaps it lasts longest in the form newspaper advertising; for there, to the maxim of the philosophers, thing can act but where it is, advercts where it is not, by the hope ing it. It is to the newspaper what ing of Diana's shrines was to the iths of Ephesus; by this craft they heir wealth. Consequently the slo-Great is Diana of the Ephesians," d in many versions in the whole per world. More often it is un-
-subaudiur, as the Latin grams say—and we can infer it when the is talking on freedom of speech, innocence and sad defects of our d navy, or other generalities. Most perhaps, its influence is seen in the gness of the editor to come to the he circles around and aloof from bidden topic, like the afternoon crossing a bull pasture, and keep-r the fence in case the bull should pected in the shade of the chest-
For instance, every one last week aiting to see what the Boston edi-d to say about Tom Dixon's "skilful treachery," as Mr Crothers aptly his false "Birth of a Nation"; but welt on such harmless topics as the of ice-houses and the neutrality
y and Rumania, keeping themselves armed neutrality about the dynahey were advertising, and pretend-was like Beecham's pills, good for
:—

rk, the heavenly angels sing.
on's films are just the thing;
r the anthem sweet and mild.
for man and one for child.

week Dixon himself comes to the his paid advertisers; he argues, the apers advertise and get money for the more because he argues. Dixon erned lest freedom of speech should ed to the sons of the Puritans; that m so carefully guarded in his native of the slave auction and the slave
When our aged statesman of Con-
Samuel Hoar, went to South Caros the agent of Massachusetts, to r colored sailors and stewards out
Charleston barracoon, Mr Dixon's -citizens, then engaged in buying elling slaves, were so fond of free that they would not allow Mr Hoar nage it by using it in their com-
y. They sent him off to use the achusetts supply of the article; theirs ll for home consumption,—not to be d on meddling Yankees. Speech is e freer than that now,—thanks to n, Sumner and Thad Stevens; but if has a mission to guard free speech, ll find a wider field in the South n Massachusetts.

Herald and Transcript, editorially, lso afraid that free speech is in danere. They seem to foresee a time they cannot libel President Wilson his cabinet every week-day, and ce-ally on Sundays. That would in-be a hardship; for those persons are t the only white men who cannot ct themselves by libel suits. But I ne these Boston editors wish to have mode of licensing theaters in Boston at the slush and rot of plays and es can be penalized by suspending a se; and the Sullivan bill is not the form proposed. The present law, ted by theatrical advertisers is use-to restore what the mayors had be-1908 would satisfy most persons ex-those who mint money out of bad
s and expend too much of their win-
, as gamblers do, in subsidizing the s and the Sunday spouters, whose ls are proof against stage-plays.
le the mayor and the police commisr have been asking the Legislature, seven years past, to give them an ef-ve licensing statute, I do not rememthat either the Transcript or the Her-supported their plea for clean theaters.
hey did recently for honest hotel regs. Yet bad plays share with assignahouses the overabundant immoralities
Boston, so notorious for some years
.

ike that Boston partnership of Chris-and Jew, which kept the shop open y day, the Herald supports Dixon in morning and the Traveler opposes him the afternoon. But the unbridled voice the community expresses itself in the umns other than editorial; although the rnal gives nearly two columns to Dixon his shallow and impudent argument.
this he boasts of having been himself member of the Ku Klux conspiracy, ng with several of his relatives,—a com-ation of outlaws masking themselves deeds of darkness by night, which it uired several years and both legislan by Congress and military intervention the president (Gen Grant) to break after it had perpetrated numberless tranges of assault, arson, whipping and urder, on fellow-citizens whose chief ult was their color, but who had been badly trained under the slavery which ixon and his kin fought four years to aintain that they ignorantly, and by way retaliation, committed a few of the imes which these outlaws had taught hem.

The really wise people of the South who ave sense and Christianity in their rench or English blood, like the late udge Lamar of Mississippi, have protest-d against this racial hatred of which Dixon is an infuriated example. Address-g an angry convention of democrats in Mississippi in August, 1875, Lamar said:
"The people of Mississippi have pledged them-lves to sustain the three (antislavery) mendments to the constitution, and have no ower, or desire, to change them. They onfer upon the newly enfranchised race the acred rights of freemen, and their rights re your duties. If impaired by any act of ours, your duties by the same act are vio-ated, and the constitution of your country violated. . . . The color line is talked

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) NEWS
MAY 1, 1915

PETITION AGAINST BILL.

Local Action Against State Censorship of "Movies."

H. A. Cooley of Springfield, proprietor of the Pastime Theater, a moving picture theater on Cabot street, was busy this morning going about the city securing the names of prominent officials and residents who believe that Senate bill, 202, should not be passed, this bill being reported favorably a few days ago. The bill calls for the creation of a censorship board within the state to pass on moving picture films before they are distributed to exhibitors to produce before the public, and means, if the bill is carried through, that this important work will be taken out of the hands of the National Board of Censorship and placed in the charge of the state board.

Much opposition is offered against the measure which is receiving the backing of 200 or 300 women in Boston and other places in the eastern part of the state. It is believed that the author of the bill was inspired to introduce it as a result of the agitation over the film "The Birth of a Nation."

The opponents of the bill, Mrs. Alice B. Carroll, a social worker; James P. Burke, president of the Moving Picture Operators' Union; Alden Washburn, an exhibitor; J. A. Eslow, manager of the Universal Film Exchange and E. O. Ramsdell, an exhibitor, all from the eastern part of the state, hold that the passage of the bill would work an undue hardship, not alone on the producers and users of the films but on the patrons of the moving picture theaters as well, for the creation of the office would mean the payment of salaries to the board, resulting in increased rates for the use of films, which would have to be taken care of by the patrons, while the quality of the pictures, it is held, would be far inferior to what is shown at present. The plan for creating the board calls for three members, which, in the opinions of those interested is uncalled for, as it is believed that the work of the National Board of Censors has been efficient and well handled since it first took up its work about five years ago.

It is pointed out by the opponents of the measure that the present national board is composed of 101 prominent people, including educators, writers, business men, philanthropists, child welfare workers, Y. M. C. A. officials and public service officials, who have given their services, without any remuneration. It is also pointed out that a board of these censors would find it physically impossible to see and pass on the present estimated normal output of 225,000 feet of film each week in the year. It is estimated that a committee large enough to cope with this work would cost the state about $20,000 per year and would cost the moving picture business in that state over half a million dollars in the same period. It would mean, it is held that at least 1000 union employes would be thrown out of work.

E TABLET, SA. 1915.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

The last word in film production seems to have been said in this series of wonderful pictures shown on the screen in the Liberty Theater. Our present purpose is not however to comment on their artistic excellence or commercial value, but to try to appreciate the production as an educational force.

Some years ago the South protested against the bias in the text-books on United States history in use in the public schools. That the "histories" are biassed in the presentment of facts is true. Perhaps it is inevitable that they be. We must consider the point of view. Whatever they may be today, the text-book "histories" of a former day were mediocre, their compilers obsessed with the idea that "our side," whether the "history" was Roman, French, English or American, should be seen in the best possible light.

They were therefore far from being impartial and frequently included statements that were lies, none the less lies because they who made the statements thought them to be true. Some of these lies still persevere. Bess, for instance, continues to be "Good," while Mary, though less sanguinary than her sister, remains "Bloody." In other instances they were inexact, imperfect and offensive to "the other side." It was against such faults that the South protested: effectively, it must be added.

But we of this generation of the North have never really appreciated the hardships that our brethren of the South endured, and the horrors that they experienced during the reconstruction days. Now that fifty years have elapsed since Lee surrendered to Grant; when veterans of both the Confederate and the Union armies have publicly fraternized; when Webster's prophecy: "Liberty and union, one and inseparable, now and forever," has come true, there does not seem to be anything other than good, from a Northern or a Southern point of view, that can result from the picturing of such scenes as this enterprise has developed. Indeed it would seem that the result of reviewing these scenes through the glass of the elapsed years is to increase the admiration, respect and love of the North for the South.

Another resultant good is the focussing of the mind on the fact that the real birth of the nation was not in the day of Washington and Jefferson, but more nearly approximating our own generation. The units composing the United States were not homogeneous until after the war. As a matter of fact the Constitution gave no powers to Congress in the matter of slavery, except in the District of Columbia and the Territories. It is also true that abolition found its initiative in the South, and that most of the officers of the Colonization Society, which founded Liberia, on the west coast of Africa, were Southerners.

There was talk of secession as early as 1832. By 1850 the right to secede was a fixed idea. The house was divided against itself in 1861. But with the reunion in 1865 the spectre of secession was laid forever. We began to be in reality a nation. The travail of the birth these motion pictures show. From them we have a more perfect appreciation of our national greatness, since we behold it from the viewpoint of sacrifice. Hence their educational value. Incidentally, we think that now "The United States of America" is a nation should be declared to be correct English.

The serious objection to the production is that based on the assumption that it will incite or foster race prejudice; that it will array white and black against each other. We think that the assumption is not warranted. This photo play is depicting history. And we think that intelligent colored people will not be afraid to consider facts. We think further that these pictured facts, contrasted now with the present marking places of their emancipated way, will make them more conscious of their inherent ability to conquer in all the walks of life, and thus be an inspiration to further progress.

Fifty years ago a chattel; today, banker, physician, lawyer, professor of literature, merchant. Such is the colored man's magnificent achievement.

From the lowest to the highest, from the lash of a master to the papyrus of his own poetry; from the moan of a Dred Scott to the music of a Coleridge-Taylor: in fifty years!

Degraded, reviled, feared, hated: the colored man of today may see this picture of his brother of a former decade. Scornfully contemned fifty years ago as having no soul, the colored man of today has such magnanimity that, though he views this pictured story with eyes that are mournful, his sure knowledge is that the degradation and concomitant sufferings were not his fault but his undeserved misfortune. He knows that if, in the reconstruction days, the beast in him was suddenly let loose by the conferring of a freedom of which he had long lost conception, it was a beast that the white man had created; that the passion that threatened to consume all things, including his own reason, was a flame that for two centuries the white man had kept fanning. But we think he will also see, together with his white brother, in the changed conditions of today, that reparation for the crime of stolen birth-right has, though never so tardily, been made.

Viewed then, from every point of view, and even though "The Birth of a Nation" should have no greater inspiration than that of business enterprise, we think that this photo play may be [illegible] by all [illegible] be vi[illegible]

BOSTON (Mass.) REPUBLIC

MAY 1 1915

[illegible] interview [illegible] last Monday morning's Herald blames former Mayor Fitzgerald for whatever recall sentiment exists. To show that this is not so we reprint from the same edition of the Herald the story of the protest meeting against the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation." The Herald account is as follows:

"Mayor Curley and the photo-play, 'The Birth of a Nation,' shared unequally in condemnation and denunciation at a mass meeting of Negroes at the Twelfth Baptist Church, Shawmut avenue, Roxbury, yesterday afternoon, called to express indignation against the continued exhibition of the play. The Mayor received by far the larger share of the censure.

"The Mayor was stigmatized as 'the most hypocritical Mayor that the city of Boston has ever had'; it was asserted that to hold good now the invitation that has been extended to His Honor to speak at a meeting of the church in May would be to 'desecrate the platform'; the Mayor was 'threatened with the recall; his name was hissed, and, last but not least, the name of John F. Fitzgerald was cheered to the echo when his action in forbidding the continued production of 'The Clansman' was contrasted with Mayor Curley's failure to order 'The Birth of a Nation' to quit business in Boston.

"The meeting was called by Mrs. Olivia Ward Bush Banks and its announced purpose was to form 'a protecting league of all colored women of Greater Boston for the maintenance and protection of their civil rights.' Such an organization was formed, with Mrs. Banks as its president and Mrs. Minnie Wright as chairman of the 'vigilance committee of 100 women.'

"Mrs. Wright presided at the meeting and feeling ran high. The name of Curley was always the signal for hisses and some of the more excitable women added to the demonstration by shouting out very uncomplimentary things about Boston's chief executive.

"It was the Rev. M. A. N. Shaw, pastor of the church, who declared that the invitation extended to Mayor Curley to speak at the church in May would be withdrawn. He said:

"'As far as it is within my power to recall Mr. James Curley, that will be done now; that is, he will be told his services are not wanted at a meeting to which he had been invited in May. I would not desecrate the platform of our church with Mr. James Curley.' Mr. Shaw accused the Mayor of 'hiding behind the law.'

"'Mayor Curley never meant a word of anything he said to us at his office. If the Legislature gave him the power he would not exercise it,' declared the pastor.

"Clement G. Morgan, an attorney, condemned the action of the police upon the night that the arrests were made at the Tremont Theatre, and said that it was without cause. Mr. Morgan charged Mayor Curley with failing to do what he had promised. 'You have an opportunity to recall your Mayor next fall,' he said. 'The man sitting in that chair should not be there to represent the people.'

"'When we took our message to former Mayor Fitzgerald, while he was in office, regarding "The Clansman," he gave us audience and did something for us,' said Morgan, and for several minutes the audience applauded the mention of ex-Mayor Fitzgerald's name.

"'At that time we were sent to Commissioner O'Meara and then we were sent back to the Mayor,' continued Attorney Morgan. 'He told us if it was up to him it would go and it went. I don't like Mayor Curley; he is the most hypocritical Mayor ever in the chair. An opportunity is given for recall; if there are any here at this meeting that are not registered, now is the time to fix it up.'"

BOSTON (Mass.) JOURNAL
MAY 3, 1915
1709

MARGARET CAMERON, A DAUGHTER OF THE S OUTH

read this first

The Birth of a Nation

In Story Form, Written by Gertrude Stevenson

This extraordinary motion picture production is the sensation of the hour in Boston.

Miss Stevenson has followed the structural narrative of the film.

She has put into her story all the dramatic movement, the thrilling action, the pathos, the great historic facts. The Southern life, the atmosphere of the Civil War period, the assassination of Lincoln, the turbulent era of the reconstruction of the vanquished land—all find their place. In and about the momentous and tragic events winds the current of the tender love story.

By Gertrude Stevenson

The narrative of "The Birth of a Nation" is protected by copyright. All rights to the use of this narrative version are reserved.

The hazy radiance of a summer afternoon lay warm and sweet over a certain broad avenue in Piedmont, South Carolina, as a dainty little figure in the tight basque and much-beruffled spreading hoop skirt of the late fifties moved slowly and sedately down the street. Under a diminutive sunshade of silken ruffles, held firmly in a tiny hand encased in a lacy black mitt, she seemed more to float than to walk, so easily and gracefully did her black-slippered feet move in and out under the wide-flowered skirt.

Before an old colonial mansion impressive with huge, stately pillars and broad verandas reached by low, wide steps, she paused to lower and close the fragile bit of silk and ivory which had served as her protection from the Southern sun, her eyes running proudly over the great house and sloping valley beyond to the river flowing lazily past fields white with ripe cotton, where hundreds of her father's "darkey" slaves were leisurely picking the fluffy tufts and filling basket after basket with the snowy down, which constituted her father's fortune and the family income.

Continued on Page Nine, Column 4.

STORY OF THE BIRTH OF A N

(Continued From First Page.)

in search of refreshments to cool the masculine ardor of argument. Neither did the men return to the subject until the lovely daughter of the house appeared followed by a "darky" bearing a tray of the juleps for the concoction of which she was justly famous and inordinately proud.

"To Stephen Douglas, the next President," announced Dr. Cameron.

"To the whole Democratic party," the other men responded, as they rose to click glasses and then settled back in calm, retrospective sipping of the beverage redolent with mint.

"We'll best them yet," declared the host. "Those Yankees needn't think just because they never could make slavery profitable that they can deprive us of our slaves from envy."

"They don't believe a word of what they say about its being wrong," agreed Judge Carter; "that is, with the exception of a few fanatics."

"And the rest are all hypocrits," supplemented Small. "The Bible says it's right and how under the canopy could we live with them any other way, anyhow?"

The entire company nodded assent as Dr. Cameron refilled their glasses.

"I just had a letter from our senator," Wade spoke up, "and he swears that every man in both houses is armed with a revolver, some with two, and"—he paused and chuckled for effect—"a bowie knife!"

A hearty laugh greeted this announcement. All agreed Washington was a veritable hotbed of conflicting interests at that moment.

Domestic Tranquility Succeeds Stormy Discussion

As the lengthening shadows gave warning of the day's waning, one by one the old friends took their leave and sauntered homewards, rejoicing in the fact that the South was "solid" and as one man in the controversy which threatened the very life of the Union.

Father and daughter sat silent when they found themselves alone, the man forgetting for the nonce the stormy thoughts which had kept him agitated throughout the day and yielding unconsciously to the gracious feminine presence at his side, the calm of the passing day and the poignant sweetness of the magnolias, which sent their message of beauty and fragrance from the terrace below gently, caressingly, the scented dusk descended.

It was thus that Mrs. Cameron found them, the old man's head sunken on his breast as he dozed in the twilight and the young girl's tender, brooding eyes fixed on some distant horizon of thought as her fancy fashioned a future that always included a handsome lover and a honeymoon over wide oceans to distant lands whose beauties had always loomed large in her girlish imagination.

Both started from their quite dissimilar reveries as the voice that was dearest of all summoned them to earth and dinner time at one and the same moment.

"Such day dreamers!" Mrs. Cameron exclaimed in her cheery fashion. The chicken's frying and the corn pone's hot and not a blessed soul seems to care whether they eat or not."

In her wake came a veritable whirlwind of flying curls and pattering feet, as the youngest member of the household announced in no uncertain terms that one of the Camerons was actually on the verge of starvation and "would everyone please hurry."

Darkies' Banjos Enliven Quiet of Summer Night

"My mammy says cold co'n pone's not fit for the debbil himself to eat," the family pet finished, breathlessly. There was a scuffle of feet from behind and the next moment little Flora found herself borne aloft in strong, loving arms, as her big brother, Ben, put an end to her faithful imitation of the old colored mammy's tirade, and carried her, squealing with delight, back into the house, while Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, smiling indulgently, followed. Margaret waited in her indolent fashion to greet the other brothers, Wade and Duke, as they came up the steps.

"Dinner's waiting," she scolded, prettily, as her brothers kissed her, Wade, demonstratively, as was his custom, and Duke with the shy reserve of the boy of 14, not quite young enough or old enough to appreciate the outward show of affection.

Father Cameron, fingering the pearl buttons on his handsome waistcoat, uttered a fervent prayer for blessing on the family and its meal, on Piedmont and its citizens, and last but not least on the solid South, so sore oppressed by the greed and misunderstanding of the North.

The moment of solemnity that followed the father's closing words was broken by the irrepressible Flora, who announced that she would eat a whole chicken herself. The whole family joined in laughter as they always did at the simplest utterance

CHARACTERS IN THE

Col. Ben Cameron....Leader of the Pro... Carolina, the first Ku...
Margaret Cameron....His older sister, a t...
Flora....The younger sister, d...
Dr. Richard Cameron....His father; a p... school, wealthy cotton p...
Mrs. Cameron....
Wade Cameron....
Duke Cameron....
Uncle Jerry and Mammy....The Camer...

Hon. Austin Stoneman....Radical leader of the... the "Great Commoner," noted for his... toward the Southern States, indigen... and believer in negro suffrage....
Elsie Stoneman....His daughter, good n...
Phil Stoneman....
Tod Stoneman....
Lydia Brown....Stoneman...
Silas Lynch....Stoneman's mulatto protege, ... cal power in the ...
Gus....
Abraham Lincoln.
John Wilkes Booth....
Gen. U. S. Grant.
Gen. Robert E. Lee.
Charles Sumner....Senator from Massach...

MARGARET FINDS STORM BREWING

How she loved the place—the only home she had even known—the home in fact of every Cameron since long before the Revolution. The consciousness of her proud birth and lineage, of her heritage of wealth, position and high honor made her straighten her shoulders and a glow of something very close to hauteur filled her lovely dark eyes.

Mounting the broad steps, she became aware of her father's voice raised in hot altercation and following the sound she perceived the old gentleman sitting on the shady side of the veranda, surrounded by a half dozen of the wealthiest and most influential citizens of Piedmont, all talking rapidly and excitedly. She could hear the names of Douglas and Sumner dominating the arguments, fragments of the Missouri Compromise, of the admission of Kansas into the Union, even a reference to John Brown, who, with 18 followers, had but recently made a raid at Harper's Ferry, Virginia, in an attempt to destroy slavery and terrorize the South.

That was all anyone talked about now—this pro-slavery and this anti-slavery business. She had never been her father or his friends so concerned about anything before. Each day he advocated secession from the Union more earnestly. He seemed almost to have become obsessed with the idea as the only solution to a situation where Northern interference in Southern affairs was become more and more intolerable. To her the whole controversy seemed inexplicable. Of course, it was right for her father to buy slaves and use them on his plantations. He always had done it. Her grandfather before him had done the same. And the "darkies" were happy and didn't know any other kind of a life, anyway.

At all events her father was becoming too excited for a hot afternoon and she hastened to join the group and make an effort to divert the conversation into quieter channels. She moved forward with the languid grace of generations of aristocrats. Nothing she ever did was hurried or harsh or ungraceful. As her father and his friends saw her they rose with Southern gallantry to greet her. She gave them her hand one by one, and as she raised it, it seemed to caress the air. Even the turn of her head, the lifting of her eyes to them was with such easy, calm poise that she was a delight to these gentlemen who worshiped the softer graces in womanhood.

Southerners Drink to Douglas And "Whole Democratic Party"

"Father, dear," she remonstrated in a voice of limpid sweetness, "you are really entertaining your guests much too strenuously. May I not bring cool drinks and cigars."

"Of course, dear child," her father agreed, touching her shoulder lovingly as he spoke. "I get so excited these days that I forget even to be properly hospitable. But there's always a little woman to think of our comfort, isn't there, friends?"

To which sentiment his cronies laughingly agreed, as Margaret floated through the wide doorway

(Continued on Page [illegible] Column 4)

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
MAY 3, 1915

MASSMEETING IN PROTEST AGAINST FILM PRODUCTION

Sensational Charge as to Motive for Presented Photo-play Made by Assistant Editor of Congregationalist in Boston.

ALLEGED STATEMENT BY AUTHOR QUOTED

Assertion That Dixon Said Object of Presentation Was to Drive Negroes Out of Country; 2000 Persons Are Present.

[Special to The Union.]

BOSTON, May 2—That the real motive behind the production of "The Birth of a Nation" is the banishment of the colored race from the United States, was the sensational charge made by Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of The Congregationalist, at the Tremont Temple massmeeting of citizens this afternoon to protest against the film play.

This information came direct from Thomas Dixon, the author, Mr. Cobleigh stated. Mr. Dixon told him, the speaker said, that his idea of the production was "the achieving of white supremacy and the getting rid of the colored people."

"I suggested to Mr. Dixon the difficulty of deporting 10,000,000 American citizens to Africa, as he proposed," Mr. Cobleigh said, "but he argued seriously that it could be done. He hopes to create such public sentiment that a substantial beginning can be made in the near future and that the task can be completed within a century."

Following speakers, especially Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, and Judge Philip Rubenstein of the Juvenile Court, paid considerable attention to Mr. Cobleigh's startling declaration. Two thousand persons who jammed into the auditorium, mainly Negroes, were deeply stirred by the charge.

Dr. Francis W. Rowley presided over the meeting. Other speakers included Mrs. Susan G. Fitzgerald, Rev. S. M. Crothers, Rev. Henry Francis Smith, Prof. Henry C. Pearson of M. I. T., and Miss Adelene Moffat.

Dr. Eliot's Views.

Everybody arose and tendered Dr. Eliot a great demonstration of applause when he was introduced. He said that he did not look on the play as primarily insulting or injurious to the black race, "although it may before having seen it," he said. What interested him most, Dr. Eliot said, was the effect it is likely to have all over the United States upon the white people, especially the rising generation, when it is exhibited.

Dr. Eliot called it a "very extraordinary misrepresentation of the birth of a nation." While it is a favorite statement, he said, that the nation came into existence after the Civil War, it is untrue, for the nation came into existence when the Constitution was adopted. Only the new view was obtained, he said, that the contract is indestructible and that the Union is indissoluble.

Dr. Eliot commented at length on the real motive of the production as revealed by Mr. Cobleigh's talk with the author. He pronounced it "inconceivable and monstrous that the whole colored race should be removed to Africa or some other unoccupied or barbarous country. They won't want to go. They'll have to be driven by force of arms. What an abominable outrage that would be to be perpetrated by white people on colored."

Dr. Eliot said that the progress made by the colored people in the last 50 years is one of the most stupendous phenomena in the whole history of civilization. He suggested that, provided an antidote be supplied in a true exposition of American history and ideals, the play after all might serve some useful purpose. He closed by urging that the new statute petitioned for, be of a general nature, universal in application against what is unpatriotic and unsuitable.

Cobleigh's Statement.

Editor Cobleigh then told of his talk with Thomas Dixon on the day before the play was first presented in Boston.

"Mr. Dixon came to my office," he said, "for the purpose of convincing me that the play was all right. He did convince me that his purpose in it was all wrong, a conviction strengthened by a view of the pictures. They proved to me that D. W. Griffith had achieved a dazzling success in telling Mr. Dixon's story in the most startling and impressive way, presenting the propaganda of falsehood and prejudice which Mr. Dixon admitted to me was the real purpose in view."

[illegible] that Mr. Dixon [illegible] father was a Baptist minister in North Carolina and left his church to join the Ku Klux Klan, remaining with it until it was disbanded. "Authoritative history tells me," he added, "that the Ku Klux were guilty of treason, wholesale murder and other crimes and that the real reign of terror was caused by the Ku Klux and that white men who would not vote with the oligarchy, as well as Negroes, were innocent victims."

Judge Rubenstein said that the effect of the play on the spectator is that of horror as well as antagonism to ward the Negro, especially because the play represents a whole city full of riotous and criminal Negroes. He urged that the law should be changed so that such inspirations of hatred and fury may be prohibited.

WAKEFIELD (Mass.) ITEM
MAY 3, 1915

BOWSER IS ONE OF DISSENTERS ON NEW BILL

Wakefield Representative Considers Measure for Censorship of Entertainments is far Too Drastic

Rep. Eden K. Bowser of Wakefield, a member of the legislative committee on judiciary, is one of the two dissenters on the bill to place public entertainment censoring in the hands of the mayor of Boston, police commissioner of Boston and chief justice of the municipal court.

This bill is the outcome of the agitation against "The Birth of a Nation" and follows rejection by the committee on judiciary of seven censorship bills which have been filed since the disturbance at the Tremont theatre on April 17.

The bill just framed would give absolute power to those three officers, providing they were unanimous in their censorship.

Mr. Bowser said today that the agitation is over "The Birth of a Nation" and that the bill will not help the situation. Moreover, he considers it far too drastic a measure. "The three censors who would be appointed under this bill", he said, "would have absolute power and would not be obliged to give any reasons for their act. You can imagine three men having the power to suspend the publication of a newspaper without giving any reason therefor!"

Gazette Worcester Mass
May 3/15

PLAY WITH MORAL AT ROYAL THEATRE

A social problem, which really should be no problem at all, is the subject of a Mutual Master-Picture made under the direction of David W. Griffith, the famous producer of "The Birth of a Nation," to be shown today and tomorrow at the Royal theater. This "problem" is that of the "double" standard of morals which govern man and woman. In the picture, "Man's Prerogative," the cast includes Robert Edeson, Mary Alden, Charles Clary, Miss Billie West. Other pictureplays in this program are "The Moment of Sacrifice," a two-reel drama, "Washed on Mabel," a Keystone comedy starring Mabel Normand; "The Story of a Story," with Miriam Cooper and Eugene Pallette, and "O Daddy," an American Beauty comedy featuring Virginia Kirtley.

NEWBURYPORT (Mass.) M. HERALD
MAY 3, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" will be the cause of some of the agitators if they do not take a rest. Some of them have nearly shouted themselves into insensibility already. Let us have more common sense and less noise.

LAWRENCE (Mass.) SUN-AMERICAN 460
MAY 3, 1915

DR. ELIOT'S WORDS OF PROTEST.

Harvard's President Emeritus Says Photo-Play, "The Birth of a Nation" Is a Very Strong Misrepresentation of the Natal Days of This Republic.

OPPOSITION TO THE PRODUCTION OF THE PHOTO-PLAY "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" DOES NOT DIMINISH AS THE DAYS PASS. Many demonstration of protest against the play were made yesterday at mass meetings in Boston.

One speaker on Boston Common said that the hysteria, with which the colored people have been charged "MIGHT CHANGE TO BOMBS, AND BOMBS ARE DANGEROUS."

Speaking in Tremont Temple Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard College, made an effective argument against the play. He declared the production to be a very STRONG MISREPRESENTATION OF "THE BIRTH OF THIS NATION."

He thought the teachings of the play were more harmful to whites than blacks, that it tends to poison the minds of the rising generation against the negro, and that it was a most mischievous teaching in a free commonwealth.

Harvard's president emeritus declared that "The Birth of a Nation" suggests to the people that the 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution of the United States ought to be repealed.

"Are we going to suffer these recommendations to be set forth all over the United States without seeing to it that the antidote for that poison is applied?" was a question that Dr. Eliot asked his hearers.

"It is also a plan to maintain the thesis that the Ku Klux Klan was a necessary defence of the South against colored legislators," said Dr. Eliot. "That reminds me of a German assertion that a contract may be destroyed because of military necessity. The grievance of the South may have been great, but they did not sanction lawlessness.

This play teaches that lawlessness is admirable and the K. Klux Klain instills that feeling. It also suggests that the who colored race be moved to Africa or some other barbarous plac They would have to be driven by force of arms. It is inconceiv ble, monstrous. It suggests that the colored race would find happ ness in a Liberia.

"How did the colored people come here? Who brought the here? Whose children are many of them today? The America people will never think of such an outrage as this transportatic across the seas would mean.

"The colored people need not feel insulted. The progress the colored people in 50 years is the most stupendous thing in o whole civilization. The negro race can take care of itself, and h proved wonderfully capable of doing so. It's the white people th I am concerned about.

"This false teaching of history and perversion of Americ ideals is my concern and also the growing indifference amor young people to the serious questions of the day. If the present tion of the play were accompanied by an exposition showing that falsifies history and is not true to American ideals, I am not sure that it might not result in good and be useful after all.

"Any law that might be made as a result of this productic should not be based on this particular incident in Boston, but shou have a general application against unwise, untrue, unpatriotic a immoral plays which pervert the American ideal of liberty, justi for all men and universal brotherhood."

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) MOR. UNION
MAY 4, 1915

PROBLEM PRESENTED BY "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Out of the somewhat confusing discussion engendered by the film play "The Birth of a Nation" several points stand forth quite clearly. One is that the opposition to the play is not confined to Negroes, nor yet to wild-eyed fanatics and persons to be dismissed summarily as narrow-minded. Dr. Samuel McChord Crothers, the author and Harvard University preacher, had this to say after seeing the production:

The impression that came to me was of amazement at the fact that people of Boston could look at it as a mere spectacle. It is not that it is not a work of art for art's sake to be so enjoyed. It is not history as an impartial historian understands history. It is a deliberate and skilful bit of treachery. It is frankly education. It has a lesson which it seeks to teach and does teach in the most direct fashion. The scenes are unrelieved by any touch of tenderness; no glimpse of the faces that on the Shaw monument move to tears by their pathetic earnestness. We come away taught to hate as well as despise.

It is not a scene here and there that is offensive. The protest should be made not by Negroes alone, but by all who care for American idealism and for the rights of man.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, asserting that the film is a "very extraordinary misrepresentation of 'The Birth of a Nation,'" makes these criticisms:

While it is a favorite statement that the nation came into existence after the Civil war, it is untrue, for the nation came into existence when the Constitution was adopted. Only the new view was obtained that the contract is indestructible, and that the union is indissoluble.

A more dangerous false doctrine taught by the play is that the Ku-Klux-Klan was on the whole a righteous and necessary society for the defense of Southern white men against a black Legislature led by Northern white men. This is the same sort of argument being used by the Germans today that a contract may be destroyed as a military necessity. Undoubtedly, grievous conditions existed in the South, but they did not justify the utter lawlessness and atrocities which marked the trail of the Ku-Klux. There can be no worse teaching, no more mischievous doctrine than this; that lawlessness was justified as necessary.

Miss Adalene Moffat, a Southern woman formerly connected with the work of the People's Institute in Northampton, condemns the film, saying that "the South is still obsessed with the sense of fear of the Negro, and young men are being brought up in an atmosphere of justification of political corruption, intimidation and dishonesty; and such plays by their insidious appeal tend to demoralize the North, as well, into accepting any means to justify an end." Rolfe Cobleigh of The Congregationalist asserts that Thomas Dixon, author of the book on which this production is based, told him that the motive of the production was to achieve the supremacy of the whites and bring about the deportation of Negroes to Africa or some other colony.

These expressions at public meetings in Boston are quoted for the purpose of showing the character of the protests made against the film around which centers legislative discussion as to the censorship of moving pictures. It should be said that merely because a play is bad art or misleading history it does not necessarily follow that its production should be stopped by law. General principles relative to the freedom of art and public opinion should be considered. On the other hand, any attempt to arouse the violent antipathy and hatred of one element of our population against another element challenges the attention of the public authorities. The present law relative to the barring of plays is criticized as inadequate in that it is held to admit of the suppression of a play on one ground only, that of an offense relative to sex morality. This is a forceful criticism, for it is clear that this is not the only point at which a play may be antagonistic to the general welfare.

In spite of all this, it is best to move cautiously in applying a remedy for this and similar cases. It is easier to criticize such a play than to invoke suitable corrective legislation relative to a difficult and complex problem. Individual liberty must be respected as a cardinal feature of our institutions, and it is more important to conserve this general principle than to punish occasional abuses of it. It ought to be possible to deal with productions giving flagrant offense, and yet not resort to an elaborate censorship of all films. Through pending legislation action could be taken in certain cases on a complaint made to a court or with a mayor, [illegible] grounds of objection, provision being made for the prompt [illegible] decision of all such cases. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] stating a general censorship of Dixon's pictures as distinguished from pictures as distinguished from

Continued on Page Nine, Column 6.

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) REPUBLICAN
MAY 3, 1915

BANISHMENT OF NEGROES

OBJECT OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Charge Made at Boston Mass-Meeting by Rolfe Cobleigh—Quotes Author of Play.

Special Dispatch to The Republican.

Boston, Sunday, May 2.

Two thousand Negroes who crowded into Tremont temple this afternoon to protest against "The Birth of a Nation" were stirred to intense indignation when Rolfe Cobleigh, assistant editor of The Congregationalist, formerly on the staff of The Republican, made the startling charge that the real motive behind the production was the banishment of the colored people from the country. Thomas Dixon, the author, was the man against whom this charge was made. Editor Cobleigh said that Mr Dixon told him that his idea was "the achieving of white supremacy and the getting rid of the colored people."

"I suggested to Mr Dixon the difficulty of deporting 10,000,000 American citizens to Africa as he proposed," the speaker said, "but he seriously argued that it could be done. He hopes to create such public sentiment that a substantial beginning can be made in the near future and that the task can be completed within a century."

Speakers who followed, especially Dr Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, and Judge Philip Rubenstein of the juvenile court, devoted considerable attention to Mr Cobleigh's declaration. Others who addressed the assemblage included Dr Francis W. Rowley who presided, Mrs Susan G. Fitzgerald, Rev S. M. Crothers, Rev Henry Francis Smith, Prof Henry G. Pearson of the Massachusetts institute of technology and Miss Adalene Moffat.

Dr Eliot, who received a tremendous reception on being introduced, everybody arising, denounced the real motive of the production as revealed by Editor Cobleigh's talk with the author, as "inconceivable and monstrous that the whole colored race should be removed to Africa or some other unoccupied or barbarous country. They won't want to go. They'll have to be driven by force of arms. What an abominable outrage that would be, to be perpetrated by white [illegible]

LYNN (Mass.) NEWS
MAY 3, 1915

Rev. Albert Lazenby Protests Any Photo-Play That Would Arouse Race Prejudice, But Enters Protest Against Hysterical Legislation—"Birth of a Nation."

Rev. Albert Lazenby, of the Unitarian church, yesterday morning entered his protest against anything of word, deed or picture that will arouse racial prejudice unreasonable. He also registered his advice that there should be reason used in all objections to plays, as otherwise it might be possible to completely banish from the stage all plays or depictions.

He took for his subject "The Birth of the Nation."

After the description of the play as he saw it he expressed his opinion as follows:

